TWO KILLED OUTRIGHT

Louis Bitzer Used a Revolver on Five Persons

SHOT CLERK DOWN FIRST

Then Went to His Home and Fired at Wife and Three Children, One of Whom Was Killed—Officers Say That There Is No Evidence of Insanity

Turner's Falls, Mass., Jan. 1.—Louis Bitzer, who shot and killed his clerk, Miss Ida Columbe, and his 5-year-old son, and attempted to take the lives of his wife and two other children yesterday, was taken to the Franklin county jail in Greenfield late yesterday afternoon. He will be charged with murder. While the friends of Bitzer claim that he was insane when he committed the murders, State Detective McKay and Deputy Sheriff Davis, after a careful investigation, say that they have secured no evidence to show that he was insane.

There have been comparatively few developments in the case since the murders were discovered, and although the tragedy has created a great sensation in this part of the state, no one takes the responsibility of assuming that there was a motive for the crime. The autopsies showed that Miss Ida Columbe and the boy, Louis Bitzer, died instantly. In both cases the bullets penetrated their brains. The autopsy put at rest all disagreable rumors regarding Miss Columbe, as it showed that she was a pure girl.

Mrs. Christina Bitzer, wife of the murderer, and Carrie Bitzer, the 12-year-old daughter, are both resting comfortably at the Ferren hospital in Greenfield. Their wounds are not dangerous. The condition of Annie, the 16-year-old daughter, is more critical, but attending physicians are hopeful for her recovery. The bullet is buried in her skull, and no attempt has as yet been made to extract it.

Detective McKay took charge of the case for the government and is being assisted by Deputy Sheriff Davis in securing evidence to be presented at the hearing. They decline to talk, and have not as yet hinted that there was a motive for the attempt to kill his female clerk and all of the members of his family.

Bitzer is said to be financially embarrassed in the jewelry business he has carried on here. He failed in 1888, and was discharged by the court two years later. Since that time he has carried on the business under the name of M. M. Bitzer. Martin J. Sauter of Greenfield, who loaned Bitzer $1000 when he opened the store a second time, says he is going to put an attachment on the jewelry store to satisy his claim.

Minor matters are cited by the townspeople to show that Bitzer had acted strangely for several months. They are quite positive he was insane at the time the murders were committed.

The tragedy occurred between 10 o'clock and noon. Evidence was found that it was Bitzer's purpose also to take his own life, but his prompt arrest apparently prevented him from carrying out this purpose. He is about 35 years of age.

Business was progressing as usual at the store on the principal business street, which Bitzer had conducted for several years. Miss Columbe was attending to her duties about the place, being engaged in putting away the Christmas goods.

Some time after 10 o'clock it was discovered that matters were not all right in the shop, and an investigation led to the discovery of the body of Miss Columbe, with a bullet hole in her head.

As far as the authorities could make it out, it said that Bitzer was cleaning his revolver, when it was accidentally discharged. Overpowered by the accident, and fearing arrest as the murderer of the girl, he made known his determination to go to his home, end the lives of his wife and children and of himself.

He asked that at his funeral the hymn "Nearer, My God, to Thee" be sung, and that a local undertaker, whose name he mentioned, should have charge of the bodies.

He wished that his property should be given to his brother and to his aged mother, and he ended the letter with an expression to the effect that "God would not blame a man for doing what he had done."

It appears that having completed this note, Bitzer went to the rear door to make his way home. He was seen going down the street, hatless, and apparently greatly excited. Evidently he lost no time in carrying out his purpose, once he had reached his house.

CUPID STEPPED IN

Saved Brockton Italian From Being Prosecuted on Serious Charge

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 1.—Mariano di Pasqua was before the local court yesterday charged with stabbing Rocco Talente. According to the testimony, Pasqua was much incensed toward Talente because the latter had paid attentions to his daughter. Last Saturday, as Talente was passing the house, Pasqua called him in and, after having some words, it is charged that he stabbed Talente in the left arm. He was arrested Monday night, and after he had been locked up, Talente and the girl went to the city hall, where they were married. They managed to placate the father in such a way that the case against him would have been dropped entirely if this could have been done. Judge Bixby allowed the complaint, charging assault with intent to kill, to be withdrawn and one of simple assault substituted, upon which the prisoner was fined $10.

A Peculiar Situation

Boston, Jan. 1.—The recent revision of the statutes of the commonwealth by a special committee of the legislature was sanctioned by the latter body, which ordered that the laws should go into effect on Jan. 1, 1902, but they are at present in the hands of the state printers with the prospect that copies cannot be had for general distribution among the law officers of the state for at least a week. Meantime, about 25 copies of the original report of the revision committee have been scraped together, and these will be furnished at once, as far as they will go, to the justices of the higher courts of the commonwealth for their official guidance.

Cassels Tells of His Crime

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 1.—John D. Cassels, who is being tried for the murder of Mary J. Lane, took the witness stand yesterday. He said the woman was infatuated with him and urged him to put his wife away. He had done so and made all the arrangements to elope with Mrs. Lane. She failed to keep the agreement and he went to her house, having purchased acid with the intention of committing suicide if she refused to go. The woman told him that she must stay with her family. The rest remains a blank until he found himself lying in a snowbank near the house.

Ready to Receive Subscriptions

Boston, Jan. 1.—The appeal for funds to the people of Massachusetts in aid of the memorial to the late President McKinley, to be erected at Canton, O., was issued in this city last night. The subscription list is headed by Governor Crane, and the early responses brought the total to $2000. The subscription is to be a popular one, and the state's proportion is $20,000. Contributions may be sent to Messrs. Kidder, Peabody & Co., Boston. It is desirable to make this a popular subscription, and any sum, however small, will be gratefully received.

Good Year For Carriage Makers

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 1.—The year just ending has been a prosperous one in Amesbury, for the total carriage shipments show an increase over the year 1900. The value of vehicles manufactured is said to be in excess of that of the past five years. The manufacture of automobile bodies has greatly increased the business of the carriage makers and many factories have large orders on hand.

Six In a Bunch

Boston, Jan. 1.—The final sprint which closed the second day, or 20th hour of the six-day bicycle race at Park Square garden, was won by McFarland. Five other riders were only a short distance behind, the score of all six being 404 miles, 5 laps. The riding was featureless, except that twice during the evening the leading six engaged in sprints which caused the less fortunate teams to lose laps.

Charged With Bigamy

Concord, N. H., Jan. 1.—Maggie M. Merrill, aged 32, was arraigned here last evening on the charge of bigamy. She pleaded not guilty and waived examination, bail being placed at $500. The two men who are alleged to be her husbands, Moses R. Merrill of Claremont, and George H. Tucker of Penacook, were bound over as witnesses in the higher court.

Case of Smallpox In Jail

Salem, Mass., Jan. 1.—Timothy Creeden, who was committed to the Salem jail from Lynn last Friday, for drunkenness, was removed to the pesthouse yesterday, suffering from smallpox. Creeden is a resident of Salem, but he had recently returned to Boston from a fishing trip and on his way to this city was arrested in Lynn for drunkenness.

To Hunt For Landsmen

Boston, Jan. 1.—A recruiting party will start from the Charlestown navy yard tomorrow for Maine, in search for good landsmen for United States warships. It will visit nearly every town and city in southern Maine. This is the first party of the kind to be sent out from the Charlestown yard.

Oil-Laden Vessel Destroyed

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 1.—A German bark arrived at Ponce yesterday having on board Captain Parker and the crew of the oil-laden American four-masted schooner James W. Fitch of Boston, bound for New York to the River Platte. The captain and the crew of the Fitch were picked up in the western West Indies. The Fitch was burned to the water's edge.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

The Basis of Our Understanding With Germany

WAR SCARE DISPOSED OF

By Written and Verbal Understandings Between Diplomats—President of Venezuela Defends the General Policy He Has Pursued

Washington, Jan. 1.—It may be stated on the highest authority that there has been a diplomatic exchange of views between the United States and Germany in regard to Germany's present attitude toward Venezuela, and that an understanding has been reached. This seems to dispose of the war scare.

Secretary Hay's view as to the proposed German program in Venezuela was communicated to the German government in the shape of a written memorandum. This supplemented verbal exchanges which had taken place in Washington between Ambassador Von Holleben and President Roosevelt: nd between the ambassador and Secretary Hay at greater length. The state department declines to make public the memorandum or its substance, but it is pointed out again that the basis of the United States' representations is to be looked for in the utterances of President Roosevelt in his annual message to congress touching the Monroe doctrine in its application to South American countries which do not pay their debts.

Nothing has been heard from Caracas to sustain the report that United States Minister Bowen, through urgent representations, has induced a postponement of the execution of the German program. It is certain that no instructions to that effect have been given to Mr. Bowen, though it is admitted that it would be the duty of any United States minister to exercise all of his powers, within the lines of the general policy of this country, to prevent possible bloodshed. Confirmatory evidence is had from unofficial sources of the purpose of the German government at least to delay action against Venezuela until the issue of the present revolutionary movement directed against President Castro.

President Castro of Venezuela has written an open letter, copies of which have been received by officials here, in which he defends the general policy he has pursued, and throws considerable light upon his aspirations. An indirect allusion is made to the German affair in the president's appeal for united support in defense of the country. The letter was in response to an application, which was granted, for the release of several journalists imprisoned at Caracas. In the course of the letter President Castro says:

"It is painful to observe that the rashness of some, the impatient ambition of others, the mistaken criticism of the leading classes and the obstinacy of the revolutionary spirit have sorely tried the virtues of my liberal policy. At a time when I have desired to see the country happy and its citizens enjoying every comfort, I have had the painful duty of adopting repressive measures contrary to my character, my education and all my sentiments.

"If the offenders in this case have not succeeded in overthrowing the government they have nevertheless contributed to the propaganda which delays the fruit of peace and makes our progress and our prosperity captive in the clutches of the monster of civil war. Our prosperity has been withheld through errors and entanglements for which my government is not responsible, but which claim a prompt and quick solution. In carrying out this policy I should have the support of all the citizens of Venezuela, because therein rests the sovereignty of the fatherland.

"It is my wish that you convey to these journalists my wish to see them again fulfilling their duties of party opposition. I desire that the press shall bring all the charges it may have against me (being confident that its judgment will not affect me). I do this in order to establish under our republican system the absolute justification of my political purposes. I do it also because I have no fear of an adverse public judgment upon my acts."

United States a Factor

Berlin, Jan. 1.—Until Dr. O. Schmidt-Leda, the German minister to Venezuela, arrives at Caracas, which will be about Jan. 5, nothing will be done by the German charge d'affaires there to press President Castro further. Dr. Schmidt-Leda bears instructions from the German government. The carrying out of the successive steps outlined in these instructions will end in coercive measures, which will probably be applied in four or five weeks' time, if in the meantime efforts looking to a settlement shall have failed. Insomuch as Germany is possessed of the good will of the United States in this matter, it desires to give President Castro ample time to recognize this fact and also that Germany is really in earnest in the matter.

Good Afternoon.

It is said that if Quincy young ladies can have their say another year, a certain prompter from the western part of the State will be secured for the dance on New Year's eve. The one who at Spencer said at midnight: "Ladies and gentlemen, in behalf of the gentlemen on the stage, I have the pleasure of extending to the Guarde d'Honneur and guests a happy and prosperous new year, and all may kiss their partners. Smack out the old year, smack in the new." If unable to carry their point a year hence there is a leap year coming in two years—Jan. 1, 1904.

"Far and near, through vale and hill,
Are faces that attest the same;
And kindle like a fire new stirred
At sound of Rob Roy's name."

Every now and then the Scotch people of Quincy turn from their toils and cares long enough to register anew their love and admiration for the brave men who through weary centuries, with claymore, dirk and pistol, kept vigil over Scotland's rights and resisted stubbornly the encroachments of a powerful and unscrupulous enemy. Had William Wallace, Robert Bruce, MacGregor, and the other stars in old Scotia's galaxy of national heroes been permitted to look down upon the scene in Music Hall, Tuesday night, they would no doubt have felt that the heather had not been crimson-dyed in vain; that their acts had been ratified and approved, and their names enshrined in undying remembrance. They would have seen on the faces of men and women, lads and lasses, undisguised pride of common kinship with the red-haired chieftain Rob Roy MacGregor in whose special honor they had met.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The committee on revision of the Methodist hymnal have thrown out two of the most notable hymns in the book, "Sweet Hour of Prayer," and "He Leadeth Me." To many it seems almost like discarding the best in the book.—Beverly Times.

☞ Literature must not suppose that it is coming wholly to its own in the White House. It is enough for the present to know that it is allowed to bask occasionally in executive sunshine and not kept all the time cooling its heels and gnashing its teeth in outer darkness.—New York Post.

☞ We suppose there is no question at all but that the world is better from January 1st till about January 15th, when the relapse comes, that it is at any other period of the year. The people who have never done any swearing off of their pet vices on the first of the year are rare people; we do not know that we ever met any. And the people who never swear off on the first of the year from any folly are not to be commended when he boast about it. —Brockton Enterprise.

☞ It begins to look as though Finnish immigration to this country were really according to some definite plan, as has been said to be the case by some Lutheran leaders. As an actual fact the Finnish Lutherans have been increasing in this country at the rate of forty thousand a year. It is said that the movement will be steady, at the rate of from twenty-five to seventy-five thousand a year until the whole militant population of Finland of two millions and a half has escaped Russian oppression and misrule for liberty, peace, and the pursuits of happiness in America. Whether immigration will go to quite this length may be doubtful, but thoughtful Finns in this country look forward to the presence here at no remote time of a million of their countrymen.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ The man who does not take especially good care of his horses this kind of weather is not a true Christian, and his action is not only sinful but criminal. When the temperature is down near the zero mark no horse should be taken out of the barn without having a blanket under the harness, and another blanket taken along to cover him when standing, but it is seldom that one sees instances of such Christianlike thoughtfulness. In the wicked city of Paris the authorities will not permit a cart horse on the street in winter without a blanket, and immediate arrest follows an offense, but here in righteous America it seems that we do not care much for the poor, dumb brutes who serve us, just so our own miserable and sinful selves are kept warm. — Iowa State Register.

☞ Philologists, as well as those who are interested merely in Chicago's material progress, will find fresh stimulation in that announcement that a "floratorium" has been added to the city and to the language. Some years ago we started off modestly with a natatorium. This was followed by the Auditorium. Then came the pantorium, and now the floratorium. Although we do not think we have reached the limit of the "toria," the advancement has been most satisfactory and praiseworthy. The word floratorium, which is, of course, a torium devoted to the exposition and sale of flowers, is a most ingenious construction, but personally we prefer "pantorium," a torium for the promotion of what is known in clothing circles as "an excellent article of pant." Chicago, as the acknowledged literary centre, should feel encouraged to continue a work of enriching and beautifying the language along this suggested line. How much more graceful would be "carnitorium" than packing-house, "sartorium" than tailor-shop, "Nerotorium" than butcher-shop, canitorium than dog pound, "omnitorium" than department store? The more "toria" we can accumulate, the better for our civic dignity. It is interesting, by the way, to recall that "torium" and "toria" figure prominently in an antique college song running, "li-toria, li-toria, swee-dela-wee-chu-hi-ra-sa," thus proving its unmistakably classic origin.—Roswell Field in Chicago Evening Post.

☞ The home lesson question has been canvassed over and over, as to whether study out of school hours is necessary in the elementary schools or whether, if it is, it is not overdone; but that seventy-three out of seventy-four cities selected without consideration as to the stand in this matter have found it desirable to impose home tasks upon the pupils, seems to indicate that the requirements of the public school course as at present generally arranged, with the brief daily sessions, make home lessons an indispensible part of the system.—New Bedford Standard.

Died of Lockjaw.

Miss Christina Jorgensen, the 19-year old daughter of Capt. Jorgensen of the South Shoal lightship, off Nantucket, died from lockjaw at the home of William Nickerson in East Braintree, Tuesday afternoon. The Herald says Miss Jorgensen was vaccinated Dec. 4, at her home in West Dennis, on Cape Cod, and had apparently recovered from the effects of the vaccination. Last Saturday she complained of pains in her jaw and of a stiff neck, and when Dr. G. D. Bullock was called he was unable to alleviate her sufferings. The following day he held a consultation with Dr. G. W. Tinkham, and they decided that it was tetanus.

Miss Jorgensen was a graduate of the East Dennis high school, and was favorably known on Cape Cod. Her father, who has been in the lighthouse service 25 years, a month ago took up his vigil on the lightship, which was to last till April. He has been notified of his daughter's death.

Dr. Bullock says that the symptons of tetanus appeared so long after the vaccination hat some other cause than the action of the virus must be sought for the result.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. AS IN SCOTLAND.

Hoganay is Observed by Clan McGregor.

"Rob Roy" as Popular as Ever.

Dance Out the Old Year and Dance in the New.

The entertainment consisted of the well known Scotch drama "Rob Roy," which was presented by Clan McGregor dramatic club and a number of Loyal Ladies.

The incidents and characters presented in the play referred back to the early part of the 18th century, to the time of the Jacobite rising in Scotland and England in favor of the pretender James Stewart.

The central figure Rob Roy (Robert Campbell McGregor) was then a well known farmer and extensive cattle drover in the west of Scotland, who had by his Jacobite leanings and retributory acts offended is leige lord and kinsman the Duke of Argyle, who was a strong supporter of the government and King George.

A love affair runs through the tale, but each act served to show up and emphasize the fine cunning, sagacity and prowess of the hero, "Rob Roy," who insisted in the face of the law and persecution to defy the authority of his liege, the Duke of Argyle, and the King.

Among the stirring scenes presented were the capture of Rob Roy by the King's troops, and his escape while crossing the ford.

Mr. Peter Kerr, as Rob Roy, made a striking figure and evinced a firm grasp of the character and actions of the whilom Scottish freebooter and outlaw.

Helen McGregor (Rob Roy's wife), a high mettled and imperious dame who ardently seconded her rebel husband's retributive efforts against his enemies, was masterfully represented by Miss Agnes Hyde of Weymouth.

Among other leading characters were: Mr. John Troop who presented in a very creditable manner the cunning and vicious scheming of the villian Rashleigh Asbaldistone; Miss Maggie Esson, who was the vivacious and headstrong Diana Vernon captured the hearts of the audience and was warmly applauded; and her sorely distressed lover, Francis Asbaldistone, in the person of Mr. William Elrick, who played his part very acceptably.

None of the cast had more attractive parts to play than those which Mr. Alexander W. Russell and Mr. Alexander D. Booth, who stood for "Bailie Nicol Jarvis" and "Dougal." The pathos and humor of the "Bailie" were strikingly exemplified by Mr. Russell, while Mr. Booth presented to perfection the ever ready and unquestioning devotion of Dougal.

Mr. Francis Morrison acted the part of the faithful and painstaking Mr. Owen, Jr., partner of the firm of Asbaldistone, Treshham & Co. Mr. John Wedderburn, as "captain Thornton" was as peremptory and pompous as became an officer of the King's army.

The duties of the buxom bustling hostess of the Highland exchange house, "Jeannie McAlpine," was artfully performed by Mrs. Maggie Hall. Miss Henrietta Rennis as "Martha" was dutiful and exacting as became her part. "Mattie," Bailie Jarvis" patient and accommodating housekeeper, was well illustrated by Mrs. Jeannie McKay.

The swaggering "Major Gallbraith" was happily assigned to Mr. John Gould. Robert Craig, William Stewart, David Smith, Daniel Ryall, John Esson, John Findlay, Alexander M. Smith, David Smith, Joseph Whitehall, J. Ford, George Craig, John Scott, John Ross, John Leslie, and William Kavanah formed the bodies of troops, Highland retainers, etc. Mr. William Elrick and Miss Maggie Esson, were the songsters and added much to the enjoyment of the evening.

To Miss Agnes Hyde is due much of the success which attended the performance as the entire cast had in practising received valuable instructions from her.

Chief Robert Findlay was director and Mr. Alexander D. Booth stage manager. At eleven o'clock the closing curtain fell and Rob Roy "Scotland's fear and Scotland's pride" retired from view and immediately the hall was cleared for dancing.

The grand march of one hundred couples was led by Alexander Smith and lady, and not till four o'clock did Mr. John M. Plummer of "Purdy's orchestra" shout his last order to the happy dancers.

At twelve o'clock the advent of the New Year was warmly welcomed and many exchanges of good wishes went round.

Mr. Alexander M. Smith was floor director assisted by Mr. William A. Beattie. The aids were Mr. John Troup, John Gould, Mr. John Wedderburn, Mr. Alexander Birnie, Mr. Thomas Raleigh, and Mr. Alexander Black.

With Chief Findlay the committee of arrangements were Willliam Beattie, Alexander Hall, Alexander McDonald, Alexander Russell, David T Drummond, Thomas Johnstone and Alexander M. Smith, who are to be congratulated on the success which attended the whole affair. Albion I. Dixon was secretary.

Once more the Scotch people of Quincy have demonstrated that there is nothing like a good old-fashioned time carried out on the American plan.

Hobart—Reith.

Miss Bessie Reith and Mr. Charles Arthur Hobart were united in marriage on Monday evening by Rev. M. C. Ward of the Universalist church in the presence of relatives and friends from Boston, Braintree, Quincy and elsewhere. The bride was prettily gowned in Swiss muslin over white silk, cut en traine, with yoke trimmed with Duchess lace and ribbon. The bridesmaid, Miss Annie Hobart, a sister of the groom, wore muslin over pink silk. Mr. Hoyt of Boston was best man, and the ushers were Mr. William Hobart and Mr. Charles Gragg. The house was prettily decorated with evergreen, holly and cut flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Hobart were assisted in receiving by the bridesmaid and best man. They will be at home at 32 Bennington street after February first.

To Please Mr. Faxon.

Commenting on the caucus of the Republicans of the Senate, the Journal says: "In the division of committees there were a good many interesting assignments. Senator Eugene Sprague of Quincy will be the Chairman of Liquor Law," who, with Representative Keith of Brockton, House Chairman, gives two uncompromising total abstinence men on the Liquor Committee, which is sufficient to make Henry Faxon laugh with delight."

New Whist Club.

The first meeting of the "Twelve Associates' whist club," was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Borst Prospect street, Atlantic. Mr. Charles Hadlock was elected President and Mr. T. D. Borst Secretary and Treasurer. The prizes were won by Mrs. Herbert Gearwar and Mr. T. D. Borst, after which refreshments were served. A very enjoyable evening was spent, the company watching the old year out and pledging a toast to the new year.

Very Cold Day.

The temperature at noon today was 14 degree, which is considerably colder than any day thus far this winter at midday, the lowest point reached at that hour being 20 degrees, which was on Dec. 16 and 17. The temperature a year age today at noon was 42 degrees, and three years ago, 9, while 5 is the lowest noon temperature recorded in Quincy since Jan. 1, 1897.

Smallpox at Abington.

One of the conductors running between Rockland and Abington has come down with small pox.

Claim Agent Arrested.

John A. McAloon of Hancock street was arrested Tuesday night by Inspector McKay for Boston officers upon a warrant sworn out by the Old Colony street railway charging him with uttering a forged acquittance discharge to the value of $100.

It is claimed that McAloon would go to the railroad, and after finding out for how much they would settle a claim against them, with a person who intended to sue, would then interview the party who had the claim, to whom he would tell of his interview with the railroad and then offer them a smaller sum, putting the balance in his pocket.

McAloon was for several years employed by the Quincy & Boston street railway and later by the Brockton and Old Colony street railways as its claim agent.

Watch Meeting.

The Watch-night service at the Atlantic M. E. church was well attended, and the service which led to the midnight hour was full of interest. Sermons by the pastor, Rev. G. W. McCreery and Rev. Judson Jeffries of Ohio were well received. An intermission for refreshments was held at ten o'clock. The revival services are growing in interest every night, and the service this evening with a sermon by Rev. Louis Magin of Illinois, is looked forward to with interest.

Equivocal Answers.

A tourist once asked a farmer how he could tell the difference between a mushroon and a toad-stool. "I don't just know" said the man with the chin whiskers and blue jeans, "but if you're alive the next morning, you'll know they are mushroons."

"With so many makers claiming the best piano, how is one to know which is really the best to buy?" asked a perplexed wife of her husband. "Search me," said the lord of creation. "That's Frank A. Locke's business—not mine."

A Statement.

As the Quincy Young Men's Christian Association is not doing any active work now, it seems fitting that we should make a statement of our position.

On December first we gave up our quarters over Mr. Nash's store. The four rooms there were pleasantly fitted up and very homelike in appearance and last year the attendance was good, but without a gymnasium the great attraction to many of the young men is missing, and the breadth and importance of the work necessarily suffers. We have been unable to find suitable quarters anywhere and so it has seemed best for the time being to stop all expenses, and wait.

Since our organization in 1891, there has never been a time when there was before us so great an opportunity for helpfulness or when the desire for such a work on the part of the young man was so emphatic.

The Quincy Association has every bill paid and a small balance in the treasury. We have in the Quincy Savings Bank a Building Fund of $1,444.95. We are eager to go ahead as soon as we can secure a location, and see the way clear to raise the necessary funds. There ought to be a strong work here in Quincy for our young men.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

City Clerk's Office, Dec. 24, 1901.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by his office to have the record correct, experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1901, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1902.

Justifiable Perhaps.

Excited Citizen—I want a man arrested right away! I've been assaulted, and I wasn't doing a thing but walking along the street in a quiet, orderly and inoffensive manner and whistling.

Justice—Um—er—what tune were you whistling?—New York Weekly.

It Worried Him.

"My wife," said the thoughtful man, "always kisses me very affectionately when I am going away for a trip."

"That ought to please you."

"Well, I don't know about that. I notice she never kisses me so affectionately when I come back."—Chicago Post.

Maso's Friends Didn't Vote

Havana, Jan. 1.—Election returns have not yet been received here. The indications are for a light vote. The partisans of General Bartolome Maso in Havana did not vote.

NEWS IN BRIEF

While enjoying himself with a party of companions on Crystal lake, Gardner, Mass., Alfred Carmier, 14, skated backward into an open hole in the ice. He was unconscious when taken from the water and died a few moments later.

The Concord, N. H., city government amended its previous appropriation of $150,000 for a city building of Concord granite by voting to build a city hall of brick and granite.

A dispatch from Rome says that the pope celebrated mass on New Year's eve and that he appeared to be in good health.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

Worried Over Loss of Position

Newton, N. H., Jan. 1.—Roland Dodd, formerly teacher of the high school here, is missing, and his relatives fear for his safety. Mr. Dodd was asked to resign his position by the school committee, which he did in October. He keenly felt the loss of his position.

STRIKERS AND SCOTLAND.

To Hear From Textile Workers' Executive Council

TIEUP OF COCHECO MILLS

Postponed Until Assurance of Sanction Is Received—Striking Weavers at Lawrence Vote to Remain Out Until Demands are Granted

Dover, N. H., Jan. 1.—The 200 striking weavers of the Cocheco Manufacturing company held a meeting last night, which was largely attended by weavers on other grades of work in the mills, and as a result it was decided to hear from the executive council of the United Textile Workers of America before action is taken on a general strike.

The most interesting feature of the meeting was the reading of the telegram received from the national officers of the Textile union after the meeting had closed on Monday night. The telegram stated that the local officers of the Textile union could go ahead and order a general strike if they desired. The local officers have not as yet decided to order a general tie-up of the Cocheco mills, but will wait to get the views of the executive council regarding the matter. Until they are heard from there will be no change in the strike situation, and all of the employes, with the exception of the 200 striking weavers, will continue at work. The other weavers expressed themselves as willing to quit work when the order is issued by the local officials of the union.

The Lawrence Strike

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 1.—An enthusiastic meeting of the striking weavers of the Atlantic mills was held yesterday, at which Chairman Nichols of the executive committee, appointed to look after the interests of the strikers, presided. There were about 150 strikers present and they unanimously voted to stay away from their work and induce all others to do the same, until the advance of 10 cents a cut on broad loom work was given them.

Chairman Nichols said that the strikers would never go back to work until the advance was made. "We were cut down a few weeks ago 22 cents a cut," he said, "and we will leave the city before we will return to work without getting some of our wages back. We shall try to have others leave their work."

Agent Somersby of the Atlantic mills says: "I don't anticipate any extensive trouble. You now the country could grant a franchise to lay a railroad across the Atlantic ocean, but it could not be done. No labor union can vote to stay away from work, and do so altogether. I have nothing against the strikers and will let them take their own pleasure about coming back. We can't advance wages on these goods but it they want more looms we can give them another."

The strike has caused the silencing of 325 looms.

A Gould-Harriman Purchase

Kansas City, Jan. 1.—The Kansas City suburban belt railway, the Consolidated railway terminal and the Kansas City and Independent air line were sold at auction here yesterday for an aggregate of $2,500,000 to Max Pam, representing the Harriman-Gould interests, who made the only bid. Two steel bridges and packing house terminals belonging to the Union Terminal company were also bid in by Mr. Pam for $1,300,000.

Appreciated Faithful Employes

New York, Jan. 1.—Edward Kemp, the millionaire druggist, by his will, filed for probate yesterday, bequeathed $50,000 to employes who have been in his firm for five years or longer. To the widow he leaves $100,000 and household effects absolutely, and a country seat of 500 acres and the income of the rest of the estate.

Russia Wants American Engines

Marquette, Mich., Jan. 1.—A local engine building firm is in receipt of a formal inquiry from the Russian government asking as to when engines can be shipped to Russia and conveying the information that a large order will be placed. The engines, operated by gasolene, are wanted for service on the czar's torpedo boat fleet.

Present Position Suits Him

Washington, Jan. 1.—First Assistant Postmaster General Johnson has declined a tender made to him by Governor Voorhees of the office of state treasurer of New Jersey. Mr. Johnson said that while he appreciated the honor done him, he preferred to remain in his present position.

Lynching Talk Has Ceased

Elizabeth City, N. C., Jan. 1.—James Wilcox, who is held in connection with the death of Miss Ella Cropsey, is still confined in the jail here. Popular sentiment is very strong against him, but time has alleviated the feeling somewhat and the talk of lynching has ceased.

Bank Robbed of $125,000

Lisbon, Jan. 1.—A confidential clerk of the Credit Predial bank has been arrested, charged with the embezzlement of $125,000. It appears that the clerk has long practiced an ingenious system of forgeries. A number of alleged accomplices have also been arrested.

Russia Wants Representation

St. Petersburg, Jan. 1.—The Rossiya expresses itself as dissatisfied with the Chinese advisory board, composed of Messrs. Rockhill and Foster and Sir Robert Hart, and demands equal representation on the board for all the powers.

NAVAL PORTFOLIO

Probably Go to Crane Upon Resignment of Secretary Long

Washington, Jan. 1.—It is stated upon the best of authority that Secretary Long is not to remain through the administration, but as stated repeatedly he has no intentions of leaving the cabinet at present. He is to be succeeded by a Massachusetts man, especially since the treasury portfolio went to the west. Secretary Long cannot leave the cabinet at present, since his assistant, Judge Darling, is not yet familiar with the departmental routine, and because the Schley complication, with congress still in session, cannot be regarded as necessarily "over," although probably it is so.

The man who is slated to succeed Secretary Long also desires delay, and so their interests coincide. That man is W. Murray Crane. He may thus serve out his term as governor of Massachusetts, while Long is accomplishing what he desires.

Such rigid secrecy has been enjoined upon the principals of this arrangement that official disclaimers of exact information may be forthcoming, and with entire sincerity, since there is always great uncertainty as to events scheduled take place a year away. It may be said, however, that this is the present plan, and one that, if nothing happens, will be fully carried out.

Officers' Suspension Recommended

Philadelphia, Jan. 1.—The British naval court of inquiry, which has been investigating the loss of the British bark Sindia, which was wrecked Dec. 15, on the New Jersey coast, yesterday recommended to the British board of trade that Captain McKenzie of the Sindia have his certificate as master suspended for six months, meanwhile having a mate's certificate for that period. The recommendation is further made that Mate George Stewart have his certificate as mate suspended for three months. The loss of the ship and cargo amounts to $250,000.

Miner's Theatre Burned

New York, Jan. 1.—Miner's 8th avenue theatre, on 8th avenue, was destroyed by fire last night. The "Merry Maidens" burlesque show had just given a performance and the audience had been out of the building only about 15 minutes when the fire started. It was caused by a lighted cigarette.

Big Job For Linemen

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Ogdensburg was caught in a snow blizzard from the northwest yesterday. Telephone, telegraph, electric light, fire alarm and trolley wires were torn loose and carried to the ground in a tangled mass. Linemen are busy repairing the damage.

Capsized at Her Dock

Portland, Ore., Jan. 1.—The four-masted steel bark Asie capsized yesterday just as the last of her ballast was being swept out. The Asie was tied at a dock and was preparing to take on a cargo of wheat. No lives were lost. The Asie is a French bark of 2059 tons.

Traffic Blocked by Floods

Washington, Jan. 1.—The floods in the south have caused serious delays in the mail service between the east and the southwest, as well as locally in the affected regions. All Texas and Mexico mails are being dispatched from the east via St. Louis instead of New Orleans.

Murphy Out, Partridge In

New York, Jan. 1.—Police Commissioner Murphy sent his resignation to Mayor Van Wyck yesterday. Mayor-elect Low's appointee, Colonel Partridge, took charge of the department at noon today.

What Excise Law Yielded

New York, Jan. 1.—The excise year, under the Raines law system, does not end until April 30, but the receipts in this city for the eight months ending yesterday were $5,418,730.

Plebiscite Cuts No Figure

Copenhagen, Jan. 1.—It is learned upon the best authority that the treaty between the United States and Denmark for the sale of the Danish West Indies will be signed, in spite of the agitation here against such action, insomuch as the Danish government has given its promise to that end. The question of a plebiscite will not be allowed to interfere in the matter.

PALE GIRLS

Too bad to see the health and beauty of a young girl fade away. This often happens to girls between the ages of twelve and twenty. Girlhood ought to be a time of perfect health. Pale blood—a blood disease—is a common enemy of good health in our girls.

Scott's Emulsion is having remarkable success in bringing back the roses to those pale faces.

All the mental and bodily trouble that go with pale blood are relieved by this treatment—Scott's Emulsion. Mothers of pale daughters should see that they get it.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

THE SHAWS AT HOME.

Family Life of New Secretary of the Treasury.

WIFE TELLS OF HER SOCIAL VIEWS

Not Opposed to Decollete Dresses and Believes Women Should Be Pretty—Says She Is "Not Much of a Hand For Jewels"—Can Make a Dress if Necessary.

"Oh, you newspaper people never let me alone," said Mrs. Shaw, the wife of the new secretary of the treasury, to the correspondent of the New York World at Des Moines, Ia.

"It is the funniest thing about this whole business. And you want to know all about our home life and my taste for gowns, etc. Do you think the public is really interested in that?"

Even as she complained she sat down and prepared for talk that she manifestly intimated would be a pleasure to her, though she had been interrupted in her toilet in preparing to attend an informal reception. Though no member of the Shaw family makes any claim to beauty, their dispositions are charming. This is particularly true of Mrs. Shaw, whose frankness and guilelessness make her exceptionally interesting.

"To begin with, then, there are five of us. As you see, I'm the largest member of the family. We love home above all else, and our greatest joy in life is during vacation time, such as the present, when we can have our children with us and spend long evenings together at the fireside.

"Mr. Shaw, as you know, is an active Sunday school worker, and we all try to go to church on Sunday. Mr. Shaw was superintendent of the Sunday school at Denison even before I married him, and he has been an officer pretty much ever since. In Des Moines he was superintendent of the Sunday school at the First M. E. church for a year, but had to give it up for lack of time.

"At Denison I nearly always taught a class, but I haven't done much in that line since I came to Des Moines. We are trying to raise our children as active Christians, and I feel we have succeeded, but do not think that our love of home life interferes with an enjoyment of society.

"I'm fond of receptions and socials and such things and have always done my share of entertaining. I expect when I go to Washington to do whatever the other cabinet members' wives do in that way.

"Do I know what that will be? Indeed I do not. I expect to take part in the receptions given by the president and members of the cabinet, and if the ladies of the cabinet have 'at homes' ever so often I shall too. As a matter of fact, I have been in Washington but twice and haven't much of an idea what they do along that line there. Each time we have been there we did not go to visit any one in particular and stopped at hotels.

"We took our children with us when we went to President McKinley's inauguration. Then I was there about two years before. But, really, that I come to think of it, I did go out some. While there I attended a reception given by Mrs. John A. Logan and another given by Mrs. Dalzell. I accompanied Mrs. Dolliver. Seems to me I went somewhere else too.

"Something about my gowns too? Really, no, I haven't had a dress made for Washington yet and haven't any idea just what I shall wear. I've got enough clothes left to do in an emergency as it is and suppose I can get everything made I need when I get there.

"No, indeed, I'm not opposed to decollete dresses. I'm one of those women who think pretty things are made to wear and that women should look as pretty as possible.

"But as for jewels, while I have some, I'm not much of a hand for them. As a matter of fact, I haven't as many as most women, but perhaps the public isn't interested in knowing that. While we have never been great hands to travel, I've been in the east a number of times. In 1894, I think it was, Mr. Shaw and I were at New York for a month. I dearly love to go and am sure I will greatly enjoy life in Washington.

"But as for knowing what to expect, I'm entirely at sea. This has come upon us so suddenly and unexpectedly that I haven't had time to collect my thoughts. Mr. Shaw talked over with Senator Allison how much we would be expected to expend on society, and we decided we could get along very nicely on $5,000 more than Mr. Shaw's salary. I flatter myself that I can make a very nice gown if necessary, and my girls can too."

Snakeskin His Necktie.

Miram Heller of Long Pond, near Stroudsburg, Pa., wears a necktie made of the skin of a black rattlesnake, says the New York World. His belt is the scaly covering of the yellow rattler, and his suspenders are the glossy hides of two large blacksnakes. Each of his gloves is ornamented with the half of the fur of a white weasel.

Useful Automobile Device.

A new device is a spring in the cushion of the automobile driver's seat which throws off the power the instant he rises or is thrown from his seat.

TREASURY STATISTICS

Of a Most Encouraging Nature Quoted by the Retiring Secretary

Washington, Jan. 1.—At the cabinet meeting yesterday Secretary Gage reviewed briefly the financial story of the four years just closing. "For this calendar year," said he, speaking of it after the meeting, "we show receipts in excess of the ordinary expenditures amounting roundly to $100,000,000. Such an excess might have resulted in serious embarrassment had not the department been able to reduce the public debt in large amounts. Since April 1 last the treasury has redeemed and cancelled United States bonds to the par value of $58,714,700.

"The volume of money in circulation on March 1, 1897, outside the treasury was $1,675,694,953, and the amount per capita $23.14. On Dec. 1 last the amount outside the treasury was $2,250,256,230, and the amount per capita $28.73. The amount of gold coin and gold certificates in circulation increased from $553,860,515 on March 1, 1897, to $914,300,089 on Dec. 1, 1901. Every other kind of money in circulation is greater in amount now than it was on March 1, 1897, except the treasury notes of the act of July 14, 1890, of which the amount in circulation on Dec. 1, 1901, was only $40,012,622, as against $85,546,621 on March 1, 1897. The increase in the amount of national bank notes in circulation during the period in question was $132,132,731.

"Comparing the situation as it is today with April 1, 1897, the result is more gratifying. On the latter day the treasury held money of all kinds to the amount of $250,875,000, leaving therefore, $150,000,000 as a cash balance. Today in money of all kinds the treasury holds $296,650,000, and if we deduct the $150,000,000 now held as a gold reserve the balance stands at $146,000,000, or $4,000,000 less than it was April 1, 1898. It will be seen, therefore, that substantial equilibrium has been maintained."

Bay State Legislature

Boston, Jan. 1.—The Massachusetts legislature convened at 11 o'clock this morning for its annual session. The members of both branches assembled in their respective chambers and after being sworn in by Governor Crane they immediately organized by electing presiding officers and clerks. No business whatever was done, except to provide for a joint session tomorrow, when Governor Crane will be sworn in for his third term and deliver his inaugural address.

Colored Folks' Gunnings

Charleston, Jan. 1.—New Year's day at the exposition is being largely monopolized by the colored people. The negro building was formally opened and addresses were delivered by prominent colored men. There is on exhibition a rapid-fire machine gun invented by a negro, which is operated by electricity. After the formal exercises were concluded the colored people adjourned to the midway, where an elaborate amusement program is being carried out.

American Claim Is Moderate

Pekin, Jan. 1.—The brief diplomatic sensation caused here by the cabled announcement that the United States would reduce its Chinese indemnity claim by $18,000,000 has been ended by a dispatch to Mr. Conger, saying the report to this effect was a fabrication. Secretary Hay said in his message that the American claim is moderate and just, but that the United States was willing to waive its pro rata share if necessary.

Quartet of Alleged Murderers

Hudson, N. Y., Jan. 1.—The three Van Wormer brothers and Harvey Bruce were brought into court last night to hear the charge of murder in the first degree read to them. The coroner read his findings and committed all four to the care of the sheriff on the charge of murder in the first degree in killing Peter A. Hallenbeck. All waived examination and entered pleas of not guilty.

Headed For Culebra

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 1.—The United States North Atlantic squadron arrived off this port yesterday. Rear Admiral Higginson came ashore and transferred his flag to the United States gunboat Marietta. The latter had been awaiting the squadron here for several days. Admiral Higginson proceeded to Culebra island last evening. The itinerary of the squadron is unchanged.

Gage Formally Resigns

Washington, Jan. 1.—When Secretary Gage went to the cabinet meeting yesterday he carried with him his formal letter of resignation for presentation to the president. It thanks the president for many courtesies extended, expresses appreciation of the confidence reposed in him, and adds his cordial wishes for the success of the new administration.

Steamer's Cargo Ruined

Listen to the Annual Address of Governor Crane

MEASURES OF IMPORTANCE

Touched Upon and Suggestions Offered In Connection Therewith—Schools, Banks, Grade Crossings and Municipal Legislation

Boston, Jan. 2.—The great and general court formally opened for the session of 1902 at 11 o'clock today. A short time afterward Governor Crane delivered his inaugural address.

In preparing a statement of the financial condition of the commonwealth Governor Crane deals only with totals, referring those who wish for fuller information to the annual reports of the treasurer and the auditor. The address says in part:

"The gross debt of the commonwealth, actual and contingent, Jan. 1, 1902, was $77,696,635.30. Of this amount, $25,738,223.30 is represented by loans which have been issued for state purposes exclusively, and $51,958,412, the total contingent debt, by loans which have been issued for the benefit of cities and towns, and which will be repaid ultimately by them to the commonwealth. Applicable to the loans issued for strictly state purposes, there are accumulations in sinking funds amounting to $13,278,169.69, making the net actual state debt $12,460,053.61. For the redemption of the loans included in the contingent debt there are accumulations in sinking funds amounting to $3,312,853.17, which amount, applied to the principal of the loans, makes the net contingent debt $48,645,558.83. Of the net contingent debt, $1,101,082.49 falls upon certain cities and towns in which armories have been built, and the remainder, $47,544,476.34, upon the cities and towns in the metropolitan water, sewerage and parks districts.

"The receipts of the commonwealth do not increase in a ratio corresponding to its expenditures, and unless a greater restraint is exercised over appropriations, it will not be long before new sources of revenue will need to be discovered. We must keep the commonwealth progressive and liberal, but at the same time we must not forget that it is our duty to administer her affairs with a scrupulous regard for the strictest economy.

"The water board last year called attention to the great increase from year to year in the consumption of water in the district. There is undoubtedly a considerable consumption of water which is excessive and wasteful and which can be prevented. Some method should be devised by which every city and town, if not every individual water taker, shall be financially interested in the prevention of waste and of the excessive use of water.

"The abolition of crossings at the same level as our steam railroads and our streets and public ways is an important matter. The general law of 1890, by which the policy of the state in respect to the abolition of grade crossings was first established, has practically ceased to be operative. I am of the opinion that the further operation of the general law for the abolition of grade crossings should be secured by an appropriation for that purpose, and I therefore recommend an appropriation of $5,000,000, to be expended, at the rate of not more than $500,000 in any one year, by the commonwealth, for the abolition of grade crossings of railroads and public ways.

"The insane in the public institutions of the commonwealth numbered on Oct. 1, 1901, 7790; of this number 3779 were men and 4011 women. On the corresponding date of 1900 the total number was 7411, showing an increase of 373 for the year. The board of insanity will this year recommend that appropriations be made to provide accommodations for an increase of 475 patients. In this recommendation I concur.

"The latest school returns show that the number of pupils of all ages enrolled in the public schools the preceding school year was 469,188; in private schools, 82,325. Of 334,913 persons returned by the school census as coming within the compulsory age limits of 7 and 14, 87 percent were included in the public school enrollment; the rest, with few exceptions, in the private school enrolment. The total expenditure by the commonwealth and municipalities for the public schools was $14,197,947, of which $11,134,934 was for support and $3,045,013 for school buildings. The cost for each child in the average membership of the public schools was $34.91. Upon the public schools more than upon any other public agency depends the welfare of the commonwealth. Their contribution to this welfare justifies the large sums annually expended upon them."

"Under existing law, street railway companies may be organized at will, and receive locations from local boards of aldermen and selectmen for routes through any number of cities and towns. It sometimes happens that in granting locations the interest of the public are not satisfactorily safeguarded. I recognize the desirability of having the local boards proceed, as now, to grant locations in the first instance; but I recommend a change in the law, to require that all locations granted by local boards shall be subject to the approval of the board of railroad commissioners.

"I renew my former recommendations on the subject of municipal legislation. It is good policy to compel cities and towns to depend upon their own resources in the management of their local affairs, instead of encouraging them to come to the legislature for relief when no real necessity therefor exists. I trust that in your consideration of municipal measures this year you will find it advisable to exercise still further restraint.

"There are now in the commonwealth 186 savings banks, with aggregate deposits of $560,000,000. This great amount of money is an important factor in the business life of the commonwealth, and the institutions holding the same should be protected by every reasonable and proper safeguard. In connection with the matter of savings banks, I desire to call your attention to the fact that in some instances they are closely connected with national banks or other financial institutions in the occupancy of the same offices, and also have, in common with those institutions, the same officers and clerical force. I recommend the enactment of such legislation as will require the dissolution, within a reasonable time, of any such existing corporations, and which will also prohibit any bank hereafter incorporated from being so connected.

"The delegation to boards and commissions of important powers of supervision and control has been a necessary incident of the expanding life of the commonwealth. The authority imposed upon these boards and commissions has, in the main, been exercised wisely and conservatively. The only fair criticism that can be made of the system is the tendency to unnecessary multiplication; in other words, to the establishment of special commissions to care for interests of a trivial character, which might properly be delegated to boards already in existence.

"I make the following recommendations:

"That the powers and duties of the cattle commissioners be transferred to the state board of agriculture.

"That the powers and duties of the inspector of gas and gas meters be transferred to the board of gas and electric light commissioners.

"That the powers and duties of the inspector general of fish be transferred to the commissioners on inland fisheries and game.

"That the powers and duties of the state assayer of liquors be transferred to the state board of health.

"I recommend, furthermore, that you consider the expediency of abolishing the per diem system of compensation in all boards and commissions where it now obtains, and substituting therefor in all cases a fixed salary.

"You have been called by the suffrages of the people to discharge for the current year the important work of legislating for the commonwealth. It is a labor that should be undertaken with a grave sense of the responsibilities involved. In so far as you are guided by this high purpose you will deserve and receive the gratitude of the commonwealth.

Hindered by Publicity

Washington, Jan. 2.—The state department declines to furnish any more information regarding the case of Miss Stone, the American missionary. This policy of silence was requested by Mr. Dickinson, the United States consul at Constantinople, who has complained that the brigands were receiving information as to what had been published about the case in American newspapers and that they had obtained the idea from this that continued agitation in regard to the release of Miss Stone would tend to increase the ransom.

Strike of Freight Handlers

Grand Haven, Mich., Jan. 2.—Because of a reduction of wages from 20 to 15 cents an hour, 115 freight handlers employed by the Crosby Transportation company here went on strike yesterday. A Longshoremen's union was organized and a committee appointed to wait on the company's officials.

Warrants Out For Gamblers

Nashville, Jan. 2.—Writs were sworn out yesterday for the arrest of 40 alleged gamblers on the affidavit of F. K. Odil, a brother of Gay Odil, who recently lost $3000 in the gambling houses of this city. The warrants charge the defendants with various felonies.

Marconi Royally Entertained

Ottawa, Jan. 2.—Signor Marconi was among the callers on Governor General Minto yesterday. Later he was the guest of Mgr. Falconi, the papal delegate, and last evening Dr. Borden, minister of militia, was the host at a dinner given in his honor.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

THE CUBAN PRESIDENCY

Palma Chosen to Fill Office of Chief Executive

VERY LIGHT VOTE WAS CAST

Proceedings Ignored by Friends of Maso—President-Elect's Main Purpose Is to Secure Friendly Relations With the United States

Havana, Jan. 2.—The indications are that the entire Palma ticket will be elected and that Estrada Palma, the nationalist candidate for the presidency of Cuba, will receive the unanimous vote of the electoral college. The adherents of General Bartolome Maso, (the Democratic candidate who recently withdrew from the campaign), not only withdrew their candidates but refused to go to the polls. A remarkably light vote was polled throughout the island.

TOMAS ESTRADA PALMA.

The New York Tribune prints an interview with Mr. Palma, president-elect of Cuba, in which he speaks "unofficially" of the needs and policies of the Cuban republic as follows:

"The principal object of the Cuban republic should be first of all to secure the most friendly relations with the American people. At the same time we should try to secure from the Washington government all the advantages possible for our products by reasonable reductions of the import duties, especially on sugar and tobacco, as this is the only way for Cuba to escape the absolute ruin of these two industries, which are the only bases of Cuba's actual wealth. Without this benefit the Cuban people will find themselves in great distress and subject to disturbances from lack of employment. In a starving condition they cannot enjoy their independence. I am convinced that the people of the United States know that it is to their interest that Cuba be prosperous, orderly and peaceful, and for that reason I am sure that a majority of Americans will favor a commercial treaty between the countries advantageous to both."

France and Italy at Peace

Rome, Jan. 2.—The French ambassador, Camille Barrere, speaking at a reception of the French colony here yesterday, took occasion to allude in the most friendly terms to the relations between France and Italy. He declared that there was no longer any Mediterranean problem between the two countries and added that all other vital questions had likewise been settled on a lasting and satisfactory basis.

Pluggers Are Fagged

Boston, Jan. 2.—McLean of Chelsea was the fortunate sprinter to cross the tape first at the end of yesterday's stint in the six-day bicycle race at the Park Square garden. The men seem to be fatigued after two days of hard work. The score of the six leaders is 607 miles, 2 laps, which is just over 20 miles an hour for an average. One team withdrew through injuries to Carmi, the Worcester man.

Bricklayers Locked Out

Richmond, Jan. 2.—The members of the Bricklayers' union were locked out by the contractors yesterday and the work on practically every building where bricklayers are employed is at a standstill. The brick contractors agreed not to start or carry on any work until the union should agree to certain rules which had been adopted by the contractors.

Choate Abandons Law Business

New York, Jan. 2.—After a continuous service of nearly half a century in the law firm of Evans, Choate & Beaman, Joseph H. Choate has withdrawn and will discontinue the practice of law, giving as his reason that his duties of state as ambassador from the United States to England prevent his active participation in the affairs of the partnership.

Woman Doctor Kills Herself

Providence, Jan. 2.—Dr. Elizabeth Darby, about 32 years old, committed suicide by shooting here last night. She left a note reading: "Despair led me to do this. Send my body to Bordentown, N. J." A woman companion of the physician stated that Miss Darby had been despondent for some time.

Good Afternoon.

A Philadelphia newspaper depicts General Miles on the bridge of a battle ship. Admiral Dewey in rough rider costume and astride a broncho is next in order.

It is stated that the Amalgamated Copper Association owns twenty newspapers scattered throughout the United States. This doubtless accounts for the large amount of free advertising the concern has received.

The Young Men's Christian Association did much good when active in Quincy, and its gymnasium, reading room and evening classes are missed by the young men. Where these associations have commodious and well arranged rooms they are popular, and a power for good. The Quincy association has been handicapped because it has not been able to build or rent desirable quarters. With the nucleus of a building fund in the bank, it is hoped that the association may soon be successful in its aim.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The Chicago bachelor's trust fines its members $100 each for marrying. It seems as if an appeal would lie from such a sentence to the U. S. supreme court, on the ground that it is a cruel and unusual punishment, when a man is both fined and imprisoned for getting married.—Boston Advertiser.

☞ The south will have opportunity for making more faces at Massachusetts before his session of congress is over, for Senator Hoar is to push his bill giving the federal courts jurisdiction over lynch law offenders, which, while applicable to small sections of the country, will make itself felt most in the southern country. — Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Massachusetts savings banks have $540,403,687 in deposits, with 1,535,009 depositors on their books. Practically every dollar of this money is invested in real estate or in authorized stock and securities. The figures are significant in demonstrating the direct connection between the "common" people of the state, who make up the great mass of savings bank depositors, with the business interests to which they are so often represented as directly opposed.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ In the judgment of bank examiners in this state, the chief fault with the savings banks as at present conducted, is that they are too closely associated in management with national banks, so that in too many cases one bank serves as a "feeder" for the other. Assuredly this was not the intention of those who founded the saving bank system. The national bank has its own field, and that of the savings bank is, or should be, very different. The savings bank is under state control, but the national bank is not. So far as is possible, the two systems should be kept entirely apart and distinct in Massachusetts. In some cases it is possible that little trouble would result from leaving things as they are, but if the savings banks in Massachusetts are to be absolutely protected, they should be guarded from the possible danger of making them mere appendages of the national banks. The Massachusetts savings banks should be kept not only free from embarrassment, but from the possibility of embarrassment, from such a source. —Boston Advertiser.

Rarely is a reception attended with greater wealth of cordiality and warmth of feeling than that extended last evening by people of Bethany church to their pastor Rev. E. N. Hardy and his wife. It was a new milestone in the history of the church, placed with fitting ceremonial to celebrate nearly seven years of work together. The four hundred of the church were there and many more including the rector of Christ's church.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy received in the parlor of the church which was delightfully transformed with Christmas trees, festoons of evergreen, palms, ferns and flowers; the light and color added by a string of brilliant electric-lighted Japanese lanterns.

REV. E. N. HARDY.

Mrs. Hardy was most charmingly gowned and held a large bouquet of carnations presented by the Reception Committee, which was composed of the ladies of the various organizations.

The guests were presented by ushers who were of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip as follows: Mr. W. E. Blanchard, Mr. W. H. Fay, Mr. W. G. Shaw, Mr. W. T. Isaac, Mr. F. P. Horton, Mr. E. D. Gourd, Mr. John O. Hall, Jr., Mr. H. E. Crane, Mr. Stacy Southworth, Mr. Delcevare King, Mr. Frank Crane, Mr. Walter Sampson, Mr. Charles Sampson and Mr. Charles Hardwick.

After extending New Year's greeting to the pastor and his wife the people greeted each other in the chapel, which was never more tastefully decorated with its Indian and Japanese corners, its bowers of green, its festoons of flags and bunting, with the brilliant colored light of the star of the Brotherhood surmounting all.

The decorations were in charge of Mrs. W. E. Blanchard under whose direction the charming effects were produced, changing the chapel to a banquet room. Here frappe and fancy crackers were served at small tables by a number of young ladies in pretty light gowns, under the direction of Mrs. W. G. Shaw. Those assisting were: Miss Addie J. Park, Miss Alice Sampson, Miss Rachel Doble, Miss Bessie Merrill, Miss Mabel Tanner, Miss Clara Merrill, Miss Ida Kingman, Miss Sadie Parker.

As a further expression of good will Mr. Hardy and his wife (for he expressly stated that he should give her half) were presented with a purse of one hundred dollars in gold. The presentation speech was made by Mr. Theophilus King in his characteristically happy manner—to which Mr. Hardy responded as well as his deep feeling would allow, expressing his gratitude for this additional token of his people's loving appreciation of the work he was trying to do among them "In His Name."

Mr. Southworth added a few words of his early search for and capture of Mr. Hardy for the church.

An orchestra discoursed pleasant music during the evening and altogether the reception was most successful socially in the true sense of binding people and pastor more closely and so giving inspiration for better work together in the future.

Among the ministers present were Revs. Pratt, Austin, Mills, Henrickson, Lenfstedt, Strong, Dornan, and regrets were received from many others.

SMALL POX.

Another Case Makes its Appearance at Wollaston.

The Patient is a Seven Year Old Girl.

Was Vaccinated Less than a Week ago. House Quarantined.

Wollaston has another case of small pox. The patient is the 7-year old daughter of George H. Murray of 395 Newport avenue. The case was reported to the Board of Health shortly before 1 o'clock this noon. It is said the little girl was vaccinated a few days ago. She became quite sick this morning and the physician summoned pronounced it smallpox.

It is also reported that another child in the same family attended school at the Wollaston school this morning. The school committee were notified and Dr. Hallowell of that Board visited the school building and closed the room in which the child attended and also the whole building.

The house on Newport avenue has been quarantined and the patient will be removed to the new pest house immediately. The room at the Wollaston school building will also be fumigated tonight.

Bagpipes Missed.

Editor of the Ledger:

Apropos the Scotch entertainment in Music Hall Tuesday evening, allow me space in which to make a word of friendly criticism. Rob Roy never moved, in war or peace, on any important errand except to the weird strains of the bagpipes, and it would seem in keeping with the eternal fitness of things that such music should have filled Music hall the other night. To see the Scottish Chief and his followers dance to the music of an American orchestra bordered on the ludicrous, especially when we know that three lives in this city a first class piper, Mr. Fred A. McKinnon, and has in his possession bagpipes that shrieked at the battle of Waterloo. There were doubtless other pipers also available and there seems no reason why this feature of a Scotch entertainment should have been omitted. It was like playing Hamlet with Hamlet left out. I trust that at future concerts given by Clan McGregor this hint will be acted upon.

Yours very truly,
Gillie Callum.

New Years at Home.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Brown of Elm street were "at home" New Year's night to their many friends. While outside it was wintry cold all was glow and warm within. Business associates, church and Y. M. C. A. friends and neighbors were present in large numbers to extend greetings for a Happy New Year. Mr. Fred L. Norton was usher. During the evening an orchestra from the Conservatory of Music played popular selections. Cook of Boston served ices, fancy cakes, chocolate, etc.

JOHN BULL OUR PUPIL

Wealthy Englishman's Plan For America to Teach Britons.

WILL PAY ALL THE EXPENSES.

Alfred Mosely to Send a Commission to the United States to Study Our Methods of Education and Business—Considers American Boys Brighter Than English.

Alfred Mosely, an Englishman who made a huge fortune in the South African diamond fields, is going to spend part of it in a peculiar fashion, writes a staff correspondent of the New York Press from London. He has spent a good deal of time traveling in America and has become impressed so greatly with American methods of business and of commercial education that he purposes to send part of England to school to the United States, paying the expenses out of his own pocket.

The first batch of pupils will be a commission consisting of two or three members of parliament, the heads of some of the biggest business houses, a few labor leaders and representatives of the leading universities.

Mr. Mosely has been in consultation for some time with leading representatives of British commercial interests and educational institutions, and the other day his plan was indorsed by a meeting presided over by Lord Reay, chairman of the London school board, and including Sir Joshua Fitch, chief inspector of training colleges; Sidney Webb and Dr. W. Garnett, chairman and secretary respectively of the technical education board of the London county council.

"I have traveled practically in all parts of the United States," said Mr. Mosely, "and everything I have seen assures me that America is getting far ahead of us. In my stay in America I was struck by the fact that the boy you meet on the street there is brighter and better informed than the boy you meet in England. A brighter boy will grow into a brighter man.

"I realize of course that America if only on account of her wonderful natural resources is bound to be a mighty commercial nation in the future, but I think there is room for Great Britain, too, and the decision I draw from the advantage America is gaining so steadily is that Great Britain must move on American lines, that our red tape, tradition and vested interests ought as far as possible to be put on one side and that this country should step out with the spirit of the age, which is—progress.

"I believe that the fault lies somewhere in our educational system. I cannot put my finger on the weak spot, however, for I don't pretend to be an educationist. Our mining in South Africa practically was a failure until American engineers made our goldfields the success that they are. It is English money, but American brains.

"We expect that the commission will leave here just after the house of commons rises in August of next year so as to suit the legislators who will be of the party as well as to arrive on the continent soon after the opening of the schools. Thence the commissioners will visit the United States, where they will stay in all the principal cities. They will inquire not only into education, but into all American methods of commerce and industry. The commission will be absent from here probably about four months."

MONOCLE FAD REVIVED.

Single Eyeglass Habit Is Coming In Again In London.

A London Express representative has discovered the interesting fact that the monocle is slowly coming back again. Not since the days of Major Pendennis and the Iron Duke, whom the old soldier tried to copy, has there been anything like the vogue which is now setting in in single eyeglasses.

Some who claim to know trace the origin of the new fashion to the fact that officers serving in South Africa have found them very serviceable; others put them down to a revival at Oxford and Cambridge.

At the establishment of Messrs. Ross of Bond street, who for years have supplied the elite with monocles, the reporter was informed that the new craze has been in progress for some time. It is an undoubted fact that there is a growing demand for a particular type of eyeglass manufactured in America which is peculirly adapted to sensitve eyesight.

To a question whether the wearing of the single eyeglass was not so much a necessity as a foppish fad the reporter received the reply that of 100 men wearing monocles there would be perhaps about twenty wearing plain nonmagnifying glasses—window panes—purely for ornament. The rest would require the use of the monocle to help the defective sight of one or the other eye.

Tubes For Birmingham.

A powerful London syndicate, it is stated, is to apply to parliament next session for powers to construct a complete system of underground tubes for Birmingham. The name of Mr. Yerkes is mentioned in connection with the scheme, says the London Express. The money necessary for the undertaking is reported to have been guaranteed already, and Messrs. Milward & Co. of Birmingham have been instructed in the matter. Experts state that an effective system would cost at least £2,000,000. In a few weeks surveyors will be sent down to plan works and stations. The system proposed is on the same lines as the London "twopenny tube."

A Slight Fire.

There came near being quite a fire Wednesday afternoon at the Quincy fair store in the Adams building owned by Fred H. Smith. About 4.30 Mr. Smith reached into his show window and attempted to light the gas with a parlor match. Granite Cutters' Pay.

The local branch of the Granite Cutters' National Union of Milford has begun a movement for an increase of wages, and with this end in view yesterday submitted a new bill of prices and regulations to each of the local granite manufacturing firms.

LETTER CARRIERS.

Grand Banquet at the Hancock House, New Year's Night.

The twelfth annual banquet and reunion of the Letter Carriers of Quincy was held New Year's night at the Hancock house. A new departure from the past in that it was a joint entertainment with the Clerk's society of the Quincy office, and there was but one verdict at its close—that it was the most pleasant and enjoyable event in the history of the two societies. In songs and a general pleasant time the hour was spent until 8.30 when all adjourned to the dining hall. The tables were fairly groaning with the good things prepared by the proprietor of the house. The menu follows:

Oysters:
Providence River.
Soups:
Mock Bisque. Julienne.
Fish:
Boiled Fresh Salmon.
Cold Meats:
Ham. Cold Tongue. Roast Beef.
Roasts:
Turkey, with Cranberry Sauce.
Young Duck, with Currant Jelly.
Entrees:
Chicken Salad. Shrimp Salad.
Vegetables:
Sweet and White Potatoes.
Asparagus with Toast.
French Peas.
Relishes:
Catsup. Worcester Sauce. Pickles.
Pastry:
Mince Pie. Apple Pie. Lemon Pie.
Custard Pie.
Dessert:
Neapolitan Cream. Assorted Cake.
Macaroons. Cheese.
Fruit. Coffee.

After the physical man was satisfied the mental facilities were let loose, and as the carriers are more liable to have more walking to do from day to day than they have for talking, this was a good opportunity not to be missed.

President John J. Cunniff spoke briefly on the past of the society and touched on some of the needs of the carrier service of the city. He then introduced the principal guest of the evening, Postmaster Charles L. Hammond, who spoke at length on the service of the office as between the people and the office, and that from the postmaster to the letter carriers. All working in unison and seeking for the betterment of the service would help in a measure to make up for the shortage of help that Quincy required, although he hoped in the near future to get the aid required to give the city first-class service. He wished each clerk and carrier a happy and properous year.

Speeches were also made by Carriers Francis P. Loud, John D. Williams, Andrew Gardner and Arthur Dunham, Superintendent of Carriers Peter Talbot and J. A. Carey, President of Clerks' association.

After the speaking a smoke talk was indulged in until 11 o'clock when the meeting was a thing of the past, but to be remembered as a most pleasant one.

Some of those present: Postmaster Chas. L. Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Cunniff, Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Loud, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Gardner and Miss Mamie Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Welsh, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gragg, Mr. John McGowan, Mr. William Mullane, Mr. Tobias Burke, Mr. Peter Talbot, Mr. J. A. Carey, Mr. Thomas Carey, Mr. Jas. A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. COUNTY OFFICERS.

High Sheriff and Commissioners Make Appointments.

High Sheriff Samuel H. Capen of Norfolk County has appointed the following as his deputies for the ensuing year: Howard Colburn of Dedham special sheriff; Oliver G. Curtis of Stoughton, deputy at jail; Oscar D. Capen of Canton, George H. Field of Quincy; Charles C. Henry of Wellesley; D. Edward Beebe of Brookline; William Wragg of Hyde Park; George W. Conant of Weymouth; Thomas Farrell of Randolph; Jerome R. Fitzpatrick of Franklin and Edward E. Wentworth of Cohasset. They were sworn in at Dedham Wednesday noon. Mr. Curtis is the only new deputy, the others being reappointed.

After the deputies had been sworn in Deputy George H. Field of Quincy presented Sheriff Capen in behalf of his deputies with a handsome gold watch.

The Norfolk County Commissioners organized Wednesday with Thomas Blanchard of Stoughton as chairman. These appointments were made: Dr. Francis L. Babcock physician at jail; Rev. Edward W. Virgin, chaplain at jail; Albert F. Daniels, superintendent of county buildings; Charles F. Tingley, engineer at jail; Owen J. Reynolds, Albert F. Daniels and William M. Marden county police. All the appointees are Dedham people except Mr. Marden, who is from Quincy.

Brilliant Sunlight Party.

A pretty sunlight party attended by nearly 200 was given by Miss Corlew at Quincy Music hall on the afternoon of New Year's day. Past and present pupils predominated, all of whom were proficient in the art of dancing, and all young ladies and young gentlemen in deportment. There were five matrons, Mrs. Eugene H. Sprague, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, Mrs. W. G. A. Pattee, Mrs. Herbert W. Lawton and Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick, who received about midway on the east side of the hall. As the dancers arrived they were presented to the matrons by the following ushers: Ambler Welch, Richard Pattee, Carl Prescott, Reginald Sprague, Avard Sproul, Stedman Thompson, Lyndon Hardwick, Harold Curtis and Benjamin Hodgkinson. The order included the waltz, two step, Portland Fancy, and other popular dances. About four o'clock there was an exhibition on the stage by Mr. J. D. Eltinge, whose make up as an up-to-date young lady was marvelous. He sang and danced, and while the former was somewhat masculine, he was as a dancer very easy and graceful. The hours for the party were from two until five, and the latter hour came too soon for most of the young people, who seemed to enjoy every minute.

Trains Delayed.

The trains between Quincy and Boston were pretty well tied up Wednesday night.

Sometime between 9 and 10 o'clock an inward freight train stopped at Quincy and while shifting cars one of the freight cars on the spur track west of the depot ran off the track and toppled over, bringing up against another car that stood on the outward track. The result was that both inward and outward trains were blocked for several hours.

The 10.08 inward train got as far as the Quincy depot where it was held up until after midnight.

The outward train leaving Boston at 8.28 reached Quincy all right, but that was the last outward train to reach Quincy until after midnight.

Some of the inward trains were sent in over the Granite branch from Braintree, but outward trains were hung up between Quincy and Wollaston until the tracks were cleared. Quincy passengers on the outward late trains experienced some difficulty in reaching their homes. After waiting for the trains to move, many left the cars and climbed over the embankment to the street. It was long after midnight before the wrecking train arrived and the tracks were cleared.

She Read the Signal.

There is a romantic story about Lord Kelvin's second marriage. In the early seventies he, then Sir William Thomson, was in West Indian waters, on board his schooner yacht, the Lalla Rookh. As a recreation he took up the question of simplifying the method of signals at sea. He had been talking of it at the dinner table of a friend in Madeira, and the only apprehension that seemed able to grasp it was that of his host's daughter, a lady he greatly but silently admired.

"I quite understand it, Sir William," she said.

"Are you sure?" he questioned, half doubtfully. "If I sent you a signal from my yacht, do you think you could read it and could answer me?"

"Well, I would try," she responded. "I believe I should succeed in making it out."

The signal was sent, and she did succeed in making it out and in transmitting the reply. The question was, "Will you marry me?" and the answer was, "Yes."

A Homely Greeting.

According to Ainslee's Magazine, when the governor of Newfoundland, Sir Henry McCallum, K. C. M. G., went ashore at a small harbor of the east coast he was met at the landing place by a grizzled old fisherman, who sought to make the stranger welcome, whoever he might be.

"Be you comin' ashore, sir?" he asked.

"Yes," said the governor.

"Be you here about the lle (seal oil)?" the fisherman pursued.

"No," said the governor.

"Be you one o' 'Sam' Lewis' men from Red bay, sir, come about the timber?"

"I am the governor of Newfoundland," Sir Henry announced, with some show of dignity.

"Be you, now?" said the fisherman, with a friendly offer of his hand. "Well, 'tis a mighty good job—if you can hold it. An' I hopes you will. Would you like a cup o' tea, sir?"

"A Lot of 'air."

The inhabitants of the little town of Somersby, in England, where Tennyson was born, are frank in giving their opinion of their distinguished fellow townsman. One old woman thus related her impressions of the poet to a visitor:

"'E was a very quoiet man. 'E seemed as if 'e was 'alf asleep, with 'is oyes 'alf shut an' peepin', an' 'e used to poke at ye, loike i' fun, wi' 'is stick. 'E 'ad such a lot of 'air an' a long beard, an'," sinking her voice confidentially, "'e never looked very clean; no, 'e didn't."

And this somewhat startling testimony was promptly confirmed by her husband, who added:

"If you'd met 'im gooin' along this dusty rooad, you'd 'a' takken 'im for a tramp gooin' to Brigg for a night's lodgin'."

It Reminded Him.

One sharp November day, says the Philadelphia Record, a boy entered a car, leaving the door open, much to the discomfort of an old gentleman who sat next. As the wind chilled his marrow his temper rose. Leaning across his seat and taking the kid by his ear, he said: "Were you brought up in a barn? Why don't you shut the door?"

The boy said nothing, but closed the door, coming back to his seat in tears. This sight moved the old man to relenting pity. "There, there," he said, "little man; I didn't really mean you were brought up in a barn."

"That's just it," retorted the kid. "I was brought up in a barn, and every time I see a jackass it makes me think of it."

An Interesting Coin.

An interesting coin has just been sold in Germany. It is one of the few coins in the history of the world which can be accused of having a humorous side to it. In 1679 the Danes descended on the port of Hamburg, but their attack on the famous Hanse town proved unsuccessful. The inhabitants of the town struck a medal to commemorate the occasion. The legend on the coin was as follows: "The king of Denmark has been to Hamburg. If thou wouldst know what he achieved, look on the other side." It is needless to add that "the other side" is a blank.

His Man Was Appointed.

As an instance of the acuteness of Al Daggett, the former Republican leader of Kings county, N. Y., the story is told that when Seth Low was elected mayor of Brooklyn some years ago he wrote to Mr. Daggett, offering to appoint as commissioner of elections one of any three men he might name. Al wrote three lines to the mayor, as follows: "Charles Henry Cotton, C. H. Cotton, C. Henry Cotton." Needless to say Mr. Cotton was appointed.

LAWSON'S NEW FANCY.

Boston Copper Ma.. Produces an Epigrammatic Calendar.

ADVICE GIVEN TO THE "LAMBS."

Gets Up Odd Ticker Affair In Four Days as the Result of a Bet—Sent It as a Gift to Friends—Handsomely Mounted In Silver—Pitfalls of Speculation Described.

It is no longer the Lawson yacht or the Lawson carnation, but the Lawson autograph calendar. Friends of the Boston millionaire received copies of this literary production on Christmas day, and they declare that Mr. Lawson as a maker of calendars is a decided success.

Each calendar is handsomely mounted in silver and ornamented with devices which present a complete allegory of that whirlpool of speculation which threatened not many days ago to engulf the author. Emblazoned upon the fifty-two tablets, one for each week of the year 1902, is a potpourri of wit and wisdom, humor, sarcasm and the philosophy of experience under the caption "Ticker Talk."

Recent happenings on the Stock Exchange are referred to, and Mr. Lawson has introduced a prophecy concerning the future of certain securities which will be of interest to the financial world. Nothing more ornate than the Lawson calendar has thus far appeared. The tablets revolve upon silver rings, which in turn are supported by a silver bar about ten inches in length, beautifully decorated with mistletoe and holly in dull silver. Upon one end of the bar a bull is seen in a crouching attitude facing a bear at the other extremity.

Above the bar and supporting it is a ribbon of silver, representing the tape of a stock ticker, and secured at the apex by a ring, in which are interwoven a wishbone, a horseshoe and the proverbial lamb of Wall street. Upon the silver tape Mr. Lawson inscribed this device in close imitation of the lettering with which stockbrokers and others are familiar:

In an author's note Mr. Lawson explains that he completed his calendar, which contains a maxim for each day of the coming year, in four days on a wager with a friend. The introductory is as follows:

When you read these "tickerings" and are tempted to bless the author, restrain your self sufficiently to think how he came to "tick" them out.

During the recent copper rumpus, when, as every one knows, the ticker was doing its best to drive Bostonians into that region controlled by the sulphur trust, I asked one of my brokers, a philosophical kind of chap, what, in his opinion, would be the best way to coax the "ticker" away from the "coppers." He answered, "Between now and New Year's make the ticker talk a something for every day in the year."

His thought struck me as being so good that I said, "Why not, and print it as a calendar and have it ready for Christmas?" The result was a wager that this could not be accomplished during the "ticker's" working hours in the four days intervening.

Here it is on Christmas eve, with apologies of the "ticker" and the season's best wishes of yours very truly,

THOMAS W. LAWSON.

Mr. Lawson, in introducing his maxims for January, says there are three fundamentals of stock speculation, which he describes as follows:

"First.—Take what comes to you as though you liked it. Never for an instant forget it's a game of chance, and, while it's free, no one is compelled to come into it.

"Second.—When you lose, the other fellow wins, and he is as much entitled to as you.

"Third.—Don't rail against Wall street because it in time gets the entire stake through its commission. Wall street is the gamekeeper and referee. All interesting games must, will and do have them. Wall street was there before you were born and will be after you are dead."

In connection with the author's characterization of himself as the "ticker," these extracts from his calendar are interesting in view of the battle royal which raged fiercely until the holidays between the contending forces in the copper industry:

"Wall street is now the exact center of the universe. Run a shaft at 26 Broadway through the world and it will come out at the corner of Wall and Broad streets. The shaft is made of United States steel and sufficient oil is used, the globe will perpetually revolve around it without friction—perhaps."

No. 26 Broadway is the headquarters of the Standard Oil company. J. P. Morgan & Co.'s offices are at Wall and Broad streets.

In lighter vein Mr. Lawson describes the pitfalls of speculation. For each day of the year he has produced an epigram. The whole makes an interesting volume, from which these extracts were chosen at random by a reporter for the New York Herald who was permitted to inspect the gift calendar the other day:

"On New Year's eve Father Time and the newborn cherub meet in Trinity church to make deliveries. The meeting place is an appropriate one. At the foot of Wall street is the river, at the head Trinity's graveyard and in the middle the Stock Exchange.

"How marvelous is the tape. You hold one end in your fingers; the other passes around and beyond the last lap of eternity.

"The letters and figures used in the language of the tape are very few, yet they spell hell in 99,000,000 different languages.

"Navigation in Wall street waters is dangerous because the rocks are all out of sight. When you locate one by striking it, they shift to another anchoring.

"Wall street on dry days amuses itself by soaking the public; also on wet days and other days.

"Directorships in trusts carry with them sacred duties, hard work and no emolument. There are exceptions where directors are dilatory in operating on their advance knowledge, thereby taking even chances with the stockholders. They are rare exceptions and when discovered are dropped.

"Panics fall alike upon the shorn and the to be shorn.

"The ticker first asks, 'What do you think I'm going to say?' then says the opposite.

"There are two kinds of pilots in Wall street waters—the licensed and unlicensed. Each is worse than the other.

"When you are long and they're dropping, it's purgatory; when you are short and they're rising, it's hell.

"A Wall street pilot is one who, tired of sinking his own craft, sinks others for salvage.

"'Nothing succeeds like success'—except inside information.

"Wall street advice is free, and it is worth it.

"The public brings its wealth to Wall street, and, owing to the frictionless working of the most perfect financial system in the world, it can at any time get back its equivalent in one form or another, usually another.

"Each day a million shares are bought and sold for the public. Wall street receives $250,000 in commissions, yet those who should know better say brokers are not producers.

"Ofttimes a few yards of tape contains more history than all of the volumes of a Macaulay or a Bancroft.

"The ticker every day at quarter past 2 tells the victims the time. It appreciates that they had watches earlier in the game.

"The ticker blasts more lives than rum and cards combined.

"A swarm of bees visited the Stock Exchange, but were so ashamed of their inactivity that they left in a hurry.

"If the garden of Eden had been in Wall street, Adam would never have got even a bite of the apple.

"Aristotle must have been flirting with the tape when he said the world was made up of two kinds of people—liars and liars.

"Tickery, tickery, tock,
The lambs ran after stock;
The stock it turned, and the lambs got burned,
And now they're all in hock.

"Almost all directors of modern trusts are yachtsmen. The reason—trusts' capital affords mooring the year round.

"One of the fundamental principles of modern finance and the one to which America owes much of its enormous wealth, 'When a stock has advanced to prohibitive high figures, double the capitalization and repeat.'

"When Wall street holds a husking bee, insiders get all the red ears.

"A straddle is a sort of half sister, mother-in-law bride—one of those puzzling creatures who don't know whether to go back to ma, elope with brother-in-law or settle down and be prim.

"Hark, hark, the dogs do bark,
The coppers are tumbling down;
There are some with bags and lots with jags,
And they'll surely bust the town."

Upon the frontispiece of the calendar appears this inscription, "E & O M B O," which translated means "Errors and omissions must be overlooked," a variation of a device by which brokers in submitting statements of speculative accounts to clients limit their liability.

POEM BY EDWIN ARNOLD.

The London Telegraph printed a poem by Sir Edwin Arnold apropos of the ratification of the isthmian treaty. He depicts Balboa with the Spanish steel "red in his conquering hand" viewing the Pacific ocean and thanking the queen of heaven for the glorious guerdon. Four hundred years pass, and Nature is represented in the same spot, saying:

The gift I gave
To Nunez da Balboa could not keep
Spain from her sins. Now must the ages sweep
To larger legend, though her own was brave.
That which is disparted I shall bring side by side;
The sea shall sever what the hills did divide,
Shall link in love, and there was joy on earth,
While England and Columbia, quitting fear,
Kissed and let in the eager waters there.

A Novelty In Clubs.

Melrose Park, a Chicago suburb, has a new club, popularly known as the Pig club, says the New York Tribune. The tie that binds the members together is a common liking for what used to be called in Indiana "hog fixin's." The president of the Melrose Park Savings bank, Ferdinand Dunnebecke, is president of the club. "We shall hold sessions each week," he says, "and pork will be the one meat served. Between times, too, we eat no other meat than pork."

Rhodes then burned the barracks down and proceeded to Manila.

DE BLOWITZ TO RETIRE

The Greatest of Newspaper Writers In Europe

MAN OF VAST KNOWLEDGE

Who Received Ambassadors, Conferred With Leaders of State, and Knew Text of Treaties Before Those Who Signed Them—A Bostonian Honored

London, Jan. 2.—The Candid Friend says that M. de Blowitz has resigned the Paris correspondence of the London Times, retires to private life and is succeeded by Arthur Fullerton, an American.

Henri de Blowitz is probably the greatest of newspaper writers in Europe. M. de Blowitz, derived from Jewish and Austro-Slavonic stock, is a Roman Catholic in faith. From July, 1871, begins his association with the London Times, and since that time he has represented "The Thunderer" in Paris. His opinions upon continental politics derive their value from his intimate friendship with leading ministers and diplomats, and his 30 years' record for never having betrayed a confidence.

Before Blowitz, the office of Times correspondent was a fine office, but it was nothing but an office. He has made of it a government. He receives ambassadors, confers with leaders of state, knows the text of treaties before those who sign them, and disarranges by a dispatch or a letter combinations which their author thinks secret. Without sacrificing anything of his professional duties towards "the Times, his suzerain, he exercises his vice-royalty as a true Frenchman, letting no occasion escape of defending his adopted country.

When a man has so high a position, and the talent which is needed worthily to occupy it, he must have enemies. M. de Blowitz has some. But as no one can deny either his intelligence, or his knowledge, or his humor, the last resort is to accuse him of not loving France. It may be added that M. de Blowitz is virtually news-editor of The Times, handling all continental matter in Paris, and sending it from there. For this he gets the modest stipend of $50,000 a year.

Fullerton a Bostonian

Boston, Jan. 2.—It is believed here "Arthur" Fullerton referred to in the London News dispatch as the successor of M. de Blowitz as Paris correspondent of the London Times is William Morton Fullerton, a Bostonian, who has been M. de Blowitz's working head of The Times Paris bureau for over 10 years.

Mr. Fullerton is a Massachusetts man and gained his first experience in Boston. He is the son of Rev. B. M. Fullerton of Waltham, and is about 38 years old. Graduating from Harvard in the class of 1886 with honors in English literature and composition, he became connected with The Daily Advertiser as literary editor. After a little more than a year he left The Advertiser to make a summer tour of Europe with his friend, Rev. Samuel Longfellow; but during his absence he was engaged by an English illustrated magazine to consume the ensuing winter in an expedition through Egypt and the Greek islands. The success which he achieved in this enterprise was of the most pronounced character; and several magazine articles upon various topics which followed from his pen in quick succession attracted great attention.

Mr. Fullerton's ambition when he left Boston was to fit himself for a professorship in English literature at Harvard. But the editor of The London Times invited him to become a leading writer. That this work met with the appreciation of The Times was shown, when, at the beginning of 1891, he was sent to Paris to write the literary, social and dramatic news, and to assist the famed de Blowitz.

The Buckeye State Contest

Columbus, O., Jan. 2.—The chief development in the legislative contest is the announcement that Congressman Dick is on his way to Columbus to assist the Hanna forces. It had not been generally expected that he would take any active part in the contest. Rumor had it that he desired to keep entirely aloof from the present factional contention on account of his gubernatorial aspirations. If the Foraker men are in the least disconcerted by the coming of General Dick there is no outward manifestation of it.

Four Tons of Sparrows Killed

Pana, Ills., Jan. 2.—The annual sparrow hunt of Pleasant township has ended and as a result four tons of sparrows were killed. The hunt was indulged in by two parties of farmers, the stake being a banquet to be given by the party securing the fewest birds. The victorious party brought in 13,000 birds, while the losers bagged 11,000, a total of 24,000. The birds averaged four ounces each. The hunt has been in progress for one week.

Samar Not Pacified

Manila, Jan. 2.—General Wheaton's report from the island of Samar indicates that little has been accomplished there. The attitude of the natives is even more unfriendly than ever before. General Chaffee probably will visit the island in order to personally investigate the state of affairs prevailing there.

Slaughter at a Party

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 2.—Three people were killed and two wounded at Robbins, N. C., in a fight which occurred during a party given at the residence of Jesse Griffin. The participants in the fight were white people and well known.

EIGHTY-ONE HUNDRED.

Filed Through White House and Shook Hands With the President

Washington, Jan. 2.—President Roosevelt's first public reception was attended more largely than any New Year's reception in a number of years. In all, 8100 persons filed through the White House and shook hands with the president. Mr. Roosevelt, on being apprised that the crowd in line outside the White House was unusually large, gave orders that the gates should not be closed until the last person desiring to do so had an opportunity to pay his respects.

The reception began promptly at 11 o'clock, and it was 2:30 o'clock before the last person in line had been presented to the president and a quarter of an hour later before the reception came to an end. The weather was delightful, being clear and crisp, so that no hardship was suffered by the throng that waited for hours before admission to the White House. The reception was in every way successful, the attendance not only being large, but the decorations really beautiful, the arrangements perfect and the president in excellent spirits.

To each person he extended a cordial happy new year and Mrs. Roosevelt was equally pleasing to each of those who filed past the line in the blue parlor, where the receiving party stood. Miss Alice Roosevelt was conspicuous among those assisting at the reception. A party of her young girl friends, by invitation, also participated in the function.

Although there was no general reception by the members of the diplomatic corps, some of them kept open house and entertained a large number of callers. Particularly was this the case with the legations from the Orient, the Chinese, Japanese and Korean ministers being "at home" to those who came.

Rosebery to Liberals

London, Jan. 2.—Lord Rosebery, prefacing the authorized edition of his Chesterfield speech, inserts a significant remark which is considered as quite capable of interpretation as a direct bid for the leadership of the Liberal party. Lord Rosebery says: "The policy I have endeavored to outline appears to have received a large meed of popular approval; but political opinion, to be effective, must be organized, and political energy must work and entrench. I want some of this spade work in behalf of this policy, else the wave of popular adhesion will be lost in space."

Murder, Suicide and Train Wreck

Kalispell, Mont., Jan. 2.—Patrick Sullivan, a miner of Jennings, shot his wife, his grandchild and himself with fatal results to himself and the child, while his wife is in a dangerous condition. The cause of the shooting is not known. Citizens of Jennings sent to Kalispell for medical aid and a special train was sent with two physicians and the coroner. The engine jumped the track, instantly killing Engineer Herron and seriously injuring Fireman Wilcox. The caboose did not leave the track and the doctors proceeded to Jennings.

No Rush of Contributions

New York, Jan. 2.—Although the offices of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A. in this city were kept open all day yesterday, no contributions to the $1,000,000 jubilee endowment fund were received. The total amount remained at Tuesday night's figure—$789,750.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Friday, Jan. 3.
Sun rises—7:14; sets—4:24.
Moon rises—1:31 a. m.

The weather has been clear and cold in New England. On the coast variable winds will become fresh easterly.

BRAIN FOOD.

Not long since there was a great run on the fish markets because it was announced that fish was food for the brain. Of course the fallacy of the fad was soon exploded. Normally the food we eat nourishes brain, nerves, muscle, bones, etc., each part of the body assimilating phosphorous salts, lime, according to its need. When the brain begins to show weakness or the nerves become sensitive it is a sign that there is a loss of the nutrition contained in the food eaten, and this loss is in general due to disease of the stomach, and its allied organs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, which is the source of the strength of both brain and body.

"I was troubled with very frequent headaches," writes Miss Belle Summerton, of San Diego, Duval Co., Texas., "often accompanied by severe vomiting; bowels were irregular and my stomach and liver seemed continually out of order. Often I could eat almost nothing, and sometimes absolutely nothing, for twenty-four hours at a time. I was entirely unfit for work, and my whole system seemed so run-down that I feared a severe sick spell and was very much discouraged. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and did so with such satisfactory results that before finishing the third bottle I felt perfectly able to undertake duties attending public school life."

A BETTER UNDERSTANDING

Between Striking Boston Teamsters and Their Employers

Boston, Jan. 2.—Although no settlement was reached yesterday at the conference of the committee of the Teamsters' union with the representatives of the Master Teamsters' association, the members of the state board of arbitration and President Lincoln of the chamber of commerce, a better understanding of the positions of each party to the controversy between the teamsters and their employers was arrived at and some interesting facts were brought out. It was stated at the conference that teamsters in New York receive higher wages and have shorter hours of labor, notwithstanding the haul is larger in Boston than in that city.

In all, about a dozen master teamsters have granted the demands of their men in full and other individual settlements are promised for today, although there is no present indication that the Master Teamsters' association, as a body, is disposed to grant the desired concessions.

The Dover Strike

Dover, N. H., Jan. 2.—The strike situation at the Cocheco Manufacturing company's mill has a brighter prospect for a speedy settlement than at any time since the 200 weavers went out last Monday. A committee of the striking weavers had a conference with Agent Fish yesterday, and while Mr. Fish did not give much hope of granting the demands of the strikers, a statement by the committee gives hopes of a speedy settlement of the difficulties. The weavers' committee will endeavor to have another conference with Agent Fish today, when several propositions will be submitted to him. If Mr. Fish accepts any of the propostions, the matter will be adjusted and the strikers will return to work tomorrow. If he refuses to make any concessions, another meeting will be held tonight, when the matter will be referred to the executive council of the United Textile Workers of America, and left to them to settle.

Vessels In Danger

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 2.—Captain Eldredge and crew of the Chatham life saving station remain on board the distressed schooner they boarded yesterday morning. The condition of the crew is not yet known. A two-masted schooner dragged off yesterday and her crew were rescued by a tug that was near by. The schooner will undoubtedly be a total loss, as she drifted out to sea. A three-masted schooner, lying four miles south of Chatham, displayed signals last night, presumably for some kind of assistance. As the members of life saving crews are aboard vessels in distress, their names will not be known here until the men come ashore.

Took a Terrible Risk

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 2.—Stepping from a fourth-story window on to a slippery plank extended across a narrow alley to a window on the opposite side, Mrs. Marcy Little, aged 27, slid clear across the plank and crashed into the opposite window last night, severely cutting herself about the face and head. The woman was intoxicated and was trying to get away from her husband, who wanted her to go home. Although she is severely injured, she will recover. Had the woman fallen to the ground, she would in all probability have been killed.

Two L Road Victims

Boston, Jan. 2.—William Callahan, 30 years old, was found lying dead on the tracks of the Boston elevated railway, at the entrance to the subway at Haverhill street, last night. His body was badly cut and he had evidently been struck and killed by an elevated train. During a rush of travel at the Pleasant street station of the Boston elevated railway, James Donovon, Jr., was pushed off the platform and was struck by a train, sustaining injuries from which he died.

Long Chase For a Thief

Boston, Jan. 2.—Two Boston inspectors arrived home from California last night, having in custody Edward Harvey, who was recently arrested in Los Angeles, and who is wanted here on the charge of robbing Police Captain Warren of a wallet and $35 in money, in May, 1899, at the Boston and Albany station.

Hurt on Toboggan Coast

Lenox, Mass., Jan. 2.—D. R. Noyes, a freshman at Yale, was severely hurt while toboggan coasting here yesterday. He was picked up unconscious and remained in that condition three hours. The physicians say there is no concussion of the brain, but they fear other complications.

Engineer and Fireman Hurt

Richford, Vt., Jan. 2.—The engineer and fireman of a passenger train on the Central Vermont railroad were injured yesterday by derailment of the train near here. The accident is said to have been caused by a broken rail. None of the passengers was injured.

Struck Against Reduction

Leominster, Mass., Jan. 2.—The finishers at the Wellington Piano Case company, the largest concern of the kind in New England, are out on a strike because of a reduction of wages which amounts to about 16 cents a case. The firm will attempt to fill the vacancies.

Jackson Defeats Handler

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 2.—At a boxing exhibition here yesterday Young Peter Jackson defeated Jimmy Handler, the Newark welterweight, in three rounds. Handler was groping helplessly around the ring when Referee White stopped the fight.

Disease Not Stamped Out

Boston, Jan. 2.—For the 24 hours ending yesterday, eight cases and one death resulting from smallpox were reported to the board of health. Francis J. Carroll of South Boston, aged 37, died at his home.

WEST POINT HERO IN SAMAR

Former Achievements of Captain Schoeffel of the Fighting Ninth.

The war department at Washington has received a cablegram from General Chaffee at Manila giving an account of the engagement near Dapado (Dapdap?), Samar, in which Company E, Ninth infantry, lost seven men killed and a number were wounded. The cablegram is as follows:

Jacob H. Smith reports following: During scout near Dapado, Samar, Dec. 24, Captain Francis H. Schoeffel, with detachment of eighteen men, Company E, Ninth infantry, was attacked, large force bolomen springing from thickets. Severe hand to hand fight ensued. Following casualties occurred:

Wounded—Captain Francis H. Schoeffel, slightly; Corporal John H. Russell, Privates Daniel L. McPherson, George Claxton, severely; Arthur Bonnicastle, slightly, and other missing names later. No property lost. Enemy driven from field; lost severely. Lang's detachment Philippine scouts arrived soon after, assisted caring for wounded and removing.

The cablegram from General Chaffee of Sept. 29, in which he announced the massacre of Company C, Ninth infantry, near Balangiga, south Samar, was not less startling that the dispatch just received telling of practically another massacre of members of Company E of the same gallant regiment.

In the present disaster eighteen men were caught in a defile and were rushed from ambush by a heavy force of savages armed with bolos. It was a fight to a finish between bayonet and bolo.

Captain Frank Schoeffel has won distinction on other occasions than this just reported from Manila, says the New York Journal.

During the Spanish-American war Schoeffel was one of the first to gain the summit of San Juan hill, and in the relief of the Peking legation he was in the van of the dash of the Ninth which cost that regiment its commander and other brave men.

Captain Schoeffel's record figured prominently in the investigation of the hazing of Cadet Booz at West Point. That episode brought out the fact that he was the only graduate of West Point who had whipped every upper class man against him while a cadet at the Military academy.

During his four years at West Point Cadet Schoeffel whipped with his fists a whole class of thirty men. One day five men were pitted against Schoeffel at once. The bout lasted twenty-six rounds. At the end they were all tired but Schoeffel. Captain Schoeffel's war record is in accord with his school day achievements, and his showing in the engagement in the Philippines is no surprise to his friends.

Captain Schoeffel's home is in Rochester, N. Y. He is a son of Colonel Francis A. Schoeffel of that city.

CONSUMPTION IN GERMANY

Successful Results of the Open Air Treatment.

Consul General Mason sends from Berlin to the state department at Washington a translation of a report by the imperial health officer on the successful results of the open air treatment of consumption in Germany. This report was requested for the benefit of the marine hospital service, and a copy has been sent to the surgeon general. Mr. Mason notes that the success of this treatment has caused the erection of a large number of establishments in Germany—sixty, with 5,000 beds—in the spring of 1901. In almost half the cases the patients had been sick for less than a year before applying for admission to the institutions. The average duration of treatment was 92.4 days for each patient. Data as to the final results show that of each hundred patients treated 87.7 per cent were discharged as cured or improved, 8.8 per cent left unimproved, 3.1 per cent were worse, and one-half of 1 per cent died. The favorable results were in part due to a careful selection of cases suitable for treatment in the institutions.

SENATORS HIS GUESTS.

Tom Johnson Rents a Home So Legislature Can Live With Him.

The most remarkable political household in the world will be Tom Johnson's when his plans are completed. Mr. Johnson has rented a residence at Columbus, O., during the coming session of the legislature, says the New York Evening Journal. The ten representatives and the senators from Cuyahoga county are to make up his family, and he will provide them with all the comforts of home, including their food, rooms and appropriate social diversions.

Mayor Johnson has several of his taxation matters to place before the legislature, and the object of his innovation is that he may have secret meetings of the legislators. The house rented is that of the late Mayor C. G. Collins, a very commodious residence.

A Tree That Produces Milk.

A growing wonder is the cow tree of South America, which is credited with yielding a lacteal fluid which in color, taste and nutritive property closely resembles the offerings of your milkman. It forms large forests in some districts of Venezuela and is much prized for its product.

More Light In Egypt.

Petroleum has been discovered in Egypt, and light of other kinds, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, is gradually breaking through.

International Dog Show.

An international show of St. Bernard dogs will be held next spring in Frankfort, Germany.

FORAKER-HANNA FIGHT

Result Depends Upon the Votes of Six Men

THE ONLY ONES UNPLEDGED

"Round Robin" May Be Necessary to Straighten Out Tanged Lists—Taylor Looms Up as a Gubernatorial Candidate—Local Option a Factor

Columbus, O., Jan. 3.—The contest between Republican factions over the organization of the legislature is still in doubt so far as the house is concerned. The claims of either faction would indicate that one element is confident of Price becoming speaker and the other of McKinnon winning, but the efforts of both show that there are "yet votes to get" by the one who aims to become speaker. The list of unpledged members, has, however, been reduced to a half dozen—Crist, Pool, McNeil, Nihart, Foster and Lochery. This does not include many who are said to have pledged themselves—some in writing—to both sides. These six are said to have made no pledges to either side and it is conceded that they hold the balance of power.

Owing to the confusion over lists, there is talk of a "round robin." There are five lists: Those pledged to Price, those pledged to McKinnon, those pledged to both, those still unpledged, and those listed as doubtful, which list includes those pledged to both, as well as those who are unpledged.

If the caucus shall nominate by secret ballot, there will be no way of verifying these lists even after the caucuses are held, and for that reason viva voce voting in caucus is being advocated.

There was much done yesterday from Senator Hanna in Washington, Senator Foraker in Cincinnati, Congressman Dick in Akron, Congressman Taylor in in Columbus, and others, especially at is still confused. Representative Denman There was much communication with the counties in which doubtful members reside.

The most prominent arrival was that of George B. Cox, the Cincinnati leader, who insists that he is "as good a friend of Senator Hanna as ever," but that he was pledged to Price for speaker before the junior Ohio senator broke with Price, and this includes the support of candidates for clerk and other places who can bring strength to Price. The leadership of the anti-Hanna side was conceded to Cox on his arrival.

It is claimed that the developments indicate that Congressman Taylor of the old McKinley district will likely be an opponent of Congressman Dick for the next Republican gubernatorial nomination; that Taylor from his home is working as hard for Price as Dick is working for McKinnon.

The lines have been distinctly drawn on the old question of local option. The liquor association has representatives here for Price and the Ohio Anti-Saloon league for McKinnon. In the last legislature Price opposed the Clark local option bill and McKinnon supported it, but there are some who voted for the Clark bill who are now supporting Price and some who opposed it who favor McKinnon, just as some of Hanna's closest friends are for Price for local and personal reasons, and some of Foraker's friends for McKinnon, while the senior senator himself is actively for Price and the junior senator for McKinnon.

Although Senator Wort is said to be still in the contest for president protem and Mr. Uhl for chief clerk of the senate, there does not seem to be formidable opposition to Archer and Scobey for those places. The senate standing committees are selected by the senators themselves and the house committees are all named by the speaker, and it is for the control of that office that the factions are fighting.

Had Bogus Gold Rings

Clinton, Mass., Jan. 3.—Richard B. Carroll, having in his possession $100 in money, 44 rings and a loaded revolver, was arrested here yesterday while attempting to dispose of a ring on the street. He told the intended purchaser that it was the only thing he had left upon which to raise money. The rings were found to be worth about $1 a dozen, although they were marked "14 carat." In court he was fined $25. The rings were returned to him.

Eight Hundred Miles Covered

Boston, Jan. 3.—The bicycle riders ground out pretty even miles yesterday, in the fourth 10-hour stretch of the six-day race. No laps were gained or lost, for the riders seemed content to keep together. The pace last night was very fast, and at the end the score was 804 miles, 3 laps.

A $130,000,000 SYNDICATE

Finds Itself Embarrassed by the Stringent Money Market

Cleveland, Jan. 3.—The financial affairs of the Everett-Moore syndicate, owning or controlling a number of urban and inter-urban electric railways, and an extensive system of local and long-distance telephone lines in Ohio and Michigan, passed into the control of a committee composed of seven bankers of this city yesterday. This action was taken, it is stated, as the result of temporary financial embarrassment on the part of the syndicate, which has for some time past been affected by the stringency in the money market.

The committee chosen has been at work investigating the affairs of the syndicate and express the belief that the concern is solvent, and that its embarrassment will be only temporary.

The Everett-Moore syndicate is accredited with controlling more than 1200 miles of urban and inter-urban electric lines in Ohio and Michigan, with many new extensions still in course of construction.

The aggregate capitalization of all the various companies owned or controlled by the syndicate are said to about $130,000,000.

Expert accountants have been employed by the committee in charge to examine and report upon the condition of all the constituent companies. No statement has, as yet, been given out indicating the liabilities of the syndicate.

Claims Invention of Airship

St. Louis, Jan. 3.—J. G. Green of this city yesterday presented to Director Taylor of the World's Fair plans and specifications of an airship, the original drawings of which he claims were stolen from him nearly 10 years ago by a Frenchman and taken to France, where he now claims they have been reproduced in the dirigible air craft made famous by Santos Dumont. Mr. Green says he is the discoverer of the principle which has been used in the flights around Eiffel tower. He has requested Director Taylor to inspect his models and drawings, with a view to building and equipping an airship for experiments at the World's Fair.

London, Jan. 3.—T. P. O'Connor, M. P., in a letter to the Association of American Publishers of New York declining an invitation to dinner, says. Parliament May Chip In London, Jan. 3.—It is understood that King Edward will be compelled to ask parliament for a grant towards Queen Victoria's memorial. The hope that enough money for this purpose would be raised by public subscription has not been realized. Only £185,000 has been thus far subscribed and this sum will not nearly suffice.

World's Biggest Beer Barrel

St. Louis, Jan. 3.—Albert Bare of Paris has applied to the World's Fair management for a concession to erect a mammoth barrel, in which the breweries of the world may vie in disposing of their beverages. The barrel is to be 60 feet high and 90 feet long, and will be constructed entirely of copper and wood.

A DISQUIETING OUTLOOK

Chinese Promises of Reform May Not Be Sincere

ANTI-FOREIGN ARMY CORPS

To Offset Those Inclined to Be Friendly—Independent Newspapers Suppressed—Empress Dowager and Yung Lu Fear Foreign Trap

Pekin, Jan. 3.—Several recent occurrences tend to discourage the hope that the dowager empress had learned a lesson of reform from the events of the past year. Foreigners are disposed to take a pessimistic view of the outlook. General Yang Lu's determination to organize two anti-foreign army corps, to offset the commands of the pro-foreign Chinese leaders, is particularly disquieting, and is evidence of the continued domination of Yang Lu's influence, which is bitterly anti-foreign.

Other incidents considered significant are the suppression of the only independent newspapers in this city by order of the governor of Pekin and the closing of the industrial school here, recently organized by philanthropic Chinese also by the governor's order. This school was intended for the training of destitute youths. Other liberal Chinese will now hesitate to give practical vent to their theories, fearing the displeasure of officialdom.

A third edict regarding the recent murder of a Belgian priest near Ning Sha Foo, in Kan Soo province, has appeared. It appoints a special official to punish those who are guilty of the crime and reaffirms the dowager empress' good will towards Christians. This is unusual activity upon the part of the court in the punishing of those guilty of an anti-Christian outrage and is taken as evidence of the dowager empress' desire to conciliate the powers on the eve of the return of the court to the capital.

Proofs accumulate that Prince Ching's arguments persuaded the dowager empress to trust herself within range of the legation forts. Officials arriving here describe the dowager empress and General Yung Lu as being extremely nervous and suspicious lest the foreigners are planning to entrap them after their arrival and punish them for encouraging boxerism.

The foreigners will probably view the court's re-entry into Pekin from [Sian] near the Chinese officials have been sounded by the ministers as to whether they will enforce the old custom of restraining foreigners from witnessing imperial processions. The replies are not encouraging. The treaty gives the legations a strip of wall commanding a view of the gates of the imperial city and the members of the foreign community are planning to assemble thereon. It will be a great innovation.

Russia's Hand In the Far East

London, Jan. 3.—The Times this morning publishes three alleged secret documents communicated by Dr. Ular, a prominent student of Chinese affairs, who recently returned to Europe from Manchuria and Mongolia, which go to prove the existence of a bargain negotiated between the late Li Hung Chang and Russia. Under the terms of this bargain the "boxer" movement, which, it is hinted, was fomented by Russia, was to be turned against the foreigners, Russia engaging to protect the dowager empress against the western powers in return for permission to occupy Manchuria and a very free hand in Mongolia.

Explosion Shook Whole City

Macon, Ga., Jan. 3.—A freight engine, just out of the repair shop and fired up in the roundhouse of the Central railroad of Georgia, exploded without warning yesterday, shaking the entire city. The report was heard seven miles and houses three miles distant felt the shock. Three men were killed and nine injured. The cause of the explosion is not known. It is supposed, however, that someone found the water in the boiler too low and had suddenly injected a stream of cold water on the red-hot crown sheet.

Grieved at McKinley's Death

Lisbon, Jan. 3.—King Carlos opened the cortes here yesterday. The king read his speech personally and said that Portugal's foreign relations were all friendly. He referred with grief to the death of President McKinley. He confirmed the statement that a modus vivendi had been reached between Great Britain and Portugal concerning the Lorenzo Marques trade.

Good Afternoon.

It has been said that New Year resolutions are like a "new broom that sweeps clean." But we differ with that statement. Put, for instance, a new broom in the hands of a lazy, slack and shiftless man or woman, and the dust and dirt of weeks, it may be, would still remain on the outer surface, even though, as they say, "we have swept!" But let a neat, determined person handle an old broom, how soon the dust and cob-webs of even years' accumulation, would be removed from the darkest corners. So it is with New Year's resolutions. They are kept only when made with the determination that they shall be for all time, not because it is the "fad" to

The construction of a Metropolitan boulevard through Quincy, for which land has been taken, is much to be desired, but many will agree with Gov. Crane in his inaugural address that until an apportionment for Metropolitan parks has been made, and the district has begun to reimburse the Commonwealth for the loans advanced, that no new work should be authorized However, the parkway from Quincy bay to the Blue Hills reservation should be the first to receive consideration that the south of Boston may receive fair treatment in the Metropolitan Park district. At present the Blue Hills reservation is not accessible to the city of Quincy which it is supposed to benefit.

The demands of Gov. Crane for economy in State expenditures will have beneficial effects not only in State government, but in city and town governments. Large expenditures by the State have led to extravagance in the Metropolitan district which together with the assessments promise to be almost oppressive upon the taxpayers. Gov. Crane not only preaches economy, but he recommends no large expenditures outside of the abolition of grade crossings, and he points out ways where savings may be effected by the consolidation of boards, curtailment of annual reports, etc. The Governor's recommendations relative to the separation of National and Savings banks are timely, and also his advice to stop tinkering the statutes, which have just been revised.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The custom of watching the passing of the old year and the advent of the new, is growing in favor. The churches make a special feature of it, with services of a religious nature, and other associations have taken up the custom with exercises appropriate to their organization. It markes the passing of time, and makes a point of departure from which to date events, and also for the starting anew along lines where it is thought improvement is desirable. We can, in the words of Tennyson, "Ring out the false, ring in the true," and in that way make the year 1902 better than those that have preceded it in the calendar.—Lynn Item.

NEW COMMANDER.

Public Installation by Paul Revere Post.

Retiring Commander Had Served Six Years.

Newly installed Commander long an Active Member.

John W. Hersey was installed Thursday evening as Commander of Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R. It was the first time for six years that the Post has installed a new commander. William H. Warner who has filled that position for six years retiring at his own request.

The Post met at headquarters, where a short business meeting was held, and then marched to Faxon hall where many friends had gathered to witness the ceremony.

Major Francis A. Bicknell, Past Commander of Reynolds Post of Weymouth, was the mustering officer, and Comrade Wood of Post 56, Cambridge, was officer of the day.

The officers installed:

Commander,—John W. Hersey.
Senior Vice Commander,—Charles L. Orne.
Junior Vice Commander,—Thomas Ring.
Surgeon,—Franklin Jacobs.
Quartermaster,—Andrew W. Gardner.
Officer of Day,—Warren Dunbar.
Officer of Guard,—William Bird.
Adjutant—Isaac M. Holt.
Chaplain,—Henry Chubbuck.
Sergeant Major,—George Phillips.
Quartermaster Sergeant,—Charles Stoddard.

Comrade Holt was absent on account of illness and he was installed by proxy.

After the installation, Commander Hersey thanked the members for the honor conferred upon him. He would try, to the best of his knowledge and ability, to fulfil the duties of his office, and look after the sick and disabled. He had considerable experience in that line but should continue to work with the relief committee. He hoped to keep his end up, as well as Commander Warner had for six years. We can not done. At the end of [illegible] what he has to leave the Post in as good a condition as it had been handed over to him.

Comrade Wood was glad to see so many present as it showed the services of the Grand Army had been appreciated. It makes me feel that the Post has the community with it. I see men here who underwent many hardships that you might enjoy the privileges you enjoy today. I know that I am looking upon a just and patriotic people as there was in the days of old, and the spirit of freedom shall go on until time is no more.

Major Bicknell spoke briefly, congratulating the Post that it had the courage to ask the ladies to be present on an occasion of this kind. He remembered how much the ladies did during the time of service, and of the personal assistance they had been to him when he was lying upon what was supposed to be his death bed in the South. We can never do too much for the services they rendered. Let us remember that there was sorrow at home. In closing he congratulated Commander Hersey and he felt sure no mistake had been made in electing him.

Past Commander Warner was the last speaker. He wished in retiring to return his thanks for the high honor that had been bestowed upon him, for the honor of allowing him to retire and become a Past Commander; to the ladies of the Woman's Relief Corps, the Ladies' Aid and the Sons of Veterans, for their cordial and substantial support. By your work and action, you have placed the Post in the best financial condition it ever was in. We have $1,500 more to our credit than six years ago, yet we have expended between $2,500 and $3,000 for relief. Last year we expended $562.28 for the relief of needy veterans. With the decrease in membership, and expenses increased I ask every member to continue to work and keep the fund up to the standard. Give your commander the same cordial and substantial support you gave me. In closing, he wished him Godspeed in his noble work as Commander of this Post.

Dancing was enjoyed until midnight, music being furnished by the Wollaston orchestra, which also furnished music during the installation ceremonies.

John W. Hersey, the new commander, is a Quincy boy. He was born in the house on Coddington street in which he now lives, August 8, 1844. He received his education in the public schools and has since followed the trade of painter. His war record dates back to August 28, 1862, upon which day he enlisted for nine months in Co. H, 44th Mass. V. M., and served during the whole of his term of enlistment in North Carolina under Gen. Foster with headquarters at Newburn. It was an active service and he participated in the battles of Goldsburg, Whitehall, Kingston and other places in that vicinity. His regiment was also at the seige of Little Washington. At the expiration of his term of enlistment he reenlisted for three months in Co. B, 6th Mass. V. M. During the term of his second enlistment he did garrison duty in the west. At the end of his second enlistment he enlisted for a third term, but only got as far as Reedville when the war was ended and peace declared.

The Dipper Changing.

The stars that shine in the January sky when the centre of Orion is on the meridian are more gorgeous than those of any other month in the year. Two constellations take the precedence for the grandeur and magnificence with which they irradiate the celestial expanse. They are the Great Bear, fa-Orion"- known as the Dipper, and

The one is always visible in [illegible] itude, its pointers marking with unswerving accuracy the position of the polar star. Five of its chief brilliants are receding from the earth with a velocity of 20 miles a second, two are approaching us, so that in about two thousand years the present form of the constellation will be changed and the observers of those days will no longer see the Dipper as it now appears. The other, visible to all the world, treads the equator with its starry feet, and is superb with its leading brilliants, its shining belt, its glittering sword, and its great nebula.

These constellations and many others have been admired ever since men and women began to consider the heavens. Poets have celebrated their charms from the earliest ages, and the scriptures abound in allusions to their glory. —New York Times.

It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

STORIES OF CAPTAIN LEARY

With the death of Captain Richard P. Leary a unique figure passes from the navy, says the New York Herald. He was appointed to the Naval academy from Maryland in 1860 and during the civil war was attached to the blockading squadron at Charleston. He was next heard of prominently at Samoa during the stirring times that culminated when the tornado of 1889 destroyed the German and American warships in those waters.

Captain Leary was then in command of the Adams, a little vessel of antique type. The German flagship was the Adler, a much superior ship. There were troublous times in Samoa, but the nations represented by their warships in those waters were supposed to maintain neutral positions. The Adler one day steamed past the Adams and saluted. Strapped to the German ship's mast was a native rebel chief. Captain Leary's ship did not return the salute, and the German commander lowered a boat and sent to learn the reason. Captain Leary's reply was characteristic:

"Tell your commander that the United States does not salute any vessel engaged in the slave trade."

Another time, learning that the German man-of-war had left the harbor to bombard a fort on an island under American control in support of Germany's candidate for the Samoan chieftainship, Captain Leary got the little Adams under way and arrived off the island as the bombardment was about to begin. Cleared for action, the little vessel darted between the German ship and the shore, and not a gun was fired.

During the Spanish-American war Captain Leary commanded the San Francisco in West Indian waters. He afterward was appointed governor of Guam, which he ruled as he would his ship. He required the natives to marry, called on the men to perform a certain amount of work each day and even prescribed how much poultry should be maintained by each family.

Captain Leary was regarded in the navy as a brave and efficient officer of great executive ability and was very popular.

CARRIES HIS OWN LIGHT.

Hermann Schmidt, a carpenter of St. Louis, carries his street car illumination in his pocket, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. When he gets on the street car in the evening on his way home, he takes out his light and, clamping it on the pilaster of the car window, settles down in his seat to assimilate the news of the world, while the other passengers bow to his genius.

Schmidt says he invented his adjustable, self folding candle power lamp out of sheer self defense. The lights in the street cars are evening during the [illegible] could not see to read his paper, he said. He found himself dropping behind the band wagon. He is a busy man and has no time during the day and is too tired at night to read.

Rather than submit to a gloomy hour on the cars in the evening he set to work to make a light that he could carry with him. He used a piece of copper wire eight inches long, a brass tube, a piece of old fashioned furniture and a wagon key. The first appearance of the lamp on an Eighteenth street car the other evening in St. Louis created a sensation. It was an instantaneous hit with the passengers on the car, and Schmidt is thinking of going into the business of manufacturing the lamps on a large scale.

DAILY CHIME FOR M'KINLEY

Bells to Keep on Ringing "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

The city of Lincoln, Neb., recently perfected plans for the erection of a memorial to President McKinley in the way of an elaborate set of chiming bells to be placed in the lately completed St. Paul's Methodist church, says the New York World. The order for their manufacture was given to a company in Troy, N. Y. They are to cost $6,000. The fund for their purchase came as voluntary subscriptions from the people of Lincoln, William J. Bryan being one of the subscribers.

The largest of the bells weighs an even ton, and they range from that to one of 125 pounds. Each day the hymn "Nearer, My God, to Thee," will be chimed.

The New Monument to Parnell.

Augustus St. Gaudens, the American sculptor, has been selected to make the heroic figure of Parnell for the monument to be erected in Dublin, says Harper's Literary Gossip. The work must be completed in five years and will cost from $40,000 to $50,000. Of this sum there has already been subscribed $30,000. It will be long before Parnell is forgotten by his compatriots. He had that indefinable quality of knighthood which endears a man to the hearts and anchors him in the imaginations of his contemporaries. In O'Brien's "Life of Charles Stewart Parnell" (Harper's) Mr. Gladstone is quoted as saying of Parnell: "That name, that very remarkable, that happy and unhappy name. * * * On the list of Irish patriots I place him with or next to Daniel O'Connell." Parnell is buried in Glasnevin cemetery, Dublin, near the grave of O'Connell.

Celestial Diplomacy.

When Minister Wu was asked why he would not accept the chair of oriental literature at Columbia university, he replied by asking six other questions. Mr. Wu's diplomacy, says the Washington Evening Times, is of a kind that makes a person see stars with its abruptness.

J. W. Pratt has purchased of G. H. Field a lot of land containing 50,000 square feet and having a frontage of 225 feet on Independence avenue. This is directly opposite the property Mr. Pratt has been developing, and under his skilful management will make a valuable addition to that fast growing suburb. It will be plotted into house lots and built on early in the spring.

The Edward Hewitson associates have been invited to give a concert at the Sailors' Mission on Hanover street January 12 the matter and Gordon Gannett, Jack Simons and Fred Thayer, the committee in charge of entertainment are getting up a fine program for that evening. The club will also furnish refreshments to be distributed to the sailors.

—Plans have been accepted for a students' building at Smith. It will provide a large hall for dramatic and social entertainments, and rooms for the various college clubs and societies. Last term a gift of $100,000 was promised Smith on condition that an equal amount should be raised within a year, and every energy is being bent toward procuring this sum. A fair amount has already been raised and the interest in this movement seems to be growing.

☞Panama is the natural and best route and has many advantages over any other. It can be made a sea-level canal, which no other can be; it is shorter, and probably can be put in operation at an earlier date. In all events it will be better for congress to make haste slowly and before deciding the question irrevocably obtain the best offers the Frenchmen will make. If the government can obtain the French rights and assets in the canal for $40,000,000 it will be worth our while to give the matter serious consideration.—Chicago Journal.

☞Boston it is said may have next season a club in a professional foot ball league. Our advice to any who think of putting money into a plan of that kind would be to wait and hold on to the dollars. There is a vast difference between fashionable college foot ball and ordinary rough work on the gridiron by workmen at day wages. The best people go to the one entertainment; they would never go to the other.—Brockton Enterprise.

—The bottom of the Pacific between Hawaii and California is said to be so level that a railway could be laid for 500 miles without grading anywhere.

ICE TREACHEROUS.

Narrow Escape at Merrymount Skating Rink.

Young Man and Woman Get into Water.

Westerly End Safe but Easterly End Has Thin Ice.

Shortly after nine o'clock Thursday night, no sound could be heard on the Merrymount skating rink. Every one had been terrified and so the pond was deserted. Those who were not familiar with the unsafe spots in the pond did not remain long on the rink after the accident, which might have resulted fatally but for the cool headedness and untiring efforts of Fletcher Miller and Walter Blake of Wollaston.

Taking no heed of warnings already given that the eastern part of pond was not safe, a happy couple went gliding in that direction shortly before nine o'clock. They dissappeared through the ice. A cry for help brought Miller to the rescue. While holding firmly to the drowning ones he called loudly for help and was soon relieved by three young men.

Blake, grappling the young lady, was pulled to safety by Miller. The man was saved the same way.

The latter was in an unconscious conditions. According to all appearances he had gone under several times for he was well filled with water. The lady was wet through and thoroughly chilled. They were both taken to their homes. It was noticeable that the young man devoted all his energies toward rescuing his friend when he himself was in an exhausted condition.

It is not known who the people were, or whether they fell in a hole or broke through the ice. In the afternoon William DeCoste of Quincy broke through the ice in this vicinity, but easily jumped out. It would be well to state that the western section of the rink is perfectly safe but the eastern one is not frozen in some places and has thin ice in others.

Rebekah Installation.

Thursday evening was a gala one with George L. Gill Rebekah lodge, the occasion being the installation of officers by Special Deputy Mabel G. Chamberlain and suite of Whitman. There was an attendance of 150, delegations being present from Amana, Golden Star, Carrie E. Ruggles, Reliance and other lodges.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies the retiring Noble Grand, Mrs. Susie A. Furnald, was presented with a beautiful Past Grand's collar. Mrs. Furnald in turn presented the Deputy with a bouquet of pinks.

A turkey supper was served in the banquet hall at the close of the meeting. The committee in charge deserve great credit for the success of the affair. The officers installed were as follows:

P. G.,—Susie A. Furnald.
N. G.,—Sadie Mitchell.

A Mild Case.

The little Wollaston girl who was discovered Thursday to have smallpox will be taken to the new pest house, where she will be attended by a trained nurse. This move is in consequence of a request of her parents as there is a baby in the home. The little girl has the disease in a mild form. The physicians say that she was infected with the disease before she was vaccinated and that the vaccination served to check the disease.

The Board of Health believe there is no connection between the two cases at Wollaston, either through personal contact or laundry.

On the Trail.

Thursday night Hodenosaunee Tribe of Wollaston had its hands full in entertaining its deputy and his suite and the Warriors' staff of Massapoag tribe of Campello, besides other visitors from Boston, Brockton and Braintree. Deputy Gardner and suite of Rockland raised the following chiefs to their stumps:

Prophet, E. M. Dunn.
Sachem, B. B. Taylor.
Senior Sagamore, W. T. Manimon.
Junior Sagamore, L. M. Hardy.
Chief of Records, William A. Jordan.
Keeper of Wampum, George W. McClintock.
Collector of Wampum, A. G. McKinley.

The Warrior's degree was beautifully exemplified by Massapoag's team on two candidates and then followed corn and venison, the peace pipe and long talks by various Great Chiefs and others.

Tonight Mrs. Eugenie E. Jordan of Wollaston Deputy Great Pocohantas and a suit from Mieola Council of Boston and Pochontas Council of Marblehead, will raise the chiefs of Heelahdee council, D. of P., at Brockton.

Monday, Jan. 6, Mr. Jordan, as Senior Past Chief, will assist in raising the chiefs of Leola council of Mansfield.

Thursday, Jan. 9 Hodenosaunee tribe will hold another public whist party in Odd Fellows' hall, Wollaston.

On the same evening William A. Jordan, P. G. S. of Wollaston, will make a long talk on the History of Redmanship at the public raising of chiefs by Nipmuck tribe of Southbridge.

Check no Good.

A man who gave his name as George F. Osgood, alias David Clark, was arraigned in court this morning upon a complaint charging him with larceny. It is claimed that on Aug. 18 last, he presented himself at the store of Miss Ella M. Freeman and purchased groceries to the value of $25, which he desired delivered on board his yacht at the works of the Hanley Construction Co. It is said that in payment of these goods he presented a check drawn by the C. C. Hanley Construction Co. for $50, and payable to the order of David L. Clark. Miss Freeman took the check and gave him $20 in change the balance of which she was to deliver with the groceries. When her deliver attempted to deliver the goods, Clark or his yacht could not be found, and the check was pronounced no good. Osgood or Clark was arrested by Inspector McKay Thursday night and case was continued for trial until Saturday.

First Presbyterian Church.

Sunday's services will be special and appropriate for the beginning of the new year. The Rev. Dr. James Todd, pastor, will preach morning and evening. A special service will be held at 3 P. M., when the Rev. Dr. Stewart, president of Auburn Theological seminary, will preach. He is here as the deputy of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church and in the interest of Evangelistic work. He will begin the special services to be held in the Water street church for the next two or three weeks. All are earnestly invited to attend.

In a Fog.

A befogged individual was groping his way down one of London's side streets leading off the Strand when he suddenly bumped up against a man coming from the opposite direction.

"Could you tell me where this street leads to?" he inquired after the necessary apologies had been made.

"Certainly," replied the other. "It leads into the river. "I have just come out of it."—Free Lance.

Crossed Vegetables.

A cross between a headless cabbage and the turnip produced the rape plant. Cabbage and turnips themselves are relatives; the lettuce plant also claims near kin to them, and far back in plant life grew a parent plant with some of the characteristics that each now claims as its own, from which all three, and many another plant also, descended.

Crushed.

"You are an iceberg!" exclaimed her elderly but well preserved adorer, pale with anger and mortification. "A dozen Cupids, with a hundred arrows each, could never find a vulnerable place in your flinty heart!"

Extremes Meet.

Peter Cunnigham was telling one evening where he had been dining and what he got. "We had a thing I never saw before—a soup made of calves' tails."

"Extremes meet," was the remark of Douglas Jerrold, at that time the prince of wits in England.

THE JERICHO P. O.

PAP PERKINS, POSTMASTER, RELATED ANOTHER INCIDENT.

He Tells How Joab Warner and Moses Stansell's Dispute Over a Barrel of Cider Resulted In a Long Standing Feud That Had No Ending.

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

NOBODY could ever exactly fix the date when the dispute between Joab Warner and Moses Stansell originated, but it was generally concluded that it lasted thirty-nine years before Providence put an end to it. One fall evening, when Jericho consisted of only seven houses and a huckleberry patch, Joab and Moses met at the postoffice, and after a little talk Joab said:

"Moses, I'm told that you're got a tolerable appetite for cider."

"Yes, tolerable," admitted Moses.

"You allus lay in a bar'l for winter?"

"I surely do."

"And what do you put into it to keep it from gettin' hard and twangy?"

"I allus use a little peppermint."

"I've heard you did, and I'm goin' to tell you of a better thing. Put in sassafras instead of peppermint, and you'll have a bar'l of cider equal to champagne. You know how folks cry for my cider along in the winter, and it's the sassafras what does it."

"Sassafras couldn't beat peppermint," says Moses as he shakes his head.

"But it does beat it all holler," says Joab. "You use it once, and you'll be grateful to me all the rest of your life."

"I don't doubt you mean well, Joab, but I shall stick to peppermint right along. Sassafras root is a good thing to chaw on, and I like the smell in b'ar oil, but when it comes down to cider peppermint's the only thing to use. You put in three tablespoonfuls to the bar'l, and the bar'l must be rolled over twice a day."

"I'm givin' you sassafras, Moses."

"And I'm givin' you peppermint, Joab."

"And I wouldn't give sassafras to an ailin' hog."

That was the beginning of the dispute. They didn't lay hands on each other, but they felt edgeways, and they never met without bringing up the question. They had it all to themselves at first, but after a bit other folks were dragged into it, and a good share of the county was divided into "Peppermints" and "Sassafrasers." Almost every night in the year Joab and Moses met at the postoffice, and after sort of elbowing each other around for a spell Joab would say:

"Why, hello, Moses, is that you? I thought I smelt peppermint around here."

"And I smelt sassafras as soon as you left home," Moses would reply.

"Still stickin' to it, are you, that peppermint is the right thing to keep cider from gettin' too hard?"

"I am, and I allus shall, and so would any one else but a born fool."

There would be more to it, and a dozen men would go over the question and call each other fools and liars, and the trouble kept spreading. It beat Joab when he ran for supervisor, and it downed Moses when he wanted to be a deacon of his church. If a lightning rod man or a tin peddler showed up within ten miles of Jericho, they were asked for their opinion on the cider question, and the man who favored peppermint couldn't do business with the sassafrasers. Several preachers tried to smooth over the quarrel, but when they went to Joab he said:

"I'm willin' enough to be friends with Moses, but, durn his hide, he's got to drop that peppermint business first."

Then they would go to Moses and talk and argue and point out his duty, but he would shake his head and reply:

"It's no use talkin' till Joab lets go of sassafras. He's stickin' to it jest because he's pigheaded and wants to come out on top."

The thing had been going on for nearly forty years, and Joab and Moses had got to be grandfathers and old men, when they met at the postoffice for the last time. Both were tottering and feeble, and as they caught sight of each other Joab called out:

"It's that blamed peppermint workin' in your system, and I don't care how soon it takes you off."

"It's that sassafras in your blood," replied Moses, "and your folks needn't expect me to come to your funeral."

The next day both of them were in bed, and after looking them over the doctor said their time had come to go. They lasted two weeks and died on the same day, but before dying Joab said to Moses:

"I ain't got no pity for sich a critter. If you'd used sassafras, you might have lived to be a hundred years old."

When Moses received the message, he braced up and sent back word:

"Nobody wants any pity from you. If thar's cider in heaven, they'll use peppermint to keep it from growin' hard!" M. QUAD.

Life Stories In Faces.

Character indeed is written plainly enough on the faces one meets in daily life. Some speak of tragedy, some of comedy, and not a few give you a distinct warning.

Even a ride in a street car or a short railway journey gives proof of this fact. Look around you. Those two strangers opposite you never saw before, yet you know that one is passionate, the other mean, and your heart warms to the little old lady near by. You want no one to assure you she is kind and gentle, while a whole network of wrinkles about the eyes tells you that the old gentleman in the corner loves his joke.

Strange how quick we are to read our neighbor's face and how slow to realize that our own is open for him to read! Yet it is. The story is there, and we are writing it every day of our lives. Not only do smiles and frowns leave traces, but every passion which sways the heart stamps its record upon the face.

Torne Mountain Legend.

There is a Washington legend connected with Torne mountain which is always told to those who visit the Ramapo country. The mountain is the highest in the range, and on a clear day, it is said, one can see Sandy Hook from the summit. Half way up the mountain there is a deep cleft in the rocks, at the bottom of which is a spring. From some hidden point water falls into the spring with a steady dropping not unlike the ticking of a watch.

"Listen and you will hear George Washington's watch," say the old settlers. "He dropped it into the spring when he came up the mountain to watch the British leave New York."

"Tick—tick—tick—tick" is the sound which comes out of the rocks.

"It is going yet," says the guide. "Must have been a good watch, don't you think so?"—New York Tribune.

The Largest Coins In Circulation.

The largest gold coin now in circulation is the gold ingot, or "loof," of Anam, a French colony in eastern Africa. It is a flat, round goldpiece, and on it is written in india ink its value, which is about £65. The next sized coin to this valuable but extremely awkward one is the obang of Japan, which is worth £10, and next comes the benda of Ashanti, which represents a value of about £9. The California fifty dollar goldpiece is worth about the same as the benda. The heaviest silver coin in the world also belongs to Anam, where the silver ingot is worth about £3. Then comes the Chinese tael, equal to about 7 shillings, and then the Austrian double thaler.

Dogs and Humor.

Mr. Cecil Aldin, an authority, gives it as his opinion that dogs as a rule are devoid of conscious humor. "The clown dog in a troupe of performing dogs, for instance, is not really funny when he burlesques the performances of other dogs, but he seems to be funny to the spectators. I am afraid that the people who credit dogs with being intentionally funny are deceiving themselves. A dog likes fun—a good romp and game with children—but his sense of humor has not been developed, and it is not subtle." A dog's best sense at humor, Mr. Aldin thinks, is when he is being tickled. "He opens his mouth, then screws his face into what people are pleased to call a laugh."

A Game For Two.

Once upon a time a young gentleman and a younger lady were alone in a bright parlor in front of a cheerful open fire, with a table between them, playing cards. As they continued to play and chat the table was not so much between them, for they both got nearer the fire and played the game on one corner of the table.

They had started in to play euchre, but after an hour and a half they found that they were playing hearts.

No Right to Live.

Beggar—Won't you give me some money, professor? My money is all gone, and I can't live.

Professor—How old are you?

Beggar—Forty years, sir.

Professor—Forty years! Don't you know that according to the latest mortality tables the average age of the male population of Europe reaches only thirty-four years and five months? Statistically you have no right to live any longer anyway!—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Corn.

Corn, with its twenty-four to thirty-two rows under cultivation, was once but a coarse grass, hiding each seed it produced under a husk, as wheat and oats now do. Brought out to the light and sun, with a chance to get at enough plant food, it has worked its way up to eight rows of seeds, covering these with one husk. The farmer and nature together have added the extra sixteen and twenty-four rows.

She Understood.

"Ignorance," remarked young Borem, "they say is bliss."

"Oh, that probably accounts for it," rejoined Miss Cutting.

"Accounts for what?" queried the youth.

"The contented and happy look you usually wear," she replied.—Chicago News.

An Offset.

A asks B to lend him 50 cents. B has but 25 cents and gives that to A. A accepts it, remarking that he will trust B for the balance. B later asks A to settle with him, whereupon A claims that as B owes him 25 cents one debt offsets the other. What is the answer?—Baltimore American.

Wind and Temper.

There is a closer connection between wind and temper than at first sight appears. A coldish wind has a bracing effect and on the whole is beneficial. In countries where hot winds occur periodically, on the other hand, these are regarded as a nuisance, if not a curse. Every one almost gets cross, weary and done up and has a headache daily.

In Egypt the season when crimes are commonest is when the hot khamseen blows. Nearly always during a severe sirocco the Arabs in Algeria were restless, if they did not attempt an actual rising. The solano, which now and then rushes across the Mediterranean in fiery blasts from Africa, upsets every one in Spain and is the worst wind in that country.

And even in the "Pearl of the Antilles" the fierce hot wind is such a pest that it is recorded of a family living in Havana that they made it a rule in the household to preserve absolute silence until the wind disappeared. It was the only plan they could think of to avoid family quarrels.

Webster's Income.

The legal profession of the present day will be surprised to learn that Mr. Webster, the greatest American lawyer of his time, made but $15,000 a year by his practice. But the fees of counsel between 1840 and 1850 were not what they have been since.

In 1848 I accompanied a client to Mr. Webster's office in Boston and asked him to name a retaining fee in an important patent case. He said he thought a couple of hundred dollars would do. When the case was tried, his fee was only $1,000. On another occasion I paid him a retaining fee of $2,000 for the proprietors of the Goodyear India rubber patent.

His fee for arguing the great equity cause of Goodyear versus Day in the circuit court of the United States for the district of New Jersey, by which he established the validity of the Goodyear patent, was $5,000. This was in the spring of 1852, and was the last case he ever argued.

Foolhardy.

The question was once put to General Wheeler:

"General, what was the most foolhardy thing you ever saw on the field of battle?"

"I didn't see it on the field of battle," replied General Wheeler. "I saw it one day when a young woman tried to enter a revolving door leading a dog by a very long string. She passed through in safety, but not so the dog. The rushing public came along, and the dog was ground both ways and chopped up as though he were in a sausage machine. Each time he escaped his mistress tugged madly on the string and pulled him into it again. She got him through at last, being a very determined girl. The janitor of the building wrapped him up in a newspaper for her, so that she could carry him home. The way she clung to that string was the most foolhardy thing I ever saw."

The Baby's Name.

"Name this child," said the clergyman.

"Superfluous," replied young Mrs. Verdigris, the mother of the cherub.

"What?"

"Superfluous."

"My dear madam," said the preacher in a whisper, "that will never do. I can't give the baby such a name as that. What suggested it to you?"

"My husband's brother."

"Is he a married man?"

"No, sir. He's an old bachelor."

"As I suspected. Madam, we will call this baby 'Blessing.'"

"I've no objection, sir, but I like the sound of the other better."—Chicago Tribune.

Caste In India.

The barbers of India rank with the washerwomen. The son of a barber must be a barber all his life, and his wife must be a barber's daughter. The Hindoo shaver travels about in search of customers, and the barbering is done in the street. There are no stools, both barber and customer squatting on their heels while the operation is performed. The Hindoo barber is a manicure and a chiropodist as well, and his pay is wretchedly small. They often act as surgeons, and they make a specialty of piercing the ears of young girls for earrings, while barbers' wives are almost always hairdressers.

Like Shooting Ghosts.

The impression when hunting paddymelons, a species of kangaroo found in Australia, is of shooting at ghosts, what with the dim, mysterious light of the "bush" and the strange appearance and swift movement of the game. Paddymelons, like all the kangaroo tribe, are useless for food, except so far as their tails are concerned, which, being largely of glutinous texture, furnish material for capital soup, very like oxtail, but with a peculiar and agreeable gamy flavor.

Useful.

"Our church fair was a splendid success," said young Mrs. Torkins.

"Did you sell lots of things?"

"Yes."

"Anything useful?"

"Yes, indeed! Everything was ever so useful. I can't think of a single article that couldn't be saved up and donated to be sold at the next fair."—Washington Star.

His Opinion.

The Dear Girl—I am really astonished to hear you advance the proposition that a child should not be corrected in the presence of strangers.

The Savage Bachelor—He should not be, because he should never be in the presence of strangers; that's why.

There are scores of references in the Bible to the use of perfumes by the Hebrews both in their religious services and in private life.

ICE TREACHEROUS.

Narrow Escape at Merrymount Skating Rink.

Young Man and Woman Get into Water.

Westerly End Safe but Easterly End Has Thin Ice.

Shortly after nine o'clock Thursday night, no sound could be heard on the Merrymount skating rink. Every one had been terrified and so the pond was deserted. Those who were not familiar with the unsafe spots in the pond did not remain long on the rink after the accident, which might have resulted fatally but for the cool headedness and untiring efforts of Fletcher Miller and Walter Blake of Wollaston.

Taking no heed of warnings already given that the eastern part of pond was not safe, a happy couple went gliding in that direction shortly before nine o'clock. They dissappeared through the ice. A cry for help brought Miller to the rescue. While holding firmly to the drowning ones he called loudly for help and was soon relieved by three young men.

Blake, grappling the young lady, was pulled to safety by Miller. The man was saved the same way.

The latter was in an unconscious conditions. According to all appearances he had gone under several times for he was well filled with water. The lady was wet through and thoroughly chilled. They were both taken to their homes. It was noticeable that the young man devoted all his energies toward rescuing his friend when he himself was in an exhausted condition.

It is not known who the people were, or whether they fell in a hole or broke through the ice. In the afternoon William DeCoste of Quincy broke through the ice in this vicinity, but easily jumped out. It would be well to state that the western section of the rink is perfectly safe but the eastern one is not frozen in some places and has thin ice in others.

Rebekah Installation.

Thursday evening was a gala one with George L. Gill Rebekah lodge, the occasion being the installation of officers by Special Deputy Mabel G. Chamberlain and suite of Whitman. There was an attendance of 150, delegations being present from Amana, Golden Star, Carrie E. Ruggles, Reliance and other lodges.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies the retiring Noble Grand, Mrs. Susie A. Furnald, was presented with a beautiful Past Grand's collar. Mrs. Furnald in turn presented the Deputy with a bouquet of pinks.

A turkey supper was served in the banquet hall at the close of the meeting. The committee in charge deserve great credit for the success of the affair. The officers installed were as follows:

P. G.,—Susie A. Furnald.
N. G.,—Sadie Mitchell.
V. G.,—Kate A. Prout.
Secretary,—Adeline Young.

A Mild Case.

The little Wollaston girl who was discovered Thursday to have smallpox will be taken to the new pest house, where she will be attended by a trained nurse. This move is in consequence of a request of her parents as there is a baby in the home. The little girl has the disease in a mild form. The physicians say that she was infected with the disease before she was vaccinated and that the vaccination served to check the disease.

The Board of Health believe there is no connection between the two cases at Wollaston, either through personal contact or laundry.

On the Trail.

Thursday night Hodenosaunee Tribe of Wollaston had its hands full in entertaining its deputy and his suite and the Warriors' staff of Massapoag tribe of Campello, besides other visitors from Boston, Brockton and Braintree. Deputy Gardner and suite of Rockland raised the following chiefs to their stumps:

Prophet, E. M. Dunn.
Sachem, B. B. Taylor.
Senior Sagamore, W. T. Manimon.
Junior Sagamore, L. M. Hardy.
Chief of Records, William A. Jordan.
Keeper of Wampum, George W. McClintock.
Collector of Wampum, A. G. McKinley.

The Warrior's degree was beautifully exemplified by Massapoag's team on two candidates and then followed corn and venison, the peace pipe and long talks by various Great Chiefs and others.

Tonight Mrs. Eugenie E. Jordan of Wollaston Deputy Great Pocohantas and a suit from Mieola Council of Boston and Pochoutas Council of Marblehead, will raise the chiefs of Heelahdee council, D. of P., at Brockton.

Monday, Jan. 6, Mr. Jordan, as Senior Past Chief, will assist in raising the chiefs of Leola council of Mansfield.

Thursday, Jan. 9 Hodenosaunee tribe will hold another public whist party in Odd Fellows' hall, Wollaston.

On the same evening William A. Jordan, P. G. S. of Wollaston, will make a long talk on the History of Redmanship at the public raising of chiefs by Nipmuck tribe of Southbridge.

Check no Good.

A man who gave his name as George F. Osgood, alias David Clark, was arraigned in court this morning upon a complaint charging him with larceny. It is claimed that on Aug. 18 last, he presented himself at the store of Miss Ella M. Freeman and purchased groceries to the value of $25, which he desired delivered on board his yacht at the works of the Hanley Construction Co. It is said that in payment of these goods he presented a check drawn by the C. C. Hanley Construction Co. for $50, and payable to the order of David L. Clark. Miss Freeman took the check and gave him $20 in change the balance of which she was to deliver with the groceries. When her deliver attempted to deliver the goods, Clark or his yacht could not be found, and the check was pronounced no good. Osgood or Clark was arrested by Inspector McKay Thursday night and case was continued for trial until Saturday.

First Presbyterian Church.

Sunday's services will be special and appropriate for the beginning of the new year. The Rev. Dr. James Todd, pastor, will preach morning and evening. A special service will be held at 3 P. M., when the Rev. Dr. Stewart, president of Auburn Theological seminary, will preach. He is here as the deputy of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church and in the interest of Evangelistic work. He will begin the special services to be held in the Water street church for the next two or three weeks. All are earnestly invited to attend.

In a Fog.

A befogged individual was groping his way down one of London's side streets leading off the Strand when he suddenly bumped up against a man coming from the opposite direction.

"Could you tell me where this street leads to?" he inquired after the necessary apologies had been made.

"Certainly," replied the other. "It leads into the river. "I have just come out of it."—Free Lance.

Crossed Vegetables.

A cross between a headless cabbage and the turnip produced the rape plant. Cabbage and turnips themselves are relatives; the lettuce plant also claims near kin to them, and far back in plant life grew a parent plant with some of the characteristics that each now claims as its own, from which all three, and many another plant also, descended.

Crushed.

"You are an iceberg!" exclaimed her elderly but well preserved adorer, pale with anger and mortification. "A dozen Cupids, with a hundred arrows each, could never find a vulnerable place in your flinty heart!"

Extremes Meet.

Peter Cunnigham was telling one evening where he had been dining and what he got. "We had a thing I never saw before—a soup made of calves' tails."

"Extremes meet," was the remark of Douglas Jerrold, at that time the prince of wits in England.

If troubled with a weak digestion, belching, sour stomach, or if you feel dull after eating, try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. All druggists.

—It is estimated that at the beginning of the new century England had 82,000,000,0000 tons of coal still unused and available.

THE JERICHO P. O.

PAP PERKINS, POSTMASTER, RELATED ANOTHER INCIDENT.

He Tells How Joab Warner and Moses Stansell's Dispute Over a Barrel of Cider Resulted In a Long Standing Feud That Had No Ending.

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

NOBODY could ever exactly fix the date when the dispute between Joab Warner and Moses Stansell originated, but it was generally concluded that it lasted thirty-nine years before Providence put an end to it. One fall evening, when Jericho consisted of only seven houses and a huckleberry patch, Joab and Moses met at the postoffice, and after a little talk Joab said:

"Yes, tolerable," admitted Moses.

"You allus lay in a bar'l for winter?"

"I surely do."

"And what do you put into it to keep it from gettin' hard and twangy?"

"I allus use a little peppermint."

"I've heard you did, and I'm goin' to tell you of a better thing. Put in sassafras instead of peppermint, and you'll have a bar'l of cider equal to champagne. You know how folks cry for my cider along in the winter, and it's the sassafras what does it."

"Sassafras couldn't beat peppermint," says Moses as he shakes his head.

"But it does beat it all holler," says Joab. "You use it once, and you'll be grateful to me all the rest of your life."

"I don't doubt you mean well, Joab, but I shall stick to peppermint right along. Sassafras root is a good thing to chaw on, and I like the smell in h'ar oil, but when it comes down to cider peppermint's the only thing to use. You put in three tablespoonfuls to the bar'l, and the bar'l must be rolled over twice a day."

"I'm givin' you sassafras, Moses."

"And I'm givin' you peppermint, Joab."

"And I wouldn't give sassafras to an ailin' hog."

That was the beginning of the dispute. They didn't lay hands on each other, but they felt edgeways, and they never met without bringing up the question. They had it all to themselves at first, but after a bit other folks were dragged into it, and a good share of the county was divided into "Peppermints" and "Sassafrasers." Almost every night in the year Joab and Moses met at the postoffice, and after sort of elbowing each other around for a spell Joab would say:

"Why, hello, Moses, is that you? I thought I smelt peppermint around here."

"Still stickin' to it, are you, that peppermint is the right thing to keep cider from gettin' too hard?"

"I am, and I allus shall, and so would any one else but a born fool."

There would be more to it, and a dozen men would go over the question and call each other fools and liars, and the trouble kept spreading. It beat Joab when he ran for supervisor, and it downed Moses when he wanted to be a deacon of his church. If a lightning rod man or a tin peddler showed up within ten miles of Jericho, they were asked for their opinion on the cider question, and the man who favored peppermint couldn't do business with the sassafrasers. Several preachers tried to smooth over the quarrel, but when they went to Joab he said:

"I'm willin' enough to be friends with Moses, but, durn his hide, he's got to drop that peppermint business first."

Then they would go to Moses and talk and argue and point out his duty, but he would shake his head and reply:

"It's no use talkin' till Joab lets go of sassafras. He's stickin' to it jest because he's pigheaded and wants to come out on top."

The thing had been going on for nearly forty years, and Joab and Moses had got to be grandfathers and old men, when they met at the postoffice for the last time. Both were tottering and feeble, and as they caught sight of each other Joab called out:

"It's that blamed peppermint workin' in your system, and I don't care how soon it takes you off."

"It's that sassafras in your blood," replied Moses, "and your folks needn't expect me to come to your funeral."

The next day both of them were in bed, and after looking them over the doctor said their time had come to go. They lasted two weeks and died on the same day, but before dying Joab said to Moses:

"I ain't got no pity for sich a critter. If you'd used sassafras, you might have lived to be a hundred years old."

When Moses received the message, he braced up and sent back word:

"Nobody wants any pity from you. If thar's cider in heaven, they'll use peppermint to keep it from growin' hard!" M. QUAD.

Life Stories In Faces.

Character indeed is written plainly enough on the faces one meets in daily life. Some speak of tragedy, some of comedy, and not a few give you a distinct warning.

Even a ride in a street car or a short railway journey gives proof of this fact. Look around you. Those two strangers opposite you never saw before, yet you know that one is passionate, the other mean, and your heart warms to the little old lady near by. You want no one to assure you she is kind and gentle, while a whole network of wrinkles about the eyes tells you that the old gentleman in the corner loves his joke.

Strange how quick we are to read our neighbor's face and how slow to realize that our own is open for him to read! Yet it is. The story is there, and we are writing it every day of our lives. Not only do smiles and frowns leave traces, but every passion which sways the heart stamps its record upon the face.

Torne Mountain Legend.

There is a Washington legend connected with Torne mountain which is always told to those who visit the Ramapo country. The mountain is the highest in the range, and on a clear day, it is said, one can see Sandy Hook from the summit. Half way up the mountain there is a deep cleft in the rocks, at the bottom of which is a spring. From some hidden point water falls into the spring with a steady dropping not unlike the ticking of a watch.

"Listen and you will hear George Washington's watch," say the old settlers. "He dropped it into the spring when he came up the mountain to watch the British leave New York."

"Tick—tick—tick—tick" is the sound which comes out of the rocks.

"It is going yet," says the guide. "Must have been a good watch, don't you think so?"—New York Tribune.

The Largest Coins In Circulation.

The largest gold coin now in circulation is the gold ingot, or "loof," of Anam, a French colony in eastern Africa. It is a flat, round goldpiece, and on it is written in india ink its value, which is about £65. The next sized coin to this valuable but extremely awkward one is the obang of Japan, which is worth £10, and next comes the benda of Ashanti, which represents a value of about £9. The California fifty dollar goldpiece is worth about the same as the benda. The heaviest silver coin in the world also belongs to Anam, where the silver ingot is worth about £3. Then comes the Chinese tael, equal to about 7 shillings, and then the Austrian double thaler.

Dogs and Humor.

Mr. Cecil Aldin, an authority, gives it as his opinion that dogs as a rule are devoid of conscious humor. "The clown dog in a troupe of performing dogs, for instance, is not really funny when he burlesques the performances of other dogs, but he seems to be funny to the spectators. I am afraid that the people who credit dogs with being intentionally funny are deceiving themselves. A dog likes fun—a good romp and game with children—but his sense of humor has not been developed, and it is not subtle." A dog's best sense at humor, Mr. Aldin thinks, is when he is being tickled. "He opens his mouth, then screws his face into what people are pleased to call a laugh."

A Game For Two.

Once upon a time a young gentleman and a younger lady were alone in a bright parlor in front of a cheerful open fire, with a table between them, playing cards. As they continued to play and chat the table was not so much between them, for they both got nearer the fire and played the game on one corner of the table.

They had started in to play euchre, but after an hour and a half they found that they were playing hearts.

No Right to Live.

Beggar—Won't you give me some money, professor? My money is all gone, and I can't live.

Professor—How old are you?

Beggar—Forty years, sir.

Professor—Forty years! Don't you know that according to the latest mortality tables the average age of the male population of Europe reaches only thirty-four years and five months? Statistically you have no right to live any longer anyway!—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Corn.

Corn, with its twenty-four to thirty-two rows under cultivation, was once but a coarse grass, hiding each seed it produced under a husk, as wheat and oats now do. Brought out to the light and sun, with a chance to get at enough plant food, it has worked its way up to eight rows of seeds, covering these with one husk. The farmer and nature together have added the extra sixteen and twenty-four rows.

She Understood.

"Oh, that probably accounts for it," rejoined Miss Cutting.

"Accounts for what?" queried the youth.

An Offset.

A asks B to lend him 50 cents. B has but 25 cents and gives that to A. A accepts it, remarking that he will trust B for the balance. B later asks A to settle with him, whereupon A claims that as B owes him 25 cents one debt offsets the other. What is the answer?—Baltimore American.

Wind and Temper.

There is a closer connection between wind and temper than at first sight appears. A coldish wind has a bracing effect and on the whole is beneficial. In countries where hot winds occur periodically, on the other hand, these are regarded as a nuisance, if not a curse. Every one almost gets cross, weary and done up and has a headache daily.

In Egypt the season when crimes are commonest is when the hot khamseen blows. Nearly always during a severe sirocco the Arabs in Algeria were restless, if they did not attempt an actual rising. The solano, which now and then rushes across the Mediterranean in fiery blasts from Africa, upsets every one in Spain and is the worst wind in that country.

And even in the "Pearl of the Antilles" the fierce hot wind is such a pest that it is recorded of a family living in Havana that they made it a rule in the household to preserve absolute silence until the wind disappeared. It was the only plan they could think of to avoid family quarrels.

Webster's Income.

The legal profession of the present day will be surprised to learn that Mr. Webster, the greatest American lawyer of his time, made but $15,000 a year by his practice. But the fees of counsel between 1840 and 1850 were not what they have been since.

In 1848 I accompanied a client to Mr. Webster's office in Boston and asked him to name a retaining fee in an important patent case. He said he thought a couple of hundred dollars would do. When the case was tried, his fee was only $1,000. On another occasion I paid him a retaining fee of $2,000 for the proprietors of the Goodyear india rubber patent.

His fee for arguing the great equity cause of Goodyear versus Day in the circuit court of the United States for the district of New Jersey, by which he established the validity of the Goodyear patent, was $5,000. This was in the spring of 1852, and was the last case he ever argued.

Foolhardy.

The question was once put to General Wheeler:

"General, what was the most foolhardy thing you ever saw on the field of battle?"

"I didn't see it on the field of battle," replied General Wheeler. "I saw it one day when a young woman tried to enter a revolving door leading a dog by a very long string. She passed through in safety, but not so the dog. The rushing public came along, and the dog was ground both ways and chopped up as though he were in a sausage machine. Each time he escaped his mistress tugged madly on the string and pulled him into it again. She got him through at last, being a very determined girl. The janitor of the building wrapped him up in a newspaper for her, so that she could carry him home. The way she clung to that string was the most foolhardy thing I ever saw."

The Baby's Name.

"Name this child," said the clergyman.

"Superfluous," replied young Mrs. Verdigris, the mother of the cherub.

"What?"

"Superfluous."

"My dear madam," said the preacher in a whisper, "that will never do. I can't give the baby such a name as that. What suggested it to you?"

"My husband's brother."

"Is he a married man?"

"No, sir. He's an old bachelor."

"As I suspected. Madam, we will call this baby 'Blessing.'"

"I've no objection, sir, but I like the sound of the other better."—Chicago Tribune.

Caste In India.

The barbers of India rank with the washerwomen. The son of a barber must be a barber all his life, and his wife must be a barber's daughter. The Hindoo shaver travels about in search of customers, and the barbering is done in the street. There are no stools, both barber and customer squatting on their heels while the operation is performed. The Hindoo barber is a manicure and a chiropodist as well, and his pay is wretchedly small. They often act as surgeons, and they make a specialty of piercing the ears of young girls for earrings, while barbers' wives are almost always hairdressers.

Like Shooting Ghosts.

The impression when hunting paddymelons, a species of kangaroo found in Australia, is of shooting at ghosts, what with the dim, mysterious light of the "bush" and the strange appearance and swift movement of the game. Paddymelons, like all the kangaroo tribe, are useless for food, except so far as their tails are concerned, which, being largely of glutinous texture, furnish material for capital soup, very like oxtail, but with a peculiar and agreeable gamy flavor.

Useful.

"Our church fair was a splendid success," said young Mrs. Torkins.

"Did you sell lots of things?"

"Yes."

"Anything useful?"

"Yes, indeed! Everything was ever so useful. I can't think of a single article that couldn't be saved up and donated to be sold at the next fair."—Washington Star.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. Steamer Ban Righ Converted Into a War Vessel

MODERN STYLE ARMAMENT

General Matos Calls on Fellow Countrymen to Take Up Arms Against Castro—United States Not Likely to Recognize the Vessel as a Pirate

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, Jan. 3.—The British steamer Ban Righ, recently renamed the Libertador, has left this port for the Venezuelan coast. She carries among her passengers General Matos and several generals and other important personages of Venezuela who joined General Matos here. Besides the leaders of the expedition, the Libertador has on board 300 volunteers, and it is said she will embark a number of other volunteers while on her way to the coast of Venezuela.

The behavior of General Matos and his adherents while they were at this port was most correct and when they left here they had the sympathy of the whole population. General Matos is well known at Fort de France, where he has many friends. The local newspapers have published articles expressing hopes for the prompt success of the expedition and the downfall of President Castro, whose attitude, the papers add, has earned for him the enmity of the whole world.

Previous to his departure from Fort de France, General Matos issued a manifesto, calling on all his fellow countrymen to take up arms.

While the Libertador was at this port her sides were strengthened by armor and her gun positions were protected. Her armament is of the modern type, consisting of several rapid-fire guns capable of firing 300 shots a minute, and four 10-centimetre rapid-fire guns.

The officer in charge of the Ban Righ's guns is a European. The vessel's crew is composed of Englishmen and natives of the island of Martinique.

The reinforcements of the 300 volunteers now on board the Ban Righ will, if the plans of the revolutionists are carried out, reach the war steamer in sloops and schooners which are to be met at various points.

The departing volunteers appeared to be very determined men. They had learned, previous to sailing, of the decree issued by President Castro, declaring the Ban Righ to be a pirate and offering a reward of $10,000 for her capture. But they declared the vessel will not be captured and insisted that the revolution will triumph.

These volunteers also said that their landing on the coast of Venezuela was planned to coincide with a forward movement on the part of the Colombian troops and the landing in Venezuela of other revolutionists who had concentrated at the islands of Trinidad and Curacoa.

Not Safe to Attempt Capture

Washington, Jan. 3.—If Venezuela communicates to the United States a declaration that the filibustering steamer Ban Righ is a pirate, an explicit reply, it is said, will be returned refusing to agree to any such designation. The Ban Righ has a British register, and the British government will undoubtedly compel President Castro to make ample reparation in case her officers and crew should be treated as pirates.

High-Handed Proceedings

London, Jan. 3.—A dispatch to The Times from Wellington, N. Z., says that a French trading vessel, in retaliation for the desertion of a native boy, sailed up and down the coast of one of the islands of the New Hebrides group, firing on the natives. Later, a landing party from the vessel burned a church and certain mission buildings. The French admiral who adjudicated the case caused the vessel's license to be forfeited, but refused compensation.

Tuberculosis Not Contagious

New York, Jan. 3.—Dr. S. A. Knopf, the authority on tuberculosis, last night addressed the academy of medicine. He declared tuberculosis was not contagious. A man with well-defined tuberculosis could easily do his work daily if the proper precautions were taken and the sputum removed and destroyed. The government, he said, had stamped all of those afflicted with the dread disease with a stigma that was not proper.

Prison Mutineers In Court

Leavenworth, Kas., Jan. 3.—A court convened yesterday in the library of the United States penitentiary, for the arraignment of the ringleaders of the mutiny of Nov. 7, who are implicated in the killing of Guard Waldrupe. The mutineers, 17 in number, were brought in, each wearing a ball and chain, and five were arraigned on the charge of murder in the first degree. Each of the prisoners entered a plea of not guilty.

Youngster In Danger of Lynching

Leaksville, N. C., Jan. 3.—Tom Rainey, a white boy, aged 12, was instantly killed yesterday by Ed. Pettus, a negro, 17 years old. Rainey met the negro in a field and the two got into a quarrel, when Pettus shot Rainey in the head. Pettus escaped. There is danger of lynching if the negro is caught.

Hosecart Killed Fireman

New York, Jan. 3.—The Moosehead Silk company's factory at Harrison was destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss was $50,000. John Farrell, a fireman, fell from a hose cart while on his way to the fire and the wheels passed over his chest, killing him.

WHITE MAN'S "BURDEN"

A Disgrace as Far as the Congo Free State Is Concerned

London, Jan. 3.—Captain Guy Burrows, who has just retired from the employ of the Congo Free State government, after six years' service, declared in an interview yesterday with a representative of The Associated Press that the conditions prevailing in the Congo Free State are a disgrace to civilization and far worse than ever before. Atrocities of the most horrible character are perpetrated on the natives by officials and whites who have concessions of rubber land. As a typical case of the means employed by the Free State government Captain Burrows corroborates the statement of an American missionary to the effect that the officials employed 500 cannibals to whom they issued rifles to "massacre and capture unarmed natives who had rebelled against their brutal methods."

"I have sworn testimony," said Burrows, "of the Belgians handing over natives to cannibal tribes for the express purpose of being eaten. Forced labor prevails everywhere and 'shotgun rule' is the truest description of the present administration. The companies deriving wealth from the collection of rubber are all more or less state enterprises, as a third or half the shares in them are invariably held by the government. Latterly, King Leopold and the government have made some show of action against the agents of some of the upper Congo companies, but only minor officials are ever touched, and the so-called reforms are merely intended to throw dust in the eyes of the public, whose indignation has been aroused by the stories of this reign of terror. While the present system for the collection of rubber and the recruiting of natives continues the Congo Free State will remain a disgrace to the white man's work in Africa."

Wants Old Bargain Consummated

Washington, Jan. 3.—W. B. Matchett, representing the government of Liberia, yesterday made a formal request of Secretary Long that the action of congress as embodied in the act of April 17, 1866, providing for the relief of Liberia, be carried into effect. That act provides that there shall be transferred to the government of Liberia one of the gunboats of the United States navy acceptable to the government of Liberia and which in the opinion of the secretary of the navy can be spared conveniently for that purpose, the sale of the vessel to Liberia to be at a valuation to be fixed by the secretary of the navy and to be paid in annual instalments, not exceeding 10 in number.

For Consumptives' Sanitarium

London, Jan. 3.—Two hundred thousand pounds have been placed at King Edward's disposal for charitable or utilitarian purposes by Sir Earnest Cassel, a merchant and financier, who was prominent in Egyptian finance and who was made a knight commander of St. Michael and St. George for his services in that field. King Edward has decided to devote this gift to a sanitarium for consumptives which will accomodate 100 patients.

Public Debt Decreased

Washington, Jan. 3.—The monthly statement of the public debt, issued yesterday, shows that at the close of business Dec. 31, 1901, the national debt, less cash in the treasury amounted to $1,011,628,286, a decrease for the month of $8,643,192.

A Boy's Startling Discovery

Halifax, Jan. 3.—On Dec. 18, William A. McKenzie, 26 years old, mysteriously disappeared from his home at Clace Bay. Thomas McLean, aged 14, was skating on the dam near the town yesterday, and he cut a hole in the ice to get a drink. As he did so the head of a man popped up through the opening and the boy fled terror-stricken. Later, the body was taken from the water and it was identified as that of McKenzie.

As to Czolgoz's Brain

Chicago, Jan. 3.—At yesterday's meeting of the Anatomical society a paper by Dr. E. A. Spitzka was read, and in it the doctor declared that the brain of Leon Colgosz, President McKinley's murderer, was normal. The doctor said that during the four hour dissection which followed the execution of the criminal, he had been able to study the brain with considerable thoroughness.

GOOD WORK

Ever heard of the man who sold his horse because it was growing thin? After awhile he saw a fine looking horse he wanted to buy. It was his own old horse grown fat. The new owner had found the right medicine.

Scott's Emulsion does that kind of work with sickly children. Sometimes it changes a child's whole nature so much one would scarcely know the child. Scott's Emulsion starts the small ones to growing like weeds. The scrawny ones get hearty and fat. Color begins to show in the pale face.

Scott's Emulsion does this good work without hurting the little stomachs. No extra burden. All help.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

MURDER VICTIMS BURIED

Services Over the Remains of Miss Columbe and Young Bitzer

Turner's Falls, Mass., Jan. 3.—The funeral of Miss Ida Columbe, one of the victims of last Tuesday's tragedy, took place at St. Ann's Catholic church yesterday, the large church being filled with relatives and friends of the dead girl. The casket containing the body was carried into the church from the hearse by four girl friends. Upon the casket were many floral offerings.

The funeral of Louis Martin Bitzer, the second victim of the tragedy, took place at the home of Martin L. Bitzer, a brother of the man charged with the double murder, who makes his home with his mother in the tenement directly under the place where Louis Bitzer resided and where the little boy was killed on Tuesday and others wounded. There were beautiful flowers and the house was crowded. The service was very simple and was entirely in German. Prayer was offered by Rev. A. Faust, and burial was in the German cemetery.

The three members of the Bitzer family at the Farren hospital continue to improve. Anna, the 16-year-old girl, is resting comfortably, but the bullet is still in her head.

State Officer McKay and Deputy Sheriff Davis are at work on the case, but there are no new developments. There is no motive in sight for the commission of the crime. While it is not expert testimony, by any means, a great majority of the people who knew Bitzer well hold that he is insane.

Endeavorers Going on Journey

Boston, Jan. 3.—A pleasant send-off was given last evening to President Clark and Secretary Baer of the Christian Endeavor by a number of Boston's representative endeavorers, in Tremont Temple. A reception began at 5 p. m., and a supper was served at 7, after which the work of the World's Christian Endeavor Union was presented by President Clark and others. Dr. Clark sails tomorrow for a six months Christian Endeavor tour in Europe, and Mr. Baer sets out about the same time for an extended tour through the west. Field Secretary Eberman also has a southern tour planned.

Drivers and Employers to Meet

Boston, Jan. 3.—President Lincoln of the chamber of commerce and the members of the state board of arbitration held a conference yesterday in relation to the controversy between the master teamsters and the Team Drivers' union, and it was decided to ask both parties to meet today. The master teamsters declare that they have no intention of bringing a tie-up. It is, however, considered certain that some of the members of the union will strike, owing to the position assumed by one of the largest firms of teamsters.

Weavers Return to Work

Dover, N. H., Jan. 3.—The weavers' strike, which has existed at the Cocheco mills since last Monday morning, has been adjusted, and the weavers returned to their looms this morning. The matter has been compromised, but the only information which the weavers would give out is contained in the statement that "the weavers agreed to return to work, believing that Agent Fish intends to treat them fairly henceforth."

Brother and Sister Drowned

Providence, Jan. 3.—Joseph and Mamie Keeley, aged 11 and 13 years, were drowned at Hillsgrove yesterday. A number of children were sliding on the ice on a pond when suddenly the ice broke, plunging them into the water. Joseph got back on to solid ice in safety, but seeing his sister in the water jumped in after her, and as a result both lost their lives.

Town Auditors Worried

Wareham, Mass., Jan. 3.—William R. Taber, who holds the joint office of town clerk, treasurer and collector of taxes, has been absent from his home since Sunday, to the surprise of the town auditors, who expected to have him deliver his account books on Jan. 1, posted up to date.

Yachts Were In Danger

New London, Conn., Jan. 3.—Fire was discovered in the shipyard of the Thames Towboat company at Riverside this morning, where the yacht Constitution and other fine racing craft are in winter quarters. Vigorous work by the firemen put the blaze under control before much damage had been done.

Woman Killed By a Fall

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 3.—Mrs. Arthur Vincent, aged 32, fell from a three-story balcony yesterday and was so severely injured that she died shortly afterward. She was leaning over to call her children to supper when the accident occurred.

Wrecked on Grand Menan

Eastport, Me., Jan. 3.—A vessel supposed to be the British schooner Harry of St. John, from Boston for St. John with lumber, stranded on the north side of Grand Menan and will be a total loss. It is learned that the entire crew was saved.

Cassels Guilty of Murder

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 3.—The jury in the case of John D. Cassels reported a verdict of murder in the first degree yesterday. Cassels killed Mrs. Mary J. Lane in East Longmeadow Feb. 26, because she would not elope with him.

Frozen While Intoxicated

Boston, Jan. 3.—The body of Louis Berriere of Hyde Park was found in a field near Franklin Park yesterday and it was evident that, while overcome with liquor, he lay down to sleep. In the cold he froze to death.

Storm-Battered Vessels

Highland Light, Mass., Jan. 3.—The sailing vessels caught off the cape in the blizzard of Wednesday are creeping into port in a more or less battered condition, and with frost-bitten crews.

Sailors' Rations.

A recent writer has this to say of sailors' rations: "A sailor has dishes, and loves them, that are little appreciated ashore. He likes 'Fanny Adams' and has a great fancy for 'plum duff,' which consists of suet pudding with raisins in it. Vegetables, though they are in the official harbor menu, are not served out to the messes every day, but on certain days some groups of men get all and the others none, on a system of which Jack quite approves.

"The messes whose turn it is to have vegetables indulge in a 'pot mess,' as it is styled, perhaps not inappropriately. The messes in their turn receive the shins, scrag ends, neck pieces and other odds and ends of the meat ration—some sailors aver that every animal has at least six shins—and this miscellaneous assortment of remnants is thrown into a pot with as many vegetables as can be got. The result is a 'pot mess.'

"Any landlubber who desires to try a real naval dish will have no difficulty in getting the dish prepared, and if he eats it on a table with uneven legs which lunges up and down he can imagine he is at sea."

Narcolepsy.

Narcolepsy is a curious and somewhat rare disease, whose most prominent symptom is irresistible attacks of sleep. These may come on suddenly at any time and place, and the patient is absolutely unable to stay awake. The sleep, however, is usually of short duration, from ten to thirty minutes.

The disease was described and named by Gelineau, a French physician, in 1880. It is thought by some specialists to be closely allied to epilepsy. But as the attacks resemble healthy sleep—the muscles are relaxed, the heart and respiration are slowed down, the patient on awakening is refreshed as after an ordinary nap, and there is none of the lassitude and sense of exhaustion which follows the epileptic fit—it is certainly very different in origin from the latter. Robin and Paul Sainton have recorded cases which show a close association between obesity and the tendency to narcolepsy.

It seems probable, however, as Dutil thinks, that its closest ally is simple hysteria.

Cat Versus Trout.

A member of the Sullivan County club caught half a dozen trout one day last summer and carried them alive to his cottage, intending to take them to the city. He turned the water into his bathtub, and the trout seemed to thrive as well there as they had done in the streams.

That afternoon one of the fish disappeared. The man, thinking it had jumped out, looked all around the room, but no trout was to be seen.

Next morning two more were gone, and the servant was closely questioned. Then two more disappeared, and the fisherman was so much concerned that he took a place outside the bathroom window and proceeded to watch.

Pretty soon the family cat entered, perched on the edge of the tub and, waiting its chance, struck viciously into the water with one paw and brought up the remaining trout.—New York Times.

The Way to Do Business.

"Is there any one living here under twenty-one years of age?" inquired a man who rang the doorbell at a genteel residence the other day.

"No, there is not," rather sharply replied a spinster of eight and thirty summers who answered.

"Why, is it possible?" was the reply of the apparently astonished man. "Don't you live here?"

It was a neat hit, and after a little simpering and a brief chat about the weather the maiden purchased two copies of a work entitled "Hints For the Young."—London Tit-Bits.

Diet and Voice.

A musical writer states that fine vocalists are rare in countries where fish and meat diets prevail and that the voice depreciates as families grow rich and increase the amount of meat consumed. Naples and Genoa, where much fish is eaten, give few of Italy's singers, and the sweet voices of Ireland are found in the country, but not in the towns. In Norway too much fish is eaten for the production of singers, but Sweden is a land of grain and song. The carnivorous birds croak; grain eating birds sing.

The Maid Blushed.

When Mr. David Dear, winner of the queen's prize at Bisley, was a law student, he once attended an "at home." On the servant asking his name, he replied, "David Dear."

The girl blushed and said, "Yes, yes; but what is your other name, sir?"

He assured her he had no other name, but it was of no use. The servant knew better and announced him as "Mr. David."

Witty Actress.

A leading actress, who is notably well "billed" all over town and country, observed to the interviewer: "Of course I can't get on without 'billing,' and," she added slyly, "a little 'cooing.' Do I use powder? Why, of course. What do you think? And, my dear sir, I shall now depend on you—for the powder—oh, dear, no—for the puff!"

The Best of Reasons.

"Why do you bring this to me?" thundered the weary editor, thrusting the manuscript back into the hands of the poet.

The Mistletoe.

Miss Lida Tupper of Braintree is showing to her friends an interesting Christmas gift from far away Texas. This gift is a bunch of American mistletoe scientifically called Phoradendron flavescens. This plant is not found in New England or in fact, farther north than New Jersey. Plants in many traits, resemble human beings. We find among them, the toilers, the "weary Willies" and the thieves. To the latter class belong the mistletoes. Although they are equipped with working apparatus in the form of thick, strong leaves and robust stems they lazily stretch themselves along the branches of noble, hard-working deciduous trees and seize their food supply. Parasitic plants, as a rule, attach themselves to the branches or roots of worthier plants by means of suckers and drain the juices laid up by the foster parent for its own use.

The plants in Miss Tupper's possession are in the fruiting state and are very beautiful. Each short branch is thickly studded with white berry-like fruit, which in texture resembles currants, within each berry, however, is a rounded body composed of mucilaginous albumen in which a single seed lies imbedded. The American mistletoe, although called "false" is more beautiful than the European or true kind. The branches are more compact, the leaves are much larger and the fruit although smaller, is more plentiful. However it is around the foreign plant, Viscum album, that so much superstition still hovers. As both kinds are alike remarkable for thieving qualities the following stanza is as applicable to the one as to the other:

"It clingeth, it clingeth and flourisheth still
And sucketh the juices, its own veins to fill,
Of the stem which supports it, a parasite bold

Coldest of Season.

The temperature at noon today was 13 degrees which is, one degree lower than last Wednesday and is therefore the coldest day this winter. There was but one day last January when the temperture at noon was lower than today, that was on Jan. 20, when it was 11 above.

A Cure for Lumbago.

W. C. Williamson, of Amherst, Va., says: "For more than a year I suffered from lumbago. I finally tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me entire relief, which all other remedies had failed to do." Sold by all druggists.

A BLIGHTED BEING

The Story of a Man Who Was Consoled

BY ALICE CALDWELL HEGAN

It was to be a house party of four—three girls to one man. The man was expected on the afternoon boat, and the girls sat on the piazza and indulged in idle conjecture while they watched for the steamer to appear around Crab island.

"You see," said the hostess, a slender maiden with a voice, "he's just been through a terrible affair. The girl was perfectly heartless and treated him abominably. He is the most heartbroken creature you ever saw. I asked him up while you girls were here, hoping we could divert him a little."

There was keen interest in the faces of both listeners.

"Does he show his teeth when he laughs?" demanded the younger girl, who answered reluctantly to the name of Peanuts. She was small and plump, and her nose was a one act comedy.

The hostess smiled. "What do you think he will be like, Lady?"

The hostess' amusement bubbled over. "You can't quarrel with his looks," she said. "But, seriously, girls, the poor fellow is dreadfully broken up. You'll be good to him, won't you?"

But Lady was discreetly noncommittal. She had had ten proposals before she was twenty, and since then she had ceased to count. Convalescent lovers had crossed her path before. The sun dropped behind the mountains, and as the pink afterglow suffused the lake the steamer rounded the island.

An August afternoon, a sheltered corner in the rocks, and, ensconced in many pillows, lay Lady and the Blighted Being.

"Of course," he was saying, "I hadn't any right to tell you. A man is a fool to talk so much about himself, but you were so sympathetic, so"— Lady's eyes glowed responsive, but she knew the power of silence.

"Do you know," he went on, "sometimes you remind me of the siren—same little turn of the head, same way of treating a fellow. How about that, Lady—has a girl any conscience when it comes to frivoling?"

She looked dreamily out across the water. Her pensive mood was always dangerous. "You can't understand," she said, "there is always a hope that somewhere beneath the froth one may find the true deeps."

"But when she finds it," he broke in, "she isn't content. Why a whole ocean of love wouldn't satisfy the siren!"

She looked at him a moment doubtfully. "Are you quite sure you were fair to the siren?"

"Yes, indeed, and, though I'd die for her tomorrow, I wouldn't welcome her to save my life."

"And you aren't bitter?"

"No; only sore."

Again they were silent, watching the spray break on the rocks below. Then she smiled softly.

"If there were more men like you in the world, there would be fewer girls like the siren."

He looked at her gratefully. When men have eyes like the Blighted Being's, they do not have to talk to express their feelings. Lady realized that discretion lay in a prompt change of subject.

"I am going to tell you a fairy story," she announced, "and you shall be the prince."

"On condition I name my own princess," he stipulated. She ignored his remark and, gathering some sticks and leaves, began to fashion a tiny boat, talking as she worked.

"There was once a beautiful prince"—

"Oh, come! Make it true!" he remonstrated.

"Yes," she went on, "a beautiful prince, with eyes so blue and heart so true. He built a great boat of gold and silver, and when it was finished he put in it the dearest wish of his heart. Have you done it?"

She leaned forward and set her tiny craft afloat in the pool which the rocks formed at their feet. The Blighted Being watched her with all the pleasure a connoisseur takes in a cleverly executed picture.

"Yes," he said; "my wish is aboard. What next?"

"Well, then, the prince started it forth on the great seas of the future, where there are terrible rocks and dangerous channels and very little chance for the beautiful wish boat to come in at the harbor of fulfillment."

By this time the Blighted Being had come down beside her, and together they watched the tempest tossed craft.

"Where's the harbor?" he asked.

"Over on that nice sandy beach."

"That's too far. My poor little boat will never get there. The wind is against her."

"Oh, but you must wish harder!"

"I'm wishing with all my heart. But look! She's stuck on a reef; she can't get in alone. Lady"—he was as eager as a boy—"help my wish to come true!"

"No," she said; "it's a fairy wish boat and can't have a pilot."

"But you can guide her from the shore. Please, Lady!" he pleaded, with more warmth than the occasion demanded.

The boat was drifting lazily toward the rocks, where shipwreck was imminent.

"You are the only one that can save her," he said impetuously. "I want it awfully. Will you? Look at me. Will you?"

Her eyes met his in merry defiance; then suddenly she knelt and began softly to blow on the tiny sail. The bark wavered, recovered itself, then sailed serenely into port into the safe little harbor at fulfillment.

Here endeth the second week.

One afternoon a week later the Blighted Being drove the new colt around for inspection. Peanuts, who was the only one on the piazza, threw her book aside and ran down the steps.

"Oh, let me go!" she begged.

"The filly isn't steady enough. I'll take her a turn down the road, then have another horse put in, and we'll go for a nice, long drive."

But she was persistent. "I want to go now."

"You can't go now," he said positively. The colt, dancing with impatience, sprang sideways, and as the cart turned abruptly Peanuts scrambled to the back seat. The Blighted Being jerked the horse up and, turning, looked into the flushed, triumphant face behind him.

"If you were my little girl, I'd shake you!" he said, with mock severity.

"Help me over instead," she demanded as she steadied herself by his shoulder and dropped into the seat beside him. The mare felt the hold on the reins loosen and took advantage of the moment to execute a quick step.

"Hold on!" called the Blighted Being.

"I'm all right," cried Peanuts, "if it just doesn't jolt the pupils of my eyes out."

"Will you get out?" he said sternly when the colt paused for breath.

"No," said she.

They flew along over the country road, leaving a shower of dust and pebbles in their wake. Peanuts, disheveled, but happy, still clung to her perch. Her hairpins had been scattered along the way, and her short brown locks bobbed about her face like a shaggy mane.

"I hope you didn't really mind my coming," she said sweetly, stealing a side glance at her companion.

He laughed. "The colt's all right now, but I confess I was pretty nervous for a minute. What made you do it?"

"Oh, I had to do something," she said. "If there is one concentrated piece of cussedness in the world today it is I. It was a toss up whether I'd worry you or the Lady. I chose you."

"You gave Lady her turn at luncheon," said he.

"Why, when she was telling us about working her violet bed, you said you always thought she worked a man instead of a bed."

"Oh, dear! I don't know what makes me say such horrid things."

"You cut the Lady awfully sometimes. Didn't you see me look at you today?"

"Yes, your eyes pointed the moral, but I was too busy thinking how well they adorned the tale. It was no use, I told you this was a bad day."

"You are a funny little girl!"

"When I'm not a nice little dog."

"A nice litle dog?"

"Yes; that's the way men always treat women. It's 'Here, Fido, let's go for a tramp;' or, 'Here, Fido, come play with me,' and when the play is over it's a kind little pat on the head and 'There, Fido, run away now; you are a dear little doggie, but you are just a little dog after all.'" Peanuts looked defiantly down the road. "I am tired being a little dog, and I'm tired being a little girl. I want to be treated grown up."

"All right, Miss Peanuts! Shall I begin by making pretty speeches to you? Shall I tell you how pretty you look with your hair down and all that color in your cheeks? Why, I never knew until this afternoon that you had a dimple!"

She tried to deny it, but the dimple turned state evidence.

"Honest, now, what do grown ups talk about when they are truly sentimental and not just teasing people?"

He lifted his eyebrows and looked sage. "They say a great many things, Peanuts, that they would like to take back the next day."

"Were you sorry after you told Lady in the yacht last night that whenever she looked at the second star in the dipper she was to think of you?"

"Why, Peanuts, were you listening?"

"No; south wind was blowing. Not that I didn't want to listen! It's the regret of my life that I was so well brought up."

"Never mind," he said. "Just wait until you fall in love."

"Oh, I've been threatened," she said, "but somehow I always escape. Suppose I'll have to marry some day, but I'd lots rather just be engaged. Being engaged is like Christmas eve, being married is like Christmas afternoon. Guess I ought to fall in love! I feel like the one fly that didn't get caught on the fly paper. It's nice to be free, but it's lonesome."

"You like men, don't you?" he asked.

"Some men," she said. "Not men like you."

"No," she continued; "I like men that I don't worry about, that can come or go without my wondering every minute where they are, what they are doing, who they are talking to. I like men that don't make impressions."

"Why, my dear little girl," he began, "do you mean"—

"I don't mean anything," she said, "except that you are driving past the avenue."

The colt, recognizing familiar ground, made a quick turn and dashed for the stables. It was a matter for conjecture whether they would be thrown over the fence or into the lake, when the opportune arrival of the stable boy changed the course of events.

"But you do like me a little, don't you, Peanuts?" asked the Blighted Being softly as he lifted her from the cart.

For answer she gathered a handful of pine needles and held them toward him. "These are to remember me by," she said. "They are sharp and prickly."

"And spicy and sweet," he added, lifting them to his lips as she turned and sped toward the house.

Here endeth the third week.

It was twilight at the cottage. The soft light from the lamps mingling with the fitful flames from the backlog filled the living room with a cozy glow. At the piano the hostess and the Blighted Being played duets.

"Quiet, not lonesome," he corrected, searching for a favorite piece of music. By and by the tender strains of "Constancy" floated out and mingled with the night sighs:

'Tis something, dear, when the world goes ill
To know you are faithful and love me still.
To know when the sunlight has left the skies
That the love light lingers in your dear eyes.

Her voice was contralto, the kind that makes you remember things you ought to forget. The Blighted Being shaded his eyes with his hand and watched her as she sang. There was a little droop at the corner of her mouth, a tender tremolo on the high notes, a longing in every tone that spoke to his soul. As the last note died away she drifted into a serenade, in which he presently joined her.

"Do you know," he said, still playing, "there's nobody in the world who could help me as you have done. Things have changed so for me since I've been here. I can't tell you now; I will some day. You have all been so good to me, and you—you have been a little bunch of comfort from the start."

The music went on, but there was only one bass and one treble. Suddenly there was a discord, and the treble ceased. The hostess rose and looked down at him.

"You'll forgive me for leaving you tonight," she said, with an effort. "It's just a bit of a headache. Good night! I'm glad I've helped you. I want you to be happy again."

He tried to detain her, but she slipped her hands from his and was gone. For several moments he stood where she had left him; then he turned to the smoking table, filled "old faithful" and strode out on the piazza and down the steps. The moon was coming up behind the mountains, and a silver glamour was creeping over woods and lake.

The Blighted Being went to the boathouse and launched the lightest canoe. A few strong strokes brought him well out in the lake; then, shifting his oars, he stretched himself in the bottom of the boat and smiled up at the beauty of the night. Brightest of all the stars seemed the second one in the dipper, and for a long time he watched it, lost in meditation. So engrossed was he that his pipe went out, and in searching for a match his fingers encountered crisp pine needles.

Again he dreamed, and again he saw a merry little face that sparkled from the gloom of floating tresses. Day by day the past month drifted before him until he came to the last night of summer, which was melting into darkness in the sky above him. Involuntarily he repeated to himself:

To know when the sunlight has left the skies
That the love light lingers in your dear eyes.

And how her eyes looked when she sang it—large and luminous and understanding! Again the pipe went out, and, though the Blighted Being went whistling "Constancy," his thoughts were far from the siren.—Town and Country.

Coffee Houses a Failure.

The coffee house is a temperance substitute for the inn in England. It furnishes, minus the intoxicating stimulants, similar social features, but it is tacked on to the same social habits that the inn developed. In this country those habits were not formed by the saloon experience, and the attempt to establish the coffee house as a substitute for the saloon necessarily lacks that social incentive which exists in England. The coffee house here takes on the feature of the restaurant rather than either the German beer garden or the English inn. The Americans have never learned to go to these places for their leisurely intercourse and amusements and hence do not find it when coffee is substituted for beer. They have gone to the theaters or to the clubs for this social outlet.

It is therefore not surprising to the careful student of European and American traditions that the coffee house plan does not work in this country, though it worked well in England. To be successful, social and economic as well as political institutions must largely grow out of the habits, customs and desires of the people. They cannot to any considerable extent be transplanted from one country to another.—Gunton's Magazine.

A Good Catch.

Tom—When I went fishing down at the beach this summer, I landed a twenty pounder.

Dick—Oh, I landed a hundred and thirty pounder there.

Tom—What, a fish?

Dick—No, a girl.—Chicago News.

Belonged Elsewhere.

That it is possible to have too good an appetite seems to be one of the morals of a story told by a friend to the Washington correspondent of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"I am very fond of roasted ears of corn," said he, "and I eat it whenever I can get it. Some time ago, while I was in a restaurant in Texas, the waiter put a plateful on the table, and I just helped myself.

"When I had consumed the third, I noticed that a man across the table was eying me most curiously. I looked at him and told him that I considered roasted corn one of the most nutritious and palatable things a man could eat. Then I helped myself to a fourth ear and devoured it with relish.

"When I reached my hand into the dish for the fifth, the fellow across the table couldn't stand it any longer.

"'Say, pard,' said he, 'don't you think you could save about a dollar and a quarter a day if you was to board at a livery stable?'"

Fortifying a Lighthouse.

A lighthouse at the south cape of Cormosa was built in a part of the island inhabited solely by savages and had, in consequense, to be fortified. The lantern was protected by steel revolving screens, and on the gallery of the tower, which was of cast iron, a machine gun was mounted on racers.

Round the base of the tower was built a wrought iron refuge, or fort, communicating by bullet proof passages with all the rooms in the keepers' dwelling houses.

Both fort and tower were fitted with suitable accommodation for the staff in a case of siege, had water tanks in the basement and were supplied with a stock of provisions.

The station was further protected by a loophole wall and a dry ditch, flanked by two small towers, or caponnieres, armed with eighteen pounder cannon.—Engineering.

Bulgarian Brigands.

The Balkan mountains have been the homes and haunts of many brigands through centuries of Bulgarian history. In the sixteenth century a national movement against the oppression of Turkey fell into the hands of brigand chiefs. They were known by the name of Haidutin. They were represented as friends of the poor, the protectors of the weak, the allies of Christians and the foes of the Mohammedans. In legends and in songs their names and fame were perpetuated. They increased from the ranks of the avengers and the worthless. Once identified with them a brigand's safety consisted in continuing with them. The Turks blocked the way to return to the ranks of common citizenship. Villagers often welcomed them as deliverers from their oppressors.—Leslie's Weekly.

Short of Experience.

Herbert Gladstone while yet a single man was addressing a woman's suffrage meeting in Leeds one afternoon, and he paid a graceful compliment to the eloquence of the ladies who had addressed the meeting. He gallantly remarked on the great pleasure which it gives the other sex to listen to women talking.

Pausing for a moment after this observation, Mr. Gladstone, like his audience, was thrown into an unexpected state of merriment by a male voice which proceeded from the back of the hall and proclaimed in the broadest Yorkshire dialect, "Eh, lad, thou'rt noan wed yet, I see'st!"—London Truth.

London Street Names.

Peerless street, in London, is a corruption of Perilous pool. Golden square was originally Gelding square, and the name was changed at the wish of the inhabitants. Fetter lane has nothing to do with fetters, but only with fewtors (idle fellows), who once loafed in the neighborhood. Gutter lane, in the city, is really Gutheron's lane. Duck's Foot lane, near Cannon street, should be Duke's Foot lane, being so named after the Dukes of Suffolk. Cannon street had nothing to do with guns, but everything with candles, which were made in it when it passed as Candlewick street.

How Parchment Came to Be Used.

When the literary jealousy of the Egyptians caused them to stop the supply of papyrus, the king of Pergamos, a city in Asia Minor, introduced the use of sheepskin in a form called, from the place of its invention, pergamona, whence our word parchment is believed to be derived. Vellum, a finer article, made from calfskin, was also used. Many of the books done on vellum in the middle ages were transcribed by monks, and often it took years to complete a single copy.

No Danger.

Coal Merchant—I say, Premium, I want to insure my coalyard against fire. What's the cost of a policy for £1,000?

Insurance Agent—What coal is it? Same kind you sent me last?

Merchant—Yes, it is.

Agent—Oh, I wouldn't insure it if I were you. It won't burn!—London Answers.

Elevating.

Northern Colored Man—But you ought to be a lawyer or doctor or something high. Isn't there some way in which you can rise above the cornfield?

Southern Colored Man—Yas, sah; dah's many ways. Dah might be a hurricane, or dis mule might lif' me wid his heels.—Philadelphia Record.

Chance For Heroism.

Adorer (anxiously)—What did your father say?

Sweet Girl—Oh, he got so angry I was afraid to stay and listen. He's in a perfectly terrible rage. Go in and appease him.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Panama Representatives Will Appeal to the Senate

DISCRETION TO PRESIDENT

As to Route Will Be Proposed In an Amendment to Be Introduced In Congress—Protocol With Nicaragua Gives United States Full Control

Washington, Jan. 4.—Edward Lampre, the secretary general of the newly organized Panama Canal company, is expected to arrive in Washington on Sunday. This is his third visit to the United States in connection with the canal business, having been closely associated with the Hutin management. It is said that later the new president and vice president and three directors, besides Mr. Lemarquis, the "liquidator" of the company, may call here to strengthen the appeal. Their present plan is not to be represented by attorneys, but to go direct to the committees of congress and tell their story.

Mr. Lampre is familiar with the history of past negotiations. The French people claim that their efforts have been embarrassed by difficulty in reaching the agencies of our government. When Mr. Hutin last saw President Roosevelt he was asked if he had laid his proposals before the committees of congress. Hutin replied that he supposed it would be discourtesy to the president. Between the president, the state department, the isthmian canal commission and the two congressional committees, the Frenchmen have devolved much of their energy to finding somebody to address. Now they will concentrate their appeal on the senate committee, although some efforts may be made in the house to stay the Nicaragua tide.

Mr. Burton of Ohio has already secured permission to speak and he may introduce the amendment giving the president discretion as to route while authorizing the prompt construction of the canal. No expectation exists, however, that such an amendment would prevail in the house. In anticipation that something may come of this proposal, Admiral Walker is remaining in the city to be in readiness to assist the president, should he be empowered to select a route. That would mean the president's resort to the commission, and its views are well known, in case a definite French proposal comes from the guarantee of a clear title.

The French people will take a point on the comparison of Mr. Hepburn's report to two successive congresses. Formerly, he said $140,000,00 would build the Nicaragua canal, and now he says $180,000,000, although the isthmus commission does not say that the commission in its preliminary report suggested the capitalization of such items as difference in cost of operation of the two canals and neglected to recommend this in the second or final report, will be cited by the French representatives is indicative of a purpose on the commission's part to screw down the Panama company to a low figure, by making scant allowance for its property and franchise values.

Some of the main features of the protocol between the United States and Nicaragua referred to in President Zelaya's message to his congress have been made known in recent press dispatches from Managua. But there are many other important features which have not yet been disclosed, one of these being the complete American jurisdiction and the establishment of American courts, civil and criminal, throughout a zone six miles wide and extending from ocean to ocean, and including the proposed termini, Greytown, on the Atlantic and Brito on the Pacific.

The entire policing of this large tract also is placed in the hands of the United States; also that it has the power to preserve order and after that to issue judicial process extending throughout this zone. Besides the authority of American courts and of the American police on the six-mile zone, the chief features of the protocol are in giving a lease in perpetuity of this tract to the United States and at the same time giving an American guarantee that the independence, sovereignty and integrity of Nicaragua shall not be disturbed by the rights thus conferred upon the United States.

No exact information is obtainable as to the price specified in the protocol as payment to Nicaragua for the grant to this country. It is understood that at the outset the view in Nicaragua was that $20,000,000 would be a proper figure for the grant to this country, and about $5,000,000 for Costa Rica's grant.

While there is no information as to the final sum in the protocol, it is known to be far short of the above figures. As the cession takes the form of a perpetual lease, it is probable that the protocol includes the feature of an annual rent as part payment. A protocol with Costa Rica, identical in form with that with Nicaragua, except in the matter of price and territory leased, has been in course of negotiation, and it is understood that a satisfactory conclusion will be reached with that government.

Seal Out of Its Bearings

New York, Jan. 4.—While hauling in a seine off Fort Hamiloth yesterday a fisherman captured and killed a full grown female fur seal. It is said to be the first fur seal ever caught in these waters.

An Interesting Rumor

Paris, Jan. 4.—The Courrier Du Soir publishes another report to the effect that the United States is preparing the way for intervention by the powers in South Africa.

MISS ROOSEVELT'S DEBUT

Grand Ball at White House, Amid a Scene of Floral Splendor

Washington, Jan. 4.—Miss Alice Roosevelt was formally presented to Washington society last night at a ball given in her honor at the White House. About 500 guests were present. Miss Roosevelt is the first White House debutante since 1873, when Miss Nellie Grant, daughter of President and Mrs. Grant, was presented to society at a ball which was the gayest social event of the decade.

Last night's entertainment was given a personal, rather than an official character, by Mrs. Roosevelt. There was no cotillion and consequently there were no favors.

When the ball opened the interior of the White House was most attractive. Never before have the floral decorations been more beautiful. The massive mirrors, chandeliers, columns and ceiling of the east room, where the dancing occurred, were festooned and garlanded with smilax, maiden hair fern and asparagus, trimmed with boquets of carnations. More than a mile of green festooning was used in this way. The window recesses were filled with palms, rising out of banks of varigated foliage. The mantels were banked with roses and azalias. English holly was used in profusion in the decorations. The red, green and blue parlors also were adorned on the same lavish scale.

When the guests arrived at the White House, they were conducted to the blue parlor, where the presentations were made. Miss Roosevelt presented a charming appearance in a dress of white chiffon, with white roses, and wearing jewels, which her father gave her at Christmas. Mrs. Roosevelt wore pure white, with white lace and trimmed with lilac orchids. Miss Roosevelt was the recipient of many floral pieces of beautiful design. The president enjoyed the occasion heartily and mingled freely among the young folks.

The dancing, which began shortly after 10 o'clock and included a program of 20 numbers, was held in the large east room, and kept the company until after midnight. The Marine band and the Artillery Corps band from Washington barracks alternated in furnishing the music.

Decline of Lobster Fishery

Washington, Jan. 4.—An increase of over 9,000,000 in the fisheries eggs distributed by the government and a marked decline in lobster fishing are shown in the annual report of the United States commissioner of fisheries. It becomes each year more difficult to secure lobster eggs along the coast of New England. The continued steady decline of this important industry renders it the more important that efforts should be made to re-establish it by artificial propagation. During the year there were hatched and planted in New England waters 202,870,000 cod, 44,000,000 flatfish and 60,000,000 lobsters.

Two Chiltons Leave Office

Washington, Jan. 4.—Robert C. Chilton, Jr., chief of the consular bureau of the department of state, has resigned that office voluntarily, to engage in private business. He has been for 25 years connected with the state department. Mr. Chilton's father, Robert S. Chilton, United States consul at Goderich, Canada, resigned on Jan. 1. He was probably the consular officer of longest service connected with the department, having been appointed to a clerkship in the state department 50 years ago.

A Missing Schooner

Newburyport, Mass., Jan. 4.—Grave fears are entertained as to the fate of the two-masted schooner F. A. Smith, which cleared from this port for Boston with a cargo of sand. It is believed that she encountered the full force of the fierce gale of Tuesday night, and probably foundered. The Smith carried a crew of four men.

Dog's Bite Cost $5400

Toledo, Jan. 4.—The circuit court yesterday handed down a decision affirming the decision of the lower courts giving Mrs. Adelaide Smith of Fremont a judgment of $5400 against the estate of the late President R. B. Hayes. Mrs. Smith was bitten by a dog belonging to the late president and this was the cause for action.

No Bill Against Mrs Dale

New York, Jan. 4.—The grand jury of Hudson county, N. J., has failed to find a bill against Mrs. Emeline Dale, who was charged with the murder of her 5-year-old daughter. The effort to connect Mrs. Dale with the crime failed before the coroner's jury.

UNIQUE IN JOURNALISM.

CONCERNING GERMAN WAR SCARE

Unqualified Disclaimer of Views Contained In One of Its Special Dispatches From Washington—No Attempt Made to Extenuate the Seriousness of Its Misstatements.

The New York Times published on Sunday, Dec. 29, a special dispatch from Washington in which was strongly suggested the imminence of war with Germany over the Monroe doctrine in its special applicability to the situation in Venezuela. The correspondent responsible for the dispatch stated with a positiveness calculated to carry conviction that the United States government fully appreciated the situation and was both "alert and prepared."

A day later the New York Journal criticised The Times' dispatch, and the New York Evening Post also took exception to the suggestion contained in the "information" from Washington. Then followed on the part of The Times an example of candor and frank though dignified self abasement probably unparalleled in American journalism. There was no effort to set itself partially right by demonstrating that some contemporary was even more wrong. The fault or mistake was fully acknowledged, and there was no advancing even of mitigating circumstances.

The publication in The Times on Sunday of a foolish and unwarrantable dispatch concerning the possibility of trouble between the United States and Germany over the attempt of the Germans to collect with warships money owing them by Venezuela has called forth the following comment from our neighbor the New York Journal:

On the first page of the New York Times yesterday appeared a Washington dispatch headed, "Possibility of a War With the German Empire." The alleged possibility rested on the disturbances in Venezuela. It was asserted that our government had the chances of a clash with Germany constantly in mind and was preparing for it.

Sensational journalism may be either good or bad. It appears to us that this is distinctly sensational journalism of the bad kind. The statement that we are contemplating the possibility of a war with Germany can be productive of nothing but mischief. Of course it is well to make all European powers understand that none of them can acquire territory in America without fighting the United States. A thorough understanding of this general principle must promote peace, but there is no excuse for singling out Germany, as if the Monroe doctrine were invented expressly for her.

These observations are judicious and sensible. The censure which they convey is fully deserved by The Times. It is not the policy or the practice of The Times to give place to baseless and mischievous reports, to which category the Washington dispatch in question clearly belongs. The conductors of The Times endeavor faithfully to use due diligence to exclude false news and noxious trash from its columns. By one of those accidents or oversights which sometimes baffle the intentions of finite men this Washington dispatch about Germany got into the columns of The Times. For the harm it has done we feel more regret than we can express. As our neighbor The Evening Post justly says: "It is not creditable to a respectable newspaper that it should publish a dispatch from Washington, as The Times did yesterday, representing that there is danger of war between Germany and the United States over the complications in Venezuela. There is an utter lack of evidence to support such a sensation." The Times does not willingly or with intent do things not creditable to it or likely to impair its reputation or diminish the confidence of its readers in the correctness of its news and the conservatism of its principles.

We accordingly declare that it is within the knowledge of this newspaper that the relations between Germany and the United States are wholly amicable and that the belief in their continuance is based upon reasons of unusual validity. The procedures of Germany in her preparations to compel Venezuela to keep faith expose her neither to reproach nor to suspicion on our part. They have not been taken in disregard of precedent or of the accepted principles of international law. Not only has she done nothing in contravention of the Monroe doctrine, but it may be said that her courteous and friendly communications to our government advance that doctrine one step further toward universal acceptance as a part of the unquestioned law of nations. We have no reason to regard Germany save as a good friend, and The Times wishes to make its disclaimer of the unfortunate Washington dispatch to which we have referred as broad and unreserved as language can make it.

Lipton's Heart Set on America's Cup.

J. Frederick Tams, a yachtbroker, who has been in Holland, Belgium and England since Oct. 30, arrived at New York on the St. Paul recently. He said he had a half hour's conversation with Sir Thomas Lipton in London. "Sir Thomas told me," said Mr. Tams, "that he would challenge for the cup until he either won it or was convinced that it could not be won. I certainly think Sir Thomas is sincerely in earnest and that his desire to win the cup comes from sporting motives only. I wanted to get him to talk about something else, but his heart is set on that cup."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

On the first Sabbath of the new year it is appropriate to study, first, things in our lives. Life is made up of many elements. All are important. No element of life is to be lightly esteemed. The most insignificant phase of life may be tremendously important to us. But some elements of life are more important than others. Some are to be placed first, with others second. That it is important to know the things which should come first in life is apparent to all. Ignorance on this subject might lead us to give undue emphasis to that which is of least importance at the expense of that which is most important. Many are placing the secondary things of life first and as a result are wasting or ruining their lives. Esau ruined his life by failing to appreciate what should have been of first importance in his life, and many modern Esaus are following in his footsteps.

The topical references suggest several things that should come first in our lives.

1. The kingdom of God should come first. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Life presents two kingdoms before us—the kingdoms of the world and of God. Which shall be sought first? Many seek first the kingdom of the world, expecting to enter the kingdom of God when success in the world has been achieved. But this is not Christ's idea of the relative importance of these kingdoms. He says to His disciples, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God." But what about the things of the world? The man who seeks first the kingdom of God may leave these things to God. God controls the kingdom of this world as well as His own kingdom, and to those who are truly His children He will give all of this world that is needful and consistent with His eternal good.

2. Thanksgiving and prayer should come first. The first thing that Abraham did when God promised him the land of Canaan was to erect an altar in His name. His first act after he had pitched his tent between Bethel and Hai was to "build an altar unto the Lord and call upon the name of the Lord." Abraham's altars signified thanksgiving and prayer. For the new blessings that come into our lives with each new day we should erect altars of thanksgiving and prayer to our Lord.

3. Service to Christ should come first. "Jesus said unto him, Follow me, and let the dead bury their dead." In no better way could Christ have enforced the principle that service to Him should come first in our lives. No duty is more sacred than the duty we owe to our dead, and yet Christ here declares that even this duty is second to that which we owe to Him. "Follow me, and let the dead bury their dead." Thus is the supreme claim of Christ upon our lives enforced. If it stands above our most sacred duty, it stands necessarily first above all other duties. Christ first should be the motto of our lives.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. xxxv, 1-7; I Sam. i, 9-11; Ps. cv, 1-5; cxxxvii, 5, 6; Prov. iii, 13-18; Eccl. xii, 1, 13, 14; Mark ii, 14; John ix, 4; I Cor. xii, 31; II Cor. viii, 5.

Prayer.

O thou Divine Life, in whose greatness the smallness and the fragmentariness of our imperfect lives may be taken up and blessed and forgiven and made more nearly complete, Thou whose gentleness should make us great, we would be thankful for the beautiful promises that are always calling us to better and nobler lives! May all that is dull and unreceptive of good in us be quickened and aroused to high devotion and holy will, that we may forever escape the dread coercion of evil deeds, the fatal unraveling of conscience, the days of feeble resolve, when the will would, but cannot, because it would not when it could! And may the thought that what we have sown that shall we also reap abide in our minds, with all its fear and all its solemn joy! Amen!—George R. Freeman.

The Church and the World.

The power of religion should leaven the world and not be leavened by it. Of course there must be interpenetration between the two, and I am not one of those who think that the church has nothing to learn from the world. Life is a big school, and it is part of God's plan to teach by means of the stimulus, pressure, temptation and difficulties of the world. But we hold that we are stronger than the world, that Christ has overcome the world, and our faith is similarly to overcome. The name we give to the spiritual life is holiness, but the positive side of holiness is an abounding spiritual vitality that takes hold of all that is best in life and is itself more sober, sane and attractive than anything the world can show.—Dr. W. T. Davison.

Burden Bearing.

Yestere'en the secret of loving
Came over me, strange and sweet,
As I sought with unuttered yearning
To clasp the dear Saviour's feet,
And this was the revelation,
If only 'twere understood—
It is ours to make men happy,
The Master's to make them good.

The heart that is full of trouble
A front of rebellion wears
The more that alone it suffers,
That nobody heeds or cares,
And there never was speech or sermon,
There never was "ought" or "should,"
Which goaded a wearied spirit
To seek and obtain the good.

But sympathy, sweet compassion,
Love's accents, tender and mild,
Sink anger and strife and sinning
To the peace of the little child.
It's bearing another's burden,
If only 'twere understood,
Gives that other the strength for climbing
To the high and holy and good.

Good Afternoon.

When one reads in the papers that a married couple have not spoken to each other for thirty years, he wonders after all if divorce in some cases is not the best thing.

The tenth home study lesson in Literature in this issue is devoted to Edgar Allan Poe, and two of the most interesting are to follow: Next week, John Geenleaf Whittier, and the following week, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, both illustrated.

Although pies seldom appear on the menu for a first class banquet, it is impossible for caterers to down the popularity of pies in New England. Now it is said that if the Secretary of the Treasury eats pie three times a day, perhaps he will convert Washington, and exalt the pie to its proper place.

The address in full of Mayor Bryant will appear in the Daily Ledger of Monday, together with the organization of the new City Council. Much interest is already manifested in the forthcoming inaugural address which many expect will be strenuous, but as the city has nearly reached its debt limit, it may not be easy to provide the wherewithal for expensive improvements. All desire a progressive government, which will provide for the great increase in population which is sure to occur the next few years, but there is a limit for improvement which should not be exceeded.

It is possible that Mayor Byant will make some of his appointments of department officials on Monday, but it has not been customary in the past on Inauguration day. No changes are probable in Commissioner of Public Works, City Clerk or Chief Engineer of Fire department, and many of the other officers, but without doubt there will be a new City Solicitor, a new Tax Collectors and possibly City Treasurer, Chief of Police and Overseer of the Poor, and a general shake-up of the administrative boards.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Acceptable as Gov. Shaw is in himself, the great assurance to the country from his appointment is that the soft money craze is dead. The old doubt about the west is a thing of the past. The affairs of the treasury department are as safe in western as in eastern hands. The gold standard is truly the national policy now.—Washington Evening Star.

☞ It is good policy to compel cities and towns to depend upon their own resources in the management of their local affairs; instead of encouraging them to come to the legislatture for relief when no real necessity therefor exists. They should be let alone to work out their own problems, excepting in the extreme cases where it is necessary to invoke the paramount authority of the legislature to legalize important measures vitally affecting their interest.—Gov. Crane in his Inaugural Address.

☞ There is no warrant for Col. Partridge's statement that certain laws are meant to be enforced only at the discretion of officials. There is no authority in this country higher than the written law and no law gives any such discretion as Col. Partridge claims. If such discretion is exercised regardless of law, the result is anarchy. The people might trust J. N. Partridge to enforce laws according to his own views, but could he trust all his subordinates and assistants? Such discretion usually leads to favoritism and blackmail. New York would soon have the old Tammany system back again. It is dangerous business for a public official to undertake to decide what laws shall be enforced and which shall be dead letters.—Buffalo Express.

☞ It will be a long day before the United States enjoys penny postage. Our country has now the cheapest, most extensive and most efficient postal system in the world. England, it is true, has penny postage, but the area of the British Isles is less than that of Illinois and Wisconsin. For 2 cents the United States government carries a letter from Portland, Maine to Portland Oregon. So far as the railway fast mail is concerned there is nothing in England or the continent of Europe to be compared to it. The railway postal car, which is in reality moving postoffice going at the rate of forty miles an hour, is a development of the United States postal service. Europe does not know what a fast mail service is.—Lowell News.

☞ The suggestion of Gov. Crane that the per diem fee as compensation for service to the state should be abolished, is in the right direction. We have in mind a member of the State Commission some years ago, of whom it used to be said that when he wanted $5 he would put in a day and charge it to the Commonwealth. And there was some foundation for the charge. The fee system is pernicious in all departments, and should not be allowed to continue. If the services of a Commissioner are worth anything to the State they should be paid for at a fixed rate. This gives the State what it pays for and at the same time enables the Commissioner to retain his self-respect, something that is not always easy when conscientious men are put in comparison with those whose ethical standards are not lofty. The fee system in county, state and national finances ought to be abolished, so far as it is made a means of compensation for officials.—Lynn Item.

The Quincy Patriot.

With this week we commence the sixty-sixth volume of the Quincy Patriot. There are probably very few living who remember the printing of the first number; yet there are a number of families who have had its welcome visit each week since its first appearance on Jan. 1, 1837. Although the editor of the Patriot has been connected with it for over forty-eight years, still he was too young to remember its first issue.

We wish all its readers and patrons a Happy New Year. May the great prosperity which has been with our city and its people continue. The past year certainly in many respects has been one of the most prosperous for a decade. It is partly due to the immense ship building plant located in this town; but largely, no doubt, to the general prosperity of the whole country.

Our city has grown to that size that our merchants can find customers for first class goods, and our citizens are not obliged to go to Boston or New York to make their purchases. In fact citizens from the adjoining towns find it to their advantage to come to Quincy for their wants. This surely is one sign of prosperity which naturally will grow stronger and better as the years roll by. Quincy we predict has a great future before it and it lays largely with our merchants and business men to say how rapidly we shall move forward.

Norfolk Registry.

There were recorded at the Norfolk registry at Dedham during last year 13,012 over 40 per day on an average. The total in 1900 was 13,045 or 33 more. May and April were the most active months, while September, February, December and August were the lightest. By months the number of papers filed were: January, 1151; February, 841; March, 1032; April, 1227; May, 1329; June, 1158; July, 1180; August, 994; September, 838; October, 1151; November, 1149; and December, 962. The number of attachments recorded was 526.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumoma. Sold by all druggists.

ALL WILL RECOVER.

Small Pox Cases Not Expected to be Fatal.

There are no new developments in the small pox cases. The patients at LaBonte's house are doing well, although the young lady at this house is quite sick. The physicians, however, say that they will probably all recover.

The little daughter of Mr. Murray, as has been stated, has the disease in a light form. It was announced yesterday that the little girl would be removed to the small pox hospital near the poor farm. This morning however, the Board of Health announced that owing to the age of the child it had been decided not to remove her to the pest house but to provide more pleasant and homelike quarters elsewhere.

Tax Collections.

The forthcoming report of Tax Collector Baker will show that the city of Quincy is collecting about 99 per cent of its tax levies. The collections on the tax of 1901 to Jan. 1 was $229,015.40, against $216,680.88 on tax of 1900 a year ago.

But it is upon taxes in arrears that Collector Baker has done the best work, as will be seen below:

Tax of 1897, Bal. Jan 1, 1901,	$3,585 35
Collected during year 1901,	113 96

Question of Identification.

A hearing was held before Judge Avery at the District court this morning upon the case of George F. Osgood, who it is alleged gave a forged check to Miss Freeman. The whole question of the case hinged upon the identity of the man who gave Miss Freeman the check. Miss Freeman positively identified Osgood as the man who gave her the check. One of her points of identification was that the man had no mustache and wore glasses and had a bald head.

Osgood has a bald head and he also has a heavy mustache, but does not wear glasses. In the defense a picture of the defendent was shown which it was claimed was taken at Nantasket beach on Labor Day which was a few days after the check was given Miss Freeman. In the picture the defendent had a mustache which it would have been impossible to grow in that time.

The case was then continued until next Monday to enable the defendent to produce witnesses who would testify that the picture was taken on Labor Day.

A La Quincy Style.

Republican members-elect of the Lynn Board of Aldermen of 1902 held a caucus in the City Hall the first of the week. After nine ballots for the choice of a presiding officer of the next year's board, without a decision, the selection was made by drawing a slip of paper from a hat. Henry W. Eastham was thus chosen, and the choice was ratified by a formal unanimous vote. In the balloting Mr. Eastham and Mr. Ingram each had five votes. The only Democrat in the board, although invited, would not join the caucus, but stated that he would make the election unanimous.

Eightieth Birthday.

There are few women more active for their age than is Mrs. Bridget Larkin, who celebrated her eightieth birthday on New Year's day, by entertaining her children and grandchildren at her home on South Walnut street. Mrs. Larkin, who is the widow of Thomas Larkin, was born in Ireland, but has lived in Quincy for 51 years. She retains all of her faculties and remembers many of the important events of years ago. Of her children six are now living: Mrs. Joseph Dasha, Mrs. Michael F. O'Brien, Mrs. Peter Moran, Miss Bridget Larkin, Patrick F. Larkin, and John T. Larkin. She received many presents and the day was made a memorable one.

It was Dr. Record, the chairman of the sub-committee of the Wollaston school and not Dr. Hallowell who ordered the Wollaston school closed on Thursday. Dr. Hallowell was in consultation however.

There were a large number of skaters on the Merrymount rink last night who did not seem to mind the cold. There are one or two dangerous places which should be marked as on a dark night someone is likely to get in.

District Court Business.

Probation Officer Francis A. Spear reports the number of criminal cases before the district court in December to have been 75. Better Car Service.

The selectmen of Hyde Park have demanded of the street railway company; 1—New and modern cars. 2—fifteen minute time all day both to Dedham and Milton Lower Mills. 3—A waiting room for patrons at Lower Mills. The Gazette says: "Our citizens will not be satisfied unless every one of the above three propositions made to the company are faithfully carried out, and at once."

Uniting on Carpets.

Recently there was noted in these columns the prevalence of a rumor that the entire carpet business of Boston—of wide extent and importance—is soon to be gathered into the hands of one corporation.

We now hear the plan spoken of with even more certainty than hitherto, and it seemes likely to prove an accomplished fact.

The story—not yet fully confirmed, however—connects the old-established Pray firm with the control of the new enterprise.

Perhaps It's Worms

The worried mother often wonders what ails a child who is cross and languid. She generally treats it for everything but the most probable cause—worms. Over 75 per cent. of the ailments of children can be traced directly or indirectly to worms. You can see the result in the languid looks, irritable disposition, restless sleep, variable appetite. What the child needs is

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

City Clerk's Office, Dec. 24, 1901.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by his office to have the record correct, experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1901, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1902.

A SCHOOL BANK.

The Philergians, a local women's club, have established a Stamp Savings Bank System in the Monatiquot grammar school at Braintree. The Observer says today: Mrs. C.E. Freeman, a member of the club, is appointed cashier. She is at the school every Friday and at the close of school all pupils who wish to make a deposit of their savings, meet her in the superintendent's office and deposit their money with her and receive credit for it. Mrs. Freeman brings with her a large supply of gummed stamps of convenient denominations, and the stamps given to the pupils indicate the amount of money deposited with the cashier.

These stamps are pasted into a card booklet which the pupil keeps in his possession as a record of the amount of his deposit. Any pupil may receive his money back at any time by giving a week's notice. When a pupil has saved five dollars he is encouraged to deposit it in a savings bank.

The system was started in the school only a few weeks ago and already many of the pupils have saved their pennies and started an account with Mrs. Freeman. Mrs. T. R. Newhall the president of the Philergians, has been helping Mrs. Freeman to start the system.

The Philergians bear the whole expense of running the system, even paying for the stamps and stamp booklets. Every cent that a pupil pays to the cashier, he will recive back again or will depositit it in a savings bank in his own name to be used for a worthy purpose later.

This system of saving will do much to lead our boys and girls into the habit of saving money that is ordinarily spent for purposes that are often worse than useless. It will teach them to make a wise use of the money saved. With it they will buy shoes, rubbers, other necessary articles of clothing, Christmas presents, etc.; while a few will resolve upon more permanent and distant aims, like the buying of a watch or piano. There can be no better way in which to teach lessons of thrift.

The following is quoted from a recent edition of a paper in Springfield, Mass., where this stamp saving system has been in operation about six years:

The knowledge to be got from books is not the only knowlege worth having, and children in our public schools should have something else to show after their school attendance is finished. There are many little things they should learn, and many more they should learn to forget. Not least among the lessons which should be learned by every child in school is that of thrift, the ability to save money.

There is no danger of making misers out of children; but if a child learns between the age of six and twelve, to save his or her pennies, the chances are that life will be very much easier for the child when he or she grows up. Few people contract saving habits which last when they grow up. The tendencies are all in the other direction. Such was the idea of the Union relief association in establishing here the stamp savings bank system, and in introducing it into the schools.

It has now been in operation some half dozen years, and its entire success is testified to by its increasing scope and the added interest taken in it by the children. All the natural tendencies are for a child to spend his or her pennies. To save them occurs to very few, because in most cases no particular object is held out to them.

The necessary impetus is given by the stamps. The children can see something definite, they know where they have put their money. They are buying something and at the same time they are keeping their money.

One of the first schools to adopt the stamp savings was Hooker school, and this school has held the record for the largest amount of stamps sold to the pupils. During the entire time in which the system has been in operation the pupils of Hooker school have, altogether, bought stamps aggregating $5467.36. This, of course, does not include stamps bought since Sept. 1 of this year. A large share of this money has been deposited in the savings banks; and without the stamp system most, if not all of it, would have gone for candy, chewing gum, shows or such things.

Last year Hooker school pupils saved $757.84, but this was not such a successful year as the previous one, in which they bought stamps amounting to $1235, of which $1120.42 was eventually deposited in the savings bank. The pupils take justifiable pride in their record, and hope to lead again this year; but the school year is still young, and it is said that Elm street school (Mr. Riley, recently of Braintree, Principal) is pressing them very hard.

A girl in Grade 5, of the Hooker school began last June to save money to buy a piano. During June she saved $1.20, and this fall she has saved $4 more. She works in a store for an hour or so after school every day and thus earns $1 a week, which she says she is going to save towards the buying of her piano. It is a slow process, but it is mighty sure. And it is safe to say that when she finally gets her piano she will take considerable more pleasure in it than if it had come more easily. If she sticks to her intention and eventually accomplishes its fulfillment, she will have learned a lesson worth many times the price of the piano.

Against Tinkering.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Gov. Crane voiced the sentiment of every thoughtful citizen in the commonwealth when in his inaugural address he discouraged what he so aptly calls "experiments in new legislation." The lamented Gov. Wolcott, also a few years ago, gave a black eye to "excessive law making."

In the palmy days of the common-law the average citizens could, by subjecting facts to the test of reason, determine whether or not he was acting in accordance with law. So true was this that a noted commentator declared that law was simply the soul of reason. Then those who posseseed well developed intellects and had acquired the "judicial mind" from close thought and study were placed on the bench; and to their interpretation of law the people were content to appeal when they themselves failed to understand it in the same way.

So uniform were the "Opinions" that Sir William Blackstone was able to put all the laws of England, as they existed a little over a hundred years ago, into much smaller space than the "Revised laws of Massachusetts." The criticism that the common law was extremely technical was true, but how could it be a sytem luminous with justice and equity if it did not abound in refinements. No more elastic system of justice was ever devised by man. "For every wrong there is a remedy" ran the old maxim, and it was eternally true. The principles of the English Common law could by a learned judiciary be adapted and applied to all the changing conditions of society and the exigencies of life. The doctrine of stare decisis existed only on paper No justice of any learning ever felt bound by it.

This country received a splendid heritage from England in the Common law and would have done well to abide under the shadow of its wing. But in their prejudice against the judicial wig and robes that distinguished the English judges, our people went too far the other way. They wanted authority for every act done in a ccourt of justice to be found right here in the United States. The motive was good but the judgment questionable.

Statute making began in every State. Principles of law as old as human reason itself were not considered secure unless propped up by legislative enactment, and before long some of the states, New York for instance, had so many statutes on hand that a code was found necessary. It is a noted fact that there is no other jurisdicion in the English speaking world where a litigant's rights are so hard to ascertain before judicial inquiry as in the leading code states, New York and California. It is also worthy of note that in no states are there so few miscarriages of justice as in Maine and Massachusetts which are still known as "Common law States."

But the green grocer is at work in the old Bay State. On being sent to Beacon Hill he feels that he must keep himself in the eye of his constituents, and how can he do this better than by displacing some monument of common law or lapping the edges off some well known statute. It shows that he is "interested," you know, or, in other words, that he is a "Solon."

The work of demolishing and constructing is so persistently going on that an attorney-at-law would hardly feel safe in advising his client that there was a law prohibiting larceny without first consulting the most recent acts and resolves, and making sure that Mr. Grocer or his colleague Mr. Bookagent hasn't secured the repeal or amendment of the law on the subject. Can we not have left us at least a souvenir of that admirable system of jurisprudence adorned by the pens of Blackstone and our own Chancellor Kent? Common Law.

Equivocal Answers.

A tourist once asked a farmer how he could tell the difference between a mushroom and a toadstool. "I don't just know" said the man with the chin whiskers and blue jeans, "but if you're alive the next morning, you'll know they are mushrooms."

"With so many makers claiming the best piano, how is one to know which is really the best to buy?" asked a perplexed wife of her husband. "Search me," said the lord of creation. "That's Frank A. Locke's business—not mine."

Bagpipes Not in Favor.

Editor of the Ledger:

I have just read an article in your issue of today signed by one "Gillie Callum," regarding the play of Rob Roy as given by Clan McGregor on New Year's Eve, and in reply would say that the large audience present were thoroughly satisfied with the play and its surroundings even though accompanied by an "American orchestra" instead of the "shrieking" bagpipes. The old saying of "distance lends enchantment" is certainly applicable to bagpipes for of all distressing music (?) none is more so than the bagpipes when played in a hall. In the open air, they are more tolerable.

The opinion of the writer is that "Gillie" must he looking for a job for either himself or a friend and in conclusion I will say that in arranging future entertainments for Clan McGregor the writer will do all he can to prevent the playing of bagpipes in a hall as a feature. Voicing the sentiments of several who read tonight's article, I should say that "Gillie" had better "go way back and set down" with his bag piper. Thanking you for space for the above article. I am,

Yours truly

COLLIDED IN DARKNESS

Disaster Overtakes Steamship on the Pacific Coast

WRECK OF WALLA WALLA

Went Down In Thirty-Five Minutes After Being Struck by Unknown Vessel—Loss of Life Placed at Twenty-Seven, but May Be Greater

San Francisco, Jan. 4.—The collision at sea between the steamship Walla Walla and an unknown sailing vessel resulted in the sinking of the steamship and the probable loss of at least 27 lives.

The Walla Walla, owned by the Pacific Coast Steamship company, sailed from San Francisco Jan. 1 for Puget Sound ports. She carried 36 first-class passengers, 28 second-class and a crew of 80 men. When off Cape Mendocino at 4:10 o'clock Thursday morning, an iron bark, believed to be French, loomed up in the haze and crashed into the Walla Walla's bow. Then the sailing vessel slid off into the darkness and was seen no more.

All the passengers and crew of the Walla Walla, except the few on watch, were asleep, but were aroused by the crash. The steerage quarters were in the bow and it is believed that some of the steerage passengers and crew were crushed to death. A big hole was made in the steamer's bow and she sank in 35 minutes. The officers and crew maintained strict discipline and boats and life rafts were lowered. All who were not killed in the collision got off except Captain Hall, who went down with the ship. He was picked up later by one of the boats, uninjured, with the exception of a few bruises.

A choppy sea was running and the small boats could not make a landing on the shore, a few miles distant. They drifted about all day and finally 65 people were picked up by the steamer Dispatch, which took them to Eureka. Another boat, under command of Engineer Brown, and containing 13 persons, attempted to land at Trinidad and was swamped and six men were drowned.

When the Dispatch reached Eureka yesterday with the survivors, tugs were immediately sent out. The tug Ranger picked up one boat containing 11 passengers and three of the crew.

The Walla Walla was valued at $250,000. She was formerly used as a collier and about 10 years ago was converted into a passenger vessel at a cost of $175,000. The vessel was insured for about $200,000.

Captain A. L. Hall, master of the wrecked steamship, gives a graphic account of the disaster. He says:

"We left San Francisco Wednesday, being bound for Victoria and Puget sound. The weather thickened as the night advanced and Thursday morning a heavy fog, accompanied by light rain, set in. About 4:10 a. m. I was suddenly awakened by an awful crash on the port side. The housing was badly shattered. After the crash, the vessel, which I think was a French bark, rebounded and groped alongside. I called to her to stand by. She drifted away and was lost to view. I could not tell how badly she was injured, but I do not imagine she was severely hurt, as she struck us bow on.

"Those of the passengers who had not been awakened by the crash were aroused at once. The vessel began to fill immediately and she sank in 35 minutes. There was no confusion on board. The officers and crew kept the passengers from becoming panic-stricken. The crew was immediately ordered to man the lifeboats. I gave orders to have the port boilers blown out, it being necessary to give the vessel a list to keep the gaping hole in her side out of water. In a few moments all the lifeboats and rafts were out, with the exception of two, which were smashed. One of these boats contained nine or 10 passengers. All were thrown into the water, but managed to board the life raft, which had been launched a few minutes previously. The second boat was smashed by striking a heavy object in the water, but all of the passengers were rescued by another life raft.

"We had about 65 first-class and second-class passengers on board and 160 souls all told. We had no knowledge of the approach of the vessel striking us, the weather being so thick she was not seen until we had been struck. I went down with the ship, but the social hall deck broke off and I floated to the surface with it. Sighting a life raft I succeeding in reaching it. We floated about nearly all day and early in the evening were picked up by the steamer Dispatch.

"From the information I have concerning the rescue of the passengers and crew, I am not able to state how large the death list will be, but in my opinion, it will not be less than 20 and possibly may reach 40 or 50. A number were injured by the falling timbers. It is almost certain a number of the steerage passengers perished in this manner. The housing of the forward part was split into matchwood.

"Among the survivors the seriously injured are few, and while it may be possible some were shockingly mangled, few cuts and bruises came under my observance, and these, for the most part, were received by the occupants of the life rafts. While not very rough, the sea was nasty and choppy, and the continual wash over the rafts was a hardship, especially to the ladies, many of whom were nearly in the last stages of exhaustion when picked up by the Dispatch."

DEADLY GAS FUMES

Caused the Death of an Aged Haverhill Man and His Wife

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 4.—John G. Goodwin and his wife, each aged about 80, were found dead in a room of their house at 24 Nichols street yesterday, death being due to accidental asphyxiation. An occpant of the tenement below noticed a strong odor of gas and upon investigation found that it came from the apartments occupied by the Goodwins. She notified a policeman, who found the couple apparently dead. Physicians worked over the bodies for a long time, but were unable to restore them to life. Mr. Goodwin lay upon the floor and his wife upon a sofa nearby, while a pet dog was stretched out on the floor beside the body of his master.

A pipe leading to a gas stove, which was used during the summer, was found to be wide open, and gas was pouring from this opening in great volumes. No theory of suicide has been advanced, although Mr. Goodwin was slightly demented. Medical Examiner Croston gave his decision that it was a case of accidental death.

To Enforce Prohibitory Law

Nashau, N. H., Jan. 4.—The saloons and hotels were ordered to close "for good and in earnest" by City Marshal Eaton yesterday and the drug stores were told that they must not sell liquor to anyone except on a doctor's prescription.

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 4.—The order of the court, directing that Chief of Police Healy enforce the prohibitory law, was placed in the hands of the chief yesterday. It is understood that he will notify all holders of a license from the government to close their places at once.

Debauch and Perhaps Murder

Boston, Jan. 4.—Lying in a pool of blood, with her year-old baby clasped tightly in her arms, Mrs. Kate M. O'Reilley was found at her home last night. She was taken to the city hospital and no hope is expressed for her recovery. Locked up on suspicion of being responsible for her condition is the woman's brother, James Loomey, accused, it is said, by the victim herself. It is said that the pair had been drinking and that the affair was the outcome of a debauch.

Died a Rear Admiral

Boston, Jan. 4.—Information from Washington shows that Captain Richard F. Leary, U. S. N., who died at Chelsea a few days ago, died a rear admiral, without being conscious of the fact. It was a promotion that he had looked for, and it is said to be the one thing that he worried over during his last moments. The delay in making the official announcement is said to have been due to the methods of procedure in the department at Washington.

Overcome by Coal Gas

Barre, Vt., Jan. 4.—Mr. and Mrs. Ora Fredware and three children were found yesterday nearly suffocated from coal gas that had escaped from a furnace on the floor below their sleeping room. All were unconscious when discovered by people who had become alarmed at not seeing the Fredwares around as usual. Mrs. Fredware is hardly expected to live, but Mr. Fredware and the children are pronounced out of danger.

Alleged Swindler of Advertisers

Boston, Jan. 4.—Harry Bell, 38 years old, an advertising solicitor, well known throughout New England, was arrested yesterday, accused of defrauding advertisers. The arrest was made on three complaints, but it is alleged that there are three score or more charges which will be brought against him. He was arraigned before Judge Brown and held in $500 for action of the grand jury.

To Accept Boston Pastorate

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 4.—An ecclesiastical council yesterday dismissed Rev. William A. Knight, pastor of the Central Congregational church, that he may become pastor of Berkeley Temple in Boston. The council concurred with the church body in accepting the resignation, to take effect Jan. 12. Resolutions complimentary to Mr. Knight's work in this city were adopted.

Tradesmen Are Creditors

Boston, Jan. 4.—Edwin D. Ruggles, claiming a residence in this city, filed a petition in bankruptcy here yesterday. Ruggles lived in Orange, N. J., until recently, but came to Boston to live a few months ago. The liabilities stated in his petition amount to $69,526, while the assets are given as nil. The items mostly shown indicate dinners, wine, tailor and hotel bills.

Prepared For Final Struggle

Boston, Jan. 4.—With only a 10-hour stretch before them to wind up the six-day bicycle race, the nine teams appear in good shape for the final struggle. The last team, Mullen and Jaak, scored an even 1000 miles yesterday, while the leaders are seven laps ahead. The men have been riding 50 hours and their average is just a trifle over 20 miles an hour.

Bad Railroad Wreck

Plymouth, N. H., Jan. 4.—As the result of a collision between a northbound through freight and a gravel train at the Bridgewater covered railroad bridge, an engineer was killed, several cars were demolished, the bridge was destroyed by fire and three locomotivs were burned into a mass of ruins.

Suicide Prevented

Barre, Vt., Jan. 4.—Edward Levindel, whose son was killed by the cars two weeks ago, became suddenly insane yesterday and attempted to jump from a train, but was prevented by the train hands and given in charge of the police for safe keeping. He was taken to the state asylum today.

FROHMAN'S NEW PLAN.

PLAYS TO BE ON A PARIS SCALE.

Permanent French Company Will Be Installed In One of His Best Houses—Maurice Grau May Join Him, and Coquelin Asked to Take Artistic Direction.

In the New York Herald's special cables from Paris the other day appeared a resume of theatrical news and comment of the hour written by M. Pierre Veber, in which he referred to the establishment in New York of a theater for the production of plays in French as a "very happy idea." He referred to Berlin, Rome, Brussels and Cairo as having a company of French actors, while New York had no such theater for its entertainment. The initiative, however, said M. Veber, must come from America.

The initiative is now announced by the above mentioned paper. A theater is to be established in New York by Mr. Charles Frohman, with a French company of players of the first rank, to produce in French in a manner equal to the productions of Paris plays of the classic and modern school, and associated with Mr. Frohman in all probability—that is, if present negotiations do not fall through—will be Mr. Maurice Grau as an interested party in the plan and M. Constant Coquelin in the artistic direction of the house. Mr. Frohman will give over one of his New York theaters to the company and make it a permanent home for the French drama in New York.

"It is a plan," said Mr. Frohman to a reporter, "that has long been in my mind. New York, great cosmopolitan city that it is, demands the best that can be procured from all the theatrical centers and sees the plays of London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Rome and other capitals produced on its boards. It has two German theaters here, and why not a French theater as well, especially when it is remembered that the stage of France and America are in close touch; that the Gallic plays are produced here with great success and leading French actors are heartily welcomed and draw crowded houses?

"Everywhere one hears French spoken in New York. French recitals and lectures are given in fashionable drawing rooms, Harvard, Yale and other colleges give plays in French, and when 'L'Aiglon' was played here and libretos were sold in English and French it was the French edition that had the largest sale. Is not the time ripe for the establishment of a French theater in New York? I believe so, and I am going to undertake it.

"It will not be done, however, in any half and half way. That sort of thing never succeeds in New York. I have nothing in mind but the best when this company is formed. I don't want any actors that ought to leave France, but those who cannot well be spared. I hope to have Mr. Maurice Grau interested with me in the project and have talked it over with him. In fact, it was he who brought me and M. Coquelin together while I was abroad, and I have asked M. Coquelin to take the artistic direction of the house and to act himself if he will. I expect shortly to have M. Coquelin's definite answer, and I trust it will be 'Yes.'"

Asked which of his theaters would be devoted to the new project, Mr. Frohman said he preferred not to mention the name at present, but that it would be one of the best of his houses.

"Yes," said Mr. Grau when he was asked as to his interest in the establishment of a French theater in New York, "yes. Mr. Frohman and I have talked the matter over, and I am free to say at once that I shall be happy to subscribe to such a project. Mr. Frohman, M. Coquelin and I met and discussed it together, and we are all much interested in the matter. Mme. Bernhardt, too, has been of the opinion that a permanent French theater in an English speaking city like London or New York should be established. In fact, she wanted me to become associated with her in such a plan for London, playing in the company herself now and again.

"As to the dollars and cents of such an undertaking as Mr. Frohman proposes, as to whether it would be a paying affair at once, I am not prepared to say. But should not sentiment, artistic sympathy, play some part in our theatrical lives? Should we not venture something to give this great city so desirable an innovation—an innovation at least for this generation—as a theater in which New York can hear French successes of the day in the French tongue? For let me assure you that the best of translations, the best of foreign speaking actors, cannot give the full value to a French play.

"I have had much experience myself in bringing French players to New York, both in drama and light operettas, from the middle seventies, when I had a comedy company here, to my latest Coquelin-Bernhardt tour. I understand the situation pretty well.

"It would be impossible to expect that the French colony here could support such a theater. It would be folly to look for such a result, and I say with regret there is less interest among the French set, so to speak, in a French theater than there was in 1855, when Bertrand brought a French company here, or later, when the Juignet and Drivet company played in the little theater attached to Niblo's Garden, or in 1866 and 1868, when the sterling supporters of dramatic and operatic affairs, such as the late Augustus Belmont, Marshall O. Roberts and William Butler Duncan, built the French theater in Fourteenth street.

"But, on the other hand, there has been an enormous advance in interest in the French language and the French stage by Americans. Twenty Americans speak French where two did then, and French stars draw now in New York theaters as they could not have pretended to do then. Therefore a new and greater clientele has been built up for the support of a French theater. Mr. Frohman has the project in mind. To have it in mind, with him, is to have it in hand. And all I can say now is that I may be counted on to subscribe to such a plan. As to the exact place I shall fill in it—well, come to me later about that."

FAVOR FOUR HOURS' SLEEP

Queer Club Formed by Some Chicago Men and Women.

Firm in their belief that sleep is a waste of time, a dozen men and women of Chicago have organized themselves into a society which proposes to teach people that too great a part of their lives is spent in useless slumber.

The organization is called the Four Hour Sleep club, and the members are pledged to sleep but four hours a night, says the Chicago Chronicle. The members contend that sleeping in excess of that time is purely a habit—that is, nothing short of sinful in this day of hurry and progress. It is an addiction, they argue, as harmful and intemperate as the excessive use of intoxicants, tobacco or drugs.

Members of the club who have children are rearing them to observe the same restriction with regard to alleged overindulgence in nightly rest. Some claim that a child five years of age can be trained to do with four hours' sleep, but the majority are of the opinion that children should be allowed from six to eight hours, the amount decreasing as the child grows older.

The club has secured a large amount of literature on the subject, and the members quote abundance of authority to show that they are right in their contentions. They point to Napoleon and a number of the greatest generals, writers of history and thinkers who are alleged to have taken four hours' sleep a night and less.

Mr. Gaul, the president of the club, says that it was through a natural aversion he has to sleep as well as a realization of its wastefulness that he was induced to abandon the "habit." His wife and his child, six years old, also manage to live with the stinted rest, and all seem to enjoy good health and bright mental faculties.

The man who sleeps eight hours out of twenty-four and lives to be eighty-one years old has in reality lived but fifty-four years. Twenty-seven he has spent in this suspension of all the powers of the body and mind. On the other hand, the man who sleeps but four hours a night will have spent nearly sixty-eight years of real life if he attains the age of eighty-one years.

PRESIDENT HONORS A BOY.

Roosevelt Delights Youngster by Shaking His Hand In Church.

President Roosevelt recently made a little boy from New Jersey very happy in Washington, says the New York Times. All he did was to shake hands with the youngster and assure him with characteristic fervor that he was delighted to see him, but that was enough.

The meeting took place the other morning in the president's church, which, in spite of a pouring rain, was well filled. After the service the president, accompanied by his daughter, moved out of his pew and down the aisle toward the door, the rest of the congregation remaining in the pews until he had passed out. On his way he saw a little hand shoot out from one of the pews, and he quickly grasped it. It was the hand of Earl Milliken of Jersey City, the ten-year-old son of E. J. Milliken.

"I am very glad to see you at church this rainy day," Mr. Roosevelt said as he shook the boy's hand.

"I am awful glad I came," the boy promptly replied. "I never shook hands with a president before."

Ice Bicycle Invented.

H. H. Camman of Merrick, N. Y., a grandson of Robert Fulton, the inventor of the steamboat, has constructed an ice bicycle, says the Philadelphia Press. An ordinary runner is first placed on the front fork of an ordinary bicycle, and a spiked tire is affixed to the rear wheel. Outriggers branch out from the frame of the wheel, to the ends of which skates are fastened. These are used to steady the machine and control it.

A PROGRESSIVE DINNER.

Hobo Describes Chicago Suburban Fad as "De Real T'ing."

A score of progressive men and women of Rogers Park, in Chicago, participated the other day in what they called a "progressive dinner." There were ten courses in ten homes, says the New York World. From oysters to coffee the party walked three miles. A Weary William followed them and partook of the good things at the back doors. He has furnished this report:

"I blows into Rogers Park hungry enough to chaw breakfast food. Calls at a house on Lunt avenue and asks for a handout. Girl gives me a bowl of soup. 'Gee! Ain't you got any meat?' says I. 'That's all we're serving today,' says she, and I buries de soup in silence.

"When I hits de sidewalk again some young matrons, buds and dudes is leaving by de front door. I trails 'em to a house on Farwell avenue and touches up de back door. Great improvement. Girl gives me roast beef with mushroom sauce, vegetables and bread and butter. 'Tanks, queenie,' says I. 'Where's de salad?' 'Oh, we ain't serving no salad today,' says she. 'Dis is a funny game,' I t'inks.

"I waits till de swell bunch comes out, and I does de Sampson act until we gits to another place on Farwell avenue, and I touches up the back door as before. Girl gives me a salad handout and wafers. Gee! Wafers! T'ink of it! 'Tanks, lovely woman,' says I, wid a low bow. 'Two lumps in me coffee, please.' 'We ain't serving no coffee,' says de girl, and I pretends to be on.

"By dis time I'm feeling real swell and languid, and when de smart bunch comes to a house on Morse avenue I just asks for coffee, and I gits it, wid ice cream and cake.

"When the swagger bunch comes out, dey begins to talk about stampeding, and I gits sore. I steps up to one of de dudes and I says, 'How about de cigars and de liqueurs?' De dude takes it all right and gives me a torch, and den I makes a holler for a carriage.

"'Oh, we ain't riding in carriages today,' says de dude. 'Dis was a progressive dinner party. It's de latest t'ing in Rogers Park. We walks to git up an appetite.'

"'I walks to keep mine down,' says I, and de dude laughs and gives me a nickel for car fare. 'Don't talk with that coarse man any more, Percy,' says one of de ladies, and de bunch walks away.

"I'm t'inking of wintering in Rogers Park."

TABLOID RESTAURANT.

Compressed Food to Be Served to the Public In Chicago.

Chicago is to have a tabloid restaurant. Compressed foods were supposed to be desirable only as an emergency ration, but some enterprising individual found that the compressed foods would appeal to a certain portion of the public even where there was an abundance of restaurants of the ordinary type, says the New York World. Hence the tabloid restaurant.

There will be in connection with the restaurant a department for the sale of the bottles, cans and packages in which the compressed food is put up for the market.

The following bill of fare has been prepared by the projector and was shown as a sample of what could be furnished to satisfy the appetites and sustain the working strength of Chicago citizens who may desire to adopt the improved method of eating:

FIRST LADY DEVISES A COAT

Mrs. Roosevelt's New Dinner Wrap Receives Fashion's Approval.

Already has Mrs. Roosevelt's revolution in fashions received approval. In a word, acting in concert with the ladies of the cabinet, Mrs. Roosevelt has decided upon a new dinner wrap, according to a dispatch from New York to the Philadelphia Press. It is designed to be worn at table and is quite appropriate with a decollete gown. Mrs. Donald McLean said:

"I'm not so sure that such a new departure can be made a general fashion, but the idea is all right."

Here is a description of the coat: Material, satin brocade, liberty silk, crepe de chine or taffeta; lining, soft quilted silk, fleece or satin; trimming, lace, ostrich feathers, marabout, chiffon, ermine, jet or steel; collar cut low and ruffled with lace or chiffon; shape, dolman effect cut in at the back, with very loose sleeves to the elbow; length midway between the waist and knees.

Aluminium Nails.

After many unsuccessful experiments and trials an alloy of aluminium has been made with which nails, staples and tacks can be made to compete with copper, says Hardware. Among other advantages claimed for the new material is that it is not affected by the weather and will not deteriorate, as in laying roofs, lining tanks, etc. As the alloy is noncorrosive and nonpoisonous, the new nails ought to find favor among makers of refrigerators and other articles used for food storage. When the difference in point of number and weight is taken into consideration, it is seen that aluminium nails are about 4 cents a pound cheaper than copper nails. It is not intended to put them in competition with ordinary steel nails.

The National Period of American Literature

BY LORENZO SEARS, LIT. D., Professor of American Literature in Brown University.

X.—Edgar Allan Poe.

IN 1844 a poem appeared which commended itself to many readers by the mystery and sadness with which it was filled, combined with a certain grotesqueness of fancy and singularity of phrase which caught the popular ear and pleased the imagination. Its title came to be associated so intimately with the author that "The Raven" was usually the next word after Poe. To this "Annabel Lee," "The Bells" and "The Lost Lenore" were sometimes added and other poems which, like himself, seemed to belong to some outer world far from the practicality of everyday life and from the usual definiteness of American literature in the first third of the century.

This period was just closing when John P. Kennedy did for Poe what Willis had done for Bayard Taylor in bringing a writer of promise before the public. The young aspirant had met with both good and ill fortune from the start. He was born in Boston Jan. 19, 1809, but of parents who staid there only long enough to complete a theatrical engagement, wandering off on a southern circuit and both dying within two years, leaving three children to the compassion of such friends as they might happen to find.

Edgar was fortunate in being taken up by the wife of a well to do tradesman of Richmond, himself generous in his treatment of the precocious lad, who soon became the petted showpiece of the family. This was his second misfortune. Five years at an English school were followed by six more of preparation for the University of Virginia in a school at home. In both he was active in athletics, a good boxer and swimmer, with one rival in scholarship, prominent in debates and a versifier of repute, yet without intimate friends and inclined as a spoiled boy to be imperious, capricious and self willed. At the university the pursuit of knowledge in those days was relieved by punch and card playing for money. His good fortune he managed to turn into evil by contracting gambling debts to the amount of about $2,500, which Mr. Allan, his foster father, declined to pay, and, taking the wayward youth home at the end of the year, he placed him in his own counting room, from which Poe broke loose and went to Boston. He took with him as capital with which to begin life once more in that city at the age of 18 a bundle of short poems, which he persuaded another young man to print in a thin volume of 40 pages, entitled "Tamerlane and Other Poems, by a Bostonian." During two years in the army and six months at West Point the other poems, including a revision of "Tamerlane," were composed, to be published in 1831 in New York. Among these were "Helen," "The Doomed City," "The Sleeper," "Lenore" and "The Valley of Unrest," not all of them as they now appear, but a long stride ahead of his Boston book. The forthcoming power of his weird imagination and the enchantment of his unique diction begin to show themselves. He might truly say:

I have reached these lands but newly
From an ultimate dim Thule,
From a wild, weird clime that lieth sublime
Out of space, out of time.

And he suggests rather than describes:

Bottomless vales and boundless floods
And chasms and caves and Titan woods,
With forms that no man can discover
For the dews that drip all over;
Mountains toppling evermore
Into seas without a shore—
Seas that restlessly aspire,
Surging unto skies of fire—
Lakes that endlessly outspread.

This is the dreamland, ghoul haunted and demon peopled, where his sad eye wanders, seeing shapes and visions which come only to one who is afflicted with intellectual delirium tremens. Then, again, he would catch glimpses of seraphic splendor and soar to the zenith in his song of "Israfel:"

In heaven a spirit doth dwell
Whose heartstrings are a lute.
None sings so wildly well
As the angel Israfel,
And the giddy stars, so legends tell,
Ceasing their hymns, attend the spell
Of his voice, all mute.

Then he feels the dragging of the earthly ball and chain and descends to this:

If I could dwell
Where Israfel
Hath dwelt, and he were I,
He might not sing so wildly well
A mortal melody,
While a bolder note than this might swell
From my lyre within the sky.

The verse is the type of the poet himself, in whom aspiration was always contending with limitation in bitter strife, like Ormuzd and Ahriman, the good angel and the bad of the Persian myth, and sometimes it must have seemed to him like the single handed warfare of Michael the archangel against the devil.

There will always arise the temptation to join the party of accusers or of apologists so soon as the element of the personal life mingles with the literature which an author has created. How far the balance will list to one side or the other depends in such a case as this upon belief in heredity on the one hand and in the ability of the inheritor of evil bent and bias to strengthen the brain as he grows up and lives on. If, however, a moral weakness to resist be added to strong appetite in the inheritance, it would seem that the child should have large allowances made for an almost inevitable wreck. Perhaps in Poe's instance the lapses into inebriety were not so culpable as the seeming perversity with which he threw away those opportunities and advantages which would have gone far to retrieve a false start in life, for which he was no more responsible than for the good fortune of being born in Boston. Indeed throughout his checkered career he displayed remarkable facility for snubbing main chances. Nevertheless he contrived to live by his pen for 17 years. It is the work of that period more than his manner of life that is of present concern.

Poe.

It began in Baltimore with winning a prize of $100 offered by a weekly paper for the best prose tale. This was accompanied by a poem which would have taken another prize if two premiums had been allowed to go to one author. The recommendation of the committee of award that he should print such stories as he had on hand was a compensation and gave him an encouraging start with the paper above mentioned. Magazine editorship soon followed, with an apprenticeship in story writing.

"Ligeia," "The Haunted Palace," "The Fall of the House of Usher," some "Literary Small Talk" and book notices, with a textbook on conchology, belong to this period. His stories soon amounted to 25 in number and were published as his installment of prose. The same characteristics are prominent as in his verse, but even more pronounced. He deals with the realm of the improbable bordering on the impossible. To this he sometimes gives the appearance of likelihood by attempts to account for his invented occurrences on scientific principles. He also employs a direct and explicit style, in itself carrying an impression of truth, but it is only to give reality to shadows and in his verse, the titles of his prose tales are full of dark suggestion and the fascination that goes with it. "The Facts In the Case of M. Valdemar," "Mesmeric Revelation," "The Black Cat," "The Pit and the Pendulum," "The Fall of the House of Usher," "The Premature Burial," "The Mark of the Red Death," "The Murders In the Rue Morgue," "The Mystery of Marie Roget"—all these and others like them are suggestive of enigmas, disasters and crimes. They are dark complexioned themes, shadowy with twilight forms gliding on unholy errands. They give glimpses of an outer limbo where the inhabitants of another world hover on the borders of this with fell intent or sad reminiscence.

The stories themselves fulfill the promise of their titles. They reek with horrors. Delusions that prove fatal, remorse that follows involuntary crime, tombs that are prisons, vaults for those who cannot die, low hanging clouds, starless gloom, trees swaying in windless air, cold, slimy walls, vermin haunted dungeons, despair and death—these are the lurid points in a symphony of black and red. Sometimes, as in "The Domain of Arnheim," there is lavished a profusion of oriental color—melodies, odors, shrubberies, birds, flowers, silver streams, pinnacles and minarets flashing in red sunlight, the phantom architecture of fairies.

Poe has had numerous imitators, especially in the line of the detective story, who have shown at least how dangerous it is to walk the narrow way which he chose to tread and by his careful steps keeping himself from toppling over into the depths of ludicrous pathos. Such followers have not been born to be mystics, alchemists and jugglers in the black art, like Poe, in whose mind, as in the seven chambers of his Prospero's castellated abbey, there stalked a multitude of weird dreams in the carnival of "The Red Death." But if one wishes now and then to get far out of the highways of literature into the land which lies next to the unseen and the unknown, whither only one or two in a century have gone and returned with even a plausible account of what they have seen, then this gloomy, wayward, but second sighted spirit will be the most satisfactory guide.

WAS PERFECTLY SANE

Czolgosz's Only Disease Was of Social Character

A PRONOUNCED ANARCHIST

According to Noted Medical Experts Who Made an Exhaustive Inquiry Into the Case of the Assassin of President McKinley

New York, Jan. 4.—An exhaustive report on the trial, execution, autopsy and mental status of Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, is given in the New York Medical Journal for Jan. 4. The report embodies the result of much careful investigation by Carlos F. McDonald and Edward A. Spitzka of this city. The question which these investigators set themselves to answer was: "When Czolgosz shot the president, did he know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, and that the act was wrong?"

This was from the legal standpoint. From the standpoint of medical science the question that formed itself was: "Was Czolgosz at the time he committed the act a victim of mental disease or mental unsoundness?"

The reply to these questions, which, at the same time, embodies the entire history of the case from the trial of the criminal to his execution and the disposal of his remains, takes up nearly 12 pages in the New York Medical Journal, and, divested of all technicalities, is to the effect that Czolgosz was sane and responsible under the law and punishable for the offense, though everything in his history, according to the medical experts, pointed to the existence in him of the social disease, anarchy, of which he was a victim. His refusal to reply to questions at the trial is regarded as in line with his role, expressed in the theatrical declaration: "I am an anarchist and have done my duty."

Dr. McDonald explains that "the anarchist creed teaches that when one of their number is selected to do a certain deed, he is to proceed about it quietly and in his own way, taking no one into his confidence; that, having accomplished the deed, if apprehended, he shall not admit his connection with any other members of the circle; that, if convicted and sentenced to die, he shall go to his death without revealing his connection with others, resting secure in the belief that he will be ever regarded by his associates as a martyr and a hero who died in the discharge of a noble duty.

"The course and conduct of Czolgosz from the beginning down to his death are entirely in keeping with this creed. And, finally, the cool, courageous manner in which he met his death, and the fact that from the day of his arrest until he died he never uttered a word that could be used against his accomplices, if he had any, and that he died, as anarchists who suffer the death penalty always die, without uttering a word that would tend to incriminate any of his coconspirators, tend to stamp him as an anarchist."

Dr. McDonald concludes the report with the declaration that Czolgosz, when he assassinated President McKinley, was in all respects a sane man—both legally and medically—and fully responsible for his act.

Dr. Spitzka, who made the autopsy, concluded his report as follows: "There has been found absolutely no condition of any of the viscera that could have been at the bottom of any mental derangement. Taking all in all, the verdict must be, 'socially diseased and perverted, but not mentally diseased.' The most horrible violations of human law cannot always be condoned by the plea of insanity. The wild beast slumbers in us all. It is not always necessary to invoke insanity to explain its awakening."

"EMPIRE MENACED"

London Review Thinks We Will Gobble Up South American States

London, Jan. 4.—The Saturday Review prints a remarkably free-spoken editorial, in which it strongly advises Great Britain to form a working alliance with Germany, in order to check the "continued and apparently inevitable advance of the United States into South America."

According to The Review "it is the wisest policy for this country to encourage the advance of Germany in the new world as the most useful counterpoise to the overwhelming predominance of the United States, which is the only other possible outcome of the existing political conditions."

Continuing, The Review remarks: "If we would only remember that the Americans are to be believed when they describe themselves as actuated by purely business considerations we would save ourselves from a large number of gratuitous humiliations and unprofitable speculations in stock having no real market value, viz: the presumed gratitude of our political and commercial rivals. With a strong European power established in the south and a great world power in the north, the too exuberant aspirations of Pan-Americanism would be checked, saving our empire from a grave menace."

In conclusion The Review points out that the United States will inevitably gobble up the weak, turbulent states southward, when it is certain to formulate a Pan-American tariff union against the remainder of the world, and then, controlling Cuba, Porto Rico and the isthmian canal, convert the Caribbean sea into an American lake.

KEEPING CLOSE TABS

Remarkably Strenuous Efforts to Keep Ohio Legislators In Line

Columbus, O., Jan. 4.—The so-called Foraker-Hanna contest over the organization of the Ohio legislature closed its last day with neither Price nor McKinnon assured of the necessary 35 votes for the Republican nomination for speaker. Sacrifice hits on both sides are being made for all other places to get votes for McKinnon and Price, and it is conceded that the ballot in caucus this afternoon is the only "sure thing."

While McKinnon and Price are claiming 37 votes each, their managers, who keep books, are more conservative. The Price men concede McKinnon only 29, but conservative watchers say each has 33 sure and that each needs at least two more votes.

While Dick, Cox and others are after recruits, their lieutenants are having lively times in holding their men in line and in guarding them in many instances. Members on both sides are accompanied by friends wherever they go, even to their meals and to bed. There are sentinels about the hotels and at the railroad stations to see that none get away or into strange company. Representative Willis turned on his escort yesterday and publicly denounced the "organized espionage on both sides."

While every possible effort is being made to secure the few remaining doubtful members, it is evident that the most untiring efforts are being made by both sides to hold their own.

Future Action Not Outlined

Berlin, Jan. 4.—It is unofficially announced here that the German charge d'affaires at Caracas has handed President Castro a note in which the German claims against Venezuela are clearly defined and in which a limit of time is set for President Castro's answer thereto. The handing of the note cannot be considered an ultimatum from Germany, since the note does not contain any reference to Germany's future action with regard to Venezuela.

Fruitless Labor Conference

Boston, Jan. 4.—The efforts of the arbitration committee of the Teamsters' union to bring about a settlement of the differences between the teamsters and their employrs have thus far proved unavailing, and this fact was announced at the close of the conference yesterday. A meeting of the union will be held tomorrow and there now seems little doubt but that a strike will then be ordered.

Schooner to Cost $175,000

Boston, Jan. 4.—Contracts have been made for the construction at Brooks' yard of a six-masted schooner for a syndicate managed by Captain Crandall. The schooner will be 308 feet on keel. Her registered tonnage will be 3000 and she will carry 6000 tons of coal. She will cost about $175,000.

Should Copy American System

Rome, Jan. 4.—The Giornal di Italia publishes an interview with M. Delcasse of France in which he says: "We welcome the riches of America, which has need of our articles of luxury." With regard to the American invasion, M. Delcasse says the best course is to seek to copy American systems.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 4.—The receipts and expenditures for the Harvard-Yale football game were as follows: Gross receipts, $61,859; expenses, $13,340.54; net receipts, $48,518.46. The net receipts were shared with Yale

Subjects For Special Message

Chicago, Jan. 4.—The Record-Herald says the interstate commerce commission will begin a series of three investigations in Chicago next Tuesday which are said to have for their purpose the gathering of data for a special message by President Roosevelt to congress. It is said that in this special message President Roosevelt will deal with railway combinations, the inter-state commerce commission and legislation governing inter-state traffic.

Johannesburg, Jan. 4.—General Botha has sent a note to all Boer commandoes requesting them to keep on fighting, as the British parliament is to be asked for another war vote which will induce the British nation to demand that the war in South Africa be stopped.

Ordinary Murdering Affray

Vienna, Jan. 4.—The report that 14 Jews had been massacred at Zaweisna, Galicia, by a mob, turns out to have been a common murdering affray, in which three Jews were killed.

A CONTRAST

Of the face of a healthful woman with the face of one who is sick proves that quite often a sad face is a sick face. Many a woman has cred. for a sunny disposition who would soon be sad of face and irritable of temper if she had to endure the womanly ills which many of her sex have borne for years.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the diseases which are the source of so much pain and suffering to women. It establishes regularity, dries debilitating drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

Mrs. Cornelia Henson, of Coalton, Boyd Co., Ky., writes: "In October 1889 I gave birth to a baby and the treatment I received at the hands of the midwife left me with falling of the uterus. I had no health to speak of for three years. I had another baby which was the third child. My health began to fail and I found myself completely worn out. I had so many pains and aches my life was a burden to me and also to all the family, for I was nervous and cross and I could not sleep. Had four doctors come to see me but at last found I was slowly dying. The doctors said I had liver, lung and uterine trouble. I was in bed for months and when I did get up I was a sight to behold. I looked like a corpse walking about. I commenced to take Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' and ever since then I have been a well woman. I have suffered all a woman could suffer at my monthly period until since I began the use of Dr. Pierce's medicines, but now I can say I have no pain. The dark circles around my eyes are going away and I feel better in every way. My cheeks are red and my skin is white, but before it was as yaffron."

Accept no substitute for "Favorite Prescription" there is nothing just as good for weak and sick women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are easy and pleasant to take. A most effective laxative.

IKE'S OXEN

How He Trained Them Nautically and What Happened In Consequence.

Among his neighbors Job Haines was considered a pretty fair sort of man. He had settled in a little town in the southern part of Kansas, where he lived as an immigrant from New Hampshire, and he brought his Yankee sharpness with him, but as he dealt fair and attended to his own business he passed. The only member of the family besides Job and his wife was Ike, a nephew whom Job had taken to bring up, as he had no children of his own. Ike was a typical New England boy about fifteen years old. He had been brought up in one of the coast villages of Maine and had a great love for the sea.

Job, like the majority of Yankee farmers, was a firm believer in cattle and did most of his work with oxen. One day he said to Ike, "Ike, if you'll take that pair of yearling steers and break them to work, you can have them." Ike was exceedingly well pleased at that and at once assumed charge of his new possessions. If ever a pair of young oxen were well taken care of, they were. He groomed them as carefully as the horses, so that their sleek coats shone as glossy as silk, and he was so kind with them that they were as gentle as sheep. He named them Jack and Billy.

In his western home Ike never forgot the faroff ocean. It had been the one hope of his life to be a sailor, but his being sent west had destroyed it. When his uncle gave him the steers to break, the idea came to him that though he could never expect to tread the deck of his own ship he could use ship phrases in the education of his oxen and thus always be reminded of his own home beside the sea. Thus it was that Jack and Billy were educated to work, "broken," totally ignorant of the usual commands by which oxen are managed. "Gee" and "haw," "git up" and "whoa" had no meaning for them whatever. It was "haul away" and "port" and "starboard" and "belay." "Stern all" was back. The oxen grew and waxed strong, and his uncle often remarked that he never saw a team that could do more work than those oxen and Ike. No one but Ike ever thought of handling them.

The nearest neighbor to the Haines' was Deacon Merwin, a good man and pillar of the church. The good deacon saw that Ike's yoke of oxen were workers, and a desire came over him to possess them. He offered to buy them several times, but Job always said that they belonged to Ike and were not for sale. The deacon asked Ike if he would sell them, but met with such an indignant refusal that he felt angered, but did not give up the idea of possessing the cattle. Finally he went to Job and said:

"Neighbor Haines, if them cattle'll work good every way I'll give you $400 for 'em. They're too much property for a boy like Ike to have, and it is apt to create in him a bad sperrit and make him feel above his elders."

"Well, I don't know, deacon. The boy sets a deal by them cattle, and a promise is a promise. I gave them to him if he would break 'em, and he has, so I'm bound to keep my part."

"That's all true enough, Neighbor Haines, but Ike's only a boy, and then, remember, $400 ain't offered every day for a yoke of cattle. Why not sell me these and give him another pair to break; that 'ud do him jist as well?"

The deacon's $400 and persuasions finally weakened Job's scruples, and he gave in. The deacon was to try them, and if they worked all right was to have them for $400. How to tell Ike what he had done was a poser to his uncle. His aunt declared it a downright mean piece of business and told Job plainly what she thought of him.

It was finally decided not to say anything to Ike until after the sale had been made and the cattle gone. In order that Ike might not be on hand to see his pets sold he was given a holiday and sent to spend the day at a neighbor's, a couple of miles away, where there was a boy of his age who was a sort of chum of his.

The next morning Ike was off bright and early, and the deacon was on hand shortly after. It would not be fair to Job to say that he did not have any misgivings. He would have backed out of the bargain at the least chance, and he really hoped that the deacon would not be satisfied with them. The oxen were brought out and yoked to the cart without difficulty, though the deacon remarked that they did seem "kinder stoopid." Job and the deacon climbed up into the cart.

"Gee up!"

The oxen turned their big eyes round inquiringly. "Gee up, there!" repeated Job. But they did not move a hoof.

"They're broke all right," replied Job. "Come, gee up, there!" At the same time he gave each a prod with the goad. In response to the prodding the cattle walked off toward the open gate, in which direction their heads happened to be turned. Job did not want them to go in the road, so he shouted out, "Hoy, hoy!" to turn them around; but the oxen had no idea what "hoy" meant, and so kept going straight ahead. Job shouted louder and struck Billy with the goad. They quickened their gait into a trot and turned out into the road. Then Job shouted. "Whoa, whoa!" But they did not mind that either.

"They don't appear to be as well broke as I reckoned on," remarked the deacon as he stood in the cart and viewed the proceedings.

"They're broke well enough," replied Job, rather nettled, "but I'm strange to them. Nobody but Ike ever drove them."

"Well, turn them about," said the deacon.

But they paid no heed to any command, and finally, exasperated, Job struck them both with the goad, and they started at a full run down the road. Clattery bang the cart went, and both Job and the deacon were compelled to hold on the cart stakes to prevent being bounced out of the cart.

"Stop 'em! Stop 'em!" shouted the deacon. "I want to get out. Whoa! Whoa! Whoa, you varmints!" But the oxen only tossed their heads and ran the faster. "Stop 'em, can't you?"

Job was downright mad by this time. "Stop 'em yourself, you old fool!" snapped he. "You know as much how to stop 'em as I do."

"We'll be chucked out and killed!" shouted the deacon as the cart banged over a stone.

The oxen were now thoroughly frightened and running away for fair, and both men were badly scared and holding on for dear life. All at once an idea struck Job.

"Say, deacon, can't you talk some sea talk to 'em? That's what I've allers heard Ike talk to 'em," he called out as the cart bumped along.

"Brother Haines, such sea talk as I've heard ain't proper fer a pillar of the church to repeat, and I'll call meetin' on you fer this if we git out alive," replied the deacon, with as much dignity as he could assume while holding to the stake.

"Do try, deacon!" shouted the terrified Job. "It may save our lives."

Just then the cart gave a fearful lurch, and the deacon banged his head against the stake he was holding to with considerable force. This made him boiling mad in addition to his fear. "Splice the main brace! Shiver my timbers! Pipe all hands to grog!" and then, as that had no effect on the frantic team, "Boat ahoy!" and then, losing all control of himself: "Ahoy! Ahoy! Drat you, you blankety blank brutes!" and the deacon let out such a string of profanity that Job turned a shade or two paler.

While this was going on the oxen had got over considerable ground. The people along the road gazed in open mouthed astonishment to see two such staid citizens going along so furiously with an ox team and were terribly scandalized at their apparent hilarity.

Ike, totally unconscious of what was going on at home, was plodding along toward his chum's when he heard a fearful clatter coming behind him. He turned and could hardly believe his eyes. There came his pets Jack and Billy at a furious pace and his uncle and the deacon in the cart.

"Stop 'em, Ike! Stop 'em!" shouted his uncle when he saw Ike.

Ike stepped to one side of the road, and as the cattle dashed up called out: "Belay, Jack! Belay, Billy!" At the sound of the familiar voice and command they stopped at once and went quietly up to their young master.

"I'll have the law of you for this, Job Haines," snarled the deacon as he painfully descended from the cart.

"And I'll call church on you!" retorted Job as he rubbed his bruises. "I won't belong to any church with a man that kin swear like you kin. A purty deacon you be!"

"If I had a brat like that, I'd skin him alive!" roared the deacon as he glared at the bewildered Ike.

"Isaac, take them cattle home at once," said his uncle. "As for this wicked man here, I shall never notice him again."

Ike took the cattle home. His uncle walked. His aunt told him about the contemplated sale, and, though he expressed commiseration for his uncle, it is doubtful if he felt any. His aunt said it served them just right. Ike kept his oxen.

Carlyle and Bores.

Whether Carlyle was a dead failure or not is a moot point, but he certainly did not know how to put up with bores. "The art of being savage to those people" or "such things"—as he would have designated them—which Scott so signally lacked, was possessed by him in its perfection. What he could "least endure," we are told, was being bored. "The anathemas which he heaped on unfortunate bores exceed Ernulphus' in exquisite variety."

A whole museum might be filled with Carlyle's bores alone. He obtained access to the immortals, and they bored him. To his acrid humor Charles Lamb was something less, almost, than a bore. Coleridge, whom he had not been disinclined to revere, was a bore of the most oppressive kind. "He hobbled about with us," writes the irreverent Thomas, "talking with a kind of solemn emphasis on matters which were of no interest. Nothing came from him that was of use to me that day or, in fact, any day."

Genius That Will Win.

A certain hardware store in this city employed as clerk a genuine eighteen carat genius. They did not know it at the time, but they are firmly convinced of it now.

One day a country customer came in to buy some powder to use on a hunting trip. The new man waited on him and, not being thoroughly "on to the ropes," gave him blasting powder by mistake.

The next day the purchaser brought back the lumpy blasting powder to exchange for what he originally asked for. Here is where the new clerk's genius displayed itself. Instead of taking back the blasting powder on the spot he tried to argue the country customer into buying a coffee grinder, with which the blasting powder might be ground to the requisite fineness.

Sad to relate, he failed, but he made a great hit with his employers nevertheless.—Syracuse Herald.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Boston theatre goers are to be treated to the merriest musical comedy of recent years and to a genuine beauty show next week at the Hollis Street Theatre, when Klaw & Erlanger's Troubadours present Harry B. Smith's rollicking farce "The Liberty Belles." The piece will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Hollis on Monday, and unless all signs fail it will play to the capacity of the house at every performance during its engagement. It has enjoyed a phenomenal run at the Madison Square Theatre, New York, and comes to Boston with the prestige of Metropolitan success and the heartiest endorsement of both the press and public. During its run at the Madison Square Theatre this delightful little comedy entertained the largest audiences in the history of that house, and it could easily have stayed there for the balance of the season.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

That merry operatic comedy "The Chaperons," with its pretty music, witty lines, 'catchy' songs, great cast of funmakers, and immense chorus of pretty girls, in Frank N. Perley's superb company of one hundred singing comedians, has certainly caught on with music loving Boston. The Columbia Theatre re opened Monday night under Harry N. Farren's management wite one of the most enthusiastic audiences that has ever filled that beautiful home of delightful musical comedies. "The Chaperons" is credited with having made the most pronounced hit since "The Rounders." Geo. W. Lederer has given the merry production tha. swing and vivacity for which he has alwayt been famous. The theatre is filled with a wave of melody from the moment the curtain rises on the opening chorus.

KEITH'S THEATRE

As usual, the seeker after vaudeville entertainment gets choice of an infinite variety at Keith's the week of Jan. 6, some of which is entirely new to the local stage. Perhaps the most important offering is the revival of the song-sheet, which is to be for a postively limited period. There will be half a hundred well trained colored singers, and the soloist is to be R. J. Jose, the favorite ballad singer, "The Brotherhood of Man," "Gracie" and "Boogby," Dolly Gray" will be the first songs sung. Among the other entertainers will be John Bowker, the noted traveler, in an illustrated travelogue on "The Passion Play;" Harry Howard's troupe of trained ponies and dogs, a big attraction for the juveniles; Jenny Eddy and her pickaninnie, in "coon" songs; the Meers sisters, in a perfectly marvelous wire act; Hal Stephens, a mimic of other actors, with special light and scenic effects; Harry Linton and Leila McIntyre, in a laughable comedy sketch, with singing and dancing specialties, and Wenona and Frank, phenomenal rifle and pistol shots. It is certainly a great bill.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

A very elaborate production of D'Ennery's famous play "The Two Orphans" will be the first attraction of the New Year at the Castle Square Theatre and much interest attaches to this event. The play will be presented for the week beginning Monday, January 6th and all the original scenes and mechanical effects are being provided to give the startlingly realistic scenes as shown in the Paris performances many years ago. The great demands of the cast will be met by the engagement of additional people, and especial care will be taken in the groupings and tableaux. The characters in the "Two Orphans" have been taken by such prominent players in the past that the work of the Castle Square stock company in this play will have an especial interest. The cast of the leading characters has been arranged as follows: Chevalier Maurice De Vaudrey, John Craig; Marquis De Presles, Edward Wade; Count De Linieres, J. L. Seeley; Picard, James A. Keane; Jacques Frochard, Edmund Breese; Pierre Frochard, Charles Mackay; Doctor, Lindsay Morison; Henriette, Eva Taylor; Louise, Mary Sanders; La Frochard, Leonora Bradley; Countess De Linieres, Maye Louise Aigen; Marianne, Marian A. Chapman. The usual distribution of boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

PARK THEATRE.

The first performance in this country of the brilliant operatic extravaganze "Morocco Bound" will be given at the Park Theatre, Boston, tonight, January 4th. The costumes and scenery are in duplicate of those used in the London production, and are absolutely new. The story on which "Morocco Bound" is built is not elaborate, but affords a vehicle for the display of the capabilities of a most talented company. The playgoers who will journey towards Morocco at the Park Theatre on January 4th will be entertained at Mokeleigh Hall on the banks of the River Thames, by Squire Higgins, the gilded Costermonger, and will be met by some lively personages of both sexes, whose sole aim is to amuse them with hilarious chat, smart songs and occasional dances. The merriment, the witticism, the tuneful music, the gorgeous settings, the brilliant costumes, and the shapely and pretty chorus of upwards of 60 girls, all refined in their beauty, and a chorus second to none of those already seen in the productions of Mr. Chamberlyn in this country and in this City, it is hoped will satisfy the Park Theatre patrons.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. Aside from Senator Hanna's "William McKinley as I Knew Him," the January "National" is a strong and attractive number. A new and most kindly portrait of Senator Hanna adorns the cover and smiles benevolently at the reader from the first page of "Affairs at Washington." This department is as usual a chatty resume of social and political gossip at the national capital, lavishly illustrated with finely engraved portraits of men and women of present prominence. The stories are brisk and well illustrated, the articles timely and well written. John C. Coombs presents an array of eloquent and profound arguments for governmental aid in restoring America's merchant marine to its former prosperity.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. "Aside from Senator Hanna's "William McKinley as I Knew Him," the January "National" is a strong and attractive number. A new and most kindly portrait of Senator Hanna adorns the cover and smiles benevolently at the reader from the first page of "Affairs at Washington." This department is as usual a chatty resume of social and political gossip at the national capital, lavishly illustrated with finely engraved portraits of men and women of present prominence. The stories are brisk and well illustrated, the articles timely and well written. John C. Coombs presents an array of eloquent and profound arguments for governmental aid in restoring America's merchant marine to its former prosperity.

DEBATE WITHOUT LIMIT

May Be a Long Fight Over Isthmian Canal Question

FRIENDS OF PANAMA ROUTE

Think That French Company's Offer to Sell Property and Franchises For $40,000,000 Will Result In Passage of the Hepburn Measure

Washington, Jan. 6.—After a recess of almost three weeks, both houses of congress reconvened today. The principle item on the house program for the week is the Hepburn isthmian canal bill, which is the special order for tomorrow. No limit has been fixed as to the time for debate on this measure, but Mr. Hepburn does not contemplate a prolonged discussion of it. It is surmised in some quarters, however, that if the proposition of the Panama Canal company to sell its property and franchises for $40,000,000 should be made, as promised, this may have the effect of opening a wider field of discussion than at first seemed probable, and if this should prove to be the case, the bill may go before the house for a longer time than is now contemplated.

Mr. Burton has given notice of a speech on the bill and it is understood that there also will be other speeches in criticism of special features of the measure, but its friends are very sanguine not only that the bill will pass, but that it will pass speedily. Mr. Hepburn, the author of the bill, thinks that only a few days of debate will be necessary.

It is expected that by the time the canal bill is disposed of there will be one or more appropriation bills ready for consideration by the house. None of the appropriation bills has yet been passed on by the appropriations committee, but both the urgent deficiency and the pension bills are in a forward state, and the expectation is that they will be considered by the committee during the current week. The present intention is to give first attention to the deficiency bill. The estimates for the bill aggregate $12,000,000 and it is not believed that these figures will be scaled down materially.

The senate has no program for the week and business is very little on its calendar, as the reorganization of the senate committees did not take place until just before the holidays. There are, however, a few bridge bills reported, and Senator Morgan's bill for the acquisition of right of way for the Nicaragua canal is among the measures in position to receive attention. It is not probable, however, that the right of way bill will receive consideration at this time, the disposition being rather to await the action of the house upon the general subject, and then have the senate predicate its action on the house bill. If this course should be decided on, the discussion of the canal question in the senate will be postponed for a few weeks.

The committee on the Philippines will take up the Philippine tariff question very soon, but there is yet no indication as to how much time the matter may consume in committee. There is no probability that the senate itself will be able to reach that question for some time. Senator Frye is engaged on his report on the shipping bill, but is not able to fix the time for its completion.

Inhaled Deadly Gas Fumes

New York, Jan. 6.—Peter A. Lynch, 23 years old, and Peter, his nine months old child, were asphyxiated yesterday by escaping fuel gas. Mrs. Lynch and her cousin, Mary Healey, 19 years old, are at a hospital and fears are entertained that they will not recover. William Williams is dying at a hospital from gas inhalation in a rooming house. Alexander Bell, chief engineer of the Morgan line steamer El Paso, was overcome by gas at the Southampton hotel and small hope is felt for his recovery.

Not a Dry Sunday

New York, Jan. 6.—The Sunday and excise laws were more strictly enforced in greater New York yesterday than has been the custom, although it was by no means a "dry" Sunday. The better class of saloon men were unmolested, but the lower resorts were told by the police to close up and remain closed during the day. The Raines law hotels were very careful to issue the usual sandwich with each drink.

MURDERED ON ROAD

Wood Choppers Charged With Causing Death of Leon Morgan

Newport, N. H., Jan. 6.—The badly frozen body of Leon H. Morgan of this town was found in the road just below Unity Four Corners, the circumstances indicating that he had met a violent death, and Will Yuber and Frank Willard, two wood choppers, are locked up here, upon the charge of being connected with Morgan's death.

Morgan was about 25 years of age, and for the past three weeks had been employed as a hostler in Page's livery stable. The appearance of the head showed that he had received several severe blows upon his skull, while his clothing was badly torn and spattered with blood. The trodden condition of the snow indicated that a severe struggle had taken place near the spot where the body was found.

Upon investigation it was learned that on Friday night Will Yuber and Frank Willard, who had been working at Sargent's lumber camp in Corbin Park, called at Page's stable and wished to hire a team to go to Lempster, 10 miles distant, but were refused on account of their intoxicated condition, but Mr. Page finally decided to let them have a team if they would take Morgan along as driver. This they did. On the way down they must have taken more liquor, as they were noticed by several persons whom they met, and at 7 o'clock, when they had reached Unity and were passed by a party of grangers, two of the men were fighting, while the third was holding the horse.

The horse must have become frightened at the two men quarreling, for he started to run away, throwing down the one who was holding him and finally bringing up in Farmer Andrew Walker's yard. This man and horse remained at Waler's house over night, but the man was so intoxicated that he could tell no intelligible story.

The autopsy on the body of Morgan showed no indications of liquor on the victim and the decision was reached that death was due to exposure, as the result of concussion of the brain induced by injuries inflicted on the head.

Yuger and Willard were arraigned before Judge Granby yesterday on the charge of manslaughter. Both pleaded not guilty and were held in $2500 each to await the result of the coroner's inquest.

Ryan Found Wife Afire

Boston, Jan. 6.—An officer of the Charlestown police station saw smoke issuing from a house on Medford street last night, and upon forcing an entrance found John Ryan attempting to put out a fire in what appeared in the darkness to be a bundle of rags, but which proved to be his wife, who was so badly burned that her life is despaired of. Ryan says he was awakened by smoke and saw saw the fire, which he supposed was in some clothes on the floor. It is believed that Mrs. Ryan was carrying a lamp when it either exploded or was dropped, setting fire to her clothing.

Princess Hopelessly Insane

Berlin, Jan. 6.—Princess Louisa, daughter of King Leopold of Belgium, who was divorced from her husband, Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and who has been held in a retreat near Dresden for the last two years, has been pronounced hopelessly insane. Her daughter was married to the Duke of Slesvig-Holstein, brother of the present Empress of Germany, and her sister was the wife of Archduke Rudolphe of Austria, who committed suicide.

Drouth Has Lasted a Year

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 6.—On account of the almost total failure of grass and the high price of foodstuffs in this section over 100 head of horses and milch cows have been killed in San Antonio to prevent them from dying from starvation, their owners, who are of the poorer class, being unable to buy feed for the animals. There has been a drought in this section for a year or more and there is no present prospect for an improvement.

In Memory of Lincoln

New York, Jan. 6.—The American Missionary association has issued an appeal to the Congregational churches of the country to observe Sunday, Feb. 9, as a memorial of Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday is Feb. 12. The churches, and especially their Sabbath schools and endeavor societies, are urged to emphasize Christian patriotism.

Captain and Cab Went Overboard

Antwerp, Jan. 6.—A Swedish captain named Rossander has been missing since New Year's eve, when he left a dinner party in a cab to return to his ship. The retreating tide has now revealed the cab in the river, with the horse dead and the drowned body of Captain Rossander inside the vehicle.

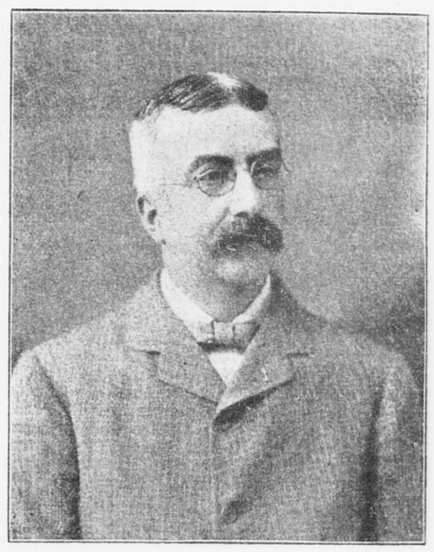
ADDRESS OF MAYOR BRYANT

Needs of the City Increasing More Rapidly than Income---Rigid Economy Necessary.



Recommends Early Action on Re-arrangements of First Floor of City Hall.

New Fire Station Recommended for Houghs Neck--Also Another Bathhouse and More Policemen.

Gentlemen of the Council:

In pursuance of the provisions of the city charter, we assemble at this time to take upon ourselves the responsibility of the government of our city for the current year. To many of you, this responsibility is not an entirely new one. I do not intend at this time to speak of the many measures in the nature of public improvements which you may be called upon to consider during the coming year, preferring to call your attention to them later, at which time it will be more convenient and satisfactory to present such matters in a concise and businesslike form.

Having been a member of your body for a number of years and associated with many of you in the performance of the duties of the legislative branch, and having had as a councilman your support on all matters pertaining to the welfare of the city, I sincerely trust that the same good feeling may continue between us, now that our position is changed. While the duties of the legislative and the executive branches of the government are distinct, I believe that but one feeling and idea will govern both during the present year, and that is to work together for every improvement and advantage which can possibly be obtained for our city.

I do not deem it necessary, as some previous mayors have done to urge upon you to consider carefully all matters which will be brought before you, for my association with past councils has taught me that the members have always endeavored to perform faithfully the duties imposed upon them and have in almost all cases given exceptionally of their time in the furtherance of the business of the city. I believe, as you well know from the position which I have heretofore taken on all matters of public improvement, that the interests of the city can best be served by the liberal expenditure of money for needed and public improvements, at the same time bearing in mind, however, the limitations of our income and the distribution of the debt incurred by these improvements that the burden of taxation may not become a hardship upon the taxpayers.

All of us who are interested in the welfare of the city, and are called upon to take up the question of taxation, realize the fact that we can best protect the property that we own from deterioration, and perhaps advance its value by bringing the city up to a high standard and on a par with other cities and towns in our immediate neighborhood. We must maintain the present high standard of our schools for the education of the children; extend, as fast as our income will allow, the permanent improvements of our streets and sidewalks. While some have criticized the action of your body in preceding years on the appropriations made for this purpose, I feel sure, now the changes have been made, that the people realize the benefits our city will derive from the progress made in this way, and that no one will regret what has been spent in the future in this respect.

Unfortunately the Mayor coming into office has not the power to fix the tax rate. The rate is fixed entirely by the debt created by you or by your predecessors. We can raise for purposes of municipal expense, according to law, $12 on the average valuation of the three preceding years. The valuation for

1900 "	20 153,383.00
1901 "	21,161,038.00
Total	$60,864,222.00
Average valuation,	$20,288,000.74

$12 per thousand on this average allows us to raise, the present year, $243,456.88, which is only about $7000 more than we could raise last year.

I wish to impress upon your that in preparing the budget for your consideration the economy that will have to be used in every department, not to exceed our income, is liable, in many cases to be detrimental to their usefulness.

FINANCIAL CONDITION.

You have from year to year been obliged to face the fact that our need in every direction are rapidly increasing with the growth of the city, and that our income does not show proportional increase, so that you have been obliged each year to run the various departments with the most rigid economy, and the present year, in this respect, is no different from the others.

On Dec. 31, 1900, our debt was	$1,518,605.61
On Dec. 31, 1901, our debt was	1,566,535.64
Showing increase of the year of	48,030.03

Shown by the following statement:

DEBT STATEMENT.

Municipal Debt. Jan. 1, 1901,	$380,905.61

Good Afternoon.

Those who expected that the inaugural address of Mayor Bryant would recommend large expenditures for special improvements, and changes in policy of administration of city affairs will be disappointed. His Honor, however, places himself on record as in favor of "liberal expenditure of money for needed and public improvements," and urges the remodeling of first floor and basement of City Hall, a new fire station for Houghs Neck, and a bath house for Wards Five and Six. He deplores the fact that the income of the city does not increase proportionately with the needs of the city, and presents a mass of figures showing the financial condition of the city.

The remodeling of City Hall is not a new question. Mayor Hall in his address in 1900 said a rearrangement of City Hall was "absolutely necessary," and in 1901 again urged changes, but the City Council has never given the movement much encouragement. Previous Mayors have also recommended remodeling. The expenditure of a comparatively small sum for a rearrangement of the present city building would provide more offices and better accommodations, which those who have business with the city would appreciate quite as much as the officials themselves. The whole or a part of the present stone stairway to the second floor should be removed, and then a central hallway could extend from the front to the rear of the building. A stairway could lead from the hallway to the Council chamber and also to the basement. By closing the present front entrances to the street floor, and the possible addition of windows on each side, the number of offices could be increased. Although the rooms would be smaller than at present they would be better lighted and better adapted. The basement could also be used for offices, vaults, sanitary closets, tool rooms, etc. The remodelling of City Hall at small expense, would postpone for ten or twenty years a large expenditure for a new City Hall which the voters have already said they don't want.

Without doubt the time has come when Houghs Neck must have better fire protection. The number of cottages is now large and they increase each year. The lots are so small that the houses are near together, and should a fire start, it would be difficult to prevent a conflagration.

The most popular expenditure of 1901 was that for a public bathhouse on the sea shore in Ward Two. Another at Wollaston Park would be appreciated by Wollaston and Atlantic people, but two would give better satisfaction. One on the Houghs Neck road handy to the electrics would be appreciated by the whole city.

The only department of the city which comes in for criticism in the Mayor's address appears to be the Police department. His Honor asks for stricter rules and proper discipline, and says he shall insist upon the rules being rigidly enforced. The civil service rules have not secured for the police force the best possible officers. Perhaps, however, the small force has done all that could reasonably be expected of it with the large territory to be covered.

Certainly burglaries have not been numerous, and disturbances have not been frequent. The police signal system and patrol wagon will greatly increase the efficiency of the department in the future.

Mayor Bryant is solicitions to have the cooperation of the City Council for the advancement of the city. After the treatment of Mayor Hall by the City Council of 1901, some would like to have it withheld but those who have the best interests of the city at heart hope that the legislative and executive departments may work together. Thus they will secure not only the improvements, but at the same time greater economy. It should not be necessary to railroad any needed improvement through the City Council, but each order should stand on its merits, and in each case the Councilmen should consider it in connection with other demands and the resources of the city. It is often advisable to postpone some really meritorious improvements. If the city would decrease annually for a few years its indebtedness and interest, it could secure many improvements without increasing taxes. We are not getting ahead very fast when we pay off $112,405.61 and add $160,435.64 to our indebtedness. The interest on the increased debt alone is nearly $2,000 for this year.

We wish Mayor Bryant and the new City Council success in their new duties, and also a Happy New Year.

Hon. John O. Hall who retired today from the office of Mayor of our city for two years, has been a prominent official since the change to the city government Jan. 1, 1889. For ten years he was City Auditor, a very responsible position and especially exacting during the first years of the city, and more arduous as the city grows. As City Auditor he was faithful to the best interests of the city, and the precedents which he established will long be continued. As Mayor the same conscientious regard for city's honor and credit has been displayed. In 1900 and again 1901, he was instrumental in reducing the tax rate when about everybody expected increases each year. He did not have the hearty cooperation of the City Council, especially during the year 1901, and his efforts to keep down the city debt were not successful. Mayor Hall was not penurious but progressive. He realized, however, that there were limitations to expenditures, but most of his vetoes of financial measures were not sustained, and therefore he is not responsible for the large loans authorized. His departments were conducted within their appropriations, and all in all his administration was very successful.

Found Half Frozen.

Daniel McIntosh, who at one time conducted a fish market on Temple street, was found half frozen Saturday afternoon in an old building at Houghs Neck. He was removed to the police station and was arraigned in court this morning for vagrancy. After failing in business in Quincy he went to Houghs Neck and was employed last summer at Peterson's fish market.

The Press Remembered.

Mayor Hall has not only extended thanks to city officials, but to the press. To the editors of the Quincy Patriot and Quincy Daily Ledger he writes:

Mayor's Office.
Quincy, Mass., Jan. 4, 1902.

Messrs. George W. Prescott & Son,

Gentlemen:—As I retire from my connection with the business of our city after a long term of service I wish to thank you and the associates in the office of your paper for many kind words and many courtesies received from you.

During these years my relations with you have been very pleasant and agreeable and I shall look back with a great deal of satisfaction upon our official and personal connection.

Wishing you the fullest measure of success and happiness for the future I remain.

Respectfully,
John O. Hall,
Mayor.

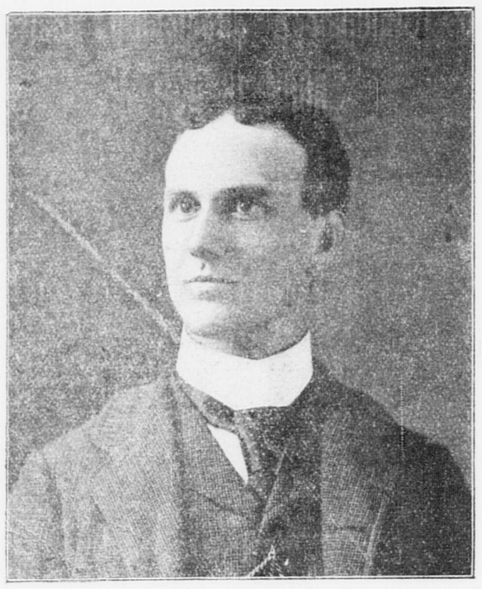
THE NEW CITY GOVERNMENT

Large and Enthusiastic Assemblage at City Hall at Noon.



PRESIDENT ALDEN.

City Auditor Sidelinger Re-elected Without a Contest for Third Year.

The usual large number of citizens gathered at City Hall this noon to witness the inauguration of Charles M. Bryant as Mayor of Quincy. Aside from the citizens there were a large number of ladies in the gallery, and the following prominent gentlemen were noticed: Ex-Mayor Keith, ex-Mayor Sears, Senator Sprague, County Commissioner Wright, Henry H. Faxon, ex-Councilmen E. E. Jameson, John R. Graham, W P. Hill, H. M. Willard, Henry McGrath, W. T. Spargo, E. G.

COUNCILMAN THOMPSON.

Hall, T. H. Newcomb, J. F. Burke, W. T. Shea, Thomas J. Lamb, and others.

Promptly at the stroke of 12 City Messenger Tirrell entered the City Council chamber followed by Mayor Hall, Mayor elect Bryant and Rev. Frank W. Pratt of the Wollaston Unitarian church.

After prayer by Rev. Mr. Pratt, City Clerk Cleaves administered the oath of office to Mayor Bryant, and then to the members of the City Council.

Mayor Bryant was introduced and delivered his inaugural address, which required but fifteen minutes. There was no applause during the reading, but a generous applause at the close.

The roll call of the City Council was made and the Council proceeded to organization, which was affected without friction, as ex-Mayor Fairbanks had withdrawn as a candidate for City Auditor, and Councilman Nichols who was prominently mentioned as a candidate for President of the Council, withdrew in the interest of harmony, leaving the field clear to Councilman Charles Alden, whose election as President was greeted with applause.

The organization of the City Council was unanimous as follows:

President, Charles H. Alden.
Clerk of Council, Christopher A. Spear.

Small Pox Cases.

There are no new developments in the small pox cases other than it has been decided not to remove the little girl who has the disease, as was planned. This was upon the advice of the physician of the State Board of Health, who visited Quincy on Saturday and saw the patient. This physician said that the little girl had the small pox, but in a mild form, and it was not desirable to remove her, owing to her age.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

Daniel M. McIntosh was arraigned for vagrancy at Quincy. Case placed on probation for thirty days.

KILLED.

Mayor Hall Vetoed Building Ordinance.

City Council of 1901 Is No More.

Can Come Up Again Only as New Business.

One of the last acts of Mayor Hall was to veto the ordinance which passed the Council of 1901 at its last meeting establishing the office of inspector of building and rules governing the erection of buildings.

No opportunity was offered the City Council to veto the ordinance, as it adjourned sine die before the ordinance went to the Mayor. The action of the Mayor, therefore kills the ordinance. It can come up before the new city government only as new business and cannot be passed for several weeks at best.

ALL DEFECTIVE.

Torpedo Boats and Also the Destroyers.

Lawrence and Macdonough Included.

Alterations and Reduction of Weight Necessary.

Many are aware that the torpedo boat destroyers—the Lawrence and the Macdonough—built by the Fore River Company, have been unable to make the speed required by the government, but the fault is with the designs and not with the construction as all the warships of this class which are building in the different shipyards of the country, do not come up to the requirements in speed.

A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: Serious deffects have been discovered in the large fleet of destroyers and torpedo boats building for the navy which will involve important alterations and the reduction of weights to bring down their displacement to that for which they were designed and enable them craft to make the required speed.

The entire number of 16 destroyers and 12 torpedo boats have been found faulty in the important feature of over-displacement, which necessitates a considerable curtailment in the weights of the ordinance, steam engineering and equipment departments, and calls also for less officers than the boats were originally designed for by the construction bureau.

Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, chief constructor of the navy, regards the defects of a nature to demand an entire, overhauling of practically every one of the boats now building and to accomplish this he estimates that instead of the craft being delivered to the government this year it will be near the close of 1903 before they are available for service. Practically all of them were contracted for in January 1898 but owing to steel strikes and difficulty encountered in securing structural steel delays have followed with such persistency that the navy had about abandoned hope of ever getting the torpedo boat flotila afloat.

The entire question of torpedo boats in all its aspects has been the subject of investigation by a special board ordered by Admiral Bowles consisting of Constructor Linnar and Lieut. L. H. Chandler, an expert on the subject. This board was engaged for several weeks in inspecting every torpedo craft under construction on the Atlantic coast, with a view to determining the occasion for the delays in completion and what defects existed to cause the speed failures, break downs, excessive displacement and general failure of nearly all the boats so far tried to meet requirements. It has inspected every craft on the eastern coast and has submitted a report to the secretary of the navy, which shows that not one is within the contract displacement, and that other defects exist which would render the boats below the standard in important essentials for which they were designed.

Several of the boats are from 10 to 40 tons over the displacement the plans called for, and necessarily their speed, the board reports, cannot well be maintained at the rate required by the contract. The majority of the boats are within from 25 to a few per cent. of completion and had the work been permitted to continue, all would have probably been delivered this year.

Admiral Bowles, however, has taken action in co-operation with all the other bureaus of the navy department which will result in complete changes being made in all the boats, with a view to improving their condition and bringing them, if practicable, up to the requirements of the service. These changes, Admiral Bowles states, have been approved by his bureau, and the navigation, ordinance and equipment bureaus, and will lead to reduction in armament, which must be sacrificed reduction in the general interior equipment, fewer officers, which will lessen the number of apartments on board and removal of some parts of the machinery, not tending, however, too have any effect on speed.

These craft, he declares, are built mainly for speed and if they have not all the contract calls for, they cannot be regarded as successful or highly useful to the navy. Work on every one of these boats has been stopped temporarily, until the departments instruction to ship builders for changes decided upon, have been drawn and forwarded. Admiral Bowles estimates that it will be at least 18 months or longer before the boats will be ready for delivery.

The destroyers now building and the yards where the work is being performed are as follows: Bainbridge, Barry and Chauncy at Noafle & Levy yard, Philadelphia; Dale and Decatur at Richmond, Va.; Hopkins and Hull at Wilmington, Del.; Lawrence and MacDonough at Fore River Works, Quincy; Paul Jones, Perry and Preble, at the Union iron works, San Francisco; Stewart at Morris Heights, N. Y.; Truxton Whipple and Worden, at Sparrow's Point, Md.

The 12 torpedo boats are the Stringham at Wilmington; Goldsborough at Portland, Ore.; Biddle at Bath, Me.; Blakely at South Boston; DeLong and Nicholson at Elizabethport, N. J.; Thornton and Tangay at Trigg & Co.'s, Richmond, Va., and Wilkes at Morris Heights, N. Y.

Inauguration day.

Mayor Bryant now.

It should be noted that Sunday was a pleasant day.

The officers of Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., will be installed tomorrow evening.

Miss Ethel Rinn visited Atlantic on Sunday. Miss Rinn was a former resident of the town.

Miss Marion Volger of Botolph street has been confined to the house for the past two weeks, the result of vaccination.

There is very little skating in Atlantic; the largest pond would shame an ordinary dining-table on account of its size.

The Atlantic street bridge is being repaired, a fact which makes travel on that thoroughfare very unpleasant at the present time.

Among the recent patents issued at Washington there was one to T. L. Sturtevant of Quincy and T. C. Sturtevant of Newton Centre, for motor-vehicle.

The committee appointments of the Legislature are expected today. Senator Sprague is slated for street railways liquor laws, and public charitable institutions.

Eleven united with Bethany Congregational church on Sunday at the Communion service, seven by confession of faith, and four by letters. A good beginning for the new year.

The skating rink near Merrymount Park has become a popular resort for young people. Crowds are present on the pond every evening and all day Sunday the pond was black with skaters.

Saturday Mayor Hall sent personal letters to all his officials and departments thanking them for the efficient manner in which they had fulfilled their duties during his administration.

If troubled with a weak digestion, belching, sour stomach, or if you feel dull after eating, try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. All druggists.

The Wollaston school which was closed last week on account of smallpox, reopened this morning. Dr. Record and Dr. Johnson were present and every pupil who had not been vaccinated recently was made to lay bare his arm and be vaccinated.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then 1 thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. Our municipal debt on the first of January, 1901, which would fall due in 1902, was only $40,250.00, and it was hoped at the time, as this amount was exceedingly small (some $28,000 less than the debt falling due in 1901), that it would materially assist in lowering the tax rate when this present year was reached, but owing to emergencies arising last year, claims against the city for which it was not legal to borrow money longer than the period of one year,—it became necessary to add to that debt, falling due the following year, $26,435.64. Therefore the municipal debt falling due in 1902 is $66,685.64. It will hav to be paid out of the tax levy this year and falls due as follows:

CITY HALL.

I am not in favor of the building of a new City Hall at the present time, as there are many ways in which borrowed money can be used that would be of much more benefit to the city than the expenditure of a large sum for this purpose. I do ask the Council, however, to refer to the Committee upon Public Buildings the question of remodeling somewhat the first floor of the present building and dividing the same into better acommodations for the "Department of Public Works, "Water Department," "Tax Collector," "City Treasurer," and "City Clerk." In our present building there is a large amount of room wasted, which could be made into convenient offices for the department at a very slight expense, and I trust that the matter will be promptly referred and that the committe will take hold of the matter in earnest and thereby give these officials suitable accommodations so that they can properly conduct the rapidly increasing business of the various departments.

In my opinion, for the better service of the public and the greater convenience of all city officials, as well as persons having business to transact with them, the offices of the Treasurer, Tax Collector and Water Department, having much in common, should be near each other, and not as they are now located, the Treasurer's office in one part of the building and the Tax Collector's and Water Department in another and inaccessible part of the same.

I would also recommend that the portion of this building now occupied by the police station be fitted up for the office of the City Engineer and that proper fire proof vaults be constructed for the preservation of the plans. The records of this department are exceedingly valuable and become more so every year and it would be a great loss to the city should they be destroyed.

ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT

The new deparment of City Engineer recently established, is now showing its advantages. By the first of February, the plans for the use of the assessors of Ward Two will be practically finished, and in my opinion, sufficient appropriation should be made as rapidly as possible to complete the plans for the whole city, as it will mean a great deal of labor saved in the proper assessment of property.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

This department since the building of a new hose house in Ward Five and placing in the same additional apparatus, gives our city the very best of fire protection with the exception of that section which is called Houghs Neck. Owing to the character of the buildings in that locality and the distance from the central station, the probability of a large and disastrous fire is at all times imminent, and it would seem that the expenditure of a reasonable sum for the building of a suitable fire station in that locality would be one of the urgent needs of your body to consider.

POLICE DEPARTMENT.

The present department consists of the chief and ten men. During the last year a new police station has been established and appropriations made for a patrol wagon and police signal, which will greatly improve the efficiency of this department. It will be necessary, owing to the establishment of a patrol wagon and signal system, to increse the department by three men, and as we have one man doing permanent work as a special officer, I would suggest that the ordinance be changed, increasing the force to fourteen men.

With this increase, after the completion of the signal system and with the adoption of stricter rules for maintaining proper discipline by the Chief in the department, which I shall insist upon being rigidly enforced, I am convinced we shall then have a police department which will give the citizens much better service, and thereby avoid many of the criticisms of this department which have been made with justice.

PARKS.

Under the supervision of the Park Commissioners, the bath house in Ward 2 was put into operation the past year and has proved, by the large number of people availing themselves of its advantages, that the erection of another bathhouse in the north part of the city is desirable, and trust the proper committee of the Council will cooperate with the Park Commissioners in the early establishment of a building of this kind, so that its facilities can be available for use the present year.

WATER DEPARTMENT.

The receipts from this department are increasing yearly, and the expenditure of money for the extension of mains has been a wise one. It is really the only department where money is spent that an actual income is derived from, and I suggest the same policy be adopted the present year as in the past, and a sufficient amount of money be appropriated to extend the mains wherever the income from so doing will increase the profit of the department.

INSPECTOR OF WIRES.

With the rapidly increased demand for electric lights, telephones, police, and fire signals, there exists a great danger, and I believe that the time has now arrived that the office of Inspector of Wires be created; and also, owing to the fact that in the stringing of these wires great depredations have been done to the shade trees of our city by the corporation which had authority to erect poles and place wires thereon, I believe that when this office is created, it should be combined with that of City Forrester, and the erection of all poles and the stringing of wires should be under his direct supervision. A great benefit would be derived from this as it would prevent not only the careless running of wires, but also prevent the wanton mutilation and destruction of our shade trees which has occured in the past by ignorant or careless workmen who have been employed by these corporations.

In conclusion, let me say once more to the members of this Council, old and new that it is my desire to help you everyone, individually and collectively, in all your efforts to better the condition of our city and in all your efforts to properly assist your constituents. It is our common desire to protect and benefit this community, so far as we may, by proper legislation and the efficient carrying out of the same, and when information upon any subject before this Council is within my knowledge, or when, by reason of my past experience, my knowledge or opinion will be of any assistance to you as Councilmen, individually or collectively I earnestly hope that you will not hesitate to call upon me for the same, and I promise you that I will not hesitate to comply or fail to exert myself when that time comes.

THE CHECK CASE.

George F. Osgood now Defendant on Three Counts.

The case of George F. Osgood, alais David Clark, who it is alleged passed a worthless check upon Miss Ella M. Freeman, Aug. 18, last year, came up again in the District Court this morning. Two workmen at the Fore River Works testified that they had been to Miss Freeman's store with Osgood since July and that he always wore a mustache. Miss Carrie Gibson, of Braintree, testified that she was with Osgood, at his house, on the evening of Aug. 18, until 10 o'clock. She also testified that she was with Osgood at Nantasket beach on Labor Day. That shortly before dusk he left her a few minutes. That he called upon her the following night and gave her a picture which he informed her had been taken during the time he had left her at Nantasket.

Peter Hines, a foreman at the Fore River works called by the government, testified that Osgood was employed by him during last summer and that for a time in August, Osgood did not wear a mustache.

John Johnson another employee at the Fore River works, and Harry P. Sampson also of the works, testified that Osgood had his mustache off during the summer.

Osgood recalled, said he never had a check of the Mt. Wollaston bank in his possession.

William W. Keith and Gertrude Berry of the Public market identified Osgood as the man who came into the store in October with a check of the Mt. Wollaston bank.

After the examination of other witnesses the case was further continued.

Complimentary Dance.

One of the prettiest and most delightful of dancing parties was given at Colonial hall, Saturday evening, from half past seven to eleven, by the men of the Tuesday Evening whist club, complimentary to the ladies of the club. The party was given under the special direction of Mr. Arthur B. Holden and Mr. Herbert Barker. There were pretty favors for the German, refreshing frappe, and inspiring music by Daggett's orchestra, a combination that could not help but make the occasion enjoyable.

The ladies all wore fetching gowns and all in all it was a remarkably pretty affair.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Porter, Miss Fay Hitchcock, Miss Clara L. Baxter, Miss Florence R. Emery, Miss Alice K. Prescott, Miss Sara H. Whicher, Miss Annie Eaton, Miss Grace Burke, Miss Edna Miller, Miss Patty Faxon, Miss Jane Reed, Miss Bessie Holmes, Miss Marion Sherman, Miss Kate Lincoln, Miss Louise Farrington, Miss Helen Sibley, Mr. Eaton Pierce, Mr. C. Allen Howland, Mr. William T. Isaac, Raymon Burke, Mr. David Currier, Mr. Delcevare King, Mr. Alva Morrison, Mr. Charles A. Price, Mr. William Thompson, Mr. George Follett, Mr. Arthur Sibley, Mr. Lawrence Sturtevant, Mr. Porter Feary, Mr. Russ and Mr. Ogden.

SILVER JUBILEE.

Wollaston Congregational Society 25 Years Old.

The Wollaston Congregational society is celebrating this week its silver jubilee. The pastor, Rev. Edward A. Chase, delivered an historical address Sunday morning, and said in part:

"On Sept. 23, 1873, a number of professed Christians met at the residence of the Rev. Benjamin Dodge to consult together as to organizing a Congregational church, and unanimously agreed to form the First Congregational church of Wollaston Heights. On May 4, 1876, an ecclesiastical council was convened for the purpose of constituting and recognizing the church. During the 19 months intervening between the first meeting and the gathering of the council, the needful preliminary work had been accomplished. In November, 1874, 11 susberibers associated themselves together as a religious society.

"On the 20th of that month a meeting was held, presided over by a justice of the peace and an ecclesiastical society was properly formed as a corporation A committee of five men was chosen to proceed to build a chapel, the entire expense when completed, ready fo occupancy, not to exceed $10,000. The corner-stone was laid with appropriate ceremonies Oct. 8, 1875. The pastor was the Rev. Francis N. Zabriskie, D. D., was installed Oct. 19, 1876, closed his pastorate Oct. 29, 1879, and died in May, 1891. On Feb. 17, 1875, the ladies of the society met and formed a ladies' benevolent society. The Sunday school was organized Jan. 16, 1867, the first session being held in what now is the small vestry. There were 74 persons present at the first session. The Sunday school has grown three-fold in a quarter of a century, and has raised $4,175 which has been distributed to missionary and benevolent objects.

"During its life the Sunday school has had 10 different superintendents. Two things call for special note; the first that in 25 years only 13 deaths have occurred, the second that in 1886 a very large number joined the church from the ranks of the Sunday school. One of these is president of the Christian Endeavor, and the other is the leader of the Children's Mission band.

"On May 28, 1880, the church called the Rev. F. H. Allen to the pulpit, and the continued till Jan. 1, 1882. The Rev. William R. Lord next assumed the guidance of the church, but was not installed as pastor. On Feb. 15, 1884 the Rev. Barker B. Sherman was called to the pastorate of the church, and was installed April 15, of the same year. During Mr. Sherman's pastorate the church debt was paid and the church edifice was enlarged. He resigned Jan. 9, 1889.

"During the nine months following the pulpit was filled by the Rev. M. M. Cutter. On Jan. 4, 1890, the church called the Rev. Edward A. Robinson, who was then serving as associate pastor of Berkley Temple, Boston, and he was installed March 26, 1891, although his ministry began a year previously. During his pastorate the present parsonage was built, at an expense of $5,850, and the church gained 82 members by letter and 35 by confession of faith. On March 26, 1897, the church voted to guarantee to the Norfolk Downs church a resident pastor for a period. On Oct. 19, 1897, Mr. Robinson resigned his pastorate which went into effect Feb. 23, 1898. The society voted on Jan. 11, 1898, to become incorporated.

"During the nine months following the puplit was occupied by the Rev. Edward Norton, pastor emeritus of the Bethany Congregational church. On Jan. 26, 1899, the church voted to call present pastor, who was installed Oct. 10 of that year."

—A 5-year old boy fell out of a third-story window in Paris, and his life was saved by his falling on a man wearing a silk hat.

FREE FIGHT ON TRACK

Riotous Ending of Six-Day Bicycle Race at Boston

COMBINATION WAS SPOILED

Riders, Trainers and Spectators Thereupon Joined In a General Mixup—McFarland Crosses Tape First, but Prize Money Is Held Up

Boston, Jan. 6.—In a fight which actually became general for a few minutes, the six-day bicycle race at Park Square garden ended Saturday with McFarland and Maya the winners. The six leading teams were on even terms in distance travelled for the week, the winning places being taken in the last sprint.

This great battle for first money started on what proved the last mile. Until the fifth lap the order was McFarland, Freeman, Gougoltz, Leander, McLean and King. Then Leander, in a burst of speed, went ahead of the field. He was going very fast and McLean was after him. While rounding the bank into the backstretch, Gougoltz and McLean came together and went down, the others running away from them. Gougoltz was the first on his machine and away he went. Leander still held the leading position until the opening of the last lap, when McFarland jumped and won first, with Leander second, Freeman third, King fourth, Gougoltz fifth, McLean sixth, Chevalier and Fischer captured seventh prize and Krebs and Keegan eighth. Muller and Jaak, who remained in the race until the finish, got ninth position, but were outside the prize money. The six leading teams covered 1193 miles and 5 laps.

Trouble began almost an instant after the men were over the tape. McFarland, who had only won first place by inches, jumped off his wheel and dashed at Leander. Other riders and trainers made a grab for the men and got Leander out of the way. Freeman next went after Leander and struck him full in the face. Thereupon the riders, trainers and spectators took a hand and for a few minutes the affair looked like an incipient riot. Police officers jumped into the mass of men and straightened out matters, but the excitement was intense.

The fight had been brewing all day. It grew out of Leander's sprinting in the afternoon, which threatened to break up a supposed combination between McFarland, McLean and Freeman to take the race in that order. Leander's sprint broke up the combination, as it proved hard for the three men in it to keep the places in the bunch which would have given them the advantage at night. Then, to add to the friction, Leander started the final sprint, and it was sooner than McFarland had figured on. It led to the spill, and made the race anybody's.

Referee Kelsey, who is the New England member of the board of control, said after the race that it was probable the N. C. A. would investigate the affair, which he called one of the most disgraceful on the track. Afterwards Freeman went to Kelsey to protest Leander.

Referee Kelsey's decision in regard to the finish of the race is being anxiously awaited by the riders and followers of the sport in this city. All Sunday the garden was filled with the riders and their friends and every detail of Saturday evening's finish was gone over. The opinions are many and varied. All deplore the fight which marked the finish of the race, believing that it certainly could do the game no good.

Charges of team work on the part of the six leading teams were openly made, and in this regard McFarland, Freeman and Gougoltz came in for the most censure. Hugh McLean and Leander openly charged that the trio were out to win the race and they were supported by the majority of cycle followers at the garden. McLean, who was thrown in the fourth lap, putting him out of the running, is confident that but for the team work he would have finished first.

Leander, who got second place, was thankful that he succeeded in jumping when he did, for he stated that McFarland was out to "do" him.

But McFarland, Freeman and Gougoltz made the same charges against McLean and Leander. They state that the two had fixed up a deal, and are now angry because they could not pull it through. They also state that threats had been made to throw them "over the fence" if either of the trio tried to win.

The money has not been given out and will not be until Referee Kelsey has made his decision.

HANNA FORCES WON

Their Candidate For Speaker Elected In the Ohio House

Columbus, O., Jan. 6.—In the Republican caucuses Saturday evening for the organization of the general assembly, the Hanna men secured control of the house and the Foraker men of the senate. Some of the nominations for the latter were made without opposition, but there was a fight to a finish and especially for the speakership. There was no compromise in either case. In the senate the senators make up the standing committees themselves. In the house the speaker appoints all the committees and the contest was primarily for the speakership, with everything else secondary. The Republican senate caucus was short and featureless, but the house caucus was animated and lasted several hours. Representative Cole, in presenting the name of Mr. McKinnon for speaker, denied that McKinnon's election could be construed as a humiliation of Senator Foraker, whose re-election they all desired.

Representative Guerin, in presenting the name of Mr. Price for speaker, repeated the statement that Price had been endorsed originally by both senators and other Republican leaders.

McKinnon was nominated over Price on the first ballot by a vote of 38 to 30.

After McKinnon's address of acceptance, Price was called and made the sensational speech of the day by nominating and declaring himself for Hanna for re-election to the United States senate two years hence. Mr. Price said he found it easier to get pledges than votes and eulogized Hanna and McKinnon, to whom he credited his defeat, as men of the highest character.

May Reach Amicable Adjustment

Mexico City, Jan. 6.—There is no essential change in the arbitration situation in the Pan-American congress. The most hopeful feature is that both sides continue to negotiate, proving that they are not anxious to push things to extremes. Those who are most conversant with the situation go no further than to say that they do not despair of an amicable adjustment, without either the Chileans on the one side or their opponents on the other retiring from the conference.

MURDER SUSPECT DEAD

Boston Man Who Was Suspected of Killing His Sister

Boston, Jan. 6.—James Looney was found dead in a cell at police station 5 Saturday and yesterday the medical examiner pronounced death due to alcoholism. Looney was arrested Friday evening on the charge of drunkenness and after he had been discharged by the court Saturday morning, was again locked up on suspicion of connection with the death of his sister, Mrs. Catherine O'Reilley, who was found badly bruised and semi-conscious in the hallway of her home Friday evning, and who said just before her death that her injuries were caused by a fall.

There were suspicious circumstances and evidence of a quarrel between the two and Looney was again arrested. After an autopsy yesterday, the medical examiner stated that the woman's death was due to a blow on the head, and had Looney lived he would have been charged with manslaughter.

BANK ACCOUNTS SHORT

Cashier of Taunton Institution Juggled Figures

ALLEGED THEFT OF $35,000

Harry Townsend Admits Wrongdoing, Which Has Covered a Period of Two Years—Worked In Bank For Twenty-Five Years

Taunton, Mass., Jan. 7.—Harry H. Townsend, cashier of the Bristol County National bank, is reported to be $35,000 short in his accounts, the deficit having been found last night by Bank Examiner Ewer. The breach of trust is said to have been due to speculation in cotton futures. The cashier is under the eye of a United States officer until the bank's affairs are further looked into.

The bank is considered to be one of the most conservative in the county, and it is stated that the alleged shortage of $35,000 in no way will impair its standing. The bank has a capitalization of $500,000, and by its December statement the surplus fund was shown to be $150,000, and undivided profits $53,000.

One of the directors last night stated to The Associated Press that the $35,000 mentioned is the outside figure of the defalcation, and that the bank's surplus will amply protect all interests. The director also said that Cashier Townsend, when irregularities were called to his attention, admitted that he was short in his accounts to the amount stated.

Bank Examiner Ewer's visit last night was entirely unexpected, and it is understood that it was prompted by a suspicion that everything was not just right when he made an examination of the accounts a short time ago.

Cashier Townsend had worked in the bank in various capacities since he left school some 25 years ago. In him the bank's officers had placed great trust. In private life he was not known to be extravagant or other than an exemplary citizen. The facts developed have shocked the directors more than can be described.

One of the directors was asked as to the period covered and by what method the defalcation was made possible. He said that apparently it had been going on for two years, and Townsend admitted this. The figures juggled were in balances with corresponding banks, presumably in New York and Boston.

This director said: "In no way is the bank impaired, as the deficit is a mere bagatelle compared with the resources available to the bank, and to the men who are behind it. The directors are men of wealth and business ability. There should not be the slightest uneasiness in Taunton, although the shock will be a disagreeable one."

Townsend worked up to the office of cashier, which he has held for 17 years. His fall was entirely due to speculation in cotton futures, and for two years he had been playing a losing game. He was a member of several orders in the city, moved in the best of society and was the last man who would have been suspected of being in financial trouble. His bond to the bank is an individual one, signed by 20 Taunton men, each qualifying in $1000.

During the evening Townsend was in charge of Lieutenant Evans of the police force, but when the United States marshal arrived at a late hour the custody was transferred. Townsend will be taken to Boston and arraigned before the United States commissioner. He is expected to waive a hearing.

President Butler

New York, Jan. 7.—Nicholas M. Butler, who has been acting president of Columbia university since the resignation of Seth Low, was yesterday elected president by the board of trustees. The election was unanimous and on the first ballot. Mr. Butler is not quite 40 years old, and was graduated from Columbia in 1882, afterwards receiving the degree of A. M. and Ph. D. He studied in Europe and in 1898 received the degree of LL. D. from Syracuse university. He has held several chairs in Columbia.

Colorado Bank Closed

Grand Junction, Col., Jan. 7.—The Colorado State bank has closed its doors. Some time ago the bank secured a loan of $30,000 from the Hanover National bank of New York for the Colorado Sugar company of this city. The New York bank recently forced the collection of the loan, thus compelling the local bank to suspend. The bank closed its doors in 1893, but was reorganized within a short time afterward.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Justice Brown of the United States supreme court yesterday delivered the opinion of that court in the case of Leo Alexandrof, the Russian subject who is under apprehension in Philadelphia on the charge of being a deserter from the Russian cruiser Variag, holding that Alexandrof should be restored to the Russian government.

"THREE KINGS' DAY"

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 7.—Many of the children of Porto Rico were this season treated to a Christmas tree for the and the visits of Santa Claus are not first time in their lives. Christmas day observed in Porto Rico as in northern countries. In fact, until this season Santa Claus was unknown to the Porto Rican youth. The real Christmas comes 12 days late in Porto Rico, that is as far as the exchanging of gifts and remembrances is concerned. Jan. 6 is Three Kings' day, and the three kings take the place of Santa Claus here. The youngsters here, on the eve of Jan. 6, put a box filled with grass and their shoes out on the balconies or on windowsills. The three wise men who are travelling through the country proclaiming the birth of the infant Christ stop at each box and, if the little boy or girl is good, the three mules which the wise men are riding eat the grass and leave a toy or a bit of "dulce." But, if the youngster has been bad during the year, the box is left untouched and the wise men depart, leaving nothing. To fill these little boxes children of all ages are at work for a week and nearly every blade of grass in the little parks is pulled.

In the schools, on the last school day before Christmas, the teachers told the story of Santa Claus, and in some of the schools Santa appeared in person, much to the delight and astonishment of the children, who never before imagined such a thing. Christmas trees, imported from the United States especially for the occasion, with tinsel and lighted candles and laden with candy and cakes, were a revelation to the children.

Within a few years, it is safe to predict, Three Kings' day will be forgotten, and the pretty little tradition will be a thing of the past. The Americanizing of the island extends even to the folk lore of the people.

Sensational Statements

Kansas City, Jan. 7.—Melbourne MacDowell, the actor, who has just ended an engagement here, has signed a deposition in his suit against Clarence M. Brune, a theatrical manager, in which he swears that in New York, while intoxicated, he was induced to sign bills of sale conveying the rights to the Sardou plays to Brune for $500. He asserts that he was drugged in New York, put on board a steamer and taken, first to Boston and then to Newport News, and that at Baltimore later, while still under the influence of the drug, he was married.

Artist Takes Her Own Life

New York, Jan. 7.—Miss Hannah M. Coggins, an artist of some note, and said to be of wealthy and prominent Philadelphia family connections, was found dead in her apartments on Fifth avenue yesterday. Miss Coggins had appeared morose and depressed of late.

Hangman's Day In Tarheel State

Raleigh, Jan. 7.—Governor Aycock has named Feb. 25 for the hanging of six white men, such a wholesale execution in one day being without precedent in this state. LAWS FOR PHILIPPINES

Embodied In a Bill Drafted by Senator Lodge

COMMISION'S ACTS RATIFIED

Commerce, Regulations For Disposition of Lands, Municipal Improvements, Granting of Franchises and Provisions For Banking System

Washington, Jan. 7.—Senator Lodge, chairman of the committee on Philippines, introduced a bill today for a temporary government of the Philippines, drafted after many consultations with the war department officials directly interested in insular affairs and the government of the Philippines. The bill will not be made a part of the Philippines revenue bill, which has passed the house, but will be an independent measure.

The bill does not attempt to establish a new form of government in the Philippines, but confirms the action of President McKinley in creating a commission and ratifies the acts of that commission under the instructions of the president, dated April 7, 1900. It also gives the president authority, while there is armed resistance in any part of the islands to the United States, to regulate and control inter-island commerce. Section 4, following the Porto Rican act, gives the government of the Philippines power to improve the harbors and other instruments of commerce, and section 5, also following the Porto Rican act, turns over to the government of the Philippines all lands devoted now to public use, bridges, highways, etc.

Under section 6 the government of the Philippines is empowered to make rules and regulations for the disposition of public lands, other than timber and mineral lands, such regulations to have the force and effect of law after they have been approved by the president and congress.

Then follows a series of provisions to enable the commission to perfect the title of persons now occupying public lands and to lease and sell lands to such persons or give them to occupants without compensation. This is to provide for small native land holders who are occupying and for a long time have occupied public lands, but who have no titles to protect them in their holdings.

Next come provisions in regard to the timber lands, which are not to be sold or leased by the commission, who have power only to issue licenses to cut timber under the forestry regulations now in force in the islands. The provisions in regard to timber lands are followed by a number of sections as to mineral lands. These are very elaborate and embody the mineral laws embraced within the report of the commission and which have been prepared by them with great care, so that they shall be in harmony with the existing Spanish laws. The mineral lands sections cover also coal lands and saline lands.

One of the most important provisions in the bill is that empowering the Philippine commission to purchase the lands of the religious orders and dispose of them on proper terms to the actual occupants. An appeal from the supreme court of the islands to the supreme court of the United States is provided in certain cases. Municipalities and the city of Manila are authorized to borrow money and to issue bonds for municipal improvements. There are two sections which provide for the granting of franchises, so that individuals or corporations can go into the islands and construct electric and steam railroads and engage in industries and manufactures. The granting of franchises is safeguarded by the provisions based on the corporation laws of Massachusetts.

Provisions are embodied establishing a coinage system on the lines of "Special Agent Conant's report." The final sections of the bill make provisions for a banking system and authorize national banks of the United States to be established in the Philippines.

WILLETT HELD FOR TRIAL

His Fight With Morgan Caused Latter's Death From Exposure

Newport, N. H., Jan. 7.—After a hearing which lasted nearly all day the coroner's jury called to act upon the death of Leon H. Morgan, whose body was found at Unity last Friday under suspicious circumstances, decided that the victim met his death as a result of being beaten and bruised by J. H. Willett, death being due to exposure as a result. Willett was held in $2500 for the superior court, and in default of bail was sent to jail.

Fifteen witnesses testified, the principal one being William Yuber, who was a companion of Willett and Morgan on the night of the fray and who was subsequently arrested with Willett. Yuber testified that all three men started for Newport and that they were somewhat intoxicated. On the way Willett and Morgan became involved in a dispute as to who should drive. All three were out in the road when Yuber said he was knocked back into the sleigh and that the horse started at the same time. He managed to turn the horse into the yard of Frank Walker and with Mr. Walker subsequently went back to where he thought he left Morgan and Willett, but was unable to find them. He heard of Morgan's body being found next morning and made no attempt to escape from arrest.

At the close of the hearing the court, besides holding Willett, detained Yuber as a witness in $200 bonds, which the latter was unable to furnish and also went to jail.

President of Aldermen Stricken

Everett, Mass., Jan. 7.—The sudden death of Robert H. Jenkins while making a speech of acceptance of the presidency of the Everett board of aldermen came as a shock in the midst of the inauguration proceedings in Everett yesterday. Mr. Jenkins was born in Hudson, N. Y., Aug. 19, 1846. When the Boston chamber of commerce adopted the grain inspection system, Mr. Jenkins was chosen grain inspector. He had lived in Everett for 20 years and held many offices under the town government. He was veteran of the Civil war.

Hereafter the places are to remain closed.

Good Afternoon.

Congratulations to Senator Sprague upon his committee appointments for 1902. He is chairman of two committees—Public Charitable Institutions and Liquor Laws; and second on Street Railways and Fisheries and Game.

Composite pictures of the new mayors and the city halls were used by the Globe in illustrating its stories of the inauguration of new governments, and Quincy City Hall and our new Mayor shows up well in comparison. Several of the cities have wooden buildings.

Charles Alden has the distinction of being not only the first President of the City Council from Ward Six, but also of being the youngest presiding officer the Council has ever had. He has, however, frequently been called to the chair during the past two years and will fill the position acceptably. Ward Six is proud to be the home of the new President.

Clerk of Council Spear came in for good share of the applause at the inaugural ceremonies on Monday. When his election was announced and he came forward to be sworn in, the applause that greeted him was spontaneous. "Chris" waved his hand and although he did not say anything his smiling face showed that he appreciated the applause. Mr. Spear has been clerk of the City Council ever since Quincy became a city, and his services have become indispensible to the transaction of business. With a new clerk the duties of the presiding officer would be much harder than now.

We notice that John Adams chapter, D. A. R., has voted "to put in good repair and keep in good condition the tomb of John Adams." Whether this means the vault beneath the Stone Temple or the earlier burial place of the President in the Hancock cemetery, we are not informed. In this connection we wonder if a new stairway could not be constructed easily from the vestibule of the church to the vault below. Now that many desire to visit the burial places of the two Presidents of Massachusetts such a stairway would be preferable to the circuitious and somewhat dismal approach though chapel, basement and cellar.

Mayor Bryant has saved himself much annoyance and established a precedent which other executives may well follow, by making the bulk of his appointments of departments official upon inauguration day. It leaves him free to attend to the more important duties of his office. Without exception, the appointees are satisfactory to the citizens, and now that the heat of the municipal election is over people generally will be pleased that there will be no change in Commissioner of Public Works and Chief Engineer of the Fire Department. The work of City Engineer Flood and City Physician Welch have been very satisfactory. Better results may be expected from Chief Hayden in the Police department with the new police station and the assistance in making arrests which the signal system and patrol wagon will afford. Paul R. Blackmur, Esq., as City Solicitor, in years past has been very successful in court and before State and Metropolitan boards and the Legislature. If changes are made in some of the appointments withheld the people will also be pleased.

Has not Mayor Bryant made a mistake when he states that the loans of the year 1901 were $49,714.36 less than in 1900? The loans of 1901 as given by His Honor are $160,435.64, to which might be added a small loan which is not included. But the loans of 1900 are overstated, as they amounted to but $158,650.00 as will be seen from the statement of the total debt as made by Mayor Hall in his inaugural address a year ago as follows:

Paid during the year,	112,750.98
Leaving,	$1,359,955.61
Added during the year,	158,650.00
Total Debt, Dec. 31, 1900,	$1,518,605.61

Again was not the amount of money expended in 1901 understated when the total was given as $502,023.202 The Auditor's statement for December 1 (11 months) showed appropriations of $752,825.44 and expenditures of $571,-068.54. One of large items, which apparently was not included, was $70,000 received from the sale of the sewer station which was appropriated for sewer construction.

The City Auditor's report for the year 1900 showed appropriations for that year of $678,369.07 for municipal purposes.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ It would not be contrary to the spirit of Gov. Crane's plan of consolidation if the district police force was joined to the fire marshal's office, with some necessary legislative amendments as to the duties of that office of course, and admittedly there would be some benefits arising from beginning the abolition movement at the other end.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ There are more enormously wealthy men today than ever, more even perhaps than in the most high and palmy days of Rome. But their ambition is more social, less selfish, than it used to be. It is rare today to find a man who knows how to make a fortune, who has not some appreciation of its obligation to the society in which he has made it. Even those who inherit wealth are less apt than once to be mere spendthirfts or misers. George Peabody was in his day an exception. Today one easily counts a half-dozen whose benefactions to a single city have been as great as this. It is a pleasant Christmas thought that the world grows more wisely altruistic as Chrisianity becomes ingrained more and more in its civilization, and is, as it were, second nature.—The Churchman.

THE FIFTH SEASON.

Monday Evening Club Has a Membership of 275.

The Atlantic Monday Evening club opened its Fifth Season auspiciously this week with an attendance of two hundred and fifteen and a paid up membership of two hundred and seventy-five.

Miss Helen Bemis entertained the club with a piano solo and was followed by Rev. Frank Wright Pratt of Wollaston, who gave an interesting address on "the development of the drama." He cited and picturesquely described the "Miracle Plays," "Moral Plays" and "Interludes," and the various changes leading up to the great Elizabethan Age, when the English drama reached its wonderful climax in the works of William Shakespeare.

Miss Alice Coe read from "Timothy's Quest" by Kate Douglas Wiggin. The pathos and originality of style of Miss Wiggin were very pleasantly presented to the club by Miss Coe, and formed a very entertaining part of the program.

Mrs. Rose Thayer Thomas sang to the great edification of the audience "Lydia" by Margaret Lang, "Time Moveth" by Norris, "Husheen" by Alicia Adelaide Needham and "Goodbye" by Tosti; and Mrs. H. Tetlow Wells sang "The Raft" by Pinsuti. Both the soloists were encored. Miss Fannie Hayes accompanied Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Wells' sister played her accompaniment.

The sale of calendars was a brisk one and nearly every one was disposed of.

The thirty minute address for the next meeting is to be by Rev. C. H. Beale of Immanuel Congregational church, Roxbury, on "Robert Browning."

NOT MARRIED.

Holbrook and Miss Sinnott Held in Maine for Grand Jury.

A dispatch of Monday from Auburn, Me., to the Globe says: Charles E. Holbrook and Miss Estelle M. Sinnott of Quincy, Mass., were arraigned in the municipal court this morning, pleaded guilty to the charge against them and were held in $200 each for their appearance before the grand jury at the January term of the supreme court.

They came to this city from Quincy about a month ago and have been living as man and wife without the formality of a marriage service, it is alleged.

Holbrook gave his age as 27 and said that he had two children, and Miss Sinnott said she was 18 years old.

She stated that she had kept company with Holbrook in Quincy, but some time ago refused to have anything to do with him because he drank occasionally. Recently she said, Holbrook promised if she would marry him he would leave off drinking and behave himself and she consented to marry him.

She says Holbrook then procured a marriage license in South Braintree, Mass., and that he promised her if she would go to Auburn with him, they would be married in Boston. This, she says, he refused to do in Boston assuring her that they would certainly be married in Auburn.

She says, after arriving at the house of Holbrook's friends in Auburn, Holbrook told the family that they were man and wife. She says she countenanced the deception, with the understanding they were to be married immediately but Holbrook one day came home in a partially intoxicated condition, and she did not want to marry him. She intended to return home as soon as she could raise the necessary money.

Holbrook told the same story in many respects but said the young woman wanted him to take her away and marry her. He said he would marry her today, but she refused him.

After the Police.

Mayor Willard of Chelsea proposes that the liquor laws shall be enforced. He said in his inaugural:

"That the liquor law is not being properly enforced is too apparent. That there is something radically wrong in the department whose duty it is to enforce the laws I am fully convinced. Whether this condition is caused by incompetence, indifference or dishonesty, I am not prepared at this time to say. A reasonable length of time will be given the chief of police and his department to demonstrate whether they are capable or willing to perform their duty. If, at the expiration of the given time, it appears that there is an officer in the department who has shown himself incompetent or unwilling to faithfully perform the duties required of him, I shall ask your co-operation in effecting his immediate dismissal."

Orangemen install.

The Orangemen of Quincy held open house Monday evening at the installation of officers for the coming year. A large delegation from the ladies' lodge and other invited guests were present. Speechmaking was the principal feature of the evening, the story of religious freedom being related, with several references to English and American history. A collation served in the lower hall brought the entertainment to a close.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

City Clerk's Office, Dec. 24, 1901.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by his office to have the record correct, experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1901, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

ANOTHER CASE.

Small Pox Breaks Out in Large Household at West Quincy.

Another case of smallpox was reported to Board of Health Monday afternoon and prompt investigation by the Board showed it to be a genuine case. The patient is a little girl less tha ntwo years of age named Ruth Smith. She lives with her grandparents John K. Kuehn at 17 Wilson street, West Quincy.

There are eleven people in the house, the men being employed in different parts of the city; one in a grocery store and others in granite sheds. All of these eleven have been vaccinated since the establishment of the free vaccination stations.

As soon as it was ascertained for certain that the suspected case was genuine smallpox a rigid quarantine was placed on the house. As all the other members of the household have been vaccinated no further cases are expected to develop there.

The little girl has not been well for nearly two weeks, and Monday, when a physician was called in, he pronounced it a case of smallpox. To make sure he called in another physician, who confirmed his diagnosis. No time was lost in notifying the Board of Health and Dr. Dion who has become quite an expert made an investigation. He also pronounced it a case of smallpox.

Neither this case or the case on Newport avenue can in any way be traced to the Wollaston laundry.

Some of the children in the same house with the Smith child attended the Willard school, and this morning the children of that school were vaccinated and the school dismissed.

All of the inmates of the house have been quarantined.

The physician who discovered the case of smallpox on Wilson street was Dr. Ash of West Quincy. Knowing the nature of the disease, he reported the case to the Board of Health and promptly withdrew, leaving the patient in the care of the Board of Health.

STRAIGHT FORWARD

John A. McAloon Not Guilty of Forging a Release.

In an issue of the Ledger last week a news item appeared in which was an account of the arrest of John A. McAloon of Quincy for forging a release to the Old Colony Street Railway Co. Yesterday the case was heard in Boston and Mr. McAloon was discharged. The Court in ordering the discharge of the defendant said that there was no doubt but what the transaction was a straightforward one and that no blame whatever attached to the defendant. While the account of the arrest was not pleasant reading for Mr. McAloon, the public is entitled to the news, and now in turn Mr. McAloon is entitled to have the public know that the charge was untrue.

Mrs. Alfred Furnald.

Word was received in Quincy this morning of the death of Mrs. Alfred Furnald, of Nottingham, N. H., she passing away Sunday afternoon after a short illness.

In September Mr. and Mrs. Furnald celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary and both were in good health. Their children and Quincy friends were present to celebrate with them.

Since then Mrs. Furnald has slowly failed until she was confined to her bed a few weeks ago, surrounded by the loving care of her faithful daughters. Mrs. Furnald was over eighty and her death was due to a general breaking up of the system. Mr. Furnald is in good health although over eighty-five, and has the sympathy of all in the loss of his life long partner.

The funeral will be held Wednesday at one o'clock.

Superior Civil Court.

The civil trial list at the Norfolk Superior Court numbered 287 cases, the longest in the courts history. The term opened on Monday with Judge Bishop on the bench.

The case of Rose Winchester vs. West Roxbury and Rosindale street railway is on trial and these cases are in order :

937—Geo. Delano vs. Nor. Sub. St. Ry. Co.
1034—Minne Boynton vs. W. Rox. & Ros. Ry.
1036—Laura Rollins vs. Same.
1120—H. C. Lunsman vs. Same.
1144—Katherine Meighan vs. Same.
1173—F. W. Tirrell et al vs. City of Quincy.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

HIS WIFE'S CAPRICES.

They Have Cost This Man More Than $250,000, He Says.

"I have made over $250,000 in my practice in the last twelve years," said the serious looking man in the car, "and today I am not worth $1,000. I have a very pretty home, to be sure, but it doesn't look as if it had cost a quarter of a million dollars, though it has almost. Remember, I don't blame my wife entirely. She couldn't have taken the money if I had not been willing to give it to her, but I didn't marry her to make her unhappy, and so I humor all her idiosyncrasies, and her idiosyncrasies consist chiefly in tearing our modest domicile to pieces and putting it together again.

"She's had four bathrooms put in it in three years, for instance, each one more elegant than the last. The latest one is tiled and really very beautiful. The fact that we didn't need it has nothing to do with the case, I suppose.

"Then we've had in the same time at least twenty-five closets, pantries and storerooms built in the apartments and taken out again, as my wife's whim suggested. Our conservatory, a very unpretentious one, has been remodeled four times. Once it had stained glass in it, and then, when the flowers didn't flourish in the yellow and green lights, this was removed and clear glass substituted. The flowers have a way of dying in the winter when we need them, and so our florist's bill the following fall is of quite respectable size.

"My wife is a semi-invalid, and almost the only pleasure she has when the weather is too bad for her to get out is thinking of ways to improve things about her. The windows in our sleeping room will illustrate some of the variations that a simple object like a window can undergo. First, these were of the common two sash sort, then they were made into casements, opening down the middle, because that sort could be dressed better; later they became French windows, and now they are of the bow order.

"Only the other day I heard my better half lamenting because she could think of no other kind to try the effect of.

"If you don't believe that a woman, an ingenious woman with a brain, can spend all your money 'improving' an ordinary house, just give your wife carte blanche and see what she can spend in a year. Why, the paper hanger, humble a soul as he is, has found me a gold mine. The thing that worries me now is how long can I keep the $1,000 I am worth at present."

The serious man ceased and sighed. His face bore a hopeless look. The editor gives her remarks here absolutely without comment, though she feels something might be said on the woman's side.—Baltimore News.

Unfelt Troubles.

A gentleman given to habits of extravagance found himself at last in the bankruptcy court and was severely questioned by the presiding official.

"At what precise date did you first find yourself in trouble?" asked the judge.

"I beg your pardon. I do not understand," replied the gentleman, with a puzzled air.

"The question is a very simple one." [Sharply.] "Please answer it. At what precise time did your troubles begin?"

With an air of the utmost perplexity the gentleman gazed around the court until his wandering eyes fell upon the anxious countenances of his creditors; then, with a genial wave of his hand in their direction, he said pleasantly:

"Oh, you must mean these gentlemen's troubles. I can't say I've had any myself."

And, on thinking the matter over, the judge agreed with the bankrupt's opinion.—London Telegraph.

How It Came There.

Now in the beginning Justice was wide awake and kept a strict eye on everybody, the result being that no evildoer escaped punishment.

One day, however, she said to Mercy: "Sister, I am weary, but I cannot sleep. Will you tie a soft bandage over my eyes so I can keep them closed? I want to take a nap."

"I will," replied Mercy, "on condition that you promise to let it remain there till I take it off."

"I promise," said Justice.

Then Mercy tied the bandage over her eyes, as requested, and Justice lay down and went to sleep.

The next day she awoke and said: "Sister, I have finished my nap. I think I will take off this bandage."

"Nay," said Mercy, "did you not promise to let it stay until I took it off?"

"I did."

"Well, you wait awhile."

And Justice is still waiting.—Chicago Tribune.

What the Maine Waves Said.

The poet—or such the Louisville Times dubs him—had a song about the ocean in his pocket, and he longed to read it to his fair companion. It was a little thing of his own, but lacking courage to whip it out boldly, he decided to lead up to it, gracefully, of course.

"Miss Daisy," he began, "did you ever think what those vast, heaving billows, melting on the shore and then receding, sing as they come and go?"

"No, I never have," Daisy replied, calmly, "but when my brother and I were on the coast of Maine last summer we used to listen to the waves breaking, and he said they sounded to him"—

"Poetical?" interrupted the poet, fingering the poem in his pocket.

"Y-es, perhaps so," said Daisy. "They went 'Slosh, b' gosh, slosh, b' gosh,' from morning until night."

"Um!" said the poet, taking his hand from his pocket.

NEW NERVE DISCOVERY

ELECTRICITY THE PRIME FACTOR.

Professor Serviss Claims the Discovery Comes Closer to the Solution of the Mystery of Vitality Than Physiologists Have Ever Approached. Light on Obscure Problems.

Professor Jacques Loeb of the University of Chicago declared recently before the gathering of physiologists in Chicago that he had discovered the physical processes that accompany life, that electricity and not heat energy is the basis of life. Professor Garrett P. Serviss, in explaining this discovery for the New York Journal, says:

The great discovery concerning the nature and manner of action of the human nerves announced by Dr. Albert F. Mathews to the American Physiological society in Chicago and backed by the authoritative approval of Professor Jacques Loeb of the Chicago university is so fundamental and so farreaching in its consequences that it seems to warrant the hope that we shall soon know what are the conditions and the limits of man's power to prolong his own life. It comes closer to the solution of the mystery of vitality than physiologists have ever before been able to approach.

Some of the experiments that have led up to this discovery have suggested a new idea of the nature of death and have resulted in the case of the rudimentary forms of life experimented with in the indefinite postponement of dissolution. Even the discoverers do not think that they can indicate the real depths to which they have reached or toward which they are being led. The whole foundation of physiology and medicine may be reconstructed, and we may find that we possess a control over the phenomena of life more masterful than anybody has yet dared to dream.

Let us see what, in plain terms, the discovery is and why it is so farreaching. Briefly stated, it has been discovered that our nerves, or at least the inner cores of them, consist of what is called a colloidal solution—that is to say, of matter resembling gelatin held in solution in water before it has jellied or assumed the state of a stiffened elastic mass, and these colloidal particles in the nerves carry charges of positive electricity.

Whenever the nerve particles pass from the colloidal condition into the state of gelatin, or, in other words, become jellied, the nerve experiences a stimulation or becomes active. Now, this passage of the nerves from the dissolved to the jellied state is produced by the action of atoms or ions bearing charges of negative electricity. Whenever such charges are introduced into the nerves the latter are stimulated and contract.

This fact at once explains the action of certain chemical substances when introduced into the human body, some of which tend to quiet the nerves and others to excite them. The nerve quieting ions are those that bear charges of positive electricity, such as the atoms of sodium, potassium, calcium and hydrogen, and their presence tends to keep the colloidal particles of the nerves in a state of solution, so that the nerves remain inactive.

The nerve stimulating ions are the atoms of such substances as fluorine and chlorine, which carry charges of negative electricity and when introduced into the system cause the nerve particles to coalesce or become jellied, in which condition the nerve is active, the degree of activity depending upon the intensity of the stimulation. Death appears to be the result of the stagnation of the nerves, resulting from inability to respond to stimulation. How far the discovery of the manner in which nerve action is or can be produced will enable physiologists to oppose the processes that end in death can only be determined by further experiments.

But without regard to any such possible or only to be hoped for results the new discovery throws a flood of light on many hitherto obscure problems. It offers a clear explanation, for instance, of the effect of anæsthetics upon the body. Anything that tends to keep the nerve particles in a state of solution quiets the nerves. Now, the nerve particles are largely composed of fat, and it is well known that all anæsthetics dissolve fat; hence when anæsthetics are introduced into the system they produce the effect of positively electrified ions in preventing the nerve particles from coalescing, and thus they quiet the nerves.

In a similar manner the action of whisky in arresting the progress of snake poison is explained, since snake poison tends to coagulate the nerve substance, thus causing death, while alcohol if introduced quickly enough counteracts the coagulating tendency and keeps the nerves in a colloidal condition.

Other familiar facts are also explained on the same principle. Heat, for instance, as everybody knows, tends to quiet the nerves, provided the temperature is not too high, the reason being that the effect of heat is to prevent coagulation of the nerve substance. Cold, on the contrary, produces gelation in the nerves and consequent stimulation. But at high temperatures heat also produces gelation and stimulation.

One of the interesting conclusions drawn from the discovery is that chemical stimulation is identical with electrical stimulation, because the chemical substances that affect the nerves do so through the electrical charges that they carry. No doubt many theorists will endeavor to base upon this fact electrical cures for disease, but only the most careful experimentation in the hands of thoroughly scientific men can be depended upon to give any valuable results.

Another suggestive fact is that an identity of stimulative action is indicated between chemical ions and light waves. The short light waves toward the ultra violet end of the spectrum are in their action similar to the negative ions which stimulate the nerves, while the long waves toward the red end resemble in their action the positive ions which quiet the nerves. Thus a whole field of speculation is opened up concerning the therapeutic value of light and the means of applying it for the relief of human ills and the prolongation of life.

One other long standing puzzle that the new discovery solves is that of muscular contractility. In what manner, physiologists had often inquired, does the action of the nerves cause the muscles to respond by contracting? The explanation now seems plain. As the nerve substance congulates it necessarily contracts, and negative electricity, given off from the contracted surfaces of the particles, passes on in a current through the length of the nerve. But the muscles also contain colloidal particles, and as these receive the impulse of the negative current they also draw together, and thus contraction of the muscles is produced.

SET LEG WITH AN UMBRELLA

Injured Doctor Used the Steel Frame In Operation on Himself.

Because his knowledge of surgery told him that he had received a severe wound which needed appliances which were not at hand Dr. Walter Lester Carr of New York tore his umbrella into strips and with these and the ribs made a splint and bandages for his broken leg, says the New York Herald. He was on a street car a few days ago on his way to attend a consultation in New Jersey. It was a murky day, and the streets were slippery with mud. At the Pennsylvania ferry at Twenty-third street he signaled to the conductor and a moment later swung off the car. He missed his footing and was thrown. His leg bent under him, and as he sank down he realized that he was badly hurt. Bystanders assisted him to a neighboring doorway.

Declining offers of further assistance, he himself made an examination of his injury. Pressing his fingers into his leg as relentlessly as any physician will a patient, he discovered a compound fracture. Realizing the need of speedy treatment and pressing the bones into place the best he could, he looked about for splints and bandages. There was none at hand, but his umbrella was there.

Quickly tearing the cover from the frame, he ripped this into strips, and a few more jerks separated the steel ribs. He placed the rods about his leg, with the strips of cloth, his handkerchief and necktie, and drew all tightly together, holding the broken bones in their places.

An ambulance had already been summoned, and when it arrived Dr. Carr had completed an emergency treatment equal to that of the average ambulance surgeon with all the material at hand. He was taken to the New York hospital and is now in one of the rooms in the private patients' wing of the institution. The news of his unique treatment of his own injury only recently became known and has been confirmed by Mrs. Carr.

MODEL CITY AT ST. LOUIS.

Ideal Public Works Will Be Shown at the World's Fair.

Howard J. Rogers, chief of the departments of education and social economy of the St. Louis World's fair, was in New York recently to confer with the special committee which is planning the "model city" feature of the fair, says the New York World. The committee consists of Charles C. Height, John De Witt Warner, Charles R. Lamb, Albert Kelsey of Philadelphia and William S. Crandall. The conference was held at the National Art club in New York.

The Administration building will be taken as the municipal center of the model city, and around it will be grouped some of the most important administrative buildings found in a well developed city, such as public library, hospital, museum, public school, fire headquarters, police headquarters and at points adapted to such uses a garbage crematory and a filtration plant for purifying the water supply. There will be sample pavements of the various kinds in use in American cities, with everything else that is used above the street, on the street or underneath, all of which will be models of their kind. In addition there will be a classified exhibition showing municipal conditions as they are in American and European cities.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. TO KEEP OUT CHINESE

Pacific Coast Statesmen Perfect a New Measure

PERPETUAL UNTIL REPEAL

Those Entitled to Enter the Country Must Have Certificates With Photographs Attached—Provisions Relative to Chinese In Our Islands

Washington, Jan. 7.—The senators and representatives of the Pacific coast who have been considering a bill for Chinese exclusion have perfected a measure, which will be introduced in both houses in a few days. It is much more comprehensive than any bills that have been presented heretofore on this subject, most of which simply provided for excluding Chinese or re-enacting the Geary law.

The bill under consideration contains 45 pages. It does not limit itself to any term of years, as did the Geary act, but, if passed in its present form, would be perpetual, unless repealed.

The bill declares that all Chinese, other than citizens of the United States or those who are secured in coming to and residing in the United States under the present treaty with China, will be refused admission and returned to the country whence they came at the expense of the transportation company bringing them. Transportation companies bringing Chinese to the United States shall detain them until their right of admission shall be ascertained. Penalties are provided for not complying with the provisions of the act, $1000 and one year's imprisonment being the minimum, with a liability to forfeiture of vessels for violating any of the provisions of the law.

The only Chinese persons permitted to enter the United States under the act are those who have become citizens by birth and naturalization and officials of the Chinese government; teachers, students, merchants, travellers for pleasure or curiosity, returning laborers, who must have certificate, or domiciled merchants. Chinese coming as above enumerated must have certificates with a photograph attached. The secretary of the treasury is to ask the Chinese government for the list of names of all officials other than diplomatic and consular officers who desire to visit the United States.

Several sections are devoted to providing how Chinese laborers shall be registered and provided with certificates when returning to this country. Certificates for any Chinese laborer are not good after such laborer has been absent for two years. Domiciled merchants are compelled to file annually a full and complete report of the nature and character of their business in order to better identify them. No Chinese, except diplomatic or consular officers, are allowed to enter the United States at any other ports than San Francisco, Port Townsend, Wash., Portland, Ore., Boston, New York, New Orleans, Honolulu, San Juan and Manila, or such other ports as the secretary of the treasury may designate. Ports may be designated on the Canadian or Mexcan boundary after contracts have been made within the lines to comply with the act.

Provision is made for the inspection of Chinese and enforcement of the provision of the act, under the direction of the commissioner of immigration; also for the deportation of Chinese who come to this country. Appeals from the commissioner or his officers to the United States states courts are provided and the method by which cases may be brought to the supreme court is defined.

The following are the provisions relative to Chinese in the islands:

"That no Chinese person being lawfully in Hawaii or Porto Rico or the Philippine islands, or any other insular possession of the United States, shall by reason thereof be entitled to enter or remain in the United States or any of the territory of the United States than that in which he was in the first instance permitted to enter or remain."

The words "United States" wherever used in this act, it is provided shall be deemed to mean "the lands and waters included in the United States and its territories, the district of Columbia, Hawaii, Porto Rico, the Philippines and any and all other territory or possessions now owned or hereafter acquired by the United States."

Provision is made for the registration of all Chinese now in the United States to be completed within six months after the passage of the act. All registered Chinese shall have a certificate, with photograph attached, and those without certificates at the end of six months shall be deported.

Toledo, Jan. 7.—The financial troubles of the Everett-Moore syndicate have resulted in the appointment of receivers for the Toledo and Detroit railroad, one of the properties owned by the syndicate.

FOREIGN MINISTERS DIVIDED

As to Attitude to Be Assumed Toward the Chinese Court

Pekin, Jan. 7.—The Chinese officials have requested the ministers of the powers to keep the legation guards within their quarters today, in order to prevent the possibility of a collision between the Chinese and foreign troops. The ministers will comply.

The families of the foreign diplomats will occupy the buildings which the Chinese government has tendered them for the purpose of viewing the parades in connection with the return of the court to Pekin. There is much criticism of this course among the foreigners, who are not satisfied that the ministers alone will remain in the legations. They believe that the event should be completely ignored. They say that the presence of any members of the legations will be construed as being a sort of homage, and will be thus proclaimed among the people.

The foreigners are divided into two factions concerning the future relations of the diplomats with the court, one of them holding that they should be limited to the fulfillment of the most formal, obligatory ceremonies, and the other holding that in official and social relations the ministers should endeavor to be more intimate with the court than formerly and should meet all Chinese advances in the most friendly spirit.

Many foreign soldiers and a few officers have violated the government's request to keep off the streets, which have been cleaned and decorated for the royal procession. This is likely to create resentment.

Railroad traffic between Pekin and Pao-Ting-Fu, except on the court's business, has been congested since the arrival of the court at Pao-Ting-Fu. Special trains have been bringing the court's baggage here. Official business monopolizes the telegraph lines and the postal service to Pao-Ting-Fu.

The shot had penetrated her hull, and had lain embedded and undiscovered in the oak timbers.

WALLA WALLA DISASTER

Caused the Probable Loss of Forty-Two Lives

CLERGYMAN'S AWFUL LOSS

Wife and Three Children Went Down In the Wreck—French Bark Which Was In Collision With the Steamer Badly Damaged

San Francisco, Jan. 6.—The French bark Max, which collided with the steamship Walla Walla early Thursday morning, was towed to this city in a badly disabled condition. Steamer George W. Elder, from Portland, reported that she passed the Max yesterday in tow of the steamer Acme and the United States revenue cutter McCulloch, 18 miles northwest of Point Reyes. The Max's bowsprit was carried away and her bow was stove in. Her water-tight compartments alone were keeping her afloat.

Ninety-two survivors of the Walla Walla arrived here yesterday from Eureka on the steamer Pomona. There is still some discrepancy in the list of dead and missing. This discrepancy is due to the fact that several passengers boarded the vessel just as she was leaving port. Others who were travelling second-class gave assumed names in order to hide their identity. By striking out what are possible duplicates, the number of lost stands at 42, classed as follows: Known dead, 9; missing passengers, 13; crew, 20.

One life raft is unaccounted for and it is feared that all the missing are lost.

Rev. Henry Erickson, who was among the six survivors brought to this city by the steamer Nome City Saturday night, is at a hospital, a physical and almost mental wreck. His wife and three children are among the dead and missing. The Erickson family, excepting the mother, were second-class passengers. When the crash came they were awakened and all got on the upper deck together. Mrs. Erickson and the two younger children were separated from their father and the elder brother.

What their fate was is not known, but it is presumed they were drowned when the vessel went down. Erickson and his son clung together and were pitched into the water clear of the sinking steamer. They floated around for some time and finally were picked up by the life raft, on which were a number of the officers of the Walla Walla. It was almost daybreak when they were found and they were in an exhausted condition. Father and son were pulled on the light structure, but the boy was too weak to stand the exposure. A few hours later he died in his father's arms, and after the heartbroken man had bowed his head in silent prayer the body was consigned to the waves.

The sea was running high and dashing over the raft, but all clung to it through the long hours of the day and the night. They hoped against hope until the Nome City picked them up. Mr. Erickson was the first to be lifted aboard. It is thought he will recover from the terrible effects of the exposure.

The Max was picked up by the steamer Acme at 11 a. m. Saturday, two days after the collision with the Walla Walla, when seven miles southwest of Point Gorda. Later the revenue cutter McCulloch, which was cruising in search of survivors of the wreck, also fastened a line to the Max. In the collision the bowsprit and jibboom of the Max were carried away. Several plates on the port and starboard bow were stove in. Two large holes were made through the sternplates.

The officers of the Max claim that all their lights were burning. They saw the lights of the Walla Walla. They assert that the Walla Walla tried to cross their bow and that the collision occurred through no fault of the Max.

As a reason for not standing by and tendering assistance they say that it was impossible, owing to the badly disabled condition of the Max. They had all they could do to take care of themselves.

Ill luck has followed the Max since she was built two years ago in France. On her maiden trip, a gale in the south Pacific stripped the hark of her steel masts and her rigging. The vessel sought refuge in a near port and new masts and rigging were set in place. Then she started for home, but again her bad luck followed. As she neared her destination she was caught in the sweep of a mighty gale and stripped of mast, ropes and sails. This time the Max narrowly escaped final disaster.

AUTOMOBILES IN COMMERCE

Fournier Gives His Views Regarding the Vehicle's Possibilities.

Automobiling is a royal sport, as any one knows who has ridden in the chauffeur's seat of a forty horsepower machine on a well kept country road, writes Henri Fournier in January Success. But I do not plead for the automobile as a pleasure machine. I am not a faddist. The automobile is a commercial necessity. Its place is with the electric street car, the locomotive and the traction engine.

While automobiling is now a fad among well to do Americans, although I think it will find a permanent place in recreation and sport, the future of the automobile does not depend upon its use by pleasure seekers. Its great commercial value is not yet appreciated even by those who are most interested in the development of the machine. It is a great time saver. In America "time is money" more than anywhere else in the world. The great newspapers in their race to get the latest news first to distant parts of their cities now employ automobiles to carry the papers from the pressrooms to the newsstands. They travel faster than the electric cars. Te hospitals, to save human lives, send automobile ambulances to transport the injured more safely and quickly to the surgeons. The large shops are greatly improving their delivery service by using automobiles instead of vehicles drawn by horses. The problem of transporting light freight about a large city like New York is beng solved by the automobile. Street railways have tried it, but they could not do it successfully because of the interference with passenger traffic and the impossibility of delivering goods away from the few streets where tracks are laid. An automobile delivery wagon does not have its route marked out by rails.

I look to see all the ordinary work of transportation in the great cities of the world, such as New York, London, Paris and Chicago, done without horses, and I think the change will be made much sooner than most people have any idea of. Everything will be done with greater dispatch, the streets will be less congested and, most important of all, clean. Think what a crowded thoroughfare like Broadway, New York city, would be with no horses in sight, only motor vehicles speeding about hither and yon!

MALT MADE FROM RICE.

Consul General Cole Writes From Dresden of a New Process.

In the latest consular reports received at Washington there appears a letter from Charles L. Cole, consul general at Dresden, describing an invention by Eugene C. Schrottky of Dresden for the making of malt from rice. The process, which is now being perfected, has already proved successful and promises to cheapen the cost of producing malt liquors in Europe.

A primitive method of malting rice, says Mr. Cole, has been known in Asia for many years, but the arrack produced is a fiery liquid, and the so called rice beer did not find favor except among the natives. The inventor claims that in the old process only about 40 per cent of the rice germinated, an equal amount failed to germinate, while 20 per cent decayed, tainting the fermented portion and resulting in an unwholesome product. By means of the new system, which consists essentially of a treatment of the rice lasting five or six days of alternate soaking and oxidation at a uniform temperature, nearly every grain of rice is found to have germinated, and the sprouts have grown about twice as long as the rice grains. The malt will then be ready to dry in the usual way or used at once as "green" malt for the manufacture of beer, spirits or glucose.

Mr. Cole is of the opinion that, while the invention may not be valuable in the United States, where the production of barley is large and the cost comparatively low, it seems likely to cheapen the cost of producing malt liquors in Europe and Great Britain, where they are consumed in such large quantities.

RACE OF GIANTS TO COME.

Professor Henry L. Bruner on the Future Man.

"Strange men, far different from those now living, will walk the earth in centuries to come. They will be a race of brainy, four toed giants," says Henry L. Bruner, head of the biology department of Butler university, near Indianapolis.

"The chest and the upper and lower limbs of the coming man will be larger," prophesies Professor Bruner, according to the Philadelphia Press, "and the future man will be much taller than his brother of today. The future man will live longer. Within a few generations old age will not fall upon men until the century mark is reached. I believe that the ultra blond and the ultra brunette type will constantly decline. Uniformity of the color of the eyes and the hair, however, will never be reached. The man of the future will have superior teeth and hair. Thought saving machinery will relieve the future man of much of his present routine of brain work. The sex of the future man will be predeterminable. For a time there will be a preponderance of one sex and then of another."

To Photograph a Building Daily.

It is reported, according to the Boston Budget, that a camera has been placed so as to take each day one picture of the new building of the department of physics of the Cornell university now being constructed, with the object of producing hereafter a moving picture of the building from its beginning to its completion.

STRENGTH

Is an attribute of manhood universally desired. Few people understand that the only source of physical strength is food, and that every one who has sufficient nourishing food should be strong. But there are thousands of puny people who have plenty of good food. How is that explained? The explanation is simple. Food does not nourish the body unless digested and assimilated. Diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition hinder the proper digestion and assimilation of the nutrition contained in the food eaten. Thus the strength of food is lost, wasted.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and its allied organs. It causes the perfect digestion and assimilation of food and thus it makes men and women strong.

"I had been suffering from indigestion so badly that I could not work more than half the time, but now can work every day and eat anything I want," writes Mr. Victor L. Hayden, of Blackstone, Nottoway Co., Va. "Why? Because I took Dr. R. V. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It has put new life and energy in me, restored my health and made a man of me once more. I used to weigh 170 but had gotten down to 144, now am back to 160 and will soon be back at my old weight if nothing happens. Your medicine has done it all."

AN ELABORATE DISPLAY

Upon the Chinese Court's Entry Into Pekin

PEOPLE ON LEGATION WALLS

Received a Bow From the Dowager Empress, Who Is Awake and Alert, While the Emperor Seemed Indifferent—Imperial Purse Fattened

Pekin, Jan. 8.—The imperial cortege entered the Forbidden City at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was the most brilliant scene Pekin ever witnessed. The procession consisted of a thousand gorgeously attired noblemen, mounted upon glitteringly caparisoned horses. The emperor, the empress dowager, Prince Chun, the empress and several princes were borne in yellow chairs, their escorts carrying hundreds of gay banners and silk umbrellas. The troops of General Yuan-Shi-Kai, governor of Pe-Chi-Li, preceded the emperor. The foreign community assembled on top the Chien gate. The emperor and empress dowager entered the temple in the gate and burned incense. The dowager empress, upon emerging from the temple, saw the foreigners peering down, and bowed. A double row of soldiers, kneeling, lined the four-mile route.

The court arrived from Paoting by special train, reaching the Mia-Chia-Fu station, outside the city walls, at 12:45 o'clock. Thousands of officials had assembled there to receive their majesties. The entire route to the entrance of the palace was lined with troops. It was quite the triumphal entry.

Few foreigners have witnessed the court en route from Si-Ngan. Their progress has been orderly, but there was a constant crush at all the stopping places. The start was made Oct. 6. At dawn trumpeters sounded the call to get ready, the gates of the city were opened, and carts, carriers, and courtiers began to move. By 7:45 the advance cavalry passed. Then came eunuchs in carts, followed by yellow-jacketed officers with flowing plumes and prancing ponies. Then the royal sedans, used last year, were carried past, each containing some important trophy. Next came the royal mounted bodyguard, ordering the crowd to kneel, and instantly they flopped on to their knees.

Soon the outriders, pullers and bearers of the first yellow dragoned chair were in view. The emperor was pulled by 20 and borne by 16 men, dressed in decorated silk gowns. His majesty sat bolt upright, with features that were as fixed as a statue. He looked only straight ahead, as if unaware of the lines of his kneeling subjects.

His chair was followed by that of the dowager empress. Her face is long and wan, with high cheek bones, big mouth and thick lips. Her eyes gleamed like fire. She was as awake and alert as the emperor seemed inert and indifferent. Nothing escaped the sharpness of her vision. The beggars received tablets of silver, and the curious glances of scorn. Everyone remarked how careworn she looked.

In striking contrast with the wierd countenance of the dowager was the young face of the empress. She seemed rather embarrassed by the crowds and stole nervous, furtive glances on either side. She looks an innocent, ordinary official's daughter, but the paint, powder and gee-gaw spoil a pretty face. She was followed by the chief concubines. After their baggage came the heir apparent, but he was invisible. Then the royal princes of the blood, and finally the minister of the grand council—Yung Lu. Then next passed a train of carts with the innumerable attendants that are at once the glory and disgrace of an Asiatic court.

Along the route every place was compelled to contribute to the imperial purse. This absorption will insure considerable appropriations for her majesty's house. Some 3000 carts were commandeered for this royal retinue for eight days after the court's departure from Kaifeng. At Fangy the runners and underlings preceding the court devoured the food which had been prepared for the emperor, and the commissariat officers, to avoid disgrace, committed suicide. Three hundred cooks were retained at Chengte. They secured their pay in advance, and then, being unable to provide for the hungry multitude, they decamped with whatever they could carry.

The imperial party was accompanied by a few hundred cavalry, two companies of infantry and a large number of men with shovels and brooms, whose duty it was to see that the roads are in condition for the passage of the court. When the party arrived at Paoting the master of ceremonies commanded the spectators to kneel. The foreigners present stood still, whereupon the master of ceremonies ordered that hats be removed. This order was obeyed, and natives and foreigners bowed to the empress dowager, who bowed and smiled in response.

Paoting's accommodations were greatly overtaxed by the large retinue of the court. The court entered the city by a circuitous route between high mat walls, in order to avoid the unlucky western ghost. The shopkeepers placed food offerings, and sandal wood incense was burned in the streets through which the court passed. The court left Paoting yesterday morning by rail.

SOME NEW FACTS

Promise to Illuminate the Schley-Sampson Controversy

Washington, Jan. 8.—The object of Admiral Schley's visit to the White House was to request the president to entertain and consider an appeal for the reversal of the action of Secretary Long and the disapproval of the majority judgment of the court of inquiry. The interview was satisfactory, the president granting the admiral's request. Messrs. Rayner and Teague will assist Admiral Schley in the prapartion of the appeal.

The interview with the president was arranged in advance. Admiral Schley had been given a full opportunity to present the case from his standpoint and to acquaint the president with many details of which the latter could not have any knowledge. While Admiral Schley would not make any statement regarding the matters discussed, it is understood that he brought to the president's attention many of the alleged injustices and discrepancies of the majority report of the court of inquiry.

Admiral Schley's interview with the president was the result of his determination to exhaust every means in his power to overturn the judgment which has been rendered against him. His new appeal will be different from that submitted to the navy department, bringing out some new facts which have an important bearing upon the controversy.

RIOTERS PUNISHED

Suspension, Fine and a Setback Result From Park Square Turmoil

New York, Jan. 8.—At a special meeting of the National Cycling association board of control yesterday the protests involved in the six-day race which was completed at Boston last Saturday evening were decided as follows:

For conduct detrimental to the sport in inciting a riot at Park Square garden, Boston, Jan. 4, Floyd A. McFarland is suspended from all connection with cycle racing until June 15, 1902; McFarland is given the privilege of applying at the annual meeting of the N. C. A., to have this suspension changed to a fine.

For a like offense at the same place and date, Howard F. Freeman is fined $50 or has the option of accepting a suspension until June 1, 1902.

It having been established that Jean Gougoltz fouled McLean in the finishing mile of the Park Square garden race the McLean-Butler team is placed fifth and the Gougoltz-Simar team sixth.

Sought Revenge With Acid

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Alfred M. Snydacker of a local firm of bankers is in a hospital as the result of injuries from carbolic acid flung into his face by Paul Mueller, a dealer in artificial flowers. Snydacker may lose the sight of an eye. The cause is said to have been that Mueller placed goods in a building leased by Snydacker and failed to insure them. The building was burned and Mueller has attempted to hold Snydacker responsible.

Berka ordered the police to eject Gordon and he was thereupon hustled out.

PANAMA COMPANY'S OFFER

Declared to Be Part of Plan of Delay—No Doubt That Nicaragua Route Is Feasible—Believes That Work Could Be Completed In Eight Years

Washington, Jan. 8.—The debate on the Nicaragua canal bill in the house was opened in lively fashion by Mr. Hepburn, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee, which reported the bill. For two hours he held the floor, replying to a volley of questions concerning the recent offer of the Panama Canal company to sell its property and franchises to the United States for $40,000,000. The interest in the debate centered almost entirely in this new phase of the subject.

Mr. Hepburn maintained that the alleged new offer of the Panama company was part of the plan of delay. All his utterances along that line were liberally applauded. He pointed out what he claimed was the suspicious circumstance that the Panama Canal company held out for $109,000,000 until it was decided before the holiday recess to consider the Nicaragua bill and then suddenly dropped the price to $40,000,000.

In the United States 37 states had instructed their congressional delegations to support a bill for an inter-oceanic waterway; all political parties had aligned themselves in favor of it, the subject had been discussed in congress, scientific societies, the newspapers, and on the hustings, until there was now a volume of literature on the subject never before devoted to a single project.

Mr. Hepburn said the report of the Walker commission gave careful consideration to every feature of the works. The bill submitted by his committee proposed to concentrate all authority in the hands of the president. It opened no opportunity for defunct statesmen or the pensioning of persons who had been passed in the race of life. It gave the United States the authority to protect, defend and operate the canal. In view of all the reports submitted Mr. Hepburn said there could now be no question in the mind of any well-informed man of the feasibility and practicability of an inter-oceanic canal.

"The company raised $256,000,000 by the sale of $433,000,000 of bonds and after eight years the managers of the company found themselves with the work less than one-fourth completed, penniless and bankrupt in money and character." The disaster to this company, he said, had proved conclusively that the work should be undertaken by governmental agency. If the pending bill became a law the work could begin at once, and should be completed in eight years.

Mr. Hepburn said that as a commercial venture the commission's figures of 7,000,000 tons could be safely taken. At the latter figure the total revenue at the Suez rate would be $14,000,000, enough to meet the cost of maintainance ($3,500,000) and leave over $10,000,000 to meet interest charges if there were such.

In concluding, Mr. Hepburn said there might be some interests in the United States which believed they would be harmed by the rivalry of this canal, and there were gentlemen of honest purpose who thought the time was not ripe for the building of a canal, or that an enterprise of such magnitude should not be undertaken. They were perhaps terrified by the spectre of scandal. "But," he concluded, "I insist that the American people have made their decree that the canal shall be built and that now is the time to build it.

Mr. Morris (Minn.) gave notice that at the proper time he would offer an amendment to authorize the president, if he could procure the property and rights of the Panama company for $40,000,000, if concessions could be procured from Colombia and if the Walker commission so recommended, to purchase and proceed to complete the Panama canal.

The first notes of the contest between the Nicaragua and Panama routes for the isthmian canal were heard in the senate yesterday. Mr. Morgan offered and secured the adoption of a resolution which indicated his purpose to have the committee on inter-oceanic canals inquire into the relations alleged to exist between the trans-continental railroad companies of the United States and Canada and the Panama Canal company.

In explanation of the resolution, Mr. Morgan declared that the alleged relations were a "wicked monopoly," which already cost the people of the Pacific coast millions of dollars. The relations involve control by the Panama Canal company of the Panama Railroad company and the agreement existing between certain railroads of the United States and the Pacific Mail Steamship company.

A MIDGET'S TROUBLES

She and Her Young Husband Air Their Grievances In Court

Boston, Jan. 8.—The marriage and business affairs of Chiquita, the Cuban midget, were under consideration by Justice Morton in the supreme court yesterday. The court proceedings began a few days ago through the effort of Anthony Woeckener, the 17-year-old lad who married Chiquita at Buffalo, to obtain possession of her. In the first hearing there was considerable talk of affection between the husband and Chiquita, but yesterday Justice Morton said: "I feel that the marriage between this little woman and this 17-year-old boy should not have taken place under any circumstances. I do not think the marriage was the offspring of love and affection. There seems to be some ulterior motive behind this."

The court found that Chiquita has been well treated by her manager, and that if she breaks her contract with him she knows what she is doing. She is 36 years old.

In the hearing Chiquita had complained that she could not see her husband when she wanted to, and was willing to do what her husband said, either to break the contract or to make other arrangements. Woeckener, though small in stature, is a giant beside his wife. Chiquita testified in her own behalf, perched on a chair on the witness stand and surrounded by lawyers retained by the several interests. She testified in a shrill voice and gave bright answers to questions asked her. Justice Morton said he would give his decision later, having to consider how far he could give effect to her wishes with due consideration to her legal rights and the marital rights of the husband.

Minister Sent to Prison

Boston, Jan. 8.—Rev. J. W. H. Johnson, one of the negro porters at the state house, who was recently ordained to the Baptist ministry, was arrested yesterday on the charge of having taken money from a drawer in the office of the state board of pharmacy, being caught in the act. Johnson confessed that he took money at different times from the drawer, and a bill which had been marked was found on him when he was searched. He was turned over to the district police, who took him to the municipal court, where he was sentenced to the house of correction for six months.

Settled at Reduced Figure

Gardiner, Me., Jan. 8.—The suit of Walter R. King, who was so terribly burned on the Evans hotel roof in this city in September, 1900, has been settled, the electric light company paying the plaintiff $5500. In October last a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff of $11,166.63. The case was appealed to the law court, but in the meantime the health of King became so precarious on account of his injuries that $5500 was accepted in settlement so King might realize some of the benefits of the money during his life time.

Laconia Goes Dry

Laconia, N. H., Jan. 8.—The effect of Judge Peaslee's decision in the Manchester liquor cases was felt here last night. City Marshal Scott notified the proprietors of the hotels and saloons to close their bars at 10 o'clock and not to open them again. When the clock struck 10 there was not an open bar-room in the city. Shortly after 10 o'clock crowds gathered in different parts of the city, popular songs being sung by those taking part in the demonstration.

Thinks Son Was Murdered

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 8.—John Brown, father of Frederick Brown, whose body was found at the Huntington avenue station of the Boston and Albany road in Boston, Dec. 17, yesterday informed the Boston police of his belief that the young man was murdered. On Dec. 17 the young man had a gold watch and chain, a diamond ring, a scarf pin and considerable money, and none of these articles was recovered from the body.

From Vagrancy to Fortune

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 8.—Word has been received here that Jeremiah Healey, heir to a fortune, who recently was arrested in Greeley, Col., as a vagrant, has started for this city in company with a brother who left here a few days ago to bring him home. He is 24 years old and a nephew of the late Police Commissioner Healey of this city, from whom he inherits about $10,000.

Competition Will Reduce Fares

Boston, Jan. 8.—While it does not bear official sanction, the statement is made that the Boston and Albany railroad will make reductions in fares on its Newton circuit line to bring about greater competition with the trolley lines. Should the plan be carried out, there would be a 5-cent fare to Newton and the intermediate points on the line.

Offer Before the Cabinet

Washington, Jan. 8.—At the cabinet meeting yesterday the proposition of the Panama Canal company to transfer its property to the United States for the sum of $40,000,000, was discussed at some length. It is expected that the isthmian canal commission will make a supplementary report to the president which will embrace the latest proposition of the Panama company.

Good Afternoon.

With a Senator from Quincy as chairman of the Committee on Liquor Laws and a Representative from Quincy also a member, it would appear that Faxon's city might almost shape the liquor legislation for the State this year.

A great many people enjoy the Merrymount skating pond, especially the young; day and night in good weather the pond is covered. The city has been kind in thus providing such a good place but many would not be so timid at night if the city would go further and erect a few electric lights, as some places look dark and treacherous when "the moon am far away."

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Why do the Cubans not recognize the fact that annexation is the sensible thing, and become a part of the greatest republic in the world. How much more secure the real freedom of the Cuban people would be, how much more truly free, if Cuba were the sister state of New York and Texas. Cuba, has, with the help of this country, thrown off the body of death which so long encumbered her. This is but half the task. Let her recognize the fact that this is the age of great governments as well as great enterprises, and let her not get into that class of "governments" which makes South America a scandal and burlesque throughout the world.—Atlanta Constitution.

☞ It may be interesting to the many people who think that in this country we suffer from an exaggerated form of trade union tyranny, to learn that a few weeks ago some painters who were redecorating the interior of a church in a midland town in England ceased work because women were employed to clean the droppings of paint on the pews, and the employers had to finish the job themselves and that quite recently in a seaside town there was a strike of teamsters because their employer refused to discharge a driver who had made a journey to a neighboring town three hours quicker than they themselves had been accustomed to take. Consul Boyle of Liverpool vouches for the truth of this almost incredible story. — Boston Commercial Bulletin.

☞ The simple facts that in our public school system as it is organized today children do nothing really well because they are not trained to do anything thoroughly. The old system of the three Rs'' as it was pursued in the district school had at least the merit of simplicity and under it were trained some of the strongest men and women in mind and character that this country has ever produced. The strong man and the strong woman are not the boy and the girl who have studied in school the most things but the boy and the girl who have been taught that nothing is done well that is not done thoroughly and that the aim of all knowledge is the truth. We oblige our school children to give a half hour to moral training a week, an hour and a half to science, two hours to manual training, an hour and a half to drawing, an hour to music, two hours to geography, two hours to history, three to four hours to arithmetic and seven to nine hours to a conglomeration of picture talks, penmanship, grammar and choice poems or selections and then wonder why they are so ill fitted for the responsibilities of life.—Beacon.

MAYOR HALL'S VETO.

Which Killed the Building Ordinance.

Too Extensive and Too Expensive.

Says Council of 1902 Should Pass a Simpler Ordinance.

The full text of the final veto of Mayor Hall of 1901, which killed the Building Ordinance passed by the City Council of last year, is given below. It is worthy of careful consideration, as Mayor Hall was not opposed to a simpler draft:

Quincy, Mass. Jan. 4, 1902.

Dear Sir:—I return the Ordinance establishing the Office of Inspector of Buildings and defining his duties, passed by the Council at its last meeting, without my approval.

On several occasions I have expressed the opinion that we should adopt some restrictions and establish some regulations concerning the erection of buildings in our city, but I believe this Ordinance to be too extensive and sure to increase the cost of conducting our municipal business very much in excess of the benefit which will be derived from its operation.

It is in conflict with the provisions of our Charter and Ordinance in several instances, and is indefinite and uncertain in its requirements, and certain to work injury and expense to the city and to the citizens in its operation.

The adoption of this Ordinance will require the employment of a very competent person and will make a large addition to our list of salaries.

I am positive that it is incumbent upon our Councilmen to consider carefully the necessity of the strictest economy in the administration of our government, and for this reason should not increase the list of salaried officials beyond absolute needs.

In my judgment whatever is done in the way of providing for building inspection should be in connection with the office of Commissioner of Public Works, and that such service as the occasion may require should be engaged by him.

Such an Ordinance as this will increase the cost of construction very materially, to such an extent as to restrict building to a considerable extent, and raise the price of rents beyond the ability of very many of our citizens to pay.

The most dangerous section of our city so far as the fire risk is concerned is exempted from the provisions of this Ordinance, whereas if some simple requirements were in force, this section would be included and the very purpose sought to be encompassed by this legislation would be secured.

I believe this matter should be reconsidered very carefully, and very materially simplified, and should therefore be again taken up by the Council of 1902.

For these reasons, I herewith return the Ordinance without my approval,

Respectfully,

John O. Hall, Mayor.

Judge Avery an Offcer.

The Norfolk County Bar Association held its fifth annual meeting in the law library at Dedham on Monday. The treasurer's report showed the organization in a very flourishing condition. The receipts for the year including last year's balance of $751.27 were $3,726.59. There is now a balance on hand of $2,708.09.

The new officers: President James E. Cotter of Hyde Park; Clerk Edward S. Fellows of Hyde Park; Treasurer, Louis A. Cook of South Weymouth; Executive Committee, James E. Cotter of Hyde Park, Albert E. Avery of Braintree and George W. Wiggin of Franklin; Librarian, Louis A. Cook of South Weymouth.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Anasto Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

In Memoriam.

It is our sad duty to have to chronicle the death of Mrs. Mary L. Chadbourne, wife of the late Capt. Charles G. Chadbourne, aged 69 years, 9 months and 12 days. She departed this life at her home 6 Chester street, Wollaston, after a long lingering illness, that has fully attested her noble Christian qualities. Altho' an invalid for years she has been ever mindful of the sufferings of others. She has been identified for several years with the Sunshine society, seeking to bring happiness into the lives of others.

The family has the sympathy of the entire community, in this their hour of trial. The town has lost a respected citizen, the family a devoted mother and society a most cherished member. Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 P. M. Interment at Bath, Maine.

An Ice Trust.

A Brockton dispatch to the Herald says: A deal is in progress in this city which is said to be the inception of an ice trust, intended to control the ice trade of eastern Massachusetts and possibly of New England. Ice dealers in this city have been approached by H. A. Wilbur a Bridgewater ice dealer said to represent the American Ice Company, and urged to give a price for their plants, with an agreement not to again enter the business for a term of years.

Prices have been named by some of the dealers, and time given to consider the same. It is said the plans include the purchase of every ice plant in this section, and the merging of them in one trust property, with a view to control the trade and prices.

President Bradford Resigns.

The regular meeting of the Master Builders and Traders association was held Tuesday evening. There was a good atttendance considering the inclement weather. William A. Bradford tendered his resignation as president of the association but was requested to hold his office until the annual meeting.

There was an informal discussion upon giving up the charter of the Association.

This discussion was brought about by the fact that there was some feeling on the part of some of the members because the association membership was not confined to builders, but admitted traders as well. It was decided, however, not to dissolve the association, but to continue on the same lines as at present.

Quincy Train Service.

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger:

There is one matter I hope the new city administration will take up, and not drop until something is accomplished, and that is the train service between Quincy and Boston.

For years we have been promised better accommodations as regards station, trains, etc. We have the station, such as it is, for which we are duly thankful, but all is quiet regarding more trains. A plea a few years ago on the part of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad was that they had insufficient tracks but would soon make the road a four track one, and then we should be accommodated. That is an ancient story, so old that it is forgotten by half and not believed by the other half. A four track road seems no nearer now than it did ten years ago, and Quincy people should not be bluffed any longer, but wake up and demand their rights, namely fifteen minute service all day if not that, half hourly at least, with an occasional express for the business men.

Is it sensible to think that a town of less than 20,000 population with over forty trains each way daily, as it grows to 25,000 or 30,000 population will quietly submit to less than thirty trains each way daily? That is just what Quincy has done, and I blame the people because they have not asked for their rights and kept what they once had. No city or town of the population of Quincy within ten miles of Boston or any other large city, has such poor train service.

Why Quincy, one of the best paying stations on the whole road, should have received such treatment at the hands of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. company I have never been able to understand.

Several times I have been to Boston lately, when, after a stop at Wollaston, the brakeman has called out standing room only. That has natural sound on the street cars, but should never be heard on a steam train. I have seen ladies stand up all the way from Wollaston to Boston on several occasions.

For years we had a noon train, well patronized by the business men; then new men took hold of the timetable and it was dropped. After a petition and much work it was restored only to be dropped when the timetable changed again and after a time our people got tired of the continual fight for it and submitted.

Another train displeasing to many is the 10.50 P. M. outward train. It is almost impossible to get this train from any theatre, generally arriving just a few minutes too late with over a half hour to wait for the 11.28. If the train left at 11 as it used to, it would be a great accommodation especially to ladies who do not care to encounter the rougher element found quite often on the last train out at night.

I am only voicing the sentiments of our people, as I have talked with them off and on, and speak of what I know and have seen and heard for myself.

Knowing the Ledger is always ready and willing to insert communications, which are for the benefit of the public, I hope others will write on this subject, until the city fathers and the railroad management give us our just dues.

INSURED FOR A MILLION.

Heirs of Grain King Peavey Will Receive Huge Sum.

One million dollars will shortly be paid by the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York to the heirs of Frank H. Peavey of Minneapolis, a millionaire grain man, who died recently in Chicago of pneumonia, says the New York Herald. Mr. Peavey was fifty-two years old and was credited with being the largest owner of grain elevators in the world. He had been ill only ten days.

On April 28, 1900, Mr. Peavey was insured in the Mutual Life Insurance company for $1,000,000, taking out a twenty year payment policy. The annual premium was $48,390, and as Mr. Peavey's death occurred just one year, eight months and two days after the policy was issued only two payments, amounting to $96,780, had been made. Through Mr. Peavey's death his estate is therefore increased by $903,220.

Shortly before Mr. Peavey took out the million dollar policy he was examined by a special medical board under the direction of Dr. Grenville M. White, the chief medical director of the company. After a painstaking examination the board reported the applicant in perfect health.

A few weeks ago Mr. Peavey was in New York and visited the home office of the company in Nassau street. One of the officers said that he then appeared to be in the most robust health, being a splendid specimen of physical manhood. In response to a query concerning his health Mr. Peavey replied, "I am enjoying my usual good health and fully anticipate living until the expiration of my million dollar policy in 1920."

Insurance companies rarely assume such large risks upon an individual life. George W. Vanderbilt is known, however, to have a policy for $1,000,000 in the Mutual. In taking such risks the company always reinsures a part of the amount in other companies, thus diminishing its own risk. Foreign companies frequently assume a part of this risk, and by the death of Mr. Peavey several such companies will be called upon to settle their part of the million dollar policy.

In Chicago it was learned that Mr. Peavey, in addition to the million dollar policy, carried $500,000 on his life in various companies, the policies ranging from $6,000 to $20,000. His estate, it is said, is valued at $10,000,000.

BOY AIDS ANTHROPOLOGISTS

The curiosity of an educated Navajo Indian boy concerning an old tradition of his tribe has led to the discovery that the Navajoes of Arizona and the Tinneh Indians of Alaska are branches of the same original tribe, says a Helena (Mon.) dispatch to the New York Journal. This fact is made known by the Rev. Father George de la Motte, superior general of the Jesuit missions in Alaska.

"This discovery was made," said Father de la Motte, "through the curiosity of a young Navajo Indian who had been told a tradition of the tribe handed down from father to son for many generations that the Navajoes at one time inhabited a cold country.

"This boy read something in a magazine concerning the Tinneh Indians. The word 'Tinneh' in the Navajo language means 'man.' He became so interested that he wrote to a missionary in Alaska, mentioning a number of Navajo words and their meanings. It was found that the same words and same meanings were found in the Tinneh language.

"Other tribal peculiarities were compared, with the result that it has been established beyond reasonable doubt that the Navajoes and Tinnehs are offshoots of the same original stock."

This discovery is of immense value and interest to anthropologists and strongly confirms a long believed theory that the American Indians migrated from the north to their hunting grounds on this continent, displacing the original inhabitants of America, and that, furthermore, they originally came from Asia.

Boers Fought In Their Socks.

Independent accounts of the Boer attacks on Colonel Firman's camp on Dec. 24 add little to the official story of the occurrence except that General De Wet's force of 1,500 men, as at Majuba, removed their boots, climbed the precipice without noise and completely startled the sleeping British camp, says a dispatch from London to the New York Herald. The terrible struggle lasted barely half an hour. Three more British officers have died from wounds received in this engagement, making all told nine officers killed.

Washington, Jan. 8.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt gave a reception at the White House last night in honor of the diplomatic corps. It was the first formal evening levee of the season. A full representation of the diplomatic corps made the affair notably brilliant. The floral decorations were handsome and elaborate.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. COMPARISON OF LOSSES

During the Past Year In the South African Campaign

BOERS GREATER SUFFERERS

Casualties From Actual Fighting Twice the Number Sustained by the British—Have Also Lost Hundreds of Thousands of Heads of Stock

London, Jan. 8.—A published review of operations in South Africa during the past year, based upon official reports, gives an interesting comparison of Boer and British losses. The review says that the total reduction of the Boer forces in killed, wounded, taken prisoners and surrendered, amounts to 18,320 men. Out of this total only 7993 rifles were secured. The captures of Boer ammunition amount to 2,300,000 cartridges. British columns are supposed to have secured all the Boer artillery, amounting to 27 guns, exclusive of the two captured by General DeWet at Zeefontein. The captures of Boer stock have been enormous, considering the great hauls made during the earlier years of the war. During the last year a total of 29,882 horses were captured, while of other stock, such as cattle, oxen and sheep, 366,821 head were captured.

The British casualties from actual fighting amount to only half of those sustained by the Boers, namely 9113 men, of which number 1513 were taken prisoners and have since been released. During the last year 4030 men died of disease, 15 officers and 342 men were killed accidentally and 25,800 men were invalided home.

Lord Kitchener, telegraphing from Johannesburg on Jan. 6, reports the occurrence of a number of skirmishes in various parts of the war field. The most serious were at Amersfoort, Jan. 3 and Jan. 4, when Major Ploiner and Colonel Spens were in contact with Commandant Christian Botha's and Commandant Opperman's commands, and drove the Boers from their positions after considerable fighting, during which the Somerset light infantry suffered severely. Major Vallentin and 18 men were killed and five officers and 28 men were wounded. The Boers left nine men dead on the field.

Colonel Colenbrander surprised Field Cornet Louw's laager at Watervale, Jan. 5, killed five men and captured 29. Lord Kitchener mentions other minor surprises and captures.

General French reports that the Boers in Cape Colony are so reduced in numbers as to require only an elaborate police system to keep them in check.

The week's totals of the Boer casualties are 36 men killed, 9 wounded, 261 made prisoners and 72 surrendered.

With the consent of Lord Roberts and the approval of Lord Kitchener, it has been decided to increase the imperial light horse brigade, making it truly imperial by the addition of squadrons from Great Britain, Canada and Australia.

Conflicting Statements

San Francisco, Jan. 8.—Nothing has been heard of the missing victims of the Walla Walla and it is expected that they went down with the steamer. The statement of Lookout Johnson that he saw the lights on the bark Max and warned the officers on the bridge of the Walla Walla is denied by them. Other members of the crew of the Walla Walla corroborate Johnson's assertion that the lights on the French bark were visible.

Speaks Well For American Goods

Washington, Jan. 8.—"Five years ago it was not possible to buy an American shoe in Switzerland," says Consul Morgan, in a report to the state department. "Now it is no novelty to see in the shop windows of the largest towns shoes with a little American flag and the announcement that they are American made attached, the inference being that they must necessarily be good."

Hereford Bull Brought $9000

Chicago, Jan. 8.—The Hereford bull "Perfection 92891" was sold for $9000 yesterday at the Union Stock yards. This is the highest price ever paid in America for a Hereford and the highest price in recent years for a bull or cow of any breed. He was purchased by Bilbert H. Hoxie, of the Mallory Live-stock Commission company of Chicago.

Modern Railways For Mexico

ESCAPE CUT OFF

Cave-In In a Michigan Mine Entombs Fifteen or More Men

Ishpeming, Mich., Jan. 8.—Fifteen or more men were entombed by a cave-in in the Negaunee mine last evening and it is feared all will perish. The work of rescue was begun without delay, but none of the entombed men has been brought to the surface. There are two shafts to the mine, but it is believed all chance for escape was shut off when the cave-in occurred. The manager of the mine could not give the names of any of the imprisoned men. Relatives of the workmen surround the opening of the mine and are anxiously awaiting developments.

The Negaunee is considered one of the most unlucky properties in the Lake Superior district. Much trouble has resulted in sinking and drifting from surplus water and quicksands.

It was at this mine that $1,000,000 was recently expended to sink a shaft to the ledge.

Judge Fined and Others Imprisoned

San Francisco, Jan. 8.—The United States circuit court of appeals fined Judge Noyes of the Alaska district $1000 for contempt of court. District Attorney Wood and his assistant, C. A. S. Frost, were sentenced to imprisonment for four months and one year, respectively. Judge Noyes and the others above named, together with Alexander McKenzie, were accused of conspiracy to obtain certain rich claims in the Nome district, by the use of the processes of the court in which Noyes presided.

Troops to Leave Matanzas

Washington, Jan. 8.—The third squadron of the Eleventh cavalry, stationed at Fort Myer, Va., will sail from New York on the transport Buford on the 21st inst for service in the Philippines. These troops will be succeeded at Fort Meyer by troops F and G of the Second cavalry, which have been stationed at Matanzas, Cuba, for many months past. The entire second squadron of the second cavalry will sail from Matanzas for New York about the 15th inst.

Split on Arbitration

Mexico City, Jan. 8.—The arbitration situation has reached a crisis among the delegations of the Pan-American conference. The Central and South Americans opposed to the Chilians held frequent meetings yesterday. If they cannot find a form acceptable to the other delegations they will probably withdraw. The Chilians also say that in whatever form the compulsory arbitration plan is reported to the conference they will quit.

Rhode Islanders Sell Oil Interests

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 8.—A deal has been consummated between the Indian Territory Illuminating company, composed of Jersey City capitalists, and a party of Rhode Island bankers, by which the latter turn over all their oil wells in the Indian territory and other properties, including the oil rights of the entire Osage nation, to the New Jersey company. The wells now in operation produced 20,000 barrels of oil during 1901.

Receivership Inevitable

Buffalo, Jan. 8.—It having been found impossible to unite the creditors of the Pan-American exposition to bring about the best possible results from the remaining assets of the exposition company, action was taken yesterday for the appointment of a receiver. Of the issue of $2,500,000 in first mortgage bonds, $150,000 is still unpaid, and a receivership was found to be inevitable.

The Dynamite Thawed

Philadelphia, Jan. 8.—An explosion of dynamite occurred yesterday in a contractor's tool house in West Philadelphia. "Doc" Mullen, a watchman, was literally blown to atoms. Sticks of dynamite used for blasting had been frozen and Mullen placed them near a stove in the hut to thaw out. The explosion followed.

Cash Went Up In Flames

Plymouth, Mass., Jan. 8.—Capen's store at Ocean Bluff, together with its contents, including $1000 in cash, was burned to the ground last evening. Two adjoining houses also were destroyed by the fire.

FEEDS ONE—STARVES OTHER

We can't expect to understand all about these germs and microbes the doctors talk of. They say that one kind causes consumption. Consumption microbes feed on weak lungs. Perhaps that's so.

At any rate we know that Scott's Emulsion has a peculiar action on the lungs which gives the lungs new life and vigor. Healthy lungs starve the microbes out.

Life for the lungs and flesh for the body, that is what the consumptive has a right to expect from Scott's Emulsion. An ideal food and tonic for any form of wasting disease.

CHINA WOULD BE FREE

Empire Under Peace Guise Preparing For Great War.

PREDICTION OF CHARLES GAMMON

Superintendent of the American Bible Society Thinks a Gigantic Effort to Crush the Foreigner Is Likely to Be Made Within Ten Years, Possibly Within Five.

Charles F. Gammon, superintendent of colporteurs for the American Bible society in northern China, writes thus to the society concerning the present situation in the Chinese empire:

"Regarding the situation a great deal could be written, with excellent arguments on every point of view. Both the extremes of optimistic and pessimistic opinions are held by people of experience, and even the signs of the times are self contradictory and misleading, so that the truth is deeply hidden.

"While at Shanghai I was discouraged by what I learned. The Chinese, in obedience to the powers, were, it is true, issuing edicts of sorrow for the past and promises for the future, but nearly all were subtle, and their interpretation by scholars could readily be base reflections on the powers and approval of the dark past. Unfortunately the masses are unable to read imperial edicts, each village being dependent upon a scholar or two able to interpret each edict as received.

"Then, too, I observed that the Chinese government was openly violating the provisions of the protocol. Thousands of boatloads of small arms and ammunition were passing weekly up the Yangtsekiang, the arsenals were being enlarged and worked day and night. Cargoes of explosives were being received, and the dowager had issued instructions to all officials to recuperate the army and to inform her as to the fighting strength of each division and the time required to concentrate the forces at a given point. There were and are many other unpromising features which weighed heavily upon the minds of those interested.

"On the other hand, the dowager has issued voluntarily several edicts of a decidedly reformatory character, and the attitude of both officials and people is better than ever before known. Much apprehension was felt as to the period of transition in Peking from foreign military control to Chinese government, yet the change was made in perfect order, and Peking is now as quiet and peaceful as any city could be. The soldiers who under General Nieh were fighting us here last year now guard the roads and are as jolly and friendly as possible, while the people generally welcome the foreigner and encourage his work.

"Large bands of Boxers still exist and meet, but they are now known as rebels, robbers, etc., and, in fact, they prey upon all alike, while the soldiers who fought with them before now shoot them on sight. The officials meet us with every show of friendliness and are doing their utmost to aid us in settling Chinese claims and extending our work. There never was such perfect freedom between Chinese and foreigners.

"My own views take a medium course. I must believe that the end is not yet and that within ten years and possibly within five strife will again be the order and a war will ensue the like of which the world has never known. For centuries China has been making repeated attempts to expel the foreigner, each time profiting by past experience, each time with more power and success, each time better equipped and better planned. She is now preparing as never before, buying vast quantities of superior weapons and reorganizing her armies on a correct basis. Therefore the next attempt will be gigantic in force and terrible in execution. It will result in a universal upheaval and the final dismemberment of this empire, at a terrible cost.

"To offset this are the enlightenment that has come to many minds, the power of the reform party and the Christian influence that is now so great. These may gradually prevail and stay the power of superstition and ignorance. God grant it! The whole situation is so complex, the arguments on both sides so conclusive, that no man can say what is or is to be."

FAMINE IN THE OZARKS.

Extreme Destitution Causes Many to Subsist Upon Nuts and Acorns.

Destitution such as to necessitate prompt and generous relief is said to exist in Ozark county, Mo., a mountainous region near the Arkansas line, says the Kansas City Journal. So complete is the famine there as a result of the long continued drought, it is reported, that some unfortunate families are sustaining life on what the woods furnish, such as acorns and nuts.

There is but little wheat grown in that locality, and the corn crop has always been the chief source of sustenance among the poorer mountaineers. This year the corn perished in the tassel, and whole fields failed to yield even a bushel of nubbins. The cattle and hogs had to be sold in the latter part of the summer because of a lack of feed for wintering them, and the cold weather has found the country stripped of live stock as never before.

A Royal Philanthropist.

The queen of Roumania, always full of good works, is said now to be interesting herself in the more liberal distribution of high class theaters throughout her domain. She has had a small but most artistic playhouse constructed on her castle grounds for the benefit of the district round Pelesch.

One Obstacle Overcome.

Willie was a bright boy, of an inventive turn of mind. At the age of eight or ten he was seized with the "perpetual motion" idea and began to make all sorts of queer machines despite the advice of his father, who told him of men that had devoted their lives to a vain search for perpetual motion.

"It violates the first principles of mechanics, my boy," said his father. "Action and reaction are equal, as you will understand some day. When you can pull yourself up by your boot straps, you may hope to invent a machine that will start itself and run without stopping."

The next day Willie came to his father in great excitement and told him he had done it—had pulled himself up by his boot straps.

"It's no trick at all," he said as he led the way to the barn, where he showed his bewildered father a pair of old boots nailed, soles up, to a beam overhead.

"There!" he exclaimed as he climbed on a box, reached up, ran his fingers through the straps of the boots and pulled himself up. "What do you think of that?"

Willie's father did not reply in words. Instead he took a harness strap, and then and there Willie gave an imitation of perpetual motion which required no elaborate apparatus.—Youth's Companion.

The Roman Baths.

To the Romans the public baths were a necessity of daily life, and the baths of Pompeii stood in no way behind those of greater cities in the tumultuous variety of the scenes enacted there. A quotation from Seneca gives a vivid illustration of what went on in such places.

"I am living near a bath," writes the philosopher. "Sounds are heard on all sides. Just imagine for yourself every conceivable kind of noise that can offend the ear. The men of more sturdy muscle go through their exercises and swing their hands, heavily weighted with lead. I hear their groans when they restrain themselves or the whistling of labored breath.

"If one is rather lazy, he has himself rubbed with ointment, and I hear the blows of the hands slapping his shoulders, the sound varying as the massagist strikes with flat or hollow palm. Meanwhile there is a sudden brawl, as a thief is caught, or there is some one in the bath who loves to hear the sound of his own voice, and the bathers plunge into the swimming bath with loud splashing.

"Over all the din you hear the cry of those who are selling cakes, sausages and sweetmeats."

Disraeli and Gladstone.

Gladstone used to tell how Disraeli once visited at his house. When the Bulgarian atrocities debates were at their fiercest, Disraeli one night flung across the table of the house of commons a note to Mr. Gladstone saying that the set of Turkish yellow books at the foreign office were defective, but that he believed Mr. Gladstone had a perfect set and might his secretary call on the morrow to make some extracts. Mr. Gladstone's reply was, "Certainly not, but if you will come in person I shall be delighted to see you."

Accordingly the next morning Mr. Disraeli called, and, on going into the library, the talk was suddenly diverted to Bulwer Lytton and thence to political novels and especially to Disraeli's own writings.

Said Mr. Gladstone: "I was entranced at his brilliant talk. The time passed with wonderful rapidity. Disraeli looked at his watch. More than an hour had gone, and he was due elsewhere. So we had to part without a word about the yellow books, and, after all, his secretary had to come and get ammunition from my stores for his master to use against me."

Cleaning Diamonds.

Diamonds, in spite of their hardness, must be treated with great care. Though they can hardly be scratched, they nevertheless chip and when roughly used are easily loosened in their setting and fall out at the most unexpected moment. When they are sent to be cleaned, the expert first tests the settings and then dips the ring or pin repeatedly into a little eau de cologne.

A powerful magnifying glass is used to detect any "foreign bodies" in the setting, and an ornament that has an accumulation of dust, grease or soap on its under side, a blemish that is often noticeable in rings, is dipped alternately in soapsuds and eau de cologne, and a very fine soft camel's hair brush pointed like a pencil is employed to reach delicately between the claws of the setting. When the jewel is thoroughly clean, it is buried in a jar of fine sawdust to dry. This is all done after the gold or silver mounting has been carefully rubbed with jewelers' rouge, dried and polished with a tiny chamois covered pad.

In India Hindoos and Mussulmans alike wear both sandals and shoes (slippers) and the latter boots also, but the invariable rule is to remove them after entering a private house just when stepping on to the mat or carpet on which the visitor takes his seat. They must be cast off, the right boot or shoe first, before the worshiper enters a temple or mosque, and it is still regarded as an absolute profanation to attempt to enter either fully shod. But the domestic habit arose out of its obvious propriety, and the religious ritual of "the shoes of the faithful," now and for centuries past observed throughout Islam, can be demonstrated to have been dictated by, if indeed it be not derived directly from, the universal social etiquette of the east.—Athenæum.

HEARINGS TO SOON BEGIN

New Tariffs For Islands a Matter of Importance

CUBA'S FATE IS INVOLVED

Questions of Annexation and Reciprocity Depend Greatly Upon the Sugar Controversy—Feasible to Grant Relief Cubans Ask For

Washington, Jan. 9.—Proposed concessions in tariff rates to Cuba and the Philippines will soon become a leading topic for congressional consideration. The Philippine bill having passed the house is now in the senate committee, while the Cuban matter will promptly be taken up by the house committee. On the 15th, hearings will begin, first to all advocates of concession to Cuba, to be followed by remonstrants.

This will open a contest the results of which may be of history-making importance. Most people believe the trouble in Cuba is economic, and that should this country adhere to a policy which would leave Cuba no market for her products, that island in a spasm of poverty would ask admission to the United States. If, however, we grant such concessions that the industries of the island can live, the new government there will have a chance for itself. In the pending sugar controversy both sides realize this; they know that the beet sugar people are liable to ultimately defeat their own ends if they succeed in preventing any reasonable access of Cuban products to our market, for annexation is a much stronger issue than reciprocity and would be likely to prevail in congress, were the application properly made by Cuba, even if reciprocity did not command a majority.

Representative Payne, chairman of the ways and means committee, has been quoted as having changed his mind on the subject of Cuban concessions. Such is not the case so far as the propriety or desirability of reciprocity itself is concerned, but is merely true of the legal phases of the matter. Before congress met he remarked that he did not see how anything could be done until an independent government was in operation with which we could treat. He did not say he was opposed to reciprocity itself, so Mr. Payne explained yesterday. He wants to hear the arguments which are to be presented to his committee and in advance of them has steadily declined to express an opinion.

Mr. Payne now feels, however, that it would be entirely feasible to grant the relief that the Cubans ask for, if it is found desirable to do so. He believes that a bill can be framed in advance of the establishment by the Cubans of an independent government prescribing certain reductions of duty in sugar and tobacco to take effect whenever Cuba makes reciprocal concessions of certain prescribed percentages to us, the power to proclaim our new rates of duty to be reposed in the president.

The feeling of the ways and means committee toward Cuba is more encouraging than at the opening of the session. The great trouble is in the opposition of the beet sugar people, through the representatives of the states in which that industry is beginning to make some headway. The Michigan members have come back particularly earnest in the matter.

The present plan of the senate committee on the Philippines is to modify the bill which has already passed the house to the extent of lowering Dingley rates on imports from the Philippines by the amount of the export duty imposed in the archipelago upon the various articles. This concession is less important than it seems. The export duties are very small. That on tobacco is understood to be less than a cent a pound, where our duty is 35 cents.

It is said that the total amount of revenue which has been received from export duties since our occupation of the Philippines is only $1,700,000, and this includes exports to all countries of which our own part is relatively small. It is not to be expected, therefore, that the proposed senate concession will greatly stimulate Philippine industries or turn the current of traffic in this direction. It will perhaps be welcomed among liberally minded people here, and by the Filipinos, as an evidence of our obligation to promote their industries through favorable tariff arrangements wherever possible, even if the present concession be a very modest one. It is not believed that there would be serious opposition in the house to the proposed senate changes.

Referred to Congress

Washington, Jan. 9.—Secretary Root has referred a large number of cablegrams to congress received by him from nearly all the mercantile associations in Cuba, appealing for legislation reducing tariff duties on imports from Cuba

BELIEVES IN PRINCIPLES

They Are More Essential Than Mere Success, According to Bryan

New Haven, Jan. 9.—The Jackson day banquet, with William J. Bryan as guest and chief speaker, was held by the New Haven Democratic club last evening. After the banquet Mr. Bryan was introduced. He said he would talk somewhat more freely of partisan matters to the banqueting party than he intended at the public meeting to follow. In part he said:

"It is extremely gratifying to me to find that there are bands of men who are not disheartened by defeat, men who think more of having their party right in principles than to be merely successful. The Democratic party has no right to exist except it has principles to exist for, and no principle justifies existence of a party unless it is a great principle. A principle that is not great enough to die for is not great enough to live for."

The banqueting party proceeded to Music hall, where Mr. Bryan discussed many problems under the general head of "civilization." He said he had become deeply impressed with the thought that the moral element in civilization is paramount. If the moral obligation of government is understood and is lived up to it would be impossible for a republic to die. It would be grander, greater and stronger a thousand years hence than today. Mr. Bryan at some length applied the application of morality to the questions of combinations of capital, to imperialism, to anarchy, to the money question, to the status of Porto Rico and the Philippines and to taxation, national and local.

Considered Impracticable

Boston, Jan. 9.—The most important matter considered at the meeting of wool merchants yesterday was that relative to the "Grosvenor pure wool bill," known as the "shoddy" bill. Resolutions were adopted to the effect that the bill was a measure to place under government police surveillance many large and important branches of textile industry, which would be impossible of administration without placing federal police officers in charge of textile mills, wholesale clothing establishments and garment manufactories.

Cesspool Cover Went Visiting

Boston, Jan. 9.—A spark struck from a stone by the pick of a workman who was digging a trench in Dorchester yesterday, ignited gas which had leaked from the main and caused a heavy explosion. The concussion shattered windows in a dozen houses. There were seven men in and near the trench, but all escaped serious injury. A cesspool cover was blown high in the air and descended through the roof of a building.

Midget Remains With Show

Boston, Jan. 9.—Judge Morton yesterday dismissed the petition brought by Anthony Woekener against Frank C. Bostock with a view to have his wife, Chiquita, the Cuban midget, released from further engagement at the defendant's show and restored to him. Chiquita had expressed a desire to the court to return to Bostock to carry out her contract.

Maine Democrats at Banquet

Auburn, Me., Jan. 9.—The Maine Democratic club remembered Jackson day by two large gatherings here. In the afternoon there was the business session and in the evening the banquet. Weavers Threaten to Strike

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 9.—There is dissatisfaction among the weavers of the Pierce mill, and 84 of them have decided to quit work unless the existing conditions are remedied. They object to the fining as carried out in the mill, claiming that they have too much work laid out for them, and too many looms to operate.

BURIED IN WRECKAGE

Big Engine Crashes Into Rear of Passenger Train

TERRIBLE SCENE IN TUNNEL

Fifteen Persons Killed by Being Scalded or Crushed—Others May Succumb to Injuries—Responsibility For the Disaster Not Yet Placed

New York, Jan. 9.—In the New York Central tunnel, which runs under Park avenue, two local trains collided yesterday. Fifteen passengers were killed and twice that number were injured. A dozen of the injured were seriously hurt and the roster of the dead may be extended.

Three men and one woman were scalded to death. The others met death by being crushed and mangled.

It was a rear-end collision between a South Norwalk local train which ran in over the New York, New Haven and Hartford tracks and was halted by block signal at the southern entrance to the tunnel, and a White Plains local train which came in by the Harlem branch of the New York Central. Most of the death, injury and damage was wrought by the locomotive of the White Plains train, which plowed into the rear car of the standing train. It swept away the platform and wedged its way through the floor to the middle of the car. Its many victims were either mangled to death in the mass of wreckage carried before the pilot, crushed between the boiler and car sides, or burned to death by steam which came hissing from broken steam pipes and cylinders.

The locomotive, in its final plunge of 40 feet, carried the rear car forward and sent twisted iron, broken timbers and splinters crashing into the coach ahead. Lights were extinguished and the dead, injured and unharmed were left in a darkness which escaping steam and smoke made more confusing.

Out from the wreckage came the cries of those who still lived and within a few minutes the work of rescue, which was marked by the finest heroism and sacrifice, began.

The noise of the impact carried warning to the street above and alarms were sounded at once. With police, firemen and surgeons, came a score of volunteer physicians and half a dozen clergymen. Ladders were run down the tunnel air shafts and the firemen and police attacked the debris with rope and axes.

Meantime the passengers had already rallied and were trying to release their fellows who were imprisoned in the debris. Father Smith, Roman Catholic chaplain of the fire department, crawled in over the hot boiler of the wrecked engine to offer sacraments to the dying and material succor to those pinned down. Rev. Dr. Walkley, Protestant chaplain of the fire department, labored with him. Lieutenant Clarke of the fire department forced his way into where two women lay and stood in steam that scalded his legs until they were gotten out. T. M. Murphy, a passenger, both of whose legs had been broken and was still held down by the timbers which broke them, volunteered to remain as he was until those around him were gotten out, for fear the release of the debris would jeopardize the rest.

The wounds of those of the injured in need of immediate attention were given temporary dressing by the ambulance and volunteer surgeons and then these injured were hoisted to the street above. Many houses were thrown open to the suffering, but most of the injured were hurried away to hospitals. The dead were taken to morgues and police stations.

A great crowd gathered about the tunnel entrance and shafts and watched the rescue work. Despite the horror of the accident and the vigilence of the police, there was some looting.

Responsibility for the disaster has not been fixed as yet, but Superintendent Franklin says that as far as he has been able to discover, J. M. Wischo, engineer of the White Plains train, was to blame. When the South Norwalk train was stopped a flagman ran back into the tunnel and, besides placing a torpedo on the track, endeavored to flag the on-coming train. He hurled his lantern at the cab window, but the big locomotive never halted until it was buried in wreckage. It is not clear that the torpedo exploded or that Wischo was warned by the lantern signal. The right of the signal men to permit the moving train to enter the same block section as that occupied by the halted train is also in question. The tunnel was beclouded with steam and smoke, and snow which fell through the air shafts of the tunnel also obscured the view.

Late in the day the coroner questioned the trainmen, holding court at a police station. The inquiry was behind closed doors, and as a result of it Signalman Flynn was released, while Fireman Fyler was held in bail of $3000 and Engineer Wischo without bail. The railroad company furnished bonds for Fyler and Wischo was taken to the tombs prison.

Sealer of Weights and Measures Notice.

Good Afternoon.

Again this year there are many joint standing committees of the Legislature without a representation from Norfolk county. There are 33 committees in all and the Norfolk county Senators and Representatives get 23 appointments, but one committee has three Norfolk county men and several have two so that really the county is represented on only 15, less than one-half of the 33 committees. It will be seen from the following list upon which no Norfolk county man will serve, that we are not represented on many important committees, viz: Agriculture, Cities, Constitutional Amendments, Counties, Education, Harbors and Public Lands, Labor, Libraries, Metropolitan Affairs, Parishes and Religious Societies, Prisons, Probate and Chancery, Public Health, Public Service, Railroads, State House, Taxation, Towns.

The claims of former Mayor Hall, that the building ordinance which was passed by the City Council of 1901, was too extensive and too expensive, seem to be well founded. Unquestionably, the ordinance, if it became a law, would increase the cost of buildings and dwellings, and thereby increase mortgages, interest and rents. Mr. Henry H. Faxon thought the passage of the ordinance would increase the value of his property in the city in round figures about $10,000, because it would check building and increase rents. Yet he would have vetoed the ordinance had he been Mayor. When a prominent builder was joked after the passage of the ordinance, and told that he would have to do better work now, he replied: "Not better work, but better pay. We always do good work." A building ordinance is not needed to reach competent and reliable builders, but those who build cheaply and deceive purchasers and thereby enter into competition with first class builders. Some building ordinance is necessary to reach those who build cheaply and not thoroughly, but as the veto suggested, a simpler ordinance would be better, which could be enforced. There is such a thing as having too much law.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The whole criticism against combinations and trusts, and so on, must be diverted from trusts as a necessity of economy to trusts as a perversion of economy. — Lewiston Journal.

☞ Once more the country is presented with the humiliating spectacle of Chicago being on the verge of closing the public schools because rich men and corporations are dodging their legally assessed taxes. Either the laws of that city are inadequate or her officials impotent in applying them, for it should be as impossible for a wealthy evader of taxes to defy the law as for the less opulent to escape their obligations and contributions to the commonweal.—Lynn Item.

☞ The killed, wounded and surrendered from the forces of the Boers for the year 1901, count up 14,887. One newspaper comments that "this is, in part, the price that the South Africa Dutch have had to pay for the persistence and perversity of men like Mr. Kruger." It all depends on how you look at it. Others are saying that the figures show how much brave men are willing to sacrifice for their liberties.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ The Boston Transcript rejoices over the decison in the south terminal cases and remarks that with nearly a million in betterments coming to the city of Boston need not fear bankruptcy. Unless these betterments are more collectable than some which have been due the city of Haverhill for several years, there will be opportunity for the city to go through the bankruptcy court several times before it gets the benefit of them. — Haverhill Gazette.

More Care Necessary.

A report of the dead letter department shows that during the year ending June 30, 8,507,257 pieces of mail were received at the office, compared with 7,536,158 pieces the year before—an increase of over 12 per cent. Of the letters opened, 47,532 contained money to the agregate value of $42,854, and 38,965 contained drafts, notes, money orders, deeds, wills and mortgages having an aggregate value of no less a sum than $1,178,970. Of the letters and parcels opened, 47,735 contained photographs, and 179,649 contained stamps. The misdirected letters received by the department numbered 454,883 and misdirected parcels 13,324.

Lead Poisoning.

A number of Milton residents are said to be suffering from lead poisoning and it is reported that one has died from its effects. Lead poison has been found in the town water. The water supply comes from two sources, and in some cases both supplies empty into the same mains. The old wells contain a large amount of carbonic acid, and prior to the introduction of the water from the new wells, this seemed to carbonate the inside of the lead pipe. The presumption is that the mixing of the two waters formed a chemical combination that is dissolving the carbonated pipes.

Mr. William Curtis, one of Quincy's pioneer shoe manufacturers, died at his home on Franklin street this morning, aged 78 years. Mr. Curtis began shoe business fifty years ago with T. T. A. Whicher. "Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

ROOFING ORANGE TREES

How Arizona's Fierce Sunlight Will Be Kept Out.

PLAN HIT UPON BY FRUIT GROWERS

A Close Screen of Willows and Wire Will Be Used Over One Thousand Acres to Protect the Citrus Growth From the Sun—Artificial Heat For Cold Days.

Work has begun in the Salt river valley on a gigantic scheme for growing fruit indoors, writes the special correspondent of the New York Post from Phenix, Ariz. The project involves the roofing of more than 1,000 acres of orange, lemon and pomelo trees.

It may seem strange to persons who know this part of Arizona that protection should be necessary to fruit trees in the Salt river valley, but to irrigationists who are aware of the evaporative powers of the Arizona sun a protecting cover offers a solution of one of the most difficult problems which confront orange growers. Arizona oranges on the New York market this month [December] brought the highest price ever known, but the crop was very short, less than half that of a year ago and not more than one-fourth as heavy as that of two years previous. For the shortage the growers blame the excessive heat of the last summer, and it is to guard against a repetition of such a condition that they are preparing to cover their groves.

The plan is a simple one, elaborate only in its size. Poles will be put up in the orchards, and on these will be strung heavy wires in parallel rows. Then will be cut the heavy willow brush, the variety known as the water motus, which grows from five to ten feet high along all the water courses of Arizona. These sticks will be laid across the wires, with spaces between of from one-quarter to three-quarters of an inch, and thus form a roof which will not keep out the sun entirely from the trees, but will break the fierce heat of the midday sun. Thereby the earth about the roots of the trees may be kept moist by less frequent irrigation and thus prevent the hard baking of the soil, which prevents the proper spread of the roots.

Some time ago experiments were begun here in putting covers of canvas over orange trees, but that plan was abandoned because of the fact that the cloth covering kept out too much of the sunshine.

The work now in progress in the Salt river valley is being watched closely by the officials at the government experiment stations at Phenix and at Tucson. While in Arizona the roofing for the orchards is intended primarily as a protection from the sun, it will also serve to keep out the frost which sometimes comes. It has been customary in the orange countries to build at night low fires through the groves or to make smudges. These methods, however, have never proved satisfactory, and to provide a better fuel extensive experiments are being made at Senator W. A. Clark's coalfields at Gallup, N. M. Here it has been found that a composition made up of coal dust, held together by a small quantity of asphaltum, together with an equal amount of crude oil, provides an economical fuel which will give out strong and steady heat and hold its fire for a long period. This composition is being made into bricks, which can be easily handled and placed about the orchards. With the protection of the roofs and the heat from these bricks of fuel it is believed have been found the safeguards which will do away with the obstacles which prevent in many localities the raising of citrus fruits at a profit.

Chicago Boy Making Money In Stocks In Leisure Hours.

Jack Kohl, the fourteen-year-old son of Charles E. Kohl, a theatrical manager of Chicago, is showing a genius for successful speculation.

Jack is at Oxford school. He is a good scholar, but he does not care to play the ordinary games, says the Philadelphia Press. When Saturday comes, instead of taking a holiday, Jack visits brokers' offices, where he looks after his trades.

Jack's business operations are yielding him a steady income of $150 a month from one stock alone. He has made much more than this from occasional single operations and sometimes has suffered loss. He dropped $900 in Baltimore and Ohio, but is still holding on to his stock.

There is a good deal of interest felt in the announcement that the Kohinoor is to be the central jewel in Queen Alexandra's coronation crown, and it has revived many half forgotten stories about the famous stone, says the New York Tribune. One relates that it was nearly lost through the forgetfulness of the man to whom it was intrusted for conveyance to England. This man was John Laurence, high in the Anglo-Indian councils, and he put it in a small tin box and tucked it into his waistcoat pocket. When he reached England, Mr. Laurence forgot all about it—worth only a few millions—and tossed the waistcoat aside. Queen Victoria sent for the jewel in a few weeks, and Laurence replied, "Why, you've got it." Then in another instant he remembered, and he rushed to his native servant to know if he had the box. The servant had opened the box and, finding only a large piece of glass, as he thought, had tucked it away among his master's souvenirs. It was sent in safety to the queen.

No complaint is heard about the clearing of the streets in Atlantic after the recent snow-storm. The attention given all thoroughfares was prompt and careful.

Mrs. Chase, the mother of Mr. Richard D. and Mr. D. L. F. Chase, died this noon at her residence on Goffe street. She had been seriously ill for several weeks.

The front cover of the current issue of the Youths' Companion has two new views at the Fore River Ship yard—one of the interior of the mold loft, and one of the ships being built.

People did not have to ask Wednesday night at the supper of First church what brand the new flavored coffee served was, for on dainty white crepe paper napkins it stated that the coffee served was the famous La Touraine, Mocha and Java sold by Johnson Brothers.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Graham leave Friday for Washington. From there they go to New Mexico and thence to Havana. Mr. Graham's health has greatly improved and hopes that the southern trip will bring back the strength to his limbs. They will be absent three months.

Most all of the Unitarians turned out Wednesday night to the parish supper, the first one of the season. Supper was served soon after half past six and all the tables were quickly filled with an animated throng. The supper was in charge of those of the church whose names begin with A, B, C and D, and they served a fine supper of cold meats, escaloped oysters, cake, pie and hot coffee.

CHEVALIER DE TROIS

By F. K. SCRIBNER

Copyright, 1901, by F. K. Scribner.

I was walking in the king's garden, for, as lieutenant of his musketeers, it was my duty to guard the royal person, when Louis, who had approached unobserved, confronted me.

"M. de Marc," said he, "you are a brave man."

"Sire," replied I, knowing 'twas the prelude to one of those missions with which his majesty was pleased to honor me, "being of the musketeers it follows."

"And have proved yourself of much discretion," continued the king, "therefore," then sinking his voice to a whisper, "the Chevalier de Trois is known to you?"

I had myself conducted the chevalier to the Bastille not three months before.

"The prisoner of the Bastille? Certainly, sire, for 'twas by your command I"—

Louis looked upon the ground. "Faith," murmured he. "I had forgotten. Perhaps he hath escaped or"—

"From the Bastile!" cried I. "It were impossible!"

The king bit his lips. "And for what was he imprisoned, the Chevalier de Trois?" asked he abruptly.

Now, it was not my business to inquire concerning the crimes of prisoners of state.

"He is a gentleman of much promise," continued the king, breaking in upon my reply. "'Tis ill fitting that so brave a cavalier rot in the dungeons of the Bastille. What think you, M. de Marc?"

"'Tis indeed beyond comprehension," replied I, somewhat troubled at the royal mood. "A word from your majesty, which I will gladly carry to the governor, will"—

The king smiled sourly. "And the good Cardinal Mazarin?" he asked. "Think you, sir, my minister would favor the freeing of the Chevalier de Trois?"

It was, then, Mazarin and not the king who had brought about the imprisonment of the unfortunate De Trois.

"If the Chevalier de Trois has offended the minister," said I, "methinks, sire, he will remain in the Bastille. 'Tis no light thing to"—

A flush of anger overspread the king's countenance. "Faith," cried he, "am I ever to be thrust behind a curtain by this thieving prelate? Is he then king of France and I a puppet that his whims must stand? M. de Trois must be freed."

The meaning of his words came to me. It was his pleasure the chevalier be set at liberty; but, though king of France, he shrank from braving the displeasure of his powerful minister. If M. de Trois regained his liberty, it must be secretly and apparently against the wishes of the king.

"Sire," replied I, "none can perchance escape from the Bastille, but there be other prisons in France. The Fortress Dauphine"—

"An order commanding me to conduct the Chevalier de Trois from the Bastille, sire. At Dauphine, less strongly guarded, perchance"—

The king caught at my meaning. "Come," said he, casting upon me a look of gratitude, "within the hour 'tis my pleasure the Chevalier de Trois be taken from Paris and imprisoned in the Fortress Dauphine. I will direct my secretary to prepare the order."

The Fortress Dauphine was situated some leagues from Paris. The garrison consisted of some 120 men commanded by four officers and a governor whose liking for the wine cup was well known to the occupants of the fortress. It was to this prison that I conducted the Chevalier de Trois on the afternoon of that day in which his majesty had spoken to me in the garden.

Upon my delivering the order to the prisoner in his chamber in the Bastille he had turned pale as chalk, thinking it nothing else than a prelude to his speedy execution, for a famous headsman dwelt in the vicinity of Dauphine. Once upon the road, however, having commanded my two musketeers to fall back that I might ride by De Trois' side, I made haste to end his torment.

He listened to me as one dazed by an unexpected blow.

"Come," said I, having laid the matter before him, "it now remains with yourself to gain your freedom. I can but open in part the way to you."

"Then it is the king's wish that I escape?" asked he.

"As to that," replied I, "'tis not my business nor thine, M. de Trois, to seek to know the wishes of his majesty. Suffice it that I offer to you a way whereby you may gain your liberty. If you fear the danger of"—

He smiled bitterly. "I could scarce stop at that," said he, "having already committed my soul to God."

"But," continued I, "you will readily perceive great danger lies in the undertaking. The Fortress Dauphine is garrisoned by fivescore men. Were any to oppose"—

"Five thousand would scarce turn me from my purpose," replied he. "But open the door half way, and you will have no reason to doubt my courage."

"'Tis tonight," said I.

He laid his hand lightly upon my arm. "M. de Marc," said he, "will any misfortune befall thee from this undertaking?"

"Faith," replied I, "that also is the king's business."

Being of quick wit, he questioned me no further.

It was M. de Beaufort, the governor of the fortress, who met us at the gate, receiving from my hands the king's order that the Chevalier de Trois be held a prisoner at the royal pleasure.

"M. de Beaufort," said I, the prisoner having passed out of hearing, "it is the desire of his majesty that the Chevalier de Trois be given certain freedom. Tonight will we dine together, and if thou"—

"'Twill be indeed an honor," replied he, "but thou and the king's prisoner wilt be my guests, with certain of the officers of the garrison."

"Nay," replied I, "for it is the king's order that tonight none meets the chevalier. Tomorrow"—

"As thou wilt," replied he, much flattered that the king had spoken of him.

Thus it came about an hour later the Chevalier de Trois, M. de Beaufort and myself were seated together at the governor's table, with none other present except the sentinel beyond the door, whose measured tramp came to us through the thickness of the panel.

"Faith," cried De Beaufort, having finished the meal and the wine already mounting to his head, "methinks, being lieutenant of his majesty's musketeers, many adventures have befallen thee."

"Aye," replied I, seeming to be half overcome with drink, "and thou likewise, being governor of Dauphine."

At that he launched out into a rambling discourse, applying himself freely to the bottle till the fumes of the wine and the heat of the room set him nodding, and presently he fell asleep, with his head upon the table.

Raising my eyes, I fixed them upon those of the Chevalier de Trois. "Sir," said I, "methinks this wine of Dauphine hath well nigh overcome me, and I would seek the air. If memory serves me not a shabby trick, the way to the rampart lies along yon passage, guarded by but a single sentinel or perchance no more than two. Were I a prisoner such odds would scarce hinder me, though from the summit of the rampart to the ground be twenty feet and some danger lie to life or limb. Beyond lies the forest, therefore"—

Seeming to lose speech in my drunkenness, I made shift to rise from the table that I might unbar the window.

With quick comprehension De Trois' eyes followed me. As I reached for the fastening I heard a sudden movement at the table. The next instant he had snatched the sword from the sleeping De Beaufort's side, tumbled the sentinel from the top to the bottom of the stairs and, wounding a second who would have opposed him, ran through the narrow passage, which ended at the rampart of the fortress. A third sentinel who guarded the way he slashed across the face, then, reaching the rampart, with drawn sword in hand, leaped over the breastwork, gaining without injury the ground beneath, where the darkness hid him from those who, aroused by the cries of the wounded sentinels, ran up, muskets in hand.

No one durst leap after him, and in order to pursue they must go round through the tower and gate of the citadel to gain the open ground outside the walls.

The tumult caused by the shouts of the perplexed sentries and a discharge of a dozen muskets on the ramparts aroused the governor from his drunken slumber. Perceiving that M. de Trois' chair was vacant, his sword gone from its sheath and I, feigning drunkenness, leaning against the window, he set up a great outcry and dashed from the apartment. Ten minutes later I heard the sound of galloping horses, for M. de Beaufort, at the head of a score of the garrison, rode madly forth to pursue the chevalier in the darkness. As for me, having accomplished my errand, I lay down upon a bench, well knowing that, having delivered the prisoner to the governor of the fortress, the hand of Mazarin could not reach me. De Trois was saved!

The First Ironclad.

In anno Domini 1585, when the Dutch fought for their independence from Spain, the city of Antwerp was closely invested by the Duke of Parma. The stout burghers built a very large ship, nailed to its sides heavy iron plates and armed it with a formidable array of guns. On the masts were roomy platforms of sharpshooters, and high parapets protected the soldiery stationed on the raised deck.

With this terrible vessel the burghers hoped to break the blockade—hoped it so confidently that they called the ship Finis Belli ("the end of the war"). But it proved unmanageable and shortly after being launched ran aground on a sand bar and was then called Perditæ Expensæ ("thrown away money"). Soon after that the Spaniards won a decisive victory, dragged off the maritime monster and renamed it Finis Belli, for the war was then indeed ended, but, unfortunately, not with the result the men of Amsterdam had so confidently expected.

It is interesting that in this first ironclad not only were the sides protected, but "fighting tops" were employed just as in our navy today.

A Victim of Misconstruction.

The guns were popping away among the pheasants, and a Scottish gamekeeper, with a very light bag, was shadowing a young blood who blazed away at everything, but hit nothing.

Presently the latter aimed his gun at a pheasant that was running along the ground.

"Hoots, mon!" interposed the gamekeeper in horror. "Ye must na shoot th' bird a-runnin'!"

To which the undaunted sportsman replied:

"No, man, I don't intend to. I'm waiting for the beggar to stop."—London Answers.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Bemedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. RUSSIAN LACK OF TACT

Has Produced Unpleasant Friction at Neu-Chwang

CONSULS AND NAVAL MEN

Representing America, Great Britain and Russia, Have Different Views of What Was Originally a Trivial Affair—Friendly Settlement Difficult

Pekin Jan. 9.—While the actual casualties during the fighting at New-Chwang between American sailors, belonging to the United States gunboat Vicksburg, which is wintering there, and Russian soldiers attached to the garrison of that port are trifling up to date, the matter has resulted in unpleasantly strained relations between the American, Russian and British authorities there.

The trouble originated in the action of some sailors belonging to the British sloop-of-war Algerine, also in winter quarters at New-Chwang, in carrying ashore rifles for use in a theatrical performance. The Russian administration sent a force of men to arrest the British sailors. The Russians, however, by mistake, broke into a reading room where a party of the Vicksburg's men were seated and tried to arrest them. The Americans resisted, using chairs in so doing, but, they were overpowered, after a sharp fight, and handed over to the United States consul, who sent them on board the Vicksburg.

The bad feeling which arose from this incident resulted in several fights whenever the American and British sailors met Russian soldiers, and the latter, not being accustomed to fist fights, were usually badly worsted. This state of affairs culminated on New Year's day in a more serious affray, and the Russian minister here, Paul Lessar, complained to Minister Conger that two members of the Vicksburg's crew had fired a revolver at an unoffending Russian soldier, wounding him in the arm.

The relations between the American and British consuls and naval commanders and the Russian administrator at New-Chwang are strained, which makes a friendly settlement of the affair difficult. The administrator attempted to enforce a social code which the foreign officials refused to recognize, and, consequently, the relations have been limited to strictly official interviews, which have not been amiable, consisting mostly in protest against the action of the administrator, and protests of the administrator against the conduct of the sailors.

The memorandum presented by the Russian minister to Minister Conger relates to various alleged assaults committed by the Americans. On one occasion three sailors attacked a sentry and owe their lives to the sentry's forebearance in not exercising his right to shoot. The administrator demanded that the United States consul try the offenders, but the commander of the Vicksburg, E. B. Barry, wrote a curt refusal.

Mr. Conger is endeavoring to restore friendly relations at New-Chwang. He is urging the United States consul there, Henry B. Miller, to co-operate with the Russian authorities in suppressing and punishing violence. The steps taken, however, are seriously handicapped by the action of the Russians, who refuse to allow foreigners to use the telegraph line.

The foreigners at New-Chwang attribute the trouble largely to lack of tact upon the part of the administrator.

The attitude of Russia at New-Chwang results largely from misapprehension of the reasons for the presence there of the Vicksburg and the Algerine.

Russian officials have repeatedly informed the foreign consuls at New-Chwang that Russia soon intended to evacuate the city. The consuls, fearing that the interests of foreign residents would be endangered when the government of New-Chwang was restored to the Chinese, requested that the Vicksburg and the Algerine be sent to the port. The Russians suspect that these war vessels are stationed at New Chwang for an unfriendly purpose.

General's Head Coming Off

Pekin, Jan. 9.—The dowager empress has signed an edict ordering the decapitation of General Tung-Fuh-Siang, the notorious anti-foreigner. Influential Chinese officials charged Tung-Fuh-Siang with the murder of Belgian missionaries and urged his execution before he could institute rebellion and involve China in trouble with foreign governments.

Confidence In American Honesty

Pekin, Jan. 9.—The director of railroads and mines of Shan-Si province visited Minister Conger yesterday and explained the great mining resources of the province. He requested Mr. Conger to induce Americans to invest capital in the province, saying that the policy of the United States during the recent troubles had led the Chinese to prefer dealing with Americans, because they have greater confidence in their honesty.

Emperor In Name Only

Pekin, Jan. 9.—Several high officials were granted audiences with the Chinese court yesterday, during which the emperor filled the role of a figurehead. The empress dowager sat on his majesty's left and conducted the conversation. She ignored the emperor and the latter did not attempt to take any part in the affair. The officials say his majesty appeared melancholy and listless.

KILLED IN THE WOODS

George Arnold's Death May Not Have Been the Result of Accident

Hudson, Mass., Jan. 9.—George W. W. Arnold, 17 years old, was killed yesterday afternoon in what is known as the white woods, seven miles from Hudson, under suspicious circumstances, and a medical examiner will make an examination of the body. The boy and his father, John Arnold, were engaged in felling trees in the white woods during the forenoon, and his father, being the only witness of the tragic death, made the following statement:

"We left home about 7:45 o'clock in the morning and went into the white woods. We cut down six trees during the forenoon, and were about to cut down another when my son heard a whistle and said, 'Dad, it is 12 o'clock, and time for dinner; I am hungry.' I asked him to wait and finish one more tree, but he picked up his axe and wedges and started toward the team. I walked over towards him and the next I knew I found myself on the ground; I picked myself up, my face being badly bruised. Looking around I saw George with both hands on the ground, about 30 feet away, with a limb across his left shoulder and a deep gash on the top of his head. I went over to him and said, 'For God's sake, speak;' but he didn't. I put my ear to his breast, but could not hear his heart beat. Becoming frantic, I picked him up and set him on a blanket against a tree, and went over to the White homestead to get help."

After Arnold had made the statement he was asked if the gash on his head was caused by the limb which he claims he found lying on the boy's shoulder, and he replied emphatically, "Yes." He was then asked what knocked him down and caused the bruises on his face, but evidently the question did not please him, and he evaded the question.

Arnold lives about two miles from the centre of the town of Hudson. He has a very large family and it is said that they are not in very good circumstances. Arnold has only one arm and gets the major part of his living by peddling rags. It is claimed that he has a bad temper and that he has abused his boys for trifling acts.

When the story of Chinese atrocities filled the papers and shocked the world, it was the women who drew the pity and sympathy of all. Doubtless many a wife who heard her husband's words of sympathy for these women thought with a pang, of the blindness of men to the suffering under their very eyes. It is true. The suffering of women in China was severe but short. Many a wife suffers for years with a daily agony of pain, her nerves shattered, her strength almost gone, and never hears a word of sympathy.

PANAMA'S INNING

Nine Members of House Speak In Favor of Morris Amendment

Washington, Jan. 9.—The debate on the Nicaragua canal bill in the house yesterday developed sentiment favoring consideration of the recent offer of the Panama company to sell its franchises and property for $40,000,000. This sentiment took the form of advocating the Morris amendment, which is to empower the president to select the latter route if the canal commission, upon considering the company's offer, recommends it and the required concessions can be obtained from Colombia. Of 16 members who spoke yesterday, nine favored the Morris amendment. It was agreed that general debate shall close today at 2 o'clock, after which the bill will be open to amendment under the five-minute rule.

He said that no pension exceeding $50 a month would be recommended by the committee for the widow of a general officer and that pensions for the widows of other officers would be scaled down proportionately.

Albany, Jan. 9.—The assembly ways and means committee has decided to increase the appropriation for the support of the common schools by $250,000. The scheme of distribution of the gross appropriation will be that the weak districts will receive $150 per district, instead of $100 as heretofore.

Mayor Gener Suspended

Havana, Jan. 9.—Pending an investigation which is now being instituted by Civil Governor Nunez of Havana, General Wood has suspended Miguel Gener, mayor of Havana. Twenty-three out of the 28 councilmen of Havana have petitioned General Wood to remove Gener.

Albani and Gye.

The story of Mme. Albani's first London engagement is as follows: Colonel Mapleson heard of her singing at a theater at Malta, and, thinking that she would be successful, he made her an offer, through an agent, of a contract to sing in Her Majesty's theater. She agreed to it and went to London; but, on arriving there, she told the cabman to drive her to the Italian opera house. He, instead of going to Her Majesty's, took her to Covent Garden, which was also devoted to Italian opera.

She was shown up to the manager's office and stated that she had come to sign the contract which Mr. Mapleson had offered her. Mr. Gye, thinking to play a joke on his rival, Mapleson, made out a contract, and Albani signed it. Mr. Gye then told her that he was not Colonel Mapleson, but that he could do much better by her. He offered to tear up the contract if she liked, but told her that Nilsson was singing at Her Majesty's and would brook no rival.

A Short National Anthem.

Japan has perhaps the shortest of all national anthems. It is called "Kimi Ga Yo," from its first three words, and consists of thirty-two syllables, which count in poetry, however, as thirty-one. The exceeding brevity is due to the national fondness for conciseness of phrase and for economy of expression in all forms of art.

The patriotic song is what the Japanese call a "tanka," or verse of five lines, the first and third being of five and the others of seven syllables. Below is given the anthem in Japanese, with an English translation:

Kimi Ga Yo.
Kima ga yo wa
Chiyo ni yachiyo ni
Sazare ishi no
Iwawo to narite
Koke no musu made.

TRANSLATION.

May our lord's dominion last
Till a thousand years have passed
Twice four thousand times o'ertold!
Firm as changeless rock, earth rooted,
Moss of ages uncomputed.

An Empire Sold at Auction.

The Roman empire was once sold to the highest bidder. On the death of Pertinax in 193 the Prætorian guards put up the empire for sale by auction, and, after an animated competition between Sulpician and Julian, it was knocked down to the latter for 6,250 drachmas. The Romans held auctions of various kinds, the proceedings being much the same in all cases. The auctio sub hasta, which was a sale of plunder, was held under a spear stuck in the ground. The magister auctionis, or auctioneer, was chosen from among the argentarii, or money changers, and his assistants were the cashiers.

Perhaps!

How many people when they marry carefully put aside their joint love letters as one of the most cherished possessions of their future life, and in how many cases afterward do they ever take them out and look at them?

Now, why is this? Partly perhaps because the time of romance is over and practical, everyday life has begun; partly, also, we will hope, because now they can say so many nice things to each other, and there is no need to read over the past nice things they have written.—Golden Penny.

His Fluent Fount of Tears.

There are funny incidents in the life of a photographer. A man came in the other day and looked over all the samples, asking the price of each.

"Do you want a sitting?" I asked.

"I don't see nothin' like what I want," he replied.

I told him if he would indicate what he wanted I might arrange it.

"You see, it's like this," he began. "I had a girl that I loved, and we was going to git married. She had her things made up, and we was all but ready, when she was taken ill and died. And what I wanted was a picture of me sittin' on her grave weepin'."

I was touched at the homely story of grief and told him I could send a man with him to the grave and have the picture taken as he desired.

"It's some distance," he said. "It's over in Ireland. I expect it 'ud cost a lot to send over your traps for what I want?"

I said it would.

"I thought," he answered, "that mebbe you could rig up a grave here in your shop and I would weep on it and it would do just as well. It's no trouble for me to weep anywhere."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

The Ring of Cheops.

Cheops was the builder of the pyramid which bears his name, and, as if to make the structure perpetuate his deeds for all time to come, the very stones and bricks of which it is composed are stamped with his name. Cheops lived nearly 2,500 years ago, his great pyramid being an antiquity in the days when the great nations of old were in their youth, and yet we of this twentieth century can have the satisfaction of looking upon the very ring he wore so proudly upon his finger! The hieroglyphics on the ring are minutely accurate and beautifully executed, the ring itself being of finest gold and weighing nearly an ounce. The oval signet bears the name of Cheops, which is in hieroglyphics in perfect accord with the stamp on the bricks of the great pyramid. This remarkable antiquity was found in a tomb at Ghizeh. It now reposes in the museum of the New York Historical society.

A Couple of Jokers.

Judge Joseph Aspinall's reputation as a humorist on the bench is proverbial, but when off the bench he rarely jokes. Hence it was that Assistant District Attorney Martin W. Littleton, the after dinner spellbinder, was taken by surprise when the judge calmly inquired:

"Martin, you are interested in athletics. Tell me the name of the champion shot putter."

"I'll have to pass that, judge."

"Well, then, what's the matter with cannon?"

Mr. Littleton reeled from the impact, but, quickly recovering, replied:

"Ah, yes, very neat. But, by the way, I see you are one of the entries in the big paper chase."

"Paper chase? What paper chase?" said the judge unguardedly.

"The chase for greenbacks, judge. Good day. Glad to have met you."—New York Times.

How to Distinguish Tender Beef.

Meat, to be wholesome, must come from a healthy animal; to be nutritious, from a well nourished one. Much used muscles absorb much food material, making rich, juicy meat. This is, however, tougher than that of parts less used, because the connective tissue and fiber increase as well as the contents of the muscle tubes.

The lean of good beef is firm, elastic and when first cut purplish red, the surface becoming bright red and moist after exposure to the air. The tenderer cuts are fine grained and well mottled with fat; a thick layer of firm, light, straw colored fat extends over the rib and loin cuts; the kidney suet is white and crumbly. Flabby, dark or coarse beef with yellow fat is poor. If it has little fat, it is from an old or underfed creature.—Beatrice Raven in American Queen.

French Bread Laws.

The French baker is not only required to conform to laws regarding weight, but he is also told at what price he must sell his bread. He is further required to deposit a certain sum of money in the hands of the municipal authorities as a surety of good behavior. In the large fortified cities he has to keep a specified quantity of flour on hand to provide for warlike emergencies.

In Germany laws of similar import are in existence and are enforced with such severity that no baker ever dreams of defying them.

He Makes It Pay.

Benson—Talk about the lamentable state of the public service! Why, there's Nestor, for instance. He has been in public office for twenty-five years, and what, I should like to know, has he ever accomplished?

Weston—Well, he has had a job all that time. Surely that's something.—Boston Transcript.

The Uses of the Sword.

The uses to which the sword has been put seem to have been almost as varied as its appearance when we recall the anecdote told of Charlemagne, who said, as he used the pommel of his sword to put his stamp on treaties, "I sign them with this end, and with the other I will take care that they are kept."

Easily Accounted For.

Blobbs—He says he would rather fight than eat.

Slobbs—Pugnacious, eh?

Blobbs—No; dyspeptic.—Philadelphia Record.

About 600,000 trees are annually planted by Swedish school children under the guidance of their teachers.

THE PATRIOT IN PEACE

Duty Demands Study of Government Problems

CITIZEN IS THE SOVEREIGN

While the Party With Which He Allies Himself Is Simply the Agent—Bryan Has Not Found Definition of Patriotism to Satisfy Him

Boston, Jan. 10.—As the guest of the Commonwealth club, William J. Bryan arrived in this city yesterday afternoon. A crowd gathered at the station in anticipation of seeing the visitor and as he stepped from the train he was loudly cheered. At points along the route to the hotel he was recognized and heartily greeted by those upon the streets.

At 6:30 o'clock, Mr. Bryan held a reception at the Quincy house and a large number of people improved the opportunity of paying their respects to the man who has twice been the candidate of the Democracy for president of the United States. Following the reception a banquet was served to a large company, of which Mr. Bryan was the central figure.

In assuming the toastmaster's chair, President Washburn read a number of letters in reply to invitations to be present from men of both state and national prominence.

Mr. Washburn described Mr. Bryan's two campaigns, and eulogized his statesmanship in accepting political defeat, yet adhering to his own opinions.

The chief guest of the evening was presented last. Lieutenant Governor Bates, representing the state, first being introduced. He was received with cheers of "our next Governor." His official welcome to Mr. Bryan was warmly given. The welcome of the city of Boston was extended by its recently inaugurated mayor, Patrick A. Collins.

Mr. Bryan responded to the "Patriot in Peace," and when he was introduced, everyone arose and cheered. He expressed his gratification for the evidences of good will. "There is nothing I am more anxious for in this life," he said, "than to retain the confidence and respect of the people of this nation. I have confidence that in our political battles of the future we shall fight them on a higher plane than in the past. The Spanish war taught us a lesson that will not soon be forgotten; all party differences disappeared during that war. It taught us the lesson that there is a patriotism in the nation sufficient for any time of need, and that there is no portion of a political party that does not have at heart the nation's welfare."

He referred to the story of Christ's birth and the benediction, "On earth Peace, Good will to Men," and said that if government is to be everlasting and peace perpetual there must be in it the element of justice. "I believe the moral element in government is the important element," he said. "There is but one basis upon which peace can be built, and that is justice. He promotes peace who promotes justice. I confess I have not been able to find a definition of patriotism that satisfies me. It would be said if patriotism could only be displayed in time of war.

"War is like the surgical operation which severs a limb because the person has refused to administer a milder remedy in time. Patriotism is that intelligence that enables a man to see that his highest good is served when his country is best served. It is an enlightened selfishness which leads a man to do for his country that which he feels is to do himself good in the end. A man who has no higher ideal than the making of money has not reached the level where he can be called a man.

"There is something holy in education. It is the equipment of a man for citizenship. I believe it is the duty of a citizen to so discipline his intellect that he can turn that mind and intellect upon every problem of government and give to his country the advantages of intelligent citizenship. The heart is infinitely more important than the head for individual service and national greatness.

"There are things that circumstances cannot determine or inheritance affect. There are some who do not attempt to know what their duty is. If the national government is not good, it is your fault. It is the best that the world ever saw, in theory, but it is not perfect and will approach perfection only as people approach perfection. What the American people need today is that form of patriotism that will lead them to study and understand the problems of government and will give them the moral courage to do what they believe to be right, no matter what the consequences may be. Moral courage is rarer than physical courage and as important, if not more so. We need the moral courage that will lead us to rebuke our party when it is wrong. We need the intelligence that will teach a man that his party is not his master, but his servant. The citizen is the overeign, the party the agent.

"I believe this country would be better if the men in public life had the moral courage to dissent, as did Senator Hoar, when his conscience leads him away from his party.

"Every time there is a struggle between right and wrong, the death of those who struggle for the right blossoms forth into blessings for those who come after them. If we believe the cause is just, it matters not whether it looks gloomy or dark; we have got to continue the struggle for it. It is the duty of the patriot in peace to fight the battles of peace and win the victories of peace no less renowned than the victories of war."

CARNEGIE'S GREAT GIFT

Donor Tells of Aims of Institution to Be Established at Washington

Washington, Jan. 10.—Official announcement was made yesterday of the board of trustees of the Carnegie institution, which has been incorporated here under the $10,000,000 gift of Andrew Carnegie. The only indication as to the form of the gift is that it will be in "5 percent bonds."

Mr. Carnegie's purpose, as stated by himself in requesting the various trustees to become members of the board, is as follows:

"It is proposed to found in the city of Washington, in the spirit of Washington, an institution which shall, in the broadest and most liberal manner, encourage investigation, research and discovery; encourage the application of knowledge to the improvement of mankind; provide such buildings, laboratories, books and apparatus as may be needed; and afford instruction of an advanced character to students, inside or outside of schools, properly qualified to profit thereby.

"Among its aims are these: To increase the efficiency of the universities and other institutions of learning by utilizing and adding to their existing facilities, and aiding teachers in the various institutions for experimental and other work in these institutions as far as may be advisable.

"To discover the exceptional man in every department of study and enable him by financial aid to make the work for which he seems specially designed his life work.

"To promote original research, paying great attention thereto as being one of the chief purposes of this institution.

"To increase facilities for higher education.

"To enable such students as may find Washington the best point for their special studies to avail themselves of such advantages as may be open to them in the museums, libraries, laboratories, observatories, meteorological, piscatorial and forestry schools and kindred institutions of the several departments of the government.

"To ensure the prompt publication and distribution of the results of scientific investigation, a field considered to be highly important."

Milner Advocates Squeezing

Johannesburg, Jan. 10.—At a local banquet given here last night, Lord Milner, the British high commissioner in South Africa, made a long speech. He declared: "The war will end all the sooner if we apply a steady physical pressure, without fidgeting about negotiations. It is useless to threaten and useless to wheedle; the only thing is imperturbably to squeeze, and to keep our clemency and conciliation, both excellent in their proper places, for the Boers who surrender, instead of lavishing it in blandishments upon those continuing the fight.

Hitch Continues on Arbitration

Mexico City, Jan. 10.—Owing to the firm attitude taken by the delegations who are favorable to the compulsory plan of arbitration, it is probable that the plan in question will be recorded in the final protocol. If this course is adopted the Chilians may withdraw from the conference. But if it is not followed, it is practically sure that the Peruvians, Argentines, Guatemalans and Paraguayans will withdraw.

Head Probably Lopped Off

Pekin, Jan. 10.—It is possible that General Tung Fuh Siang, the notorious anti-foreigner, has already been beheaded. The Tartar general who was ordered to carry out this sentence has telegraphed that he had imprisoned Tung Fuh Siang and asks for instructions. To this message the dowager empress replied, ordering the Tartar general to carry out her decapitation edict.

A Sixty-Foot Spouter

Galveston, Jan. 10.—Word has been received from the most authoritative source that a gusher has been brought in in the Keyser Mound field, 50 miles from Galveston, and which is said to be spouting oil 60 feet high. Those in charge of the well cannot control it and oil is flowing over the contiguous territory. It is an eight-inch well and has a depth of 700 feet.

Russians Blame Americans

St. Petersburg, Jan. 10.—Opinion here inclines to put the responsibility for all the trouble at New-Chwang on the failure of the American consul there to try and punish the American sailors when the first instance of disorder occurred, and is not inclined to find fault with the administrator of New-Chwang.

NEAR AN AGREEMENT

Sugar Interests Getting Together on Cuban Tariff

WILL MAKE CONCESSIONS

Annexation Would Hurt Beet People, While Cane People Dread Prostrating Effects of Delay—Temporary Tariff Law May Be Continued

Washington, Jan. 10.—The vexed question of concessions to Cuba is in a fair way for settlement by mutual agreement of the interested parties. The cane and the beet interests have practically decided to adjust their differences diplomatically, rather than permit them to come to legislative battle in which the adherents of both sides might be in some danger politically.

The beet people realize that they must grant something, since complete obstruction, even if they had the power to make it, would mean Cuban annexation and so kill their goose. The cane people, on the other hand, dread the prostrating effects of delay, and the enormous dangers of a financial panic in Cuba just as the new government is beginning its work. They accordingly are willing to accept as a compromise something less than they think they deserve, in order to bridge over the present exigency. The compromise plan, and a canvas on both sides indicates that in spite of some bitter remonstrance it will be successful, is substantially this:

It is proposed to allow a drawback for one year, and that the calendar year of 1902, on all molasses and raw sugar up to No. 16 Dutch standard, imported from Cuba (and the growth of that island) to the United States, of 50 percent of the existing duties on those articles. This drawback would be paid to Cuban plantation owners on such of their products as found a market here. Other Cuban products during the same period are to come in at duties of 50 percent of existing rates, the remission to be direct instead of by drawback.

In return for this concession to Cuba, the president is directed to publish a temporary tariff law for Cuba, granting preferential rates to our products. The understanding would be that after the independent government is fully established, Cuba would of its own motion continue the same rates.

This is the general plan, although the rate is subject to modification, most of the beet sugar people thinking it too high, but willing to yield to the principle involved. Their great victory will be in getting a drawback instead of a bounty or direct tariff remission and in securing a one year's limitation. The bounty project, considered a few weeks ago, threatened to prove unpopular, the very word having an atractive sound. The best people did not want any direct tariff remission because, if the public saw that the edifice could be tampered with, they might lose faith in the sacred character of the existing sugar schedules. The beet people regard it as highly important to maintain existing rates, and to have the drawback concession itself expire in a year, unless there is newly affirmative legislation. These are the considerations that make the compromise attractive to them. Its direct advantage to the other side is immediate and self-evident.

Protest From Louisiana

New Orleans, Jan. 10.—Many Louisiana cane sugar growers in session here yesterday unanimously adopted a protest to congress against the proposed concessions to the producers of cane sugar in the island of Cuba.

BULLET IN HIS SKULL

Alleged Destroyer of Domestic Peace Assaulted by Father and Son

New Canaan, Conn., Jan. 10.—G. D. Nichols, one of the most prominent men in the town, and his son, George, aged 17, are at the town lockup, charged with attempted murder. Upon returning home Nichols ejected his family, with the exception of the son, from the house, accusing his wife of being too friendly with a man named Clark, employed by Nichols and who boarded at the Nichols home. Upon entering the house Nichols saw Clark and immediately proceeded to assault Clark with the butt end of a revolver. He then called upon his son to shoot Clark and the boy complied. The bullet entered Clark's skull. Both father and son were immediately arrested. Clark will probably recover. Nichols is a justice of the peace, editor of the New Canaan Republican, and proprietor of a number of industries.

A Much-Married Man

Boston, Jan. 10.—Joseph Biggins will have to answer in court to the charge of polygamy, upon which he was arrested yesterday, while living with a woman named Mary McCarthy, who claimed that she was married to him. For some years Biggins has lived in another part of the city with another wife, to whom he was married in 1894, and by whom he has four children. Biggins had been ill prior to New Year's, but on Jan. 2, although still sick, he left his home on crutches, saying he would be back soon. He did not return, and the police yesterday located him as above stated.

No Agreement Yet Reached

Boston, Jan. 10.—There was no strike of the teamsters of Boston declared this morning, although there seems to be a feeling among the men that it will only be delayed for a short time. The Master Teamsters' association instructed its committee of conference to meet a similar committee from the teamsters' union in the presence of the state board of arbitration today, when some decisive action will be agreed upon.

Two Blocks In Ashes

Ellsworth, Me., Jan. 10.—Two of the principal business blocks in this city were reduced to ashes last night, while two other buildings were considerably damaged, causing a loss of about $25,000. The fire was in the business centre of the city and originated in the basement of a building occupied by E. J. Davis, furniture dealer, and L. W. Jordan, undertaker and upholsterer.

A Short Strike

Providence, Jan. 10.—The brewers of the James Hanley Brewing company went on a strike for shorter hours yesterday morning and were successful, the company yielding the point late in the afternoon. The company has agreed to give a day of nine hours within 10 consecutive hours, and for engineers and firemen eight hours a day for seven days instead of 12 hours, as formerly.

McKinley Day In Maine

Augusta, Me., Jan. 10.—Governor Hill has issued an address in which he suggests that Jan. 29, the 59th anniversary of the birth of William McKinley, be known as "McKinley day," and that at least some portion of it be set aside by all the schools of Maine for special exercises appropriate to the occasion.

Italian Postoffice at Boston

Boston, Jan. 10.—Through the efforts of Congressman Conry the Italians of Boston will soon have a little postoffice of their own. Here they may use their own language in the transaction of their postal business, as some of their countrymen will have charge of the office and do the work. It will be the first Italian postal station in the country.

Good Afternoon.

The appointment of Gov. Shaw as Secretary of the Treasury has already been confirmed. Rather quick all round.

In the curent number of the Liberal Review, President Roosevelt, in an article on "Good Citizenship," says the essentials of a good citizen are "courage, honesty and common sense; and a little knowledge of history."

New South Wales has passed a law making arbitration in labor disputes compulsory. This is following the precedent set by New Zealand about five years ago, which has so far proved eminently satisfactory to both employer and employed.

The British press is drawing invidious comparisons between American and English millionaires. They allege that the English millionaires are stingy but hope in time they may be induced to emulate the munificent example of Mr. Carnegie.

The Republican City Committee of Boston report receipts of $14,440 for the fall campaigns, and with this they were unable to elect. Mayor Hart himself contributed $3,000. The popularity of elections may be questioned when one learns that only 44 contributions were made toward the expenses and that six persons paid $8,700 of the total $14,400.

Henry H. Faxon and Theophilus King of Quincy and nearly one hundred others, representing most of the cities and many of the towns of the State have forwarded an open letter to the members of the Legislature and the press against the removal of any of the restrictive features of the liquor laws. They present a strong case, and refer to the report of the Legislative Committee of 1894 which made an investigation of the question, "What is the effect of the liquor traffic upon crime pauperism and insanity"—to be found in the special report of the Commissioner of the Labor Bureau made to the Legislature of 1896. This early activity for the cause of temperance will undoubtedly have good effect.

The members of the House are reported to have divided for and against capital on the reference of the message on street railways. While this may have been true largely, there are other reasons, probably, why Representative McKnight favored reference to the Committee on Street Railways. Senator Sprague of this city is a member of the Committee on Street Railways, and his constituents have faith in him. Again, neither the Committee on Cities or the Committee on Towns has a representative from Norfolk County. There are doubts whether the Senate will concur with the House in the reference, and Representative McKnight may after all be with the majority.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Cuba has elected a president, Now it remains to be seen what Uncle Sam will let that president do. —Waltham News.

☞Miss Thomas president of Bryn Mawr college suggests that "the college presidents who enjoin upon us to teach women womanly virtues and educate them to become wives and mothers should begin by educating their own college men to become husbands." Success and happiness as wife and mother can rarely be attained apart from thoughtful and intelligent husbandship and fatherhood. — New Bedford Standard.

☞The most "observed of all observers" at the dinner of the Boston Press Rifle Association, the other evening. was one of their good friends, and a good friend to all the craft—Henry H. Faxon of Quincy. Mr. Faxon has always been a generous patron of the newspaper riflemen and attends the dinner when possible. That evening he appeared in the room,and at once a shout went up, and every man stood up. "Here's a toast to Mr. Faxon," some one shouted. "That's a dry one, remember," said another, and enjoying the "knocks," Mr. Faxon took his seat at the head table beside President Sullivan. It was a noticeable fact that he had no bottle of beer.—Journal.

☞If the New York saloonkeepers who were compelled to close their places of business ast Sunday while others were permitted to remain open, had the courage to put up a kick they might make trouble. The law contains no respectability qualifications whatever, and if it is wrong for one place to keep open on the Lord's Day it is wrong for all. The officials have no right to make any discrimination concerning violations of the Statutes, and display of favoritism in that respect should not be countenanced by those in whose power it lies to put a stop to it. No saloonkeeper should be allowed to do business on the Sababth unless the law be changed to permit of it, and the law should not be thus changed.—Lynn Item.

☞Perhaps it is too much to hope that a new era of debt reduction is now dawning for Massachusetts municipalities; but if there is at least a disposition to keep expenses and loans down to the very lowest point that will permit of decent municipal service that indication is to be welcomed as something gained. It might be possible to reduce the municipal debts, if it were not for the fact that those debts have already been heaped up so relentlessly that a large share of the money now raised by current taxation must go to meet interest and sinking-fund payments. For the next 15 or 20 years the cities must strain every nerve even to meet the burden imposed by the reckless borrowing of past years. Still, if a system of stern economy in city affairs is now put into work the time may come when that burden will grow lighter.—Boston Advertiser.

☞It is not a good sign of the times that several great nations are comparing notes, not to see who is getting on most rapidly in the peaceful ways of civilization, but in order to show that they are no worse than their neighbors. The Americans claim that they are not so cruel in their dealings with the Filipinos as the Spaniards were in Cuba. England is citing the example of Germany and America to show that her conduct of the war in South Africa is not more cruel than the treatment of the Filipinos and the Poles. It is not pleasant to have the great nations throwing charges at each other, with the response, "You're another!" This state of affairs cannot continue long, because the common sense and good feeling of the world will demand that some mutual agreement shall be reached by which the wars now in progress shall be brought to an end. One of the worst results of the present condition of things is that the great nations are becoming contentious among themselves, that they are losing respect for one another and that they are laying up stores of prejudice which will obstruct the peaceful business of the world when the strife of arms shall cease. A few years of uninterrupted commerce and peaceful intercourse between the nations of the world would now bring about a common understanding which it would be difficult hereafter to break up by resort to war. We are really making progress towards that end and it is pitiful to see hindrances thrown in the way, to the detriment of all nations. —Christian Register.

BY GOVERNMENT.

Strong Move to Have Navy Yards Build New Warships.

Powerful influences will be exerted during the present session of Congress to secure the construction at navy yards of all the larger ships which may be authorized under the liberal increase program recommended in the President's annual message, says a Washington dispatch to the Herald.

Concerted action has been taken throughout the West, especially on the Pacific slope, to secure battleships for the Mare Island Navy yard and labor unions and other organizations are sending in petitions, to both houses, urging that the navy yards be authorized to undertake every battleship and armored cruiser authorized this session.

An argument advanced in favor of navy yard work is that all the larger ship building plants have now all the government and private work that they can handle. Delegations from the cities supporting the larger yards will be given hearings this winter by the two naval committees when it will be urged that the navy again return to the old customs of undertaking the building of part of its fleet.

Previous experience in building ships by navy yards was not favorable to the plan. Secretary Long will oppose any departure from the present practice of constructing warships under contract and is prepared to present figures to show that the private yards can build them cheaper and quicker than the government yards.

Wollaston Glee Club.

A men's musical club formed last March has devoloped into a first class glee club ready to give a concert the last of this month which will surely be a fine one. The first meeting of this organization took place in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on March 25. There were several present and officers were elected. For a time Mr. Arnold offered his services as musical director and his guidance proved to be a great advancement for the newly formed club.

The members decided to hold meetings every Monday evening during the months October to May inclusive. The last meeting of the month of May was decided upon as an annual business meeting. At this first meeting besides election of officers a set of by-laws were drawn up. Two-thirds of club to form a quorum. The age limit is seventeen and membership thirty. It was voted that a sum of five dollars should be paid by members. The club held its first meeting of 1901-1902 season on the first Monday evening of October. At this meeting there were twenty paid members. The club has been exceptionally fortunate in obtaining the services of Mr. William Lester Bates of Boston as director for this season and ever since the opening night great improvement has been made and the name of this efficient director has brought into the club many good voices. They have met regularly since October on Monday evenings at 7.45, and so by this time they well deserve the name of the Wollaston Glee Club. The club has missed greatly at its meetings Mr. Litchfield, who has been ill. The club is still desirous of good voices. One of the by-laws is that it shall be non-sectarian.

The present officers are: President, Mr. Herbert Gurney; Vice President, Mr. Walter Arnold; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. J. Q. Litchfield; Executive Committee, Mr. Isaac, Mr. Noyes and officers.

Reception.

The private dancing class of Prof. Kapplan held a reception Thursday evening at Hancock hall, which was participated in by upwards of eighty couples. Dancing of course, was the feature of the evening. Previous to this, however, a pleasing concert was given by the orchestra. The dance opened with a grand march, which was led by Prof. Kapplan and Mrs. William C. Hart. The program included all the latest dances as well as the somewhat absolete square dances. Refreshments were served during intermission. Mr. E. Frank Mitchell was chairman of the committee of arrangements.

SMALL POX CASES.

Criticism on Removal of Smith Child.

City Physician will Take Charge.

Board of Health May Require General Vaccination.

Mayor Bryant has decided after a conference with the City Solicitor that the care of the smallpox patients comes under the City Physician rather than the physician of the Board of Health. The Board of Health therefore has turned over the care of the six patients to the City Physician. This does not relieve the Board of Health much as it must provide quarters and food for the patients and quaarntined persons.

City Physician Welch will not personally visit the patients, but has secured the services of Dr. Ellsworth who proposes to make a careful study of all cases.

Some criticism has been made because the Board of Health removed the Smith child from its home on Wilson street to the pest house. When however, it is understood that in the house where the Smith child lived there were eleven people who lived in four rooms, but two of which were furnished, it will appear that the pest house would be a palace to what the child had been having. The pest house is provided with double windows and plenty of stoves and it is as warm and comfortable as anyone could wish, then again the child has the benefit of a trained nurse.

At a meeting of the Board of Health Thursday evening it was decided to authorize all regular practicing physicians to give free vaccination. This will enable people to be vaccinated by their family physician at city's expense.

The Board of Health has not decided as to the opening of the Willard and Wollaston school buildings or relative to ordering pupils in other school buildings vaccinated.

McKNIGHT CLERK.

Quincy Representative Elected to Important Position.

It is several years since a Quincy Representative has been clerk of a standing committee of the Legislature, but Representative McKnight, a new member, was on Thursday elected clerk of the Committee on Insurance, one of the important committees. As already noted, this committee will probably consider that part of Gov. Crane's inaugural address relative to the abolition of the Fire Marshal's office. The committee usually has referred to it about as many bills as any committee, and many of them important.

—There is a railway over the Egyptian desert which runs for 45 miles in a straight line, but this is easily beaten in Australia. The railway from Nyngan to Bourke, in New South Wales, runs over a plain, which is as level as a billiard table, for 126 miles in a mathematically straight line. There is hardly an enbankment, nowhere a curve, and only three very slight elevations.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

MADAGASCAR PAPER.

VERY SUPPLE, VERY STRONG, AND LOOKS LIKE PARCHMENT.

It Is Made From the Bark of the Avoavo Shrub and Only a Few Persons, Descendants of One Family, Know the Secret of Its Making.

In a letter from Tamatave our vice consul transmits the translation of an article from The Journal Official which tells of the Madagascar's method of making paper. It is as follows:

"The manufacture of paper by the Antaimoro, one of the oldest tribes among the inhabitants of Madagascar, which is completely unknown to the other tribes of the island, constitutes a regular local industry in the district of Ambohipeno. Only a limited number of persons, descendants of the same family, belonging to the Arabs from the coast of Africa, know the secret of this manufacture and devote themselves to it whenever a pressing need of money or a desire to purchase some long wished for article compels them to shake off their native indolence.

"The paper, which is supple and very strong and has an appearance of parchment, which gives it the imprint of quaint originality, is in great favor with the Antaimoro, and there is not a family, not a home, that does not possess a dozen or so sheets carefully stitched together and handed down from generation to generation.

"In these parchments there are religiously preserved the family traditions, chronicles of past events, the history of former wars, the unchangeable decrees of their ancestors—in a word, the whole of the national manners and customs. It is in these documents that the followers of Islamism, very sparse in that region, transcribe and study the law of the prophet. It is, in fact, in these scrolls that the Antaimoro, suspicious and greedy of gain, calculates the profit on his oxen and the product of his ricefields.

"This quaint agglomeration of Arabic hieroglyphics with Malagasy sentences and figures in the same volume, which the owner will only part with for its weight in gold, ought to furnish the bibliophile a document decidedly out of the common.

"The manufacturer of this peculiar paper was apparently a man cast on the coast in the middle of the ninth century, who settled on the Matitanana river.

"Tradition represents him as horrified at seeing his Koran torn, doubtless due to the stirring adventures of his voyage, and puzzling his brain to make a clean copy. Experimenting with different barks of trees, he finally fixed his choice on the avoavo, the bark of which is easily reducible to pulp.

"The avoavo is a wild shrub with short branches of an average thickness of four to five inches in diameter and nine to twelve feet in height, the leaf resembling very much a bay leaf. It is met with everywhere on the coast and in the interior of the district, and the bark can be utilized at any season of the year.

"After taking off the outer skin, which is of the grayish tint peculiar to trees in general, the inner part, perfectly white and somewhat sticky, is removed and formed into a big ball, which is placed in running water to soak. This ball is picked to pieces little by little, and the pieces thus separated are washed and placed in a large pot with a certain quantity of water. The mass is then covered with ashes, followed by a second layer of bark, again covered with ashes, and so on until the pot is three-quarters full. The pot is then filled with water, the lid put on and the whole boiled for two or three days without interruption, care being taken to add clean water from time to time to replace the loss by evaporation, always throwing in a handful of ashes.

"On the morning of the third day the bark, completely reduced by cooking, looks like a thick batter, which is then passed through a sieve and washed in fresh water. It is then beaten, briskly kneaded and under the pressure of the fingers is transformed into a soft dough, which is spread, still damp, on the green leaves of the traveler's tree with a special tool, consisting of two rods about eighteen inches long, joined by slats of raffia wood, the only wood, apparently, to which the pulp will not stick. This is the most delicate part of the whole operation.

"With the flat of the hand, moistened, the required thickness is given to the sheet. It is then pressed, leveled, smoothed and put in the sun.

"As soon as it is dry it is glazed with weak rice water, spread with the hand, like starch on linen. The sheet, still in a damp state, is then, as it were, ironed out by the hand or with a polished pebble. It is finally dried, peeled off from the green leaf, and the paper is finished. Each sheet thus obtained is worth from 1 to 2 cents. It measures twenty to twenty-three inches long and ten inches wide. It is finally trimmed for binding."—New York Press.

It Pleased the Composer.

A curious story is told as to how the Rothschilds supported Carafa, the composer. The latter was far from rich. His principal income was derived from a snuffbox. And this was the way of it: The snuffbox was given to the author of "La Prison d'Edimbourgh" by Baron James de Rothschild as a token of esteem. Carafa sold it twenty-four hours later for 75 napoleons to the same jeweler from whom it had been bought. This became known to Rothschild, who gave it again to the musician on the following year. The next day it returned to the jeweler's. The traffic continued till the death of the banker and longer still, for his sons kept up the tradition, to the great satisfaction of Carafa.

LELAND POWERS.

"Monsieur Beaucaire" and a Poem His Program.

It was an overflow meeting Thursday night at the High School hall, extra chairs being brought in to accommodate all those who gathered to see Mr. Leland Powers and listen to his interpretation of that charming story by Booth Tarkington, "Monsieur Beaucaire."

Mr. Powers divided the story into three parts with brief intermission. From the beginning to the end he had his audience with him; they smiled when he did, and were sad with him, so vivid and natural were his renderings of the characters. Owing to the shortness of the program Mr. Powers added a poem which he recited feelingly, touching and quickening that which is highest and best in the human mind.

It was a thoroughly enjoyable evening and many will look back to the third entertainment in the Quincy Teachers' course with pleasant memories.

She Soon Altered It.

Many young ladies have found it necessary to improve, or rather to alter, the spelling of the names with which they were originally blessed. Mabel becomes Mabelle, Jessie becomes Jessica, Mary becomes Marie, and so forth. A brother lately received a letter from his young sister at a fashionable boarding school. It was signed Jessica. He answered:

Dear Sister Jessica—Your welcome letter received. Papaica and mammaica are well. Aunt Maryca and Uncle Georgica started for Glasgowica yesterday. I have bought a new horse. You ought to see it. It is a beauty. Its name is Maudica. Your affectionate brother, SAMICA.

The sister's next letter was signed "Jessie."

Some Famous Echoes.

There is a famous echo on the Rhine between Coblentz and Bingen which repeats a word seventeen times, while in the sepulcher of Metella, the wife of Sulla, in the Roman Campagna, there is an echo which repeats five times in different keys and will also give back with distinctness a hexameter line which requires two and a half seconds to utter. Brewster mentions an echo on the north side of Shipley church, in Sussex, England, which repeats twenty-one syllables.

Had Been There.

"There is no doubt," said the student of law, "that many people have been imprisoned, although innocent of any crime."

"I know that by sad experience."

"You don't say so! Let's have the story."

"There's no story to it. I merely had the bad luck to be drawn on several juries that were locked up over night."—Washington Star.

Insult to Injury.

"Poor Bickers has a very hard hearted wife," said Trivvet.

"What's the trouble now?" asked Dicer.

"She not only broke the broomstick over his head, but made him go to the store and buy another."—Detroit Free Press.

CUBA'S FIRST PRESIDENT.

Tomas Palma Tells What His Most Important Work Will Be.

In his home at Central Valley, near Goshen, N. Y., a New York Journal representative found President Elect Tomas Estrada Palma the other night (Jan. 2). The veteran Cuban was sitting in his library. He greeted the reporter pleasantly and said:

"Many gentlemen of the press have been to see me, but I could not tell them much because I had not received formal notification of my election.

"This night," he continued, "I received my first telegram. It is from Mendez Capote, president of the national constitutional convention and a member of the board of elections. I have received many telegrams since, but this is the first. Now I am at liberty to talk. My son Jose will translate it."

Jose, a bright youth, who is studying law at Columbia, came at his father's call and read as follows:

Palma—According to the central committee of scrutiny, I allow myself to assure you that the election was practically unanimous. The partisans of Maso fought only in a few provinces. The conviction here is that the vote taken represents the will of the people by an immense majority. MENDEZ CAPOTE.

"There are two things which I shall ever strive to accomplish. The most important is to strengthen the cordial relations existing between the republic of Cuba and the United States of America. The little island owes more to this country than it can ever repay. It cannot exist and prosper without the aid of this country. I hope and pray that we may live always in amity.

"My other object will be to conduct an economical administration, and under this head I hope to develop the Isla de Cuba, principally the agricultural industries. I hope to secure a reduction of tariff in this country so that the products of Cuba may be received here. Our principal products are sugar and tobacco. I hope that Cuba will produce but little that is grown in this country, even as I hope the United States will produce but little that is grown in Cuba, so that we may mutually be benefited by the importation of our productions."

President Palma uses the choicest English, but with a pronounced Spanish accent, and gesticulates eloquently with his hands while talking. His most eloquent utterance was made with tears in his eyes:

"I belong to Cuba, body and soul!"

"I shall leave the United States in April," he continued, "and go to my fatherland, but I shall not go with the idea of living in luxury or with any feeling of vanity in my bosom. I shall go there to work like any factory hand or any laborer with the pick and shovel, and every officer of my cabinet will be expected and compelled to do the same.

"God bless the press of this country! I owe much to it and expect much from it. I trust that your paper will set me right before the American people, whom I love so well, and not misquote me. From the bottom of my heart I am a Democrat."

KINETOSCOPE'S NEW USE.

Its Pictures Will Be Used In Scientific Experiments.

A kinetoscope of the latest pattern has been purchased by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston for the use of its classes and instructors. The first use to which it will be put will be in illustrating the movement and character of air waves. The air about us is full of unnoticed sound waves, produced not by sounds, but by the various motions that make sounds. From certain positions these waves can be photographed, and a given wave, by means of the kinetoscope, can be reproduced not only greatly magnified, but so as to show it in progress from one point to another. The great value of this moving picture of course lies particularly in the fact that the speed at which the wave moves can be regulated by the mechanism of the kinetoscope—that is, although the speed of sound waves is about 1,120 feet a second, by means of the kinetoscope a wave can be made to travel visibly across the screen of the lecture room at a rate slow enough to permit careful analysis and study.

Another early use to which the kinetoscope will be put at the institute has to do with the solution of an important and difficult problem in the construction of dynamos, concerning the relation between an alternating current dynamo and the steam engine that supplies its power. The stroke of the engine on its piston is uneven, being at first strong and then diminishing to no power at all, a defect which has often been pointed out, but has not yet been fully remedied, and is hardly calculated to afford the even power required by an alternating current dynamo. In the modern machine this difficulty is partly overcome by the use of a flywheel that smooths out some of the unevenness of the piston throbs, but it is hoped that the kinetoscope, by affording an opportunity of studying the present mechanism not only in a greatly enlarged form, but so regulated in speed that the motion can be fully analyzed, will suggest some important improvement.

Tapir Teeth Found In Kentucky.

Three molar teeth of a tapir were found at Yarnalton, near Lexington, Ky., some weeks ago and sent by Professor Arthur Miller, biologist of the State college, to Professor Osborne, dean of the biological department of Columbia university and a curator in the American Museum of Natural History, for examination, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. They were returned the other day and pronounced genuine. The South American tapir was never before found this far north, and the find is an extremely rare one.

MILTON.

A game of basketball between the Milton High school and the East Milton gymnasium class will be played at Ellsworth hall tonight to be followed by dancing.

A union service of the Baptist and Congregational churches will be held Sunday evening at the East Milton Congregational church. Rev. Mr. Rogers will preach.

Misses Jennie and Sadie Graham entertained their Sunday school classes on Wednesday afternoon at their home on Church street. There were games, music and refreshments.

Horace Hussey has accepted a position in the chocolate mills.

Mr. Freeman Gay has returned to East Milton.

The section of the Metropolitan sewer between the old school house on Adams street and Mechanics street has been completed. This was built by the National Construction company who will build fifty feet of the next section for Noon & Co.

The new Combination wagon which went into commission Jan. 1, had its first run Thursday morning to a fire just over the line in Canton. The fire was in a large hay barn on the Heminway estate which was destroyed. A cow barn adjoining was also badly damaged.

The annual meeting of the Unquity club was held Wednesday evening and these officers elected: President, Albert A. Brackett; Vice President W. W. Churchill; Secretary, Harry F. Brierly; Treasurer, E. E. Carlton; Board of Management, the above with John Graham, J. P. Fenno, E. P. Libby, James Gibbs, Charles Gilchrist, Josiah Babcock and Peter McIntire. The report of the treasurer showed the club to be in a good financial condition.

The proposition to build bowling alleys at the club house was discussed.

Would Make Peace With Boers

London, Jan. 10.—James Bryce, former under secretary of state for foreign affairs, during the course of a speech to his constituents at Aberdeen yesterday, advocated making generous terms with the Boers. He added that he was more concerned for the country than for the Liberal party and would welcome any ministry, however composed, that would conclude an honorable peace.

Why Gener Was Suspended

Havana, Jan. 10.—General Wood's reasons for suspending Miguel Gener, mayor of Havana, were his alleged incompetency and his inattention to business. Gener has been the leader of the Maso faction in Havana. He has gained the enmity of the Cuban official element. The local press has been predicting his removal for a month past.

Daring and Successful Robbery

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. NICARAGUA CANAL BILL

Passes House by Practically Unanimous Vote

BUT TWO VOTES AGAINST IT

Advocates of Alternative Route Found Their Strength Dwindling From the First Ballot—Aggregate Cost of Canal Fixed at $180,000,000

Washington, Jan. 10.—The Hepburn Nicaragua canal bill passed the house late yesterday afternoon by practically a unanimous vote. Only two members out of 310 voted against it. Messrs. Fletcher (Rep. Minn.) and Lassiter (Dem. Va.) were the two voting in the negative. The opposition to committing the government to the Nicaragua route attempted to secure amendments to lodge with the president the discretionary power to purchase and complete the Panama canal, if it could be purchased for $40,000,000.

The test came on the first vote, when the advocates of an alternative route polled 102 against 170 votes. At each succeeding vote their strength dwindled, until Mr. Cannon (Ills.), under whose leadership the fight was made, was unable to get the ayes and noes on a motion to recommit. All other amendments failed and the bill passed exactly as it came from the committee. None of the votes, except that on the final passage of the bill, was a record vote.

The debate which preceded the taking of the final vote was made memorable by a clash between Mr. Hepburn, the author of the bill, and Mr. Cannon, chairman of the appropriation committee. On several previous occasions they have measured swords over canal legislation.

The bill as passed authorizes the president to secure from the states of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, in behalf of the United States, control of such portion of the territory belonging to said states as may be desirable and necessary on which to excavate, construct and protect a canal suitable to the wants of modern navigation and commerce, and appropriates such a sum as may be necessary to secure the control of said territory.

Section two authorizes the president, after securing control of the needed territory, to direct the secretary of war to construct such canal from the Carribean sea, at a point near Greytown, in Nicaragua, by way of Lake Nicaragua, to a point on the Pacific ocean near Brito, and also to construct proper harbors at the termini of said canal, and to make necessary provisions for the defense of the canal and harbors.

Sections three and four authorize the president to make such surveys as may be necessary and to employ such persons in constructing the canal as may to him seem wise, and direct that in the construction of the canal the River San Juan and Lake Nicaragua shall be used as far as they are available.

Section five authorizes the president to guarantee to the governments of Costa Rica and Nicaragua the use of the canal and harbors, upon terms to be agreed upon, for all vessels owned by said states and by citizens thereof.

The last section makes a present appropriation of $10,000,000 to carry on the work and authorizes the secretary of war to enter into proper contracts for material and work as may be deemed necessary therefor, such work and material to be paid for as appropriations may be made from time to time.

The section fixes the aggregate cost at $180,000,000, to be drawn from the treasury on warrants of the president.

To Abolish Loose Practice

Washington, Jan. 10.—The civil service commission has in view a request to the department of agriculture that the laborers' roll of that department be submitted to the commission for classification. There has been a loose practice at the department of appointing persons to the laborers' roll and giving them clerical duties to perform, which is a violation of the civil service rules. If the laborers' roll is classified, the person on it may be assigned to any duty.

Parity of Gold and Silver Dollars

Washington, Jan. 10.—The first financial measure of importance to be reported to the house is that agreed upon yesterday by the committee on coinage, weights and measures, providing for the maintenance of the legal tender silver dollar at a parity with gold, and for the increase of the subsidiary silver coinage. The measure was introduced by Representative Hill of Connecticut.

Music was furnished by the Marine band.

PREPARING FOR WAR

Nicaragua Said to Be Planning an Attack Upon Colombia

Colon, Jan. 10.—General Alban, the commander of the Colombian forces, has received news that President Zelaya of Nicaragua has invited the other four presidents of Central America to attend a conference at Corinto, Nicaragua, with the secret object of inducing them to enter into a coalition against Colombia.

Nicaragua is making extensive war preparations. She has purchased the German warship Armenius, is negotiating for the purchase of two other warships, and has bought cannon, rifles and ammunition, amounting to the value of 1,500,000 marks, through the Nicaragua minister at Berlin, Senor Rocha. A certain Hamburg bank loaned the money for the purchases referred to.

The object of these preparations is that Nicaragua, Honduras, and Salvador intend to attack Guatemala and Costa Rica and compel them to join the proposed Central American union.

Senor Rocha is reported to have tried to induce the Prussian war ministry to supply Nicaragua with arms, which the ministry refused to do.

Honduras, Nicaragua and Salvador were, in 1896, constituted the United States of Central America so far as their relations to foreign countries were concerned, but, at the end of 1898, the arrangement fell through.

Dowager Empress as Censor

Pekin, Jan. 10.—The dowager empress asserted her complete supremacy yesterday by giving an audience in the most sacred hall in the Forbidden City. The rules of the dynasty forbid women to enter this hall, and the dowager empress has never before violated its sanctity. The emperor will receive the foreign diplomats in this hall. Officials believe the dowager empress to be paving the way to be present upon this occasion in order to prevent any communications between the diplomats and the emperor except under her censorship.

Each Side Given a Point

New York, Jan. 10.—The dispute between the lasters of Wichert & Gardiner's shoe factory in Brooklyn and their employes has been settled by Deputy Labor Commissioner Stark. He decided one of the points of the controversy in favor of the lasters; the other in favor of the employers. The company and its employes had decided to accept the decision of Mr. Stark as final arbiter and each party to the arbitration had posted $10,000 as evidence of good faith.

Liberty Bell at Exposition

Charleston, Jan. 10.—Liberty Bell day here was celebrated with all the honors; the city schools and many of the stores were closed and citizens observed it as a general holiday. The weather was ideal and not since the opening day has there been so splendid an outpouring at the exposition. The formal exercises were held in the auditorium, which was crowded to the utmost.

Suicide of Theological Student

New York, Jan. 10.—Paul Tuholski, 25 years old, a student in the Union Theological seminary, committed suicide last evening by taking carbolic acid. Tuholski graduated from the University of Rochester in 1899 and after passing a year at Harvard seminary entered the Union Theological seminary. He had been in ill-health.

May Be Working by June

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—Signor Marconi left for New York yesterday. The plans for his new station at Glace Bay, C. B., will be prepared at once, and his expectation is that the station will be ready for communication across the Atlantic by the beginning of June.

McCreary Wins In Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 10.—Ex-Governor James B. McCreary last night received the Democratic caucus nomination for United States senator by a vote of 62 to 37. This nomination is practically euivalent to an election.

BY THE GRACE OF A RED HAT

By Madge Bronson... Copyright, 1901, By A. S. Richardson.

It was such a startling bit of millinery—all crimson velvet, peacock breasts and glittering buckles!

Edith Harlowe, stepping from the elevated train, paused for a farewell glance in its direction. The next instant there came a fierce tug on her belt. Then something strong and convincing clasped her waist. Vaguely she felt that her feet were dangling in space. Then she heard horrified cries, and finally she realized that she had been dropped unceremoniously upon the seat nearest the door, with a crowd of curious people pressing upon her.

"Oh, the poor thing, she's going to faint!"

Edith drew herself up defiantly, only to drop back instantly into a more limp and comfortable position, and the downtown terminus was reached before she felt equal to walking. A faint peach blow tint crept into her face as she approached the young guard who had so pluckily come between herself and death.

"This is one of the times, don't you know, when one can't think of pretty speeches. It was all my fault—and—and if you had not"— She shuddered suggestively. "Please give me your name—and my uncle will thank you better than I can. Perhaps he"—

One glance at the guard, and the words died on her lips. The young fellow was looking into her eyes with an air which would stamp any suggestion of reciprocal favors as an insult.

"My name is Larry Creston, and I would be pleased to meet your—er—uncle. Harlem? Yes, ma'am."

And as he assisted a heavily laden Italian into the train Edith turned away with a bewildered feeling that she had been dismissed, but not discourteously.

In the great commercial world where she was but a clerical atom the kaleidoscopic life tumbled madly on without reference to hairbreadth escapes, and it was quite late in the afternoon before Edith found time to scratch off the following note:

Dear Uncle John—You have always said that when you could be of assistance to me I should feel free to call upon you. Now, I have a real favor to ask. This morning your heedless niece was saved from a shocking, if not fatal, accident by the quick wit and ready arm of a guard on the Ninth Avenue L. He impressed me as being somewhat above the ordinary. I know that from your point of view I am rather a useless member of society, but still if you agree with me that I was worth saving, will you try to place this young fellow in a line more suited to his abilities? Your "pull," dear uncle, is unquestioned. Will you kindly attach yourself to one of the numerous strings and oblige your appreciative if somewhat obstinate niece, EDITH HARLOWE.

P. S.—His name is Larry Creston.

For a week Edith heard nothing from her note. Then one noon she met her uncle rushing from his favorite cafe, and she walked at his side to the elevator door.

"Well, Edith, I've seen your hero. First rate fellow, and, strangely enough, I've had some business dealings with his father. They live out in Ohio, and the boy, fresh from college, came here imagining that New York would be at his feet. Instead he soon found himself on his uppers, glad to take the first thing that opened up and too proud to write home for help."

"Um-um!" murmured Edith. "And, what is more to the point, do you intend to help him?"

John Harlowe smiled into the piquant face of his niece.

"In good time, Miss Independence. I've several things in line, but he's at least safe where he is. Long hours and exposure won't hurt him. He's tough as a pine knot—was a member of his college eleven"—

"I guessed as much," acquiesced Edith, with a smile.

"Eh? Why?" inquired Mr. Harlowe. "Have you seen him since?"

"No, but I guess he did not tell you—just how he saved my life. I've—well, I've felt that tackle."

* * * * * * * *

At rare intervals Edith made her appearance at her uncle's dinner table. Her acceptance of such an invitation was usually the occasion for christening a new gown. But on this particular evening she could extract no comfort from the fact that the chiffon applique on her bodice had been purchased at a bargain. Neither did she care about meeting the rising young novelist who was to occupy the seat on her aunt's right. The first breath of spring was brooding over the great city. The office had been musty and close. The columns of figures had danced like mad, gaunt dervishes before her eyes.

Her aunt had just confided to her that she was having new linens made for the furniture when one of the several black and white automatons scattered about the rooms presented itself before her and resolved itself into—Larry Creston.

He took her out to dinner, and she tried to cast a scornful glance at her uncle, who nodded to her across a plateau of lilies and violets. But how could one look scornful when one's head ached? Everything seemed to recall the drudgery of her daily work. The breadsticks were long, narrow columns of figures. Instinctively she began to estimate the number of almonds in the cut glass dish on her left.

Larry Creston's friendly eyes studied her face, and he secretly wondered if this were the same independent, businesslike girl who for many mornings had ridden on his train and whether the change had been wrought by the trailing gown, the bared shoulders or—A faint sigh escaped her lips, and Larry pulled himself together.

"Has your uncle told you how good he's been to me? No; of course not. He's not that sort of man. But I've a berth in the C., R. and N. office. I've been there two weeks, and the fellows are a jolly, clever lot."

Edith smiled, and the tired look faded from her eyes. During the remainder of the dinner she chatted brightly with Larry and those nearest them, but young Creston was not deceived. When they returned to the parlor, he secured for her a dim corner near a window overlooking the garden. The moist odor of spring rose from the ground, the sky was placid and starlit. He did not bore her with idle talk, and the girl was grateful.

Mr. Harlowe was very kind to this niece whose independence tried his soul, and his carriage was ordered to take her home.

Mr. Creston was closing the carriage door when Edith, with sudden compunction for her languor, exclaimed:

"Can't I drop you at your rooms, Mr. Creston?"

The young man laughed lightly.

"I'm afraid it would be rather out of your way, but if I may I'll ride as far as your flat."

So he knew she had a flat. When they turned into the dim, quiet side street, an odd whim seized the girl.

"You've never seen our little den, Mr. Creston? I know it's rather late and utterly unconventional, but won't you stop a bit? Somehow I dread my own company this evening."

The invitation was accepted with alacrity. A few minutes later they were seated in the glow of the lamp, Edith leaning restfully against the soft folds of her cloak. While Creston's quick glance took in the dainty room, whose every appointment had come from the home Edith had loved and lost, the girl was whimsically wondering what would happen if her companion, Mrs. Cornelius, in dun colored wrapper and crimpers, should suddenly appear in the doorway and ask about the dinner, as was her custom. But Mrs. Cornelius slept, and Creston turned from his polite scrutiny of the room to study Edith's face.

"You are nearly worn out, Miss Harlowe," he remarked abruptly. "Do you have your vacation early?"

"In August, I believe, though the schedule's not made out yet."

"Humph! August is a long way off. Why don't you cut it all and go with your aunt to"—

Edith was aroused on the instant.

"So uncle has been talking to you, and you've gone over to the enemy."

"Not so bad as that," replied Creston cheerily. "I shall always be on your side, of course, but then I think you are a bit unjust to your uncle and aunt when they really want you for their sake as well as yours."

"Oh, but you don't understand," protested the girl. "Why, if I were to make my home with them my salary would not pay for my dinner gowns alone."

"And you must work?"

"I must work. I would be utterly unhappy if I were dependent on any one. I love work, indeed I do."

Creston rose and drew his fine figure to its full height before the tiny fireplace and mantel. From this vantage point he gazed wistfully upon the graceful figure reclining in the wicker chair. But when she looked up at him the wistful expression had disappeared, and in its stead shone a light almost masterful.

"I think that even the most independent of you business women need some one to look after you occasionally."

Edith flushed.

"Thank you for the suggestion, and may I add that I think you have done your full share in—er—looking after me?"

In a flash he read her meaning. She thought he was reminding her of the incident at the "L" station—of her own carelessness and his so called bravery.

"Believe me, I did not mean that. I was only thinking how wan and tired and disheartened you look."

"I am tired and horrid tonight, and you were very kind to come in and save me from myself. Will you come back some evening when I am more—amiable?"

* * * * * * * *

"Hello, Edith! Back from your vacation? Come in and have lunch with me."

After they had taken possesion of a table among the palms and ordered the most cooling combination on the menu Mr. Harlowe glanced keenly at the sunburned face of his niece.

"Look as if you'd been living on the beach. Been having beastly weather in town. By the way, young Creston's had luck. Rowland went over to the N. Y. and H., and Creston gets his place."

"Yes?"

"It's quite an advance for a man so young in the service, and Edith"—there was positive anxiety in the man's voice as he studied his niece's impassive face—"I hope you'll treat the boy—well, a little better after this."

"I really don't see how I can, my dear uncle. Ten days ago I promised to marry him, and I rather think that's the limit, don't you?"

"He actually asked you to marry him on that salary? Edith, that fellow will be president of the system some day. Lord, what nerve! And on a hundred a month! Think of it!"

"Yes, and just think if I hadn't turned to look at that red hat, and he'd never saved me, nor you'd never"—

"There, there, Edith! This is no game of consequences."

The Social Realm.

I would not if I could repeat
A life which still is good and sweet;
I keep in age, as in my prime,
A not uncheerful step with time,
And, grateful for all blessings sent,
I go the common way, content
To make no new experiment.
On easy terms with law and fate,
For what must be I calmly wait,
And trust the path I cannot see—
That God is good sufficeth me.
And when at last upon life's play
The curtain falls, I only pray
That hope may lose itself in truth,
And age in heaven's immortal youth,
And all our loves and longing prove
The foretaste of diviner love!
—John Greenleaf Whittier.

Pickwick Club.

On Wednesday evening the Pickwick club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Mitchell, Pleasant street, the occasion being the twenty-ninth anniversary of the founding of the organization. The members assembled at seven o'clock, and shortly after that hour the company, twenty-six in all, sat down to the annual dinner. Three tables, tastefully decorated with red and white carnations and appropriate dinner cards, were spread and an excellent banquet was furnished. The tables were served by Miss Clara Merrill, Miss Nellie Mitchell, Miss Muriel Clapp and Miss Breta Mitchell.

The tables being finally cleared—by the guests and not by the waiters—postprandial remarks of a reminiscent and humorous nature were made by ex-Mayor Hall, Mr. H. J. Gurney and Mr. J. O. Hall, Jr.

About 9.30 all adjourned to the parlor to listen to songs by Miss Isaac and Mr. Greene, a piano solo by Mrs. Hunt, and readings by Mrs. Gurney and Mr. Simmons. Mrs. Alden read the Pickwick Primer, an original moving-picture of the club members in alphabetical arrangement.

The next anniversary, being the thirtieth, will in all probability be made a grand affair, and the club members are already looking forward to 1903.

ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK

By ELIAS LISLE

Copyright, 1901, by A. S. Richardson.

Between wet and glistening fangs Brindle, the performing lion of the Cosmopolitan circus, let out a sound that was half groan and half roar.

"Whut! You brute!" said Berthels, the elephant man, gesturing at him for silence.

"Don't abuse him," said the woman, scarcely more than a girl, who stood beside Berthels. "He isn't in good humor today."

"Should say he wasn't," replied Berthels. "Ill tempered, bad mannered beast! Wouldn't wonder if he was going bad."

"Nonsense! My lions don't go bad. Besides, he's only a two-year-old. Look at old Archon. He's ten if he's a day, and you don't see him going bad, do you?"

"Of course there is. He's had a rough morning of it. He was clumsy and stepped on Archon's toes at rehearsal, and Archon boxed his ears. The hyena in the next cage laughed, and that hurt Brindle's feelings. You know how sensitive he is. He sulked so that I had to beat him to make him perform at all. He's awfully cut up about it, for you know I really believe he is fond of me."

"Wish you'd believe that about somebody else, Sue," said the man wistfully, looking down into the clear, brown eyes that were fixed on the lion.

"Perhaps I don't want to," said the girl saucily. "Besides, Brindle is my sworn slave. You can hear him swearing now," she added, laughing, as the handsome beast muttered lionwise deep down in his great chest.

"Mlle. Zelka, the feline empress," was right in her half jocular estimate of Brindle. Brindle was a lion with feelings. Some lions are savage, others are sullen, more are treacherous, and all are absolutely cold blooded. There are a very few exceptions to this rule, however, and Brindle was one of those very rare exceptions, with a capacity for affection and loyalty. Mlle. Zelka had only a faint inkling of this. Berthels didn't believe in it at all because he was the head of the elephant herd, and elephant men are very wise and believe nothing but the worst about animals. That is the only reason why all of them don't die young. Berthels was anxious about Mlle. Zelka, who was plain Sue Ransome to him. That she wasn't Sue Berthels was not his fault. If she ever did become so, he intended that her lion training career should end, and she suspected this. So it was partly coquetry that made her leave him now, walk over to the cage and, putting her piquant face close up to the lion's, begin to talk to him.

But Brindle's sensibilities had been lacerated. To be beaten by his queen was a humiliation of spirit beyond all others. Not yet had the smart of it passed away. Therefore he now arose haughtily, stalked over to the farther corner of his cage and affected a majestic disdain of his charmer's conversation.

"Well, you aren't very polite this afternoon," she remarked as she turned away. "Hope you'll feel better when it comes time for the show."

"And I hope you'll cut that beast out of the programme tonight, Sue, dear," said Berthels as he went to his elephants.

After they had gone the hyena which had insulted Brindle that morning chose to make some jeering remarks. Arose Brindle then in wrath and spoke in substance as follows through the network of bars at which he clawed:

"You snickering eater of better people's leavings, if I could break into that cage for about two seconds and get one swipe at you I'd knock that grin through the top of the tent."

"He, he, he, he! Ha-ah-h-h-hrr-ha-ha!" taunted the hyena. "Ha-ha"—

The hateful voice died away as a rising growl from Archon's cage gave news that the king of the circus had wakened—wakened with a strange fire in his eye, before which the other animals cowered. For this was the fire of madness and murder which no man is wise enough to know, though all animals recognize it with terror. Archon had gone bad. At one glance Brindle knew it; knew, too, that the demon in possession of the great lion might lie craftily in wait for long, but that sooner or later it would glut itself in slaughter.

* * * * * * *

Of the attendants surrounding the cage where the feline empress ruled her beasts that night one wore a grave and drawn face. Berthels should have been with the elephants, but anxiety had brought him into the ring when Mlle. Zelka's act was called. With a pang of fear he noted the intense nervousness of the young lion, the most promising performer of the lot. Brindle was stumbling through his part like an amateur, and his mistress, too wise to be harsh, was coaxing and soothing him with hand and wand.

"Sue," the low voice came to her ears from without the cage in a lull of the music, "let me call the ringmaster and have the young one barred off."

"No; he's all right," said the girl softly. "Don't worry, Phil. He isn't going bad. But I can't understand him. See how he watches Archon."

Indeed the young lion's eyes were hardly ever taken off the king of the group. Twice he missed his cue, and a third time he half turned away.

"All right, boy," said the trainer gently. "I'll give you a rest. Come out, Prætor! Jump! So. Now, Consul! Up! Good boy! Up, Cæsor! Come, Senator, over! Hola!"

Around the confines of the cage, now running, now leaping over the set obstructions, glided the tawny, sinuous bodies of the lion troupe, while their mistress, in the center, waved them on with her wand. But all the time she was watching, not Brindle, but Archon, and Brindle was watching too. Soon it was the big lion's turn. In answer to the command he came forward, but there was something strange in his motion. His eyes were set, and he moved jerkily, and the great tufted tail that had been curving around his flanks grew straight and rigid as an iron club.

"Come, Archon," said the girl. "Up! Get up, sir! Archon!" Then, without raising her voice, for the discipline of the circus thinks first of its audience—the audience that must not be unpleasantly disturbed—she said rapidly: "Set the poles and keep him back. I can't get to the door. He's going bad."

Slowly the great lion moved on—stiffly, like a cat stalking a sparrow. The others crouched at the sides, silent and trembling. Only Brindle growled slightly. Then there was a rattle and clank of the iron door, and a man, bearing a heavy club in his hand, leaped into the cage.

"Phil!" cried the girl, with a thrill in her voice that told him more than he had ever known before. "Go back! They don't know you! You'll be killed! I can handle"—

Her voice was drowned in the shriek of thousands of voices as the great lion hurled himself straight at her throat, smiting at her with those terrible paws. At the same time a second tawny body darted through the air, and the two met. Like a flash the girl had slipped away from the mad lion's onslaught, but a glancing impact had sent her to the floor. Half stunned as she was, she caught at the bars to raise herself, for once a trainer is down authority is gone, and any lion is likely to attack. A strong arm lifted her and drew her toward the door, but the way was blocked. Locked in a furious embrace, the mad lion and the two-year-old were tearing and clawing each other, while the rest slunk, terrified, at the sides. Even in her peril the girl thought of the faithful beast.

"Archon will kill him!" she cried, clutching the elephant man's arm. "See, he is working in at his throat! Oh, can't they get firebrands?"

What Berthels did then was partly from gratitude and partly from the natural fighting courage of the man who trains wild beasts. He swung his heavy club up and as Brindle in a final effort for life tore half loose from his foe brought the weapon down with a smashing blow across the mad lion's maw. A lion's nose is his sensitive point. Half stunned, the giant relaxed his grip, and Brindle tore away. Archon gathered himself to leap. Again the club fell, but this time too late. The man was down.

But now the fighting madness was at its height in Archon's brain. One paw broke Berthels' arm, the foaming jaws were at his throat, when there came the crackle of pistols, and the fierce face rose, bespattered with blood, turned hither and thither and closed its eyes. They dragged Berthels out of the cage then and there, but not so the girl. Over her Brindle, torn and mangled, mounted guard until she came to from her faint and drew herself to her feet with her hands buried in his mane.

Berthels insisted that he and the feline empress ought to be married on the day they buried Archon, but his broken arm wouldn't allow it. However, they had a professional wedding in the lion cage, and Brindle, standing proudly on his hind legs, with crossed American flags in his mouth, was best man.

St. Rule's Tower.

St. Rule's tower, in the town of St. Andrews, is an evidence of the link which binds St. Andrew, whose feast all good Scotchmen keep, to the country of whom he is the patron saint. The legend runs that a monk called Regulus, or Rule, brought the bones of St. Andrew from Constantinople to Scotland and buried them near the seacoast, on the spot round which the present town of St. Andrews afterward grew. Whether the story is true or not, there seems to be no other way to explain the connection of this particular saint with Scotland, for he seems to have passed the whole of his life up to the moment of his martyrdom in the east. James II. certainly associated him with the country across the Tweed, for it was he who founded the Order of St. Andrew in 1687, to be conferred on the king and sixteen knights.—London Chronicle.

How the Tea Plant Started.

As you drink a cup of tea do you ever think how tea came to grow? Tell your next visitor the story. A Persian prince on his way to meet his betrothed vowed that he would not sleep until he saw her. After traveling seven days he stopped to rest under a shade tree, and there, being no longer able to resist the temptation, he fell into a sound sleep. When he awakened, he was so sorry that he cut off his eyelids and threw them on the ground. From them grew the tea plant. It is rather unfortunate that the story stops here because it would be interesting to know what the lady thought of a sweetheart without eyelids and whether it would be possible for them to grow again.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

DON QUIXOTE'S EYEGLASS.

A Little Experiment Illustrating the Diffraction of Light.

If you look at a candle flame through a piece of very fine silk gauze stretched over a frame of cardboard, the flame will appear drawn out in four directions, at right angles to each other, forming a luminous cross, the arms of which are fringed with rainbow colors.

This is an example of what physicists call diffraction and is of the same nature as the colored halos seen around lights in a fog.

Now, this little experiment may be made very amusing by constructing of stout paper a windmill or the facade of one with a small hole where the arms should cross and placing within or behind it a lighted candle, with the flame just behind the hole.

Then darken the room and call in your friends to admire your windmill, which glows dimly by transmitted light.

If any one asks where the arms are, hand him your "Don Quixote eyeglass"—that is, the frame with the gauze. Looking through this, he will see the arms resplendent with all the colors of the rainbow, and the mill will turn just as fast as he rotates the eyeglass.

Making a Volcano.

A pretty experiment, and one that will completely mystify the spectators, may be made with a glass vessel partly filled with water and a very small vial of claret wine.

Fill the vial with the wine and fit in a cork through which you have bored a small hole with a red hot wire. With clay or ordinary earth build a little mountain in the middle of the glass vessel while the latter is empty, and in the little mountain put the vial of wine, concealing it from view. Leave a small opening in the top of the mountain.

Pour water into the vessel until it is about three-fourths full, and then you are ready to put your volcano into action.

To do this you have only to give the water in the vessel a circular motion with your hand, when you will see a pretty little plume of red wine swirling up from the top of the mountain through the water and looking for all the world as if it were red vapor from Mount Etna.

He Was Patriotic.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational church, Brooklyn, tells a story of a patriotic small boy in his Sunday school whom he calls "Little Georgie." His teacher had told the class of the things that God had created at the beginning and then suddenly turned to the tiny youngster.

"What did God make on the fourth day, Georgie?" inquired the tutor.

Now, the boy's thoughts were centered on a new and beautiful flag his father had just purchased, so instead of the expected answer, "The sun, moon and stars," Georgie confidently exclaimed:

"The stars and stripes!"

Involuntarily the teacher smiled, and the little man cried when she said he was wrong.

"Well," he replied indignantly, "if he didn't make 'em, who did?"

A Story of Daniel Webster the Boy.

When Daniel Webster entered Phillips academy at the foot of the lowest class, the higher class boys were inclined to make fun of the diffident lad clad in homespun, but Daniel, taking little notice of this treatment, applied himself to study and soon rose to the head of the class. One day the teacher said aloud in school, "Daniel Webster, take your books and stand up, sir." Daniel obeyed, and the kind old man continued: "Leave the room and go into a higher class. Boys, say goodby to him, for you will never overtake him." They never did overtake him. He went through college, became a distinguished lawyer and orator, a United States senator and the great expounder of the American constitution.

Our Mary Louisa.

Our Mary Louisa is "'most nearly seven,"
And there are things she would like to know:
"How do folks wind folks right round little fingers?
And what has become of the snow?

"Can they mend mother's head if it splits with a headache?
And where do the doughnut holes go?
And why is it better to eat bread than candy?
And where do the peanut trees grow?

"And once in how often is 'once in so often?'
And why won't the old bellows blow?
And why is it best to speak low?"

These things and "perhaps just a very few others"—
A couple of hundred or so—
Our Mary Louisa, who's "'most nearly seven,"
Is really quite anxious to know.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For Week Beginning Jan. 12. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Entering the kingdom.—John iii, 1-8; John v, 24.

1. The kingdom. A kingdom is the territory or country over which a king bears rule. The kingdom of God is therefore the sphere in which God is the supreme ruler. The heart of a Christian is a kingdom of God. The whole realm of Christian believers is the kingdom of God in this life. Heaven is also the kingdom of God, for He is sovereign ruler there. God's kingdom in this world, the kingdom meant in the topic, is not a temporal but a spiritual kingdom. The Jews were looking for a temporal king and a temporal kingdom. But in these things they were in error. God's kingdom is not made up of temporal things, but of spiritual things. He rules the life through the heart. There is no physical territory in this world over which He rules particularly. His kingdom in this world embraces the hearts and lives of all those who have come into the position where the will of God is supreme in their lives.

2. Entering the kingdom. How may we enter it? How may we come into this spiritual relation to God? How may we enter the realm where God's will is supreme? In answer to this question Christ says, "Ye must be born again or from above," and, further, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God." What did He mean? He meant that the spirit of God must change our dispositions, give us new hearts, new motives and new principles before we can come into the kingdom. This is the baptism of the Spirit. That which signifies it is the baptism of water. The two together embrace the external form and the internal reality.

A foreigner to become an American citizen must go through certain external forms. He must be naturalized. But this does not make him an American. This is the external act. But it is only when by association and study he has imbibed the American spirit that he is really an American. Thus the sinner, who is a foreigner to the kingdom of God, can only enter it by being naturalized (born of water) and by receiving a new spirit, which is the work of the Holy Ghost. How the Holy Ghost gives us this new spirit we do not know. God says He will in answer to desire and to prayer. A foreigner must desire and ask (pray) for American citizenship before it can be his. In his ignorance he may not know what naturalization means, but he does know its results. Whereas he could not exercise the prerogatives of a citizen, now he can. He could not vote at elections, but now he can. The philosophy of the new birth is inexplicable, but the fact is a glorious reality. A new heart is manifested in a new life. Entrance into the kingdom of God in this life, which assures us of citizenship in His heavenly kingdom, is possible for all who want it and will ask God for it.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. lv, 1-7; Eccl. xii, 1; Matt. vi, 33; Mark ii, 14; Luke xv, 11-24; John xiv, 1-9; xx, 31; Acts ix, 1-8; viii, 26-40; xvi, 25-34.

The Worth of the Scriptures.

Nowhere are there more noble prayers and more exalted praise, nowhere are the varied phases of human life and of spiritual feeling more divinely expressed, nowhere are the high motives of life so loftily thrown into form, nowhere are more splendid examples given of the beautiful and holy way of life, nowhere is there such a character revealed as that of Jesus Christ, and with Him are a host of men and women who have well earned the admiration and imitation of all those who wish to live in heaven while they move on earth. To read, mark, learn and inwardly digest them is one of our highest duties—a guard, a strength in life and an impelling power. Let them be a daily companion and friend, whose voice, in a hundred recollected texts, comes to you in hours of temptation, in the days of desperate crisis, in trials that seem too much for human weakness, to inspire patience, to give you an immortal strength, to comfort you with hope of eternal joy. God speaks through these to your soul, and mighty as His love is the power of His spirit in them.—Stopford A. Brooke.

Rules to Live From.

The longer I live the more I feel the importance of adhering to the rules which I have laid down for myself in relation to such matters:

First.—To hear as little as possible whatever is to the prejudice of others.

Second.—To believe nothing of the kind till I am absolutely forced to it.

Third.—Never to drink in the spirit of one who circulates an evil report.

Fourth.—Always to moderate as far as I can the unkindness which is expressed toward others.

Fifth.—Always to believe that if the other side were heard a very different account would be given of the matter. —Simeon.

The Noble Life.

If we will not let the world—either the aggregate of material things or society, with its maxims and ways—hinder us from the noble life, if we will not allow it to prevent, but use it to aid, us in seeing God, in loving Him, in doing our duty for His dear sake, then, however solitary or sad or unsuccessful my life may otherwise have been, I have conquered, and all else is defeat.—Alexander Maclaren.

Practice What You Pray For.

Pray modestly as to the things of this life, earnestly for what may be helps to your salvation, intensely for salvation itself, that you may ever behold God, love God. Practice in life whatever you pray for, and God will give it you more abundantly.—E. B. Puasey.

MEANS A SQUARE FIGHT

Senate Will Settle Question of a Canal Route

SHOWING IN THE HOUSE

Indicates That Contest For Panama Project Is Not Without Encouragement—Morgan Is Alarmed and Serves Subpoena on Panama Official

Washington, Jan. 11.—In mustering 102 members against 170 on a rising vote, in favor of an amendment looking toward the acceptance of the Panama project, the friends of that policy in the house of representatives made a good showing. It was an agreeable surprise. This vote would have been 20 larger, in the opinion of many members, but for Cannon's attack on Hepburn, which served to rally the house to the support of its committee and its recognized leader in canal legislation.

Moreover, the Panama proposal had not officially reached the house, nor in absolute form, particularly as to the titles which the French company can give. To many members it seemed wise in these circumstances that congress should ignore Panama till these conditions were complied with, in the belief that the senate could be relied upon to listen to the formal proposal when it came in official channels.

The form of amendment attempted by the Panamaists in the house does not find favor in the senate; that body will not, according to present appearances, delegate the selection of a route to anybody else, but will settle the question itself, through its own committees, after a full hearing of what the Walker commission has to say, and the weighing of other evidence. This means, if the policy be adhered to, a square fight between the adherents of the two routes.

At present the belief is general that Nicaragua has the more strength, but when the growth of the house sentiment in favor of Panama is taken into account, the contest for the latter route is by no means without encouragement. A force which will operate to check hasty action favorable to the Hepburn bill is the veiled opposition to the canal itself, which is an appreciable factor in senate procedure, although it would doubtless drop entirely out of sight on a final roll-call. At all events, the senate will not hurry, and the Panama claim will be heard.

Senator Morgan has become thoroughly alarmed by the development over the spread of Panama sentiment. He is more than ever resolved to attack the Panama movement as vicious and corrupt and to press the so-called investigation of schemes and methods which his committee has been authorized to undertake. To this end he has formally served a subpoena, through the sergeant-at-arms, upon M. Lampre. This is a most astonishing proceeding, as M. Lampre is not a fugitive from justice, but a responsible man who is here to engage in a business negotiation with the government of the United States.

Another man Morgan is after is Jules Boeufve, the chancellor of the French legation, who has, in his official capacity, rendered such aid to the French representatives of the Panama Canal company as lay in his power. Both French witnesses express themselves as only too willing to appear, as the examination will give them a much desired opportunity to place their side before the public, as it has not been set before.

The large vote in the house on the amendment vesting a certain broad discretion in the president as to the choice of an isthmian canal route was generally a great surprise to many thick-and-thin Nicaragua champions. They would have been still more astonished if all the members who favor such an amendment had voted for it. Political and other complications induced several to stay in the background, and give the senator a chance to do the amending. If the bill comes back thus amended or with a complete Panama substitute, they will have a valid excuse for agreeing to it. The senate course, however, is still a problem.

Bill Needs Doctoring

Washington, Jan. 11.—The house spent yesterday considering the Hepburn bill to create a permanent census bureau. While the general sentiment was in favor of a permanent bureau, there was strong opposition to the bill as drawn, and it was finally re-committed, with instructions to report back a bill containing a plan for a detailed organization of a permanent census bureau, to include also a provision to place the present employes under the civil service.

A bill was passed unanimously to give Mrs. McKinley the free-mailing privilege the remainder of her life.

Half-Pay Retirement Proposed

Washington, Jan. 11.—Representative Lovering yesterday introduced a bill to pay ex-presidents of the United States from this time forth a salary of $25,000 a year. He argues that the present salary is used for entertainment and other purposes consistent with the dignity of the great office, and that the American people should not expect the president to make savings, and so should provide in a dignified way for their support thereafter.

Original Plan Changed

Washington, Jan. 11.—Secretary Gage will remain in the cabinet till Feb. 1. Ex-Governor Shaw telegraphed that his personal engagements would prevent his taking office on Jan. 25, as originally agreed, and Mr. Gage consented to stay a week longer.

WITHHOLDS CREDENTIALS

French Minister to China Demands That Claims Be Satisfied

Pekin, Jan. 11.—The French minister, M. Beau, refuses to present his credentials until China fulfills certain demands of the French government. The joint audience of the foreign and new Chinese ministers has been postponed because of M. Beau's action. His colleagues are discussing whether to support him or not. A repetition of the Turkish incident is considered possible.

Washington, Jan. 11.—When shown the news dispatch from Pekin, M. Cambon, the French ambassador, expressed great surprise. The ambassador has not received any advices on this subject and, therefore, was not prepared to give a speculative interpretation of the dispatch. It was suggested that France does hold some claims against China, but it was gathered that these were not regarded here as of sufficient importance to bring about the state of affairs set out in the press dispatches. At the state department it was suggested that trouble may have arisen from a question of precedence or procedure in the coming presentation of the foreign ministers.

Schley the Chief Attraction

Savannah, Ga., Jan. 11.—Rear Admiral Schley, accompanied by his wife, arrived in this city yesterday. As he alighted at the depot the cheering was deafening. In the evening Admiral and Mrs. Schley occupied a box at the theatre, where Mme. Lillian Nordica sang. As the audience recognized him there was enthusiastic cheering of such volume and persistence as temporarily to delay the performance. After an encore, Mme. Nordica crossed to the box and shook hands with Admiral Schley, while the audience stood and cheered. Upon conclusion of the play the whole audience waited at the door and cheered the admiral.

A Cold-Blooded Murder

Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 11.—At the New Sharon Steel company's mines, William Jenkins was shaft boss on the gang sinking the shaft, and Henry Grant had been in charge of the drilling machine. He proved unsuitable and was reduced to a helper, while Jenkins put his brother in Grant's place. Just as the men quit work last evening, Grant slipped up behind Jenkins, plunged a big knife through his body and ran, escaping in the confusion.

Electricity to Replace Steam

New York, Jan. 11.—The Herald says: The New York Central railroad will change its motive power in the Park avenue tunnel within a year. Electricity will be substituted for steam on all local trains and as soon as possible trunk line trains will be hauled into and out of the Grand Central station by less dangerous methods.

Creditors Not All Heard From

Cleveland, Jan. 11.—Regarding the situation in the affairs of the Everett-Moore syndicate, the bankers' committee state that they have confidence in the outcome of the syndicate's affairs. The committee is in communication with the large number of miscellaneous creditors, many of which are yet to be heard from.

Must Eschew Active Politics

Richmond, Jan. 11.—The postmasters at Alexandria and Marion have received notice from the postmaster general that they must resign from all political organizations. Others, it is claimed, have received similar instructions. The move is said to have been inspired by President Roosevelt himself.

Cleveland Able to Be Out

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 11.—Grover Cleveland has so far recovered from the effects of his recent attack of pneumonia as to have arranged for a hunting trip in the south. He will leave his home on Jan. 22 for an island off Georgetown, S. C., where, with a party of friends, he will remain several days.

Shot Wife, Sister and Self

Galesburg, Ills., Jan. 11.—Ed Cheney, an ex-convict, shot his wife and sister last evening, both of them through the back and lungs. He then shot himself through the head, dying instantly. Both women are fatally wounded. A domestic quarrel is alleged to have been the cause of the crime.

Father Crowley Forgiven

Omaha, Jan. 11.—It is given out by Father A. M. Colereni, chancellor of Bishop Scannell's diocese, that the ban of excommunication has been lifted from Father J. J. Crowley of Chicago.

A Thing to Remember.

A donkey who had been carefully raised by his master gained so much knowledge that he could not help considering himself a superior being.

"I am too modest to throw high priced bouquets at myself," he soliloquized, "but the fact remains that I have distanced them all. I can lie down at command and roll over. With the assistance of sundry winks and nods from Ali Hassan, my master, I can pick the different pasteboards from a card pack. There is no other donkey in the world that can shake hands like me. People crowd over one another to see me walk on my hind legs. As for dancing, queens of the ballroom say that I waltz like an angel."

"True, true," said a wise old owl, who was listening to the donkey. "You are a paragon and are not to be blamed for realizing the fact. But you must not forget one thing."

"What is that?" asked the educated donkey.

"That you are only an ass," quietly remarked the owl.

An Odd Betrothal.

It is said that a certain servant in a moment of weariness with domestic duties said, "Rather than go on like this month after month forever I'll ask the first man who passes if he wants a wife."

Her fellow servant challenged her to put the question to a man just then passing by. The young woman was not prepared to be taken at her word so suddenly, but, in desperation, bethought herself for a way of escape. She was Welsh and hurriedly exclaimed as the unknown was passing, "A oes cisiau gwraig arnoch chwi?" ("Do you want a wife?")

"Oes" ("Yes") was the unexpected reply from the young man, who also hailed from the principality, and, with Celtic sprightliness, followed into the hall the blushing girl, who had fled upon hearing the familiar word. The maid, a farmer's daughter, was buxom and neat, the swain was an industrious and ambitious young dealer with promising prospects, and soon "merrily rang the wedding bells."

Industrious Old Clock.

At quaint old Castletown, the "metropolis" of the Isle of Man, there exists a very interesting clock, which has now performed its functions of time telling in five centuries. It was presented by Queen Elizabeth in the year 1597 to Castle Rushen, the fortress which stands in the middle of Castletown, from which the town takes its name. The works are crude, being driven by ropes and pulleys, but nevertheless they keep fair time. The clock, in fact, has run ever since it was built, except for rare stoppages for repairs. To this day the single hand which travels slowly round the dial outside the tower of Castle Rushen is the principal source of information as to the hour to the inhabitants of Castletown. A timepiece which has worked continuously for more than 300 years is something of a real curiosity.—Jewelers' Circular.

The Water In Utah's Great Lake.

Salt lake is by no means a saturated solution of salt, yet it is five or six times as rich in salts as the ocean and nearly as strong as the Dead sea. In summer it contains between 20 and 22 per cent of salt, the saturation point not being reached until the salt forms a little over a third of the liquid. There are all through the great basin numerous saline lakes and ponds, but none of the size and importance of this in Utah. Not infrequently they are shallow and entirely disappear during the dryness and heat of summer, leaving to mark their sites only a stretch of some acres—or it may be miles—of clay or mud, entirely covered with salt.

A Singing Well.

A singing well is one of the natural curiosities of Texas. In fine weather a sound like that of an æolian harp is given out by the well. At times the sound is clear; then it recedes, as if far away, and then it reaches the ear very faintly. These changes take place every few minutes and with great regularity. With an east wind blowing the water in the well gets very low, and the mysterious musical sound is faint. A strong west wind causes the water to rise and the sound to increase in volume and clearness.

Love Marriages.

"Was it a love marriage, do you think?"

"Certainly. All marriages are love marriages."

"Isn't that rather a sweeping statement?"

"Not at all. There are love of adventure, you know, love of luxury, love of advertising and various other kinds of love. There is no need of going into details when one speaks of a love marriage."

Blood Heat.

The skin is always colder than the blood. To obtain the heat of the latter is difficult, and there are slight individual variations in blood heat, but we may accept 100 degrees as the mean. Without heat there could be no physical life of the kind that obtains on this earth.

There is in the Mediterranean countries a widespread prejudice against all artificial heat, and consequently not more than one house in six is ever heated during the winter time.

The second section of the large staging to be used in the erection of the building over the battleships have been completed. It is estimated that the staging when completed will cost $8,000. The building over the ships will be 750 long, 600 wide, and the height on the land side will be 135 ft., on the water side 150 ft.

The "lottery" system so called seems to gain in favor. Representative Adams introduced a bill in the House, yesterday, that the position of lists of delegates on ballots for caucuses be determined by lot. This would put a stop to the scrambles and free fights to get lists in first, and we are not sure but it is a happy solution. Of course the politicians will not favor it.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Mayor Hurley of Salem, in his anxiety to play to the galleries, does not seem to care how ridiculous and discredited he makes that city appear to outsiders. It is just as well not to parade the washing of dirty linen in the faces of the people of the entire state.—Waltham Tribune.

☞ Gov. Crane, in response to an invitation to be present at a Sunday gathering said: "Since holding my present position I have made it a rule to reserve all my Sundays for rest and association with my family, and this rule I have invariably followed." A good rule to follow, too.—Newburyport News.

Thirty years ago it was considered sinful for a man to skate across a pond on his way to church, even if by so doing he could save himself a walk of two or more miles. But customs have changed since then, and what once was denounced is now either ignored or condoned. For example Little pond, last Sunday was alive with skaters. Men and boys, carrying door-shaped sails, were the second best skimmers over the frozen surface of the lake, for swiftly gliding iceboats took the lead in rapid transit. And they all flew, as if there was neither a church, nor a commandment to keep the day holy on the face of the earth. There were solitary skaters, and paired skaters near the middle of the lake and numerous boys shouting and playing "hockey" nearer the shore. Just a little swerving from the "narrow way," just a little change of one letter and the holy day of our fathers becomes the holiday of the multitude.—Braintree Observer.

New Yacht Club.

There is a movement on foot that is meeting with considerable encouragement, to form a new yacht club. The movement started among those who are at present or have been members of the Quincy Yacht club, who are dissatisfied with the management of the club for the past few years. The contention is that the club as now run, is more of an exclusive social organization than a yacht club, that while the $5 dues is gladly received many of the club members feel that they are looked down upon by those who feel that they belong to the exclusive set.

If the new club is formed, it is proposed to build a club house near the present house of the Quincy Yacht club.

The city already has three yacht clubs.

NOT ACCEPTED.

Rev. Arthur W. Bailey Given Leave of Absence.

The Rev. Arthur W. Bailey who was ordained as a minister at Bethany Congregational church in 1900, and was installed at Syracuse, N. Y., is at the home of his parents at Wollaston recuperating. December 22 he tendered his resignation of the Geddes church, because of ill health. At a meeting of the church held New Year's night the church declined to accept his resignation. He was given instead a leave of absence for three months.

To many his ill health is a surprise, as two years ago he was in the prime of health. It was an heroic act in the summer of 1900 which undermined his health, as will be seen from his letter of resignation:

To the Members of the Geddes Congregational Church and Society:

My Dear Friends—A year and a half ago at your call I became your pastor. Since that day we have worked and lived together in pleasant harmony, working for the building up of our church and the strengthening of good influences in this and other communities. You have recently expressed your appreciation of my efforts by increasing my salary. I wish to use this occasion to thank you for this expression and for your kindness to me from the beginning of my service among you till now.

When I entered the ministry I was strong in body, able to work hard and endure much strain. But three months after I came to Syracuse, while enjoying a vacation's rest by the sea, I was called upon by circumstances to rescue a woman from drowning. Fortunately we were both saved from the ocean alive.

But before help came the strain of the effort had been such that my heart was weakened, a leakage being caused in one of the valves. You kindly extended my vacation at that time, so that after a month's rest I resumed my work among you.

Since then I have done all in my power for our church and our God. But there has not been a day during these sixteen months when I have not had to force myself by will power alone, into my work.

I cannot do so any longer. For two months I have known that I was losing my health. I have been carefully examined by two physicians of different schools. They agree in saying that if I continue to work in my present condition I shall soon be a wreck, good for nothing, a burden to my friends and to myself.

They advise an immediate rest. They tell me that in addition to the defect of the heart there is a spinal trouble, because of which vital organs are cheated of proper nervous nutrition. And this was caused by that same accident which injured the heart.

It is possible that I shall never be able to resume the work of the ministry. It is probable that with rest and careful treatment, I shall be able in from one to four months to take up again the work to which I have devoted my life.

I wish to leave you absolutey free to take whatever action you see fit. I am unwilling to hinder you by any uncertainty which I can prevent. I, therefore, hereby tender you my resignation as your pastor, the same to take effect January 1, 1902.

I pray that God's guidance and blessing shall be yours; that the nature and spirit of Jesus shall more and more fill and control and inspire your living among your fellow men.

Arthur W. Bailey.

The Syracuse Post-Standard of Dec. 2, said: Mr. Bailey has been preaching at this church for more than a year and a half. In that time he has built it up remarkably. He brought with him methods of church work that were new to the Geddes church. His preaching has been along educational lines explaining the Congregational creed in a progressive spirit and with a clear understanding of the fundamentals of religion. While some did not agree with him in everything they gave him hearty support and the sentiments of the members yesterday were strongly opposed to an acceptance of his resignation. The Men's club was to have been organized last night but its formation has been given up. The Fortnightly Bible club of which Mr. Bailey was the lecturer, will also discontinue its meetings and, perhaps disband."

The Old Testament tableaux entertainments to be given at the Wollaston Unitarian church this month have been postponed to February.

The Spirit of Winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many different ways—sometimes by cheery sunshine and glistening snows, and sometimes by driving winds and blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily obtained and there is abundant proof that its cures are radical and permanent.

The number of people assessed on property leads the number assessed on polls only, by 448, the polls gaining faster than the property taxpayers.

The new Assessors plans, the card system and more thorough work by the Assessors has resulted in the finding of 60 more acres of land in the city to assess. The average valuation per acre is $1,415 less than four cents per square foot.

The total tax of 1901 was $1,699.72 less than 1899, and the tax rate $1.60 less. The summary affords other interesting studies.

Complete Knockout.

To the Editor of the Ledger:

If certain rumors which are current have any foundation, it would be well for the Chief of Police to give the facts to the public. I understand that at a social, political gathering, held on the evening of December 20, at a questionable resort on Washington street, clubs were trumps and they were used by a policeman with telling effect. It was a complete knockout, but no one appeared in court to tell the tale of the assault. If Mr. Hayden has received no account of the hilarious features of the occasion, he can obtain information from prominent office holders, and from a certain Sunday school enthusiast. Many of our police officers report that they cannot find contraband liquors, yet in doubtful political haunts, beer, whiskey and clam water were freely dispensed. No wonder that some of the participants did not want their names to appear in the daily papers.

The Truant School

It costs Norfolk county $10.30 per week for each of its truants at Union truant school at Walpole, over twice that paid by Bristol county, as will be seen by the annual report of Sewell A. Of this number, 73 per cent. were from Bristol County, 17 per cent. from Norfolk and 10 per cent. from Plymouth County. The average attendance was 48: Bristol, 35; Norfolk, 8.50; and Plymouth, 4.50. The amount of requisitions made was $11,955.33, of which Bristol paid $4,782.12, Plymouth, $2,630.18, and Norfolk, $4,543.03. The average net cost of each boy per week was $4.79, of each Norfolk County boy; $10.30, of each Plymouth County boy; $11.11, and of each Bristol County boy, $2.62. The returns were $2,499, making a net loss of $9,456.33 or 79 per cent. The expenditures were: For sundries, $526.02; supplies, $6,243.96; repairs, $1,736.23, and pay roll, $3,448.52. The greatest expenditure was made in August, $2,141.16, and the smallest, $528.29, was that of September.

Redden Your Cheeks

Pept-iron

This entirely new and thoroughly scientific preparation is a specific for paleness, curing all forms of anemia, from which so many women and girls and not a few men and boys suffer, and which is so commonly a result of nervous weakness affecting the digestive and nutritive processes.

An Aromatic Cordial Elixir

Agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach, readily assimilated, and non-astringent, Peptiron has many advantages over other iron preparations, and highly commends itself to invalids, convalescents and others whose digestive organs and systems generally are in a delicate and sensitive condition. It does not cause constipation, nor injure the teeth, nor leave any inky or metallic flavor in the mouth. Peptiron combines iron and manganese — the great red-blood corpuscle-makers — with digestives, tonics and nutrients, including pepsin, celery, and the phosphates which enter so largely into the composition of all the bodily tissues. It strengthens and quiets the nerves and the brain, for which it is both medicine and food, tones the stomach and other digestive organs, prevents tissue waste, which is part of the pathology of anemia, and establishes the conditions of rosy, robust health.

A Lowell Lady, who had been an anemic sufferer for years before taking Peptiron, writes: "I have just finished the second bottle of Peptiron and it has done me much good. It has relieved that shortness of breath, which troubled me so much in walking and going upstairs. It has had no bad effect on the teeth, neither has it caused constipation."

Peptiron Is prepared by C. I. HOOD CO., Lowell, Mass., from the formula originated by Mr. Hood after years of careful study and observation, and has behind it the reputation of this eminently skilful and successful pharmacist. Price, $1.

Note.—Peptiron is guaranteed to do what we say; if it does not, money will be refunded.

DISTURBED SLEEP
IN CHILDHOOD

If a child is restless in the night, starting suddenly from sleep, tossing about the bed, grinding the teeth—growing thin and listless, apparently from loss of rest—the trouble is worms. A few doses of that famous old remedy, will expel the worms, and cure the diseased conditions, causing the child to sleep well at night, and, naturally, give it a bright and cheerful disposition throughout the day. Dr. True's Pin Worm Elixir is a purely vegetable remedy that would not harm the most delicate child even if it had no worms. In use 50 years. Sold at stores generally, 35 cents. Booklet on Children and Their Diseases free. Write us for it.

TRUE'S PIN WORM ELIXIR

THE UNITY CLUB.

Instructive and Entertaining Papers Last Evening.

Although there was a quarantined house opposite nevertheless many were present at the regular meeting of the Unity club held in the Unitarian vestry. President Charles F. Harper called the meeting to order promptly at eight o'clock and as usual the reports were read and accepted. He announced a change in the program, the music preceding each paper.

Miss Florence Emery opened the program with a serenade accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Chandler Smith. She also rendered an "Italian Song" and "In Old Madrid." Her clear and sweet voice, called forth much applause.

The first two papers of the evening were especially interesting as the readers gave their personal experiences both having visited these cities.

The first one on Cario was given by Mr. Herbert Bailey. Mr. Bailey is known to Wollastonians through his charming delivery and he always has some humorous and exciting experiences to relate. Two beautiful colored photographs of the Nile borrowed from Thomas Cooke & Son of Boston, pictured the magnificent and rich coloring of the Egyptian sky and water and the brown and sandy looking land fringing the river's edge. Cairo is a comparatively modern city being founded by the Fatimite Caliph in 970 A. D., taken by Turks in the sixteenth century, held by the French in the eighteenth century and occupied by British in 1882. A striking feature of the country is the change of landscape as one goes from the barren to the fertile lands. In some parts there is such fecundity that two or three crops are produced in one year.

The costumes of these people are very odd, their streets very narrow. The noted mosques of Cairo make it the starting point for tours to other neighboring pyramids. Mosques of Alcbar El Aghar and of El Gouri are exceedingly picturesque monuments while the mosquesof Kait Bey and of SultanHassan stand out as some of the finest specimens of the architecture of this city. After all, with the wittiness of some of the natives and the beautiful sunsets and climate one is very well off in Cairo and vicinity.

Mr. W. G. Corthell gave the paper on Naples. Of all beautiful views in Europe and in America none can surpass that at Naples. It has a beautiful situation and is the largest city of Italy.

Mr. Corthell told very little of the history of Naples but dwelt upon the customs, views and general description of this city. Poslipo, Cumae, Pompeii, Vesvius and Herculaneum are noted points of interest about Naples. Naples, the city of 1400 streets is the seat of many landmarks. Castle Del Oro, San Carlo theatre, royal palace, triumphal arch, national museum, Castel Santa Elmo, San Paolo and Santa Lucia (place of beautiful rags) are the striking points of interest in the city. Naples has no great architecture. If one wishes to see the old Roman life in the time of Christ he needs only to visit this city.

Most all of the utensils used by Napolitians are of bronze. There are 100,000 shrines in Naples constantly worshipped. Mr. Corthell described one of the breakfasts of these people. It is not served until eleven o'clock and up to that time you can hear a constant yelling of the street venders. Their bill affair is surely complete. When one leaves Naples he can not help from taking a final view of the city and its vicinity from the Castle Saint Elmo. After the intermission the last paper of the evening was given by Mr. E. L. Robbins on Madrid. The Madrid today is unlike the one we have read of in its early history. It is located on a plateau over two thousand feet above the sea, nearly in the geographical centre of Spain. The climate is very agreeable as but only three months is winter. Madrid was a Moorish outport taken from them in 1083, was a favorite residence of the King Charles V, was occupied by the French in the early part of the nineteenth century and has been the scene of many insurrections. The Madrid language is considered to be a more romantic one than that of any other country.

It was the centre of all learning for many centuries and resembles in street architecture Boston and Paris. The church of San Fransisco is a grand structure, famed for its spaciousness and its profuse, decoration in sculpture and painting of modern masters.

The Royal palace is also imposing, situated on a lofty terrace above river Mangarees. The Royal Armory is famous for its unique collection of Medieaval and Renaissance armour, arms, banners and trappings and other relics. Madrid is a great city for crimes and it is not safe to stay there for any length of time. The program for the evening was in charge of Dr. E. R. Johnson and the music in charge of Miss Alice Keith Prescott. The meeting adjourned at ten o'clock.

OSGOOD SENTENCED.

Found Guilty of Passing a Forged Check.

George F. Osgood, alias David L. Clark, who it is alleged passed a forged check for $50 upon Miss Ella M. Freeman last August, came up in the district court this morning, when Osgood was sent to the house of correction for four months.

When Osgood visited Miss Freeman's store last August, he represented himself as the captain of a yacht which was at the works of the Hanley Construction Co. He purchased groceries to the value of $23, which he requested delivered at his yacht the following morning. In payment he presented a check for $50 drawn by the C. C. Hanley Construction Co., and made payable to the order of David L. Clark.

Miss Freeman accepted the check and gave Clark the difference between the amount of goods purchased and the face of the check. When Miss Freeman attempted to deliver the goods the next morning neither Clark or his yacht could be found. Clark disappeared and it was not until recently than the police apprehended him.

There are two other cases pending against Osgood or Clark, charging him with attempt at larceny by means of worthless checks upon John Geeson and John H. Wales. These cases were on trial today.

There were two other complaints against Osgood, charging him with attempt at larceny, from The Public Market and from John H. Wales, by means of worthless checks. When the cases were called this morning Osgood retracted his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty. He was then sentenced to two months in the house of correction upon each case. This sentence with that in the Freeman case will keep him in jail for eight months.

Boston Carpet Consolidation.

It turns out that the hint given in these columns lately in respect to a rumored consolidation of the great carpet interests of Boston was well founded.

It is now learned that the old and larger firm at present styled the John H. Pray & Sons Company, which has been doing business at the Hub for well-nigh 100 years has latterly acquired the business of that other strong carpet firm known as Joel Goldthwait & Co., and by so doing consolidates in one establishment practically all the carpet business of the New Eng'and metropolis.

The Pray Company has long occupied the front rank as regards the extent of its sales of both foreign and domestic floor coverings, and henceforth as a result of the new consolidation, its supremacy will be even greater.

Our correspondent, who sends us this information, called at the extensive Pray store, 646 to 658 Washington street, opposite Boylston street, and inquired what effect, if any, the consolidation would have upon the purchasing public.

"A benefical one in all respects," was the reply. "Many economies will be made possible through the consolidation, the result being that our assortment of patterns will be wider, and prices somewhat lower, than has hitherto been possible. The gathering of practically the entire carpet business of New England in the Pray hands will prove of unquestioned advantage to every carpet purchaser."

Pine Tree Club.

The first entertainment in the second annual course by the Pine Tree club of Braintree was given Wednesday evening in the Town hall. President Horace R. Drinkwater greeted the large audience and thanked the people for their hearty support of this popular course.

First on the program was a quartette selection "The Trumpet Calls" by the Apollo Male quartette of Boston. They rendered several selections exceeding well. Each member is a soloist and their voices blend sweetly together.

Mr. Dudley Prescott who is unexcelled as a ventriloquist, mimic and humorist interspersed the evening's program with varied selections. He is an able entertainer often giving the entire program of an evening. His wireless telephone and voice in the piano were only a part of his numerous attractions.

It is estimated that over 400 people were in attendance and all went home happy. The next entertainment will be given Jan. 29. Don't miss it.

Globe's Home Features.

The conspicuous merit of the Boston Globe is the fact that it does not limit itself to full recital of news events but also supplies (every day in the year magazine attractions that make it a welcome guest in every home. The daily paper has exemplified by the Daily Globe as become a valuable medium of instruction and healthful amusement. For instance, it prints every day a Housekeepers' Department conducted by the clever housekeepers of New England full of cooking recipes, fancy work, hints of the care of plants and flowers, and pet animals, crocheting, knitting and tatting. Through this department you can get an answer either through the paper or by mail, to any proper question of legitimate home interest.

Another valuable school and home feature is the "Daily Lesson in History," with autograph and portrait, an impartial account of some notable figure in military, naval, civil, political, commercial, industrial, phil anthropic or artistic annals.

W. C. Williamson, of Amherst, Va., says: "For more than a year I suffered from lumbago. I finally tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me entire relief, which all other remedies had failed to do." Sold by all druggists.

Braintree W. R. C. Officers.

Monday evening the officers of the W. R. Corps were installed by Inspector Mrs. Lelia Rockwood of Milford. The guests of the evening were Past Deputy President, Mrs. Agnes Parker of Brockton, and Mrs. Alice M. Goddard of the retiring board. Members of Weymouth and Randolph Corps were present.

Light refreshments were served at intermission. One candidate was initiated. Bouquets were presented to Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Rockwood by the Past Secretary, Mrs. Isoline R. Coy, in her usual pleasing manner, to which the ladies responded. Other speeches were listened to, and all enjoyed the evening.

WITH A FORGED CHECK

Clever Swindler Dupes a Firm of Boston Brokers

GOT $15,000 WORTH OF BONDS

Others With Whom He Tried to Deal Had Their Suspicions Aroused and Profited Thereby—Operator Has Disappeared and Left No Trace

Boston, Jan. 11.—In spite of the silence of the police it has become known that the group of government bonds valued at $15,000 which are said to have been stolen in this city last Monday, were obtained from N. W. Harris & Co., bankers, on a forged certified check on the National Shawmut bank. The facts in the case leaked out through other brokers on whom the swindle had been tried in vain and through a meeting of the directors of the National Shawmut bank held yesterday to consider the forgery. After the directors' meeting President Stearns said: "There is nothing I can tell about the matter, as it is another person's secret. All I can say is that the bank has not lost a cent nor is it going to lose any."

The brokers who considered that they had been too sharp for the swindler were more willing to talk than the police. From what they said it appears that the clever crook had been in Boston for two or three weeks, and had been in communication a dozen times with brokers and bankers.

About two weeks ago he called up a well known firm by telephone and asked if he could secure $25,000 worth of government bonds. He would pay for them on delivery he said, with one of F. H. Gay & Co.'s certified checks.

"I know F. H. Gay & Co.'s checks. They are all right," the broker told him, and then they talked about the bonds, but when the stranger gave the number of his telephone the broker became suspicious, as it was not E. H. Gay & Co.'s number, and on mentioning the fact the man admitted it, but said his name was Curtis and that he represented by Gay & Co. Then he was cut off. The broker later made inquiries at Gay & Co.'s office and found that no man named Curtis had any right to use one of their certified checks. The matter was not reported to the police.

About the same time the man talked with Fiske & Robinson about government bonds, but the firm had its suspicions aroused, and asked some questions which resulted in the man not keeping an engagement he had made.

Several other brokers were tried in vain. Finally the man called up Harris & Co. He was Mr. Bruce, he told the broker, and had a certified check on the National Shawmut bank, and he would like to get bonds as soon as possible. So there were set aside for him 10 $1000 government 4 percent coupons and five Baltimore and Ohio $1000 3½ percent coupons, due July 1, 1925. He gave a check for $15,000. The brokers didn't question the check. When it was presented at the bank, however, both the signature and the certification were declared forgeries, and the police were called. Officials of the bank say it is a forgery which on the face appears clever, but that it could have easily been proven what it was by investigation.

Gay & Co. declare that a forgery of their checks is practically impossible, as the firm's checks are especially prepared. Mr. Gay believes that the check the man claimed to have had would have caused his arrest the moment he presented it.

Boston inspectors are in New York looking for the man with the Boston bonds. Banking men throughout the country have been notified of the affair, and every effort will be made to bring about the arrest of the operator. Thus far no trace of him has been found.

Anti-Pass Agreement Fails

Chicago, Jan. 11.—So far as the territory of the Central Passenger association is concerned the anti-pass agreement apparently has been broken past all mending for another 12 months at least. Circulars have been received in Chicago, issued by the Pennsylvania and Lake Shore roads, announcing that for the year 1902 exchange passes will be given and inviting the same. Similar notices are being issued by all the lines.

Warships Going to Venezuela

Washington, Jan. 11.—It is probable that Admiral Higginson, with several vessels of the North Atlantic squadron, will shortly repair to Venezuelan waters. These precautions are taken, not with any offensive intent towards Venezuela, but merely to guard against an outbreak of anarchy and rioting in the event that the revolutionists should prevail over Castro's forces in the field.

Fouled a Coal Barge

Washington, Jan. 11.—Word was received at the navy department yesterday of an accident to the training ship Hartford. The Hartford fouled a coal barge off New London, Conn., damaging her rudder and involving other minor injuries. The department ordered the Hartford to proceed to the New York navy yard to have the damage repaired.

Lodgers Hustled Out

Boston, Jan. 11.—Fire in a three-story lodging house No. 11 to 19 Causeway street at 3 o'clock this morning created not a little excitement to the inmates, although with no more serious result. From the upper story the firemen took out half a dozen persons in their night clothes. The loss is about $7000.

INQUEST MAY BE HELD

Medical Examiner Sheds No New Light on Young Arnold's Death

Hudson, Mass., Jan. 11.—According to the report of Medical Examiner Hoitt, received last night by Judge Boynton, the autopsy held on the body of George W. W. Arnold resulted in the finding of several wounds about the head, and the medical examiner states that in his opinion the boy came to his death as a result of a fractured skull, but gives no opinion as to how it was produced.

Judge Boynton said that the report of the medical examiner was very indefinite. He said that although he had the power to hold the inquest, he would not put the state to that expense without consulting District Attorney Sanderson.

State Officers Dunham and Proctor of Boston visited Hudson yesterday, in company with Officer Scally, and made a thorough examination of the scene of the tragedy in the White woods. Officer Scally later said that the state officers could not find the least indication that there had been any possibility of a tree striking the boy. He believed an inquest would be held. He has in his possession the axes and sledgehammer, used by Arnold and his father on the day of the accident, and upon which bloodstains were found.

The state officers did not return to Boston, as they have not finished their work here.

Notorious Swindler Arrested

Boston, Jan. 11.—A notorious swindler and forger whose name is said to be Sidney Lascelle and who has several aliases, among them being Lord Charles Beresford, was arrested in this city by Inspectors Wolf and Morrissey. It is said that he is wanted by the authorities at Hot Springs, Ark., for larceny of $1200 from the proprietor of the Arlington hotel of that place. Lascelle is about 50 years old and has a long criminal career. He has been in Boston forming acquaintances among business men and attempting to get them interested in several patents.

Bankruptcy Laws Criticized

Boston, Jan. 11.—In the opinion of the members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce the present bankruptcy laws are "corrupt and vicious." A resolution was unanimously adopted yesterday urging upon congress the passage of a national bankruptcy law which will provide that partial payments on accounts, when made in the ordinary course of business, without any knowledge on the part of the creditor of the debtor's insolvency, shall not be considered a preference.

Bryan at Holyoke

Holyoke, Mass., Jan. 11.—William J. Bryan was the guest of Christopher T. Callahan yesterday. He received the attention a citizen of prominence is usually accorded, but he was simply a lecturer under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. Mr. Bryan was given a half hour's public reception and the lecture began at 8 o'clock. The reception was not largely attended and not more than 500 heard the lecture, but the audience extended Mr. Bryan a warm greeting.

Set Fire For Revenge

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 11.—Charged with setting fire to the stables of the Arlington almshouse on Thursday night, John Haas, an inmate of the place, was held in $500 yesterday for a further hearing. The man admitted to the police that he set the fire, because he desired revenge for ill treatment which he said he had received. He will be examined as to his sanity. The fire caused a damage of $5000.

Won't Open the Penobscot

Bangor, Me., Jan. 11.—The superintendent of the American Ice company has abandoned the attempt to open the Penobscot river because it would require four or five days longer to reach Bangor, and because the season is now so far advanced that it is doubtful if a new crop of sufficient thickness would make before March, which is a bad month for harvesting.

Rifle Range For Hub Militia

Boston, Jan. 11.—A big rifle range for the militiamen of Boston has been bought in Woburn and Wilmington. The title has just been completed and the city paid $25,000 to John H. Sullivan, the owner, yesterday. During the effort to get the range owners of waste land in all suburban towns have tried to unload on the city at big prices.

Don't Want Union's Assistance

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 11.—The non-union members of the Pierce mill who are at present at odds with the management surprised the Weavers' union officials last night by announcing that they did not care for any assistance from the union in the way of advice as to their course, and that they could get along better without it.

An Ex-Governor's Downfall

Boston, Jan. 11.—Franklin J. Moses, ex-governor of South Calolina, was sentenced to four months' imprisonment at Deer island by Judge Brown yesterday for giving a worthless check for $50 to a tailor in payment for an overcoat.

Two Charged With Murder

Norwich, Conn., Jan. 11.—The grand jury in the superior court yesterday brought in a true bill against William H. Gallivan and Thomas M. Wormsley for the murder of Jeremiah Shumway of Montville on Nov. 20.

From Frying Pan to Fire

Columbus, O., Jan. 11.—Timothy Hogan, a notorious mail-box robber and forger, was released from the penitentiary yesterday and was arrested at the door. Hogan was wanted in nearly every city of importance in the United States. He was also an escaped prisoner from Blackwell's island, New York, where he still has four years and one month to serve, and he will be taken back to serve that time.

Women's World

A BRIGHT WOMAN.

Princess Marie Dagmar, Dowager Empress of Russia.

Dowager Empress Marie Dagmar of Russia, who, it is said, has lost all of her once potent influence over the young czar, spends much of her time at the court of her father, King Christian IX. of Denmark. The empress was formerly called the Princess Dagmar, and during her reign in Russia was regarded as the "best dressed woman in Europe." She was also one of the prettiest. As a young woman she was passionately fond of dancing and of riding and was herself an excellent horsewoman. She introduced hunting into Russia and is still very fond of that sport. Although she is said to have all the domestic virtues of the Germans, it is an open secret that she hates the country which gave Denmark its king and queen. German in blood, the empress is said to dislike everything German. Bismarck she particularly hated. This bright woman, like everybody who goes to live in Russia, was rapidly converted into a Russian and is today intensely interested in the destiny of the country over the affairs of which she has long since lost her last vestige of power.

Servants and Employers.

There are families that seem to be able to make good servants out of the most unpromising material. Their employees are always kind, considerate, patient, cheerful and willing. They do not steal or take advantage of a trust, they are always kind to the children, polite to guests and agreeable to everybody.

Long experience as an employer has taught the writer that the difference is not so much in the employee as in the employer. When everybody condemns a man, charity says, "Do not denounce this man; there is divinity in him somewhere." A good employer is able to find and bring out the manly or womanly qualities innate in every normal being. He calls out the best in those under him simply because he is good himself. We find ourselves reflected in others. The world gives us back just what we give. If we laugh, it will laugh back; if we frown and criticise, are captious and disagreeable, the world will show us a similar side. So our employees reflect our treatment of them.

It is astonishing how much promptness, kindness, energy, tact, skill, cheerfulness and amiability many employers look for in return for a small compensation. They expect for a few paltry dollars a week a thousand dollars' worth of character, made up of all that is noblest and grandest in human nature, in those who have had little, if any, opportunity for education and culture.—Success.

Care of Slight Wounds.

It is a fact that much suffering might be eliminated—in truth, many lives spared—if some of the precautions relative to caring for small injuries were known to every household. A woman engaged in duties about the kitchen often gets a small cut upon the hands. It seems a trifle, and, beyond a bit of cloth about it, she goes on with her work with no further thought of the matter. The very cloth she used may have dust or objectionable matter in it, the cloth gets wet, and indeed she is fortunate if the wound heals quickly and well. The sole of the foot and the palm of the hand are the most vulnerable parts of the body, and the result of neglecting wounds on them may be lockjaw.

It is surely a very simple thing to keep in a bottle a weak solution of carbolic acid and water, such as any druggist can prepare for you. This mixture, which contains about 10 per cent of carbolic acid, will disinfect any ordinary wound and keep out impurities. The wound should first be carefully washed; then wring out in boiling water a bit of soft cloth and pour upon this sterilized cloth some of the carbolic acid and pure water. Bind up the cut or scratch, and then put a clean dry cloth on the outside. In such a simple fashion you can prevent any serious result from a cut or scratch or any wound when the skin is broken.—Vick's Magazine.

Have Your Own Home.

Begin your married life in a home of your own is sound advice to all prospective brides. Boarding is at best a lazy way of existence, and the young couple who commence life in this way will surely regret it sooner or later. Take a house, no matter how small it must be; make a careful selection of rugs, curtains and furniture, and when the little nest has been cozily furnished settle down to become acquainted with each other, for this is a matter of no small account.

Living in his own house, the man at once becomes a factor in society, while in a boarding house he is as but a grain of sand. So it is with a woman. In her own home her interest is constantly aroused, every womanly instinct is called forth and she becomes more and more womanly and lovable.

It is the woman who boards who becomes the trifler, not the woman who has her own home. It is the woman who boards who becomes flippant, not the woman whose thoughts are centered on her household. It is the woman who boards who becomes the gossip, not the woman with home ties and home cares. A woman who spends a few years in a boarding house becomes accustomed to the ease and comforts which surround her without any exertion on her own part, and she becomes more and more reluctant as the years pass by to exert herself to make a home for her family.

Society Manners.

The young girl who has a society mask, which she lets fall when she enters her own house, need not hope to long deceive her friends. Inadvertently she will let it drop at an unexpected moment, and the glimpse once seen of a peevish, selfish nature is not soon forgotten. If the wishes of the brother at home are not to be considered, the admiring man friend feels sure her lover and future husband will not be, either. The sweet, musical voice which is heard in society often changes into a snappy, disagreeable one when used to address a patient, devoted mother at home. But at some unexpected moment the young girl is sure to be overheard. A chance visitor will ring the bell and be ushered into the drawing room while in a heated argument above the stairs the fair young daughter of the house is expressing her opinion in no measured manner.

No rules for preserving the physical beauty can obliterate traces in the face of all nature. Let the fair debutante bear this well in mind.—Exchange.

Frowns and Faces.

Many young people have a disagreeable habit of frowning and scowling, and as they grow older the creases formed will become fixed. Profound meditation, deep study, worry and anxiety all cause wrinkles and mostly in the upper part of the face. Of course we know that a face without any lines would be expressionless, but there is little danger of any effort on our part erasing too many. Enough will remain if we do all we can to obliterate them. The skin in youth is not only firm, but elastic, and hence the momentary expressions, even if frequently repeated, disappear, but in later years the elasticity is lost, and expressions oft repeated form permanent folds in the skin.

An Injurious Practice.

Face steaming has done more harm than good to the complexion of womankind. Face steaming exhausts the natural oils upon which the skin depends for its elasticity and softness and frequently leaves the cuticle dry and parched.

To soften the congested matter where blackheads are very obstinate the Austrian method is better than face steaming.

This method consists of the application of cloths dipped in hot water. After half an hour or more the congested pores readily yield their contents upon pressure.

Cooking Fat.

Oil is excellent for frying very delicate fish, but in the main sweet lard answers every purpose. Deep frying need not be a waste. The same fat may be used over and over with a very little care. Never let it scorch. This is cardinal. Pour it carefully off the sediment after using, and always wash out the crock in which it is kept between fryings. If it grows discolored and muddy, fry a few slices of raw potato in it and let it cool thoroughly before covering it.

Lemonade Essence.

To make lemonade essence take one ounce of tartaric acid, one ounce of citric acid, three pounds of white sugar and two lemons. Slice the lemons and mix the whole of the ingredients in one quart of boiling water. After the contents have dissolved bottle, and in making lemonade use two or three teaspoonfuls to each glass of water. The lemonade will keep if bottled any length of time.

Women In Finland.

The women of Finland of the lower classes perform arduous labor that in other countries is usually assigned to males. They wheel handcarts and barrows of various descriptions containing heavy burdens. They also sweep the streets, act as boatmen and even assist in loading ships.

The British consul general at Meshed reports that the Persian ladies are adopting the English style of dress and that all articles of ladies' clothing are in great demand there.

To renovate a black dress or coat that has worn glossy sponge with equal parts of ink and strong tea. This method is said to be infallible.

Women are now admitted to the two universities in Baden, but they have not been able to secure permission to study dentistry.

A coat of dry varnish applied to the soles will render the thinnest shoes impervious to dampness.

HACKING.

That word hacking is expressive to those who have experienced the aggravating constant cough, which is called a hacking cough. Sometimes it is the result of a cold, or of grip, and sometimes it is a consequence of catarrh, which unchecked has gradually involved the lungs in disease. Such a cough finds its cure in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which cures bronchitis, obstinate coughs, lung disease, hemorrhage, and conditions which, if neglected or unskilfully treated, lead to consumption.

"For twelve years I was a sufferer from catarrh and was treated by one of the best physicians in the State of North Carolina, who said the trouble had reached my lungs," writes Mr. J. M. Patton, of Clotho, Transylvania Co., N. C. "I grew worse every day until I tried Dr. Pierce's medicines. Will say Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with one bottle of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cured me, and to-day I am well and hearty, and I will say further that my former physician, Dr. W. M. Lyday, recommends Dr. Pierce's medicines to me and to others. I am sure your medicines will cure any case of catarrh that exists. I recommend them to all."

If you ask your dealer for "Golden Medical Discovery" because you have confidence in its cures, do not allow yourself to be switched off to a medicine claimed to be "just as good," but which you did not ask for and of which you know nothing.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

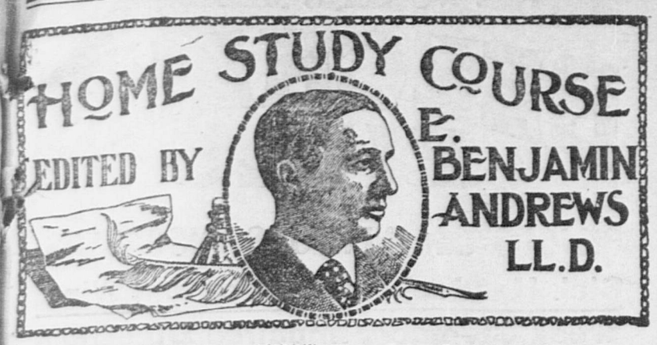
BILLHEADS PRINTED AT PATRIOT OFFICE



The National Period of American Literature

BY LORENZO SEARS, LIT. D.,
Professor of American Literature in Brown University.

XI.—John Greenleaf Whittier.

IN common with most American writers of his generation, John Greenleaf Whittier believed that there was a wealth of Indian tradition which might be turned into the riches of American verse. In the first complete collection of his poems Whittier placed "The Bridal of Pennacook" at the beginning, as if typifying his earliest poetic ambition finding the legend on the banks of his own Merrimac, thus indicating that he would not go far afield for the themes of his poetry. Like Scott, and Irving afterward, he introduces the old fashioned "chronicle of border wars" to give an air of credibility to a legend which might as well have been gathered from the landlord of the mountain inn as from the fourth book in his representative library of "Bunyan, Watts and a file of almanacs." But this was a custom of the time. The apostrophe to the river which flowed unabridged and unobstructed from mountain to sea is in the truer manner of a dweller on its banks. So also is the description of lodge and wigwam, decorated with spoils of chase and war, and of the chief's magic skill and the daughter's woodland freedom and love, of the wedding feast to the river sagamores and the sachems from the crystal hills to the far southeast. The story of Indian pride, always greater than Indian love, carries with it the gloom which belongs to the forest pagan even in his days of peace. And in his hour of treachery and blood "Mogg Megone" shows how dark was the strife and dire the revenge and bitter the hate between the savage and the encroaching alien. So the "Legendary Poems" hint of a remote time when the Norseman touched upon this dreary coast and sailed away, and of a later age when Puritan Endicott offered a Quaker maiden to any sea captain who would take her to the Barbados to sell for "higher price than Indian girl or Moor." Then he turns back to aboriginal story "around Sebago's lonely lake" or in more distant Acadia, where French and English contend for domination, or to nearer Pentucket and the midnight raid of painted savages, or the daylight swoop of priest and sheriff upon Goodman Macey's cottage for the Quaker who had taken refuge from the coming storm.

In all this the past of the country with which the poet is familiar is recalled and clothed with its traditions and its history, not as prosy chronicler and annalist had depicted it for Englishmen at home or for posterity, but as fact and fancy were blended in the mind of the first New Englander who was lifted above the hard restrained life of the eastern seaboard to discover and use the scant material for poetry which lay in its valleys and on its hillsides.

This Whittier saw and made the most of it. To the citizen of the middle or southern states it seemed unfertile and poor as the soil in Essex pastures, but to the youths who have ranged over them and are now young in memory only the verse of their native poet will always have the flavor of the sea, the river and the mountains, as Bryant's will have of the woods and hills of Hampshire.

This legendary poetry and the ambition to develop whatever possibilities lay beneath a sterile surface both receive a check in the poet's manifest call to enlist in the antislavery movement which was starting in 1833. Colonization in Liberty was its first outcome, with Henry Clay as president of the society having the enterprise in charge, but as this scheme provided for freedmen only it appeared to meet the rising issue but partially. The pamphlet which Whittier wrote is the prose statement of his views, but "Randolph of Roanoke" was the beginning of his service in verse to the cause he had undertaken to champion at the cost of everything to which he had aspired. From this time his pen was busy in writing "Voices of Freedom." The pecuniary unprofitableness of these was counterbalanced by the growing response they elicited from the north. Their title in the next four years include "Toussaint L'Ouverture," "The Yankee Girl," "The Slave Mother's Lament," "Our Fellow Countrymen In Chains," "The Hunters of Men," "Song of the Free" and several not found among his collected poems. In them all the purpose of the poet is clear and strong even if the performance is not always artistic. It was not a time when a reformer like Whittier could dally with art. A great battle was to be fought, and the devoted soldier could not always stop to burnish his weapons. It was enough for him if his shots raised a cheer; it was much the same to him if they called forth a howl of rage. Their very roughness made some of his verses appeal to the boys in blue as more correct measures and exact rhymes did not.

Whittier.

In particular this was true of his verse in the war period. It matters not if the most popular of them is founded upon a newspaper report of doubtful authenticity or that its movement is sometimes forward and back, marching and halting like Stonewall's troops. It has in it the spirit of reverence for the country's flag in spite of temporary disloyalty, and also of honor for Barbara Frietchie's defiant patriotism. The poetic idea is there and a ruling sentiment of the nation in sufficient abundance to furnish a drama to full houses night after night.

Generation after generation of children will recite it as they run Old Glory up the flagstaff and learn the lessons of loyalty to it in the patriotic literature of their country. Early in the war the note of forbearance and patience is apparent, as in his "Word For the Hour" and "The Watchers." Faith is strong in "Astraea" and hope in "Mithridates" and charity in the "Anniversary Poem." But in them all is the purpose to help on the triumph of consistency in a nation professing to be free and the home of the world's oppressed.

So earnest was he in these contributions of his to the strife that the thought was of more account than the word and the meaning of his own verse than the form of it. The need of it all is declared in the lines to the flag at the capitol:

> But now I see it! In the sun
> A free flag floats from yonder dome,
> And at the nation's hearth and home
> The justice long delayed is done.

The war over and the strain past, the poet turned toward the fields and memories of youth with greater leisure to do more finished work. He could not write without the stress of agitating reform upon him those poems in which the rural heart rejoices in city or country. Peace had not been six months declared when he began to write what he called "Snow-Bound, a Winter Idyl, a Homely Picture of Old New England Homes." Winter on the Massachusetts coast has had a few apologists and countless maligners, but none has more lovingly portrayed its warm side or more faithfully exhibited its bleak side, giving to this also something of the softness and warmth of a snowdrift to a roistering, red cheeked boy and his frolicsome dog. Outside it is the carnival of the storm; within it is the picture of comfort and safety beyond the chill and the depth of overwhelming snows. It is the war song of the New England farmer in conflict with his winter, with a strain of victory at the end and of joy through it all. Only a farmer's boy could have known what to write, and a true poet only could have set the snow scene in such verse.

Side by side with it should always be placed the summer marine view of "The Tent on the Beach." Good as he modestly thought the first, he hoped to make the second still better. The one brought him $10,000; the other was sold at the rate of a thousand copies a day. His poetic ambition was more than gratified, and prosperity crowned his later years, but he had known the dull and heavy dreariness of farm life, which does not always give strength to those who, like the Libyan giant, keep in contact with the earth. In his prelude to the poem "Among the Hills" he brings out the real side of farming in contrast to what idealism it may have in the poem itself, which he at first intended to make a companion idyl to "Snow-Bound."

Whichever aspect of country life the poet delineates he will always find readers who have seen or heard of his description and to be pleased with what they could not have so truly done themselves. Consequently he is the country people's poet more than any other and the songmaker of all who love the country from one month to 12 according to time and opportunity or even necessity. Fortunately he wrote enough to last days and weeks, as poetry should be read in limited quantities to be best appreciated. The variety of his themes and execution also prevents the weariness of monotony, the mediocre performance sometimes affording the relief of change from the greater strain and the surpassing excellence of his best achievement. But no one can read his poems in course or at random without knowing that early and late he was the tuneful voice of his province recalling its forest legends, uttering its protests for righteousness and finally chanting its anthems of the sea and the storm, ending in the cadences of evening as his sun went down in peace and with these words from "The Shadow and the Light:"

> Shine on us with the light which glowed
> Upon the trance bound shepherd's way,
> Who saw the darkness overflowed
> And drowned by tides of everlasting day.

The man will always be remembered as even greater than his work, good and effective as that was in the cause of truth and humanity. Much that might be said of his sterling virtues and his true poetry may best be summed up in a stanza of Holmes' tribute to his companion gone:

> Best loved and saintliest of our singing train,
> Earth's noblest tributes to thy name belong,
> A lifelong record closed without a stain,
> A blameless memory shrined in deathless song.

BIG STRIKE AVERTED

Arbitration Prevails In Boston Labor Controversy

TEAM DRIVERS SUCCESSFUL

Concessions by Master Teamsters Almost Identical With Original Demands of Employes—New Agreement Grants Shorter Working Day

Boston, Jan. 11.—A basis of settlement of the threatened strike of the teamsters of this city was agreed upon last night at a conference held at the rooms of the state board of arbitration at the state house, which is almost identical with the original demands made upon the master teamsters by their men. As a result of last night's meeting, there will be no strike, and the new agreement, which is for one year, was signed today by the Master Teamsters' association, representing 283 master teamsters who employ 4500 men, and by the Team Drivers' union. The teamsters, who carried practically every one of their points, are highly pleased over their victory, and the merchants of the city, who have followed the controversy closely from the beginning, are greatly delighted at the successful outcome of the peace negotiations.

A great deal of hard work was put in yesterday by the parties interested. At noon a conference of committees from both sides was held with the state board of arbitration, at which President Lincoln of the Chamber of Commerce was present, and the situation was canvassed fully, but no common ground of settlement could be reached. Mayor Collins was then waited upon, and for two hours listened to arguments pro and con, taking the keenest interest in the matter, and promising to do everything in his power to bring about a compromise.

When the committees left the mayor's office, it was agreed that they should meet again with the state board of arbitration at 5 o'clock, and at that hour they again went into session. For several hours arguments were listened to, the discussion becoming exceedingly warm at times. Finally, after Mr. Barry of the state board had pictured the great calamity which a strike would bring upon the city, the representatives of the master teamsters agreed to concede certain points upon which they had hitherto held out, and an agreement mutually satisfactory was drawn up for signature.

The agreement provides, in brief, that 11 hours in 12, from 6 a. m., to 6. p. m., shall constitute a working day, with one hour for dinner. All overtime to be paid for at 25 cents an hour, except Sundays and holidays, which shall be paid for at double time. Regular lumpers to receive not less than $14 per working week; laborers, $12. Minimum wage for drivers of light one-horse vehicle, $11; heavy one-horse vehicle, $12; drivers of two-horse vehicle, $14; three-horse, $15; four-horse, $16; five-horse, $17; six-horse, $18. That 50 cents extra per day be paid for less than a full working week. That a strike shall not be considered, except as herein named: A strike ordered by the Allied Transportation council or Team Drivers' International union shall not be an annulment of this agreement or violation of this contract. Should a strike be ordered by the Allied Transportation Council or the Team Drivers' International union, as above, and a settlement and termination cannot be agreed to by both parties, the question shall be submitted to the state board of arbitration and conciliation, with both committees, for conciliation and arbitration.

Time to Settle Old Bills

Washington, Jan. 11.—Senators Frye, Gallinger and Wetmore conferred with Secretary Gage yesterday regarding the claims of Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island against the United States for interest on money borrowed to equip volunteer regiments for the Civil war. Secretary Gage said to the New England senators that he would submit to congress an estimate to pay the claims.

Half Million Bond Deposited

Havana, Jan. 11.—A contract for the sewering and paving of Havana, for $10,649,000, has been signed by Mr. McGivney for McGivney & Rokeby of Jersey City and acting Mayor Tatorro for the city of Havana. Mr. McGivney has deposited a bond of $500,000. The contract provides that the work be finished within four years after it is begun.

Rhodesia Wants New Capital

London, Jan. 11.—The Daily Mail claims the authority to deny that the British government has any intention of taking over the British Chartered South Africa company at the conclusion of the war. The directors of this company, however, are preparing a scheme to attract new capital with the view of further development of Rhodesia.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Business Is Gradually Returning to Its Normal Condition

New York, Jan. 11.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: With the unprecedented holiday business ended, transporting facilities are more nearly adequate for regular requirements. Merchandise moves to consumers more promptly, and in the iron region there is less interruption to work because of insufficient fuel. Normal conditions have by no means returned, however, and it will be some time before shippers can safely guarantee deliveries on a specified date. Buying of staple commodities is on a large scale, fully sustaining quotations at a high level, except in the few instances where efforts were made to hold prices above the point warranted by the ratio of needs to supplies. Fictitious values cannot be maintained indefinitely, and the commercial system benefits by a return to the position where distribution is facilitated. Labor controversies are few and unimportant, while the new year has brought advances in the rate of wages at many points.

Holiday idleness, inventories and annual overhaulings were all cut down to the lowest possible limit at iron and steel plants in the effort to meet urgent demands from consumers. Foundry iron at the east is still scarce and weakness continues in the minor metals.

Activity continues at cotton mills, although domestic buying is on a moderate scale. Jobbing trade in woolens gradually expands, new lines selling fairly at moderate advances over prices prevailing a year ago.

Footwear factories are well engaged on spring and summer lines, with prices showing a firmer tone and fewer producers ready to do business at old rates. Leather has sold freely at Boston, with quotations fully maintained.

British Fiercely Denounced

Berlin, Jan. 11.—During the course of a debate in the reichstag yesterday, references were made to Mr. Chamberlain's remark concerning the German army, when the British colonian secretary delivered his speech at Edinburgh. Herr Sonnerberg characterized Mr. Chamberlain as the most wicked man on God's earth. He then assailed the British army, classing it as a "mob of thieves and robbers, unfit to be compared with the glorious Germans."

Ready to Answer Charges

Havana, Jan. 11.—Miguel Gener, who has been suspended from the office of mayor for alleged incompetency and inattention to business, has issued a manifesto saying that he will answer the charges against him when he knows what they are. Senor Gener also says that he was removed from office because he voted for Maso, Democratic candidate for the presidency, in the recent elections.

Picked Up Abandoned Schooner

New Orleans, Jan. 11.—Steamer Costa Rican, from Liverpool, reports passing on Jan. 4 the British steamer Grenada, towing the waterlogged schooner Edward W. Young of Boston, lumber laden, with bulwarks all gone, masts standing and vessel awash amidships. The Grenada was steering for Port Spain, Trinidad.

The Edward W. Young was abandoned Dec. 16.

Krupp the Richest German

Berlin, Jan. 11.—The richest man in Germany is Herr Krupp. According to the income tax returns, he has an income of between 20,000,000 and 21,000,000 marks a year. No one approaches him in wealth. The second wealthiest man in the empire, who has a yearly income of between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 marks, is supposed to be the coal master, Herr Von Thiele-Winckler.

Prince to See President

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Prince David Kawananakoa, accompanied by a party of relatives, passed through Chicago yesterday on his way to Washington, to personally urge President Roosevelt and congress to award them the "crown lands" of Hawaii. The lands comprise all the unoccupied ground of the Hawaiian islands and are valued at millions of dollars.

Chilians' Attitude Still Uncertain

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle os it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. For sale by all druggists.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Bronson Howard's modern play "Aristocracy" is announced at the Castle Square Theatre next week and promises to be a most enjoyable addition to the season's repertoire. It has always been considered as the best of the many excellent plays from the pen of its author and has gained immense popularity throughout the country ever since its original production It is in the main a clever satire upon the foibles of society and the story has as its leading theme the struggles of a millionaire from San Francisco to get into the social swim of New York's exclusive society. The play teaches the folly of the pursuit of titles by American girls and points a good moral regarding the struggles to make wealth the end and aim of all life's efforts. Many well drawn characters are introduced and the leading ones have been assigned as follows: Jefferson Stockton, John Craig; Virginia Stockton, Susette Willey; Diana Stockton, Eva Taylor; Sheridan Stockton, Lindsay Morrison; Mr. Hamilton Stuart Laurence, J. L. Seeley; Katherine Ten Broeck Laurence, Mary Sanders; Stuyvesant Laurence, Charles Mackay; Prince Emil Von Haldenwald, Edmund Breese; Octave, Duc De Vigny-Volante. James A. Keene; The Marquis of Normandale, John T. Craven; The Earl of Cryston-Leigh, Edward Wade. "The Private Secretary" follows "Aristocracy."

KEITH'S THEATRE

There will be just one more week of "Dick" Jose and the songsheet chorus at Keith's, after which the popular balladist will begin a tour of the first class vaudeville houses that will extend until next summer and carry him clear across the continent to his California home. No vocalist in the varieties possesses half the vogue Jose enjoys, and he has won his position through sheer merit and because of an exceptionally attractive personality. The fifty colored men in the chorus next week will sing the refrains to "Gracie," "The Brotherhood of Man," and other of the ballads featured by Mr. Jose. Other attractions will be: M. Rudinoff, the noted French entertainer; Galetti's monkeys, the most remarkable troup of simians ever exhibited; Hilda Thomas, the favorite character comedienne; and Newell, Chinquilla and Dunifrio, talented musicians. Sandow, the modern Hercules," is underlined for the week of Jan. 20.

PARK THEATRE.

"Morocco Bound," the name of the brilliant musical comedy and great London success, suggests all those rare delights usually found between such covers. It was produced for the first time in America at the Park Theatre, Boston, on Thursday January 9th, under the management of Mr. A. H. Chamberlyn, who made the original production in London, Eng., where it enjoyed a marvelous run of two years, divided between the Shaftesbury and Duke of York theatres, and is still playing to crowded houses in the English capitol. This production is the joint work of Arthur Branscomb, the writer of the book, whose former successes, "The American Heiress," and "Society Limited," are well remembered on the other side. Osmond Carrl Professor of Music at the University of Cambridge, Eng., who is classed by the English musical world as the equal of Sir Arthur Sullivan is the composer of the music. The lyrics of this successful musical production are in the happiest mood of Adrian Ross, whose international reputation is so firmly established by his other successes, among them "The Shop Girl," "The Gayety Girl," "The Runaway Girl," and "San Toy." The story while most fantastic, is strong and abounds in genuine comedy situation and is well designed to show to best advantage the daintymusical novelties and bright sparkling dialogue.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

The beautiful Columbia Theatre in Boston has opened up its career under the management of Harry J. Farren most auspiciously, and may be said to have started on its way with a better outlook for its success than ever before. The policy of presenting the highest class of attractions at fair prices seems to meet with the hearty approval of the public, judging from the succession of crowded houses which have attended the performances during the past two weeks. The Columbia, beginning Monday, Jan. 13, will present another big novelty, the latest and biggest English musical success, entitled "My Antoinette." It is presented by the Alfred E. Aarons Musical Comedy Company, the name of which is so strongly identified with the best in lyric comedy. The piece abounds in many funny situations, with a plenitude of humor running all through it. The music is bright, catchy, and up-to-date, of a jingly character of the whistling kind. There are some twenty-four numbers in all, several of which are absolute gem. There are over 100 people in the company, which is headed by Chas. E. Evans, that clever and popular comedian. The chorus are remarkable not only for their singing ability but also for their beauty, being made up of some of the handsomest girls that ever graced the footlights. "My Antoinette" is well calculated to dispel the blues and furnish an evening of rare enjoyment It is of a light and frothy nature and thoroughly up-to-date.

Cresceus Earned $70,000 In a Year

Toledo, Jan. 11.—George B. Ketcham, the owner and driver of Cresceus, announces that during the year he has received more than $70,000 in purses and as money for exhibitions given in various parts of the country by Cresceus. The horse was yesterday taken to the Ketcham farm, where he will remain during the winter.

Was Old-Time Circus Man

Detroit, Jan. 11.—J. M. French, the oldest showman, and at one time one of the wealthiest horse owners in the United States, died at his home in this city. He was 71 years old and was known as the original "Forty camel band-wagon man."

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

One Cause of Collapse of Americans

THE BATANGAS EXPEDITION

Proved Disastrous to Filipinos, With Not One American Casualty—Improved Conditions In Misamis—Military Control Not Necessary

Manila, Jan. 13.—Medical authorities here assert that a considerable amount of the breaking down among American residents of the Philippine islands is due to nostalgia. The newspapers of Manila are urging the United States Philippine commission to make an appropriation for a daily cabled news service from the United States, thus bringing Americans here into closer touch with their home life.

A majority of the local papers, a number of army officers and civil officials and others have promised subscriptions in an endeavor to obtain sufficient funds to meet the cable tolls for a three months' news service of 100 words a day. An amount sufficient to cover the tolls for 70 words a day has already been subscribed. It is hoped that this news service can be inaugurated at once. It will be devoted to American news exclusively. The government has offered to send news bulletins free to all points on military wires.

News received from Batangas province says that the expedition to Loboo has been a complete success. The columns under Colonels Wint and Wells have destroyed a large number of barracks and hamlets and enough rations to keep 20,000 Filipinos for six months. There was not an American casualty during the entire expedition. The enemy fled before the Americans, many of them were killed and several surrendered.

Major Allen, formerly governor of the island of Leyte and now chief of the insular constabulary, who has been making a tour of inspection through the islands of Leyte and Mindanao, has returned to Manila and reports that the native constabulary is fully able to control the situation in the province of Misamis, in northern Mindanao, where Major Allen thinks the situation has been much exaggerated. Previous reports concerning this province caused Generals Davis and Wade to request that it be returned from civil to military control.

Veterinary authorities believe that they have found a remedy for surra, (an East Indian malarial disease of horses), which is increasing here, and of which many animals died daily. The injection of a solution of arsenic into the veins of the affected animals has proved beneficial, as it kills the parasites of the disease.

Commissioner Bernard Moses, head of the department of public instruction for the islands, has delivered an address to the teachers of Manila in which he particularly urged the continued instruction of Filipino children in English. Commissioner Moses said that the members of the wealthy Philippine classes were making a great mistake in sending their children to Spanish schools, as the consequent neglect in English instruction would in a few years be a great disadvantage to them in the matter of their position and standing in the islands, which, Commissioner Moses said, would inevitably and indissolubly became a portion of the American nation.

National Party's New Dawn

London, Jan. 13.—The Dublin correspondent of The Sunday Observer declares that the national convention of the United Irish league in Dublin was the first Irish gathering in Dublin since the death of Parnell that was really inspired by a spirit of unity. John Redmond was more generally supported by the people than anyone since Parnell, and the feeling prevails that the national party has opened a new and victorious chapter.

Postponement For Mexicans

Mexico City, Jan. 13.—The meeting fixed for yesterday between the representatives of the American, Mexican, Argentine and Peruvian delegations to the Pan-American congress for the purpose of definitely settling the arbitration dispute did not take place, as the Mexican representatives asked for a further postponement on account of not having been able to consult with President Diaz.

Death List of Seventeen

New York, Jan. 13.—The death list caused by the New York Central tunnel accident was yesterday swelled to 17. Winfield Slutze, who had submitted to an amputation of one of his legs, died yesterday. Richard Molineux is reported to be in a precarious condition. The other patients are progressing favorably.

THIS WEEK IN CONGRESS

Committee Business Will Occupy the Greater Share of Attention

Washington, Jan. 13.—The really important work of the house, aside from the Nicaragua canal bill, is still in the committee stage, so that there is little of importance to be considered during this week. Today will be given to bills affecting the District of Columbia. After that the pension appropriation bill will be passed. The ways and means committee has a few minor bills on the calendar, and with disposal of these bills, there will be little to engage the attention of the house. The chief interest of the week will centre in the hearings on Cuban reciprocity to begin on Wednesday before the ways and means committee. The heatings will continue for several days.

The senate is still without any definite plan of action for the future, and the indications are that the present week will witness a greater display of activity in the committee rooms than in the senate chamber. There are very few matters of importance on the calendar, but enough to engage attention for a few hours each day until Thursday, when the senate will probably adjourn for a week.

Among the measures which there will be an effort made to get out of committee during the week are the Nicaragua canal bill, the Philippine tariff bill and the ship subsidy bill.

Family of Seven Perished

Buffalo, Jan. 13.—Henry Pearlstein, his wife and five children, ranging in age from 1½ to 12 years, were burned to death early Sunday morning in a fire that destroyed a two-story frame building. Joseph Supowski, who owned the building and kept a shoe store on the ground floor, is under arrest pending an investigation. Karl Brack, Supowski's brother-in-law, is also detained by the police. Supowski carried an insurance of $9000 on the building and its contents. The Pearlsteins lived in rooms above the shoe store and were asleep when the fire started. Supowski told the police that he accidentally dropped a lamp. A few minutes after the fire began there was a terrific explosion that blew out the front of the store and flames enveloped the building in an incredibly short time.

Must Have Word From Miss Stone

London, Jan. 13.—The Constantinople correspondent of The Daily Mail says that negotiations for the release of Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka have not yet been opened with the brigands. Messrs. Gargiulo and Peet, who have left Salonica for the interior to meet Miss Stone's captors, will negotiate only with persons bringing letters from Miss Stone, without which it would be impossible to be certain that the prisoners were still alive.

A Wave-Battered Steamer

New York, Jan. 13.—Steamship Etruria came to her dock yesterday showing many signs of the rough voyage she had coming across. Much damage was done by an immense wave which struck the ship at 3 a. m., last Thursday. Big holes are visible in the deck where the iron supports of the rail were situated, the wave having torn away and pulled out the nuts and bolts as if they were so much paper.

Transvaal League's Petition

Chicago, Jan. 13.—The Chicago branch of the American Transvaal league last night adopted a petition calling upon President Roosevelt to enforce the neutrality law. A large number of signatures of prominent men was secured. It is contended that if the augmentation of Great Britain's military supplies from the port of New Orleans were stopped the South African war would come to a speedy end.

Something "In the Wind"

Managua, Jan. 13.—President Zelaya, the ministers of his cabinet and several other Nicaraguan officials have left here for Corinto, where they will meet and confer with the presidents of the other states of Central America who will assemble at Corinto upon the invitation of President Zelaya. The object of these meetings is declared to be the preservation of peace.

Appropriated Union Funds

New York, Jan. 13.—Mortimer Lee, treasurer of the American Woodworkers' union, was charged in court yesterday with appropriating to his own use some of the funds of the union. The complaint mentioned $61 as to the amount appropriated. Lee pleaded guilty and was held for trial.

Workingmen's Tribute to McKinley

Pittsburg, Jan. 13.—Ten thousand dollars was contributed to the national fund for a McKinley memorial by the workingmen of Homestead on Saturday. The majority gave a half day's pay, from the lowest laborer to the heads of departments.

SCHLEY WAS UNHEEDED

When He Requested Honor For Colon's Surrender

HIS SIGNALS WERE IGNORED

As Were Also Verbal Pleadings by Megaphone—Joy Manifested on all the Ships of the Fleet Save the Flagship—A Newspaper Man's Story

Chicago, Jan. 13.—A book entitled "Schley and Santiago" is in press in this city. The author is George E. Graham, a war correspondent, who had exceptional facilities for gathering material, as he was on board the Brooklyn during the fight with the Spanish fleet. The book is said to have the unqualified endorsement of Rear Admiral Schley.

Mr. Graham was assisted by his camera, which enabled him to add many interesting illustrations, and the account he gives of the movements of the fleet and the battle is evidently sincere. It is free of virulent and personal attacks and the aim is to give a truthful statement of every occurrence. In connection with the arrival of the New York, Mr. Graham says:

The commodore reached over to me, took my glasses, and looked searchingly in the east, saying slowly as he did so: "There is the Texas, and there is the Vixen, but I don't see the New York," and then, as he kept the glasses up, in an instant he evidently had found her, for he remarked: "Yes, there she is; I can tell her by her smoke."

This was at 1:45 o'clock, and the Colon had gone ashore at 1:15, while Captain Cook had received the surrender at 1:43. At 2 o'clock, just as the New York got where we considered her in signal distance, Commodore Schley ordered the signal raised: "A glorious victory has been achieved; details later." This signal replaced the one which we had been flying for nearly three-quarters of an hour: "The enemy has surrendered," and which the New York had not answered.

Vainly the signal officers on the bridge watched the New York for even the courtesy of an answering pennant, showing that she understood our signal. None was displayed, and then it apparently dawned upon Commodore Schley's mind that Sampson's flag captain on the New York was probably intent upon ignoring him. Picking up the megaphone, Commodore Schley did one thing that day for which I have always criticised him: Lowered his dignity sufficiently to plead with the commander of the fleet that he might have the surrender of the ship where escape had been frustrated by the Brooklyn and the Oregon, thus making complete the day's victory.

"I request the honor of the surrender of the Cristobal Colon," he said in a clear, distinct voice, and from the commander in chief's flagship came wafted back the insolent answer from a cadet: "What?"

"I request the honor of the surrender of the Cristobal Colon," again called the commodore, and this time his voice trembled slightly. We watched the bridge of the New York closely, waited intently for an answer, but none came. And that message, as had all others preceding it since the destruction of the Spanish fleet, which had been addressed by Schley to the New York, remained unanswered.

Somebody raised a broom at our masthead on one of the pennant halyards, and the crew of the Oregon followed suit and then gave three cheers for Commodore Schley. On the Texas the men all lined up on the forward deck, and at the request of somebody aboard—I presume of Philip himself—gave three cheers for Commodore Schley. The little Vixen circled around three or four times, her crew yelling themselves hoarse for the Brooklyn, for Schley and for the victory. But from the New York there came never a sound of joyfulness and never a cheer.

Patching Mason and Dixon Line

Hanover, Pa., Jan. 13.—Surveyors employed jointly by the states of Pennsylvania and Maryland to correct the boundary line as first established by Mason and Dixon report that many of the stones are displaced. The surveyors found one used as a door sill in a dwelling, another in a church, others lying down and some at a considerable distance from the original places. All these stones will be secured and reset in their proper places.

Deserted by Old Friends

New York, Jan. 13.—John Koellner, the receiver of taxes of New Rochelle, who is short between $6000 and $7000 of the city's money, was arraigned in court yesterday and held under $10,000 bonds to await the grand jury's action. Koellner bore an excellent reputation. Yesterday, however, his former friends one after another refused to go on his bond.

Singer Slightly Hurt

Rome, Ga., Jan. 13.—As a result of a collision between a passenger train and a freight train on the Southern railway near Reeves station yesterday, Mme. Nordica, the singer, and her pianist, E. R. Simmons, were slightly injured. An engineer was killed and three other employes of the road were injured.

Depew and Wife Home

New York, Jan. 13.—Senator Depew and his bride arrived from Europe Saturday night on the steamship St. Louis. The senator was in excellent health and spirits, but Mrs. Depew suffered much from sea-sickness.

Likely to Be a Protest

Yokohama, Jan. 13.—It is reported from Seoul, Corea, that Russia, without waiting for Corea's permission, has pushed its telegraph line across the Toomen river into Corean territory.

NEWS IN BRIEF

City Marshal Locke, after having been at the head of the police force of Concord, N. H., for 14 years, has tendered his resignation, to take effect next July.

Sumner M. Milliken, who has served the Boston and Maine railroad as assistant roadmaster on the eastern division, died at Saco, Me.

Bark Francis Hampshire, which was reported in a dangerous position off Block island, arrived safely at Providence, after a long trip to South Africa. She carried no passengers.

Rev. Dr. Edwin Harwood, D. D., one of the best known Episcopal clergymen in the country, died at his home at New Haven, after an illness of over a year. He was born in Philadelphia 80 years ago. Dr. Harwood was pastor of Trinity church, New Haven, from 1859 until 1899, when he was compelled to retire, owing to poor health. No immediate relatives survive.

While drawing lumber from a yard on the Green mountains, near Manchester, Vt., John D. Crandall was thrown from his load, and the runner passed over him, breaking his neck and killing him.

The dwelling and stable of Charles E. St. Sinclair of Ellsworth, Me., burned, together with six horses, one of which was a valuable stallion. The loss is $4500.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

In a recent lecture, Dr. G. Stanley Hall, of Clark University, Worcester, hit the nail on the head in speaking of our system of education. He said in part:

"Much more important, however is the need of declaring the independence of the High school from the college or university. They should not be intended primarily to fit pupils for passing college examinations. Entrance examinations are coming to be almost unknown except in New England and the Middle states. In England there are no examinations for Oxford from the well-known schools, and the principle is 'easy in and hard out.' In this State, of the 13,000 who annually enter the High schools, only about 800 or 900 get into college; and the next step here should be to consider with great care the worth of the various diplomas of the different High schools and to make the High schools independent. They should fit first for life not primarily for college.

"We want the High schools to do the best they can for this stage of the boy's development. It is unique, and we are just beginning to understand it. Let the High schools do their best to turn out their own finished product, turn it over to the college and say 'You may take it or leave, it; it is the best we can do.'"

In Boston the assessed valuation of the land is more than the assessed valuation of the buildings. This will seem strange to many, as Boston has very many costly buildings and many streets without any vacant front land. The valuation of the land is also increasing faster than the buildings, although many sky scrapers are being erected.

The assessed value of the land is $547,246,600, an increase of $14,313,100 in a year. The assessed value of the buildings is $377,790,900 an increase of $8,233,700 for a year. The valuation of land is jumped by the dollars per foot instead of by cents. On Tremont street between West and School streets the corner lots are valued at from $42 to $105 per square foot, which four years ago was assessed from $35 to $90 per square foot.

The heroism of the crew of the German steamship Franfkurt in rescuing the crew of the American vessel, W. H. Card, in open sea, during a terrific gale, will be recounted in some newspapers in a small space on the last page while the unfounded rumor of German violation of the Monroe Doctrine will be given a column on the front page. This is "yellow journalism."

A New York reporter stationed at a street corner in the shopping district counted the long and short skirts worn by the ladies who passed during one hour. Of the 320 women who went by, seventy-five per cent. wore short skirts. The good sense of American women is evidently effecting a reform which legislation would be powerless to accomplish.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Mayor Low used to say: "The politicians can beat me burrowing, but they cannot beat me flying, and if I can keep them in the air, folks can see as much of them and so can I, as they can of me." He believes that openness is best," and he is trying to carry on his administration of New York openly.—New Bedford Standard.

☞We sometimes try to drown our disappointments as we drown kittens—by taking them in a bag a long way from home and sinking them in some very remote pond. But how often it happens that they get home before us, and greet us when we arrive! The only way to make disappointments stay down is to live them down.—Zion's Herald.

☞The court has returned to Pekin. But Pekin is not the same and never can be the same that it was. Nor can the Chinese court itself resume its old existence. A change has been effected which cannot be undone but which will inevitably continue to work still further transformations, until the whole empire is opened up and modernized. That fact is patent to all the outer world. That it is patent to and is accepted by the Chinese court itself is sufficiently indicated by the manner of this home-coming at Pekin—New York Tribune.

☞The persuasive powers of the citizens interested in preventing a strike of the team drivers in Boston have been exercised with good effect, and an amicable adjustment of the difficulty accomplished. Both sides made concessions in reaching a settlement, the employees gaining a greater part of what they contended for, although modifying their demands on several points. The master teamsters have made no mistake in consenting to the terms on which adjustication was possible, and will doubtless be as well satisfied, if not better, when matters are completely adjusted to conform to the new conditions, than they were before. What they considered insuperable obstacles to the betterment of the conditions of their drivers will be found to have been either purely imaginary or easily overcome. Conciliation and arbitration has scored another victory, with more to follow.—Lynn Item.

☞While modern conditions would make the old-time formalities extremely tedious yet there are certain courtesies which good breeding demands and which are too often neglected. It is a fact that men are less deferential to women than they were generation or two ago. That the habit of rudeness is growing cannot be denied. It is a trite remark to say that the decrease in politeness to women means simply a decrease in civilization. It matters not how a people may advance in wealth and revel in luxuries, no matter what the veneer may be a people who mistreat women are lacking in true civilization and assimilate themselves with the savage tribes of mankind. The good treatment of women and the respect and consideration that is paid them has been regarded throughout christendom as one of the sure indexes of true civilization.—Baltimore Sun.

President Alden.

The Randolph Register is as proud of the new president of the Quincy City Council as is Ward Six. The Register says:

"Quincy has honored one of Randolph's sons by electing him to the City Council for three successive years and now have elected him president of that body. Charles Alden is the son of the late Horatio Bingely Alden, a former manufacturer and an ex-Selectman of Randolph. President Alden is 29 years of age, has been assistant paymaster on the Old Colony Railroad, and is now employed by R. L. Day & Co., bankers and brokers in Boston. He lives in Atlantic, a suburb of Quincy, has an estimable wife and two charming children. His friends here are pleased that the preference of the Council was shown him, and honored with the presidency. May he give proof to all that their confidence and preference have not been misplaced."

AGAINST SOCIALS.

Peculiar Vote Taken by a Church Board.

To Which the Pastor Dissents.

Rev. W. W. Dornan Resigns as Pastor of United Presbyterian Church.

There were two surprises at the services at the United Presbyterian church on Sunday. The one the announcement of a vote of the Session last week and the other the letter of resignation of the pastor Rev. William W. Dornan. The letter made no reference to the vote but it is thought they are closely related, as the pastor has favored more social gatherings by the church. The vote as read by the clerk of the church is rather a remarkable one and is given in full:

"It was moved and carried at the meeting of the Session on Tuesday evening, Jan. 7, that the congregation be notified of the following action taken at that meeting.

"The action is as follows: It was moved and carried that there shall be no socials, nor anything of such kind, nor any lectures in this church nor held otherwise under the name of the church.

The pastor of the church enters his dissent against the said action."

The letter of resignation was not read at the same time, but at the close of the sermon by the pastor. It was as follows:

"Quincy, Mass., Jan. 12, 1902.

"To the Members and Adherents of the First United Presbyterian Church:

"Dear Brethern—For the past five years we have labored together in the work of God. My chief object has been to have the kingdom of God established in the hearts of men. With what success, it belongs to history. Each day has recorded its own work, and the eternity alone shall reveal before the throne what we together have accomplished in the line of spiritual uplift.

"That many souls have been blessed with spiritual life and quickening there is every hope.

"When I came to you, you were a handful of people struggling without organization of any sort, worshipping in a small hall with a much smaller entrance, so that you had to pass up and down the stairs in Indian file.

"Through your heroic efforts you were soon able to leave the old hall of many gracious memories and over crowded meetings, and build the splendid church in which we are today; rating in present value about $13,000. With the help of the Church Extension Board we were able to enter with but $3,000 of a mortgage carrying five per cent.

"From a membership of 40 we increased to a roll of 155, showing an increase during the five years of 115. Some have died and entered into the church above. Some have gone to other parts of the country; some have been placed on the suspension roll and the bona fide roll of the church at the last annual meeting was 131; but it should have been 133 as two names had been omitted. So we stand today.

"The other branches of the church life you all know of them. I would especially commend to our Heavenly Father's blessing the Trustees and the Ladies' Missionary society. They have done nobly in the self sacrificing work; they have indeed labored with me in the gospel, from the first day until now.

"And now, for good and sufficient reasons to myself—which reasons will be stated in Presbytery we have come to the parting of the ways.

"I, therefore, tender my resignation as pastor of this church to take effect on the first of April, 1902.

"I shall therefore ask you tonight to join with me in calling a congregational meeting on Tuesday evening at at 7.30, to act on the appointment of commissioners to appear before the Presbytery, petitioning them to release the bond between us as pastor and people.

William W. Dornan,
pastor."

The request of the pastor for a meeting on Tuesday evening was granted.

BIG COMMISSIONS.

In the state of Vermont the law allows cities and towns to establish a municipal agency for the sale of liquor. The report of the meeting of the St. Ablans aldermen last week shows the temptations thrown in the way of city officials, and also the profits of wholesale liquor dealers:

The report of Aldermen I. B. Beeman and John E. Butler, the purchasing committee, showed that the agency had sold during the month of December $1,900 worth of stuff.

"There is evidently something radically wrong with the present law," said Mr. Beeman "The liquor I bought last August amounting to about $4,500 is all gone and I have been buying small lots to piece in until the agent prepared a requisition of what was needed. I have now bought another large lot, sufficient to carry through the present administration and unless ordered to do so by the mayor or council it is the last liquor that I shall purchase. This is all good liquor and has stood the test applied at the state laboratory. In order to get the quality desired I have been obliged to buy of several different firms and each one has given me something to help me along by contributing to my necessities and I now present the same to the city, not to the state or agency."

Alderman Beeman thereupon passed over his check for $1,036.55, his commission on liquor purchases amounting to $5,095.19, and the same was accepted by the council.

"Should not that money be turned over to the agency and placed in the liquor account," asked Alderman Cummings.

To this Mr. Beeman replied: "I am not giving this money to the state, but to the city. That was my money until I presented it to the city."

Fore River Canal.

A dispatch from Brockton to the Herald says: There is a likelihood that the committee chosen at the last session of the legislature to make a preliminary survey of the Fore river and Taunton canal, passing through this city, will not report Jan. 15, although that is the date at which it has been expected to come up in the house.

Representative Garfield has learned that it was to be a part of the plan to be submitted that Salisbury lake in Brockton be reserved as a place to turn vessels around." One of the 14 locks that are in the plans will be located close beside it, at the Crescent street end.

Representative Garfield believes that the report will convince the people of the commonwealth that the canal scheme is feasible.

The Boston Advertiser says: The report of the special survey of the Brockton ship canal is expected within a few days and both the supporters and opponents of the measure are consumed with curiosity as the figures presented. The engineers have found a route without any trouble, but they have also found a pretty big bill, it is said. Whether the size of the bill will kill the project, remains to be seen. It has leaked out that estimates of from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 may be looked forward to. It has cost $10,000 to do the preliminary work. At one time it was thought more would be required, but the engineers now say that they believe that that amount will carry them through.

Has a Waiting List.

By the charter of the Granite City club, the membership is limited to one hundred. The limit was reached some months ago and there has been quite a waiting list. Two vacancies occurred in the membership last month which were filled at the regular meeting Saturday night by the election of two on the waiting list.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Bemedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. The Expenses per Patient at the Waltham Hospital.

The annual report of the Waltham Hospital is of interest by way of comparison with the Quincy Hospital figures. Unfortunately the report at hand does not give the number of patients or the average number, but the trustees say there were 26 more patients admitted this year than last, although last year was thought phenomenal. The only hospitals in this vicinity, excepting Boston, admitting a larger number were Lynn, Lawrence, and each of which was heavily endowed or handsomely supported by the citizens. The report, however, does say that the average expense per week per patient has been $13.69. The investment account shows deposits of $37,959.11, and the Children's Free Bed fund amounts to $3,334.11.

The receipts of the year 1901 were:

Postal Clerks.

Local postal clerks are interested in two bills that are to come before this session of Congress. One is to provide for the classification of this branch of the service on lines similar to that of the carriers. The proposed legislation provides for a salary of $500 per annum for the first year in second-class offices and $600 in first-class offices with a graduated system of increase. The other bill is the eight-hour law, both of which have received the indorsement of the government postal authorities and the national association of postmasters.

Reduction in Fare.

On Saturday Jan. 11th, the Old Colony Street Railway Company will make a reduction in fare between North Braintree and the Howard House, Randolph. The fare is now five cents. Throws No Light on Assault

Washington, Jan. 13.—Mrs. Ada G. Dennis, the modiste who was murderously assaulted on the night of Dec. 9, was able for the first time yesterday to make a statement. She said the blow was struck while she was asleep. She had not the remotest idea who committed the assault nor the motive for it.

A Town with Building Ordinance.

Winthrop is a town with a building ordinance where real estate seems to flourish, and it is said the ordinance proposed for Quincy was copied largely from Winthrop.

The number of conveyances of real estate was 305, the number of mortgages 274, and the aggregate amount of the mortgages $567,411. These figures are all very much larger than those of the four previous years. The deeds of property at the Highlands number 42, at the Beach, 108, and at the Centre 155.

The report of Lucius Floyd, Inspector of Buildings, shows that 108 permits were granted for new buildings and 61 for repairs and additions, the first being 47 more and the last named 16 more than for the previous year. The value of the year's building was probably the highest of that of any year in the town's history.

HAND SHATTERED.

Gelatine Cartridges Explode in Hand of Ubald Burnett.

Ubald Burnett, aged 35 years, residing on Bunker Hill avenue, had his left hand badly shattered Sunday morning by the premature explosion of two milinite cartridges. Burnett who is a quarryman accidentally carried three of the cartridges home with him Saturday night. Finding them in his pocket Sunday morning he put them in his left hand and started to take them to a place of safety. As he passed by a window something outside attracted his attention and he rushed to the window near the sink to look out. As he did so one of the cartridges fell out of his hand into the sink and expolded. The concussion exploded the two cartridges remaining in his hand. The whole side of his hand was torn off as well as all of his fingers with the exception of the forefinger, which the physicians hope to save. Dr. Dion attended the injured man and ordered his removal to the City Hospital.

Heavy Snow Fall.

There was quite a heavy fall of snow Saturday night which with what fell last week should make good sleighing. The city plows were about early and all of the sidewalks were cleaned off by church time. A light west wind, however, prevailed during Sunday causing the light snow to drift badly in places and it was necessary to plow out the sidewalks again this morning. The street railway plows were out all night Saturday and their lines were all open and running on time Sunday.

The Appointments.

There will be no meeting of the City Council tonight. The regular meeting will be held next Monday evening at which time Mayor Bryant will probably make know the balance of his appointments. There has been much speculation as to who would be appointed to certain offices, but the Mayor has kept his own counsel. While there has been considerable guessing, no one appears to know much about it.

A Pretty Bag.

A pretty fancy bag, which may be utilized among other purposes for carrying a fan and which may be made as elaborate as the taste of the fair wearer dictates, is shown in the accompanying illustration. The bag here presented is made of white satin and is embroidered with gold tinsel thread, which makes a charming combination. An effective ornamentation for a bag of this kind is a handsome guipure applique, the pattern of which is outlined and worked here and there with gold thread.

FAN BAG.

A Rose Jar.

A rose jar is made by placing in an ornamented urn three handfuls each of fresh damask rose leaves, sweet pinks, wallflowers, stock gillyflowers and any other fragrant blossoms that can be obtained. Each variety should be arranged in a separate layer and covered thickly with powdered orris root. A mixture composed of equal quantities of powdered cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg may be stirred in with the flowers before they are placed in the jar if thought desirable. Care must be taken to have everything used entirely free from moisture. The jar should be kept closely covered and only opened occasionally when it is desired to perfume the room.

Children and Manners.

Good manners consist in consideration for other people—that is to say, in intelligent altruism in small matters. It is absurd to say that this kind of unselfishness in trifles cannot be cultivated, because it is largely a matter of attention. Manners are to a high degree teachable, and parents can do a very great deal to make their children agreeable by impressing upon them the worldly utility of being so, for no other argument would be of the least avail.

Athletic Women.

This is an age when physical strength and vigor are as much expected in a woman as in a man, and there is no limit to the athletic amusements which she may take up. Women play tennis, croquet, skate, ride, swim and shoot as well as men, and cricket is about the only game in which they do not as yet indulge.

—The bight of the rock of Gibraltar is about 1,437 feet.

Unfeeling Chinese.

A typical scene in a Manchurian village is thus described by a correspondent of the London News:

"That afternoon we pulled up near three shanties on a woodside, and a gang of Chinese, all squabbling and making noises like dogs growling over bones, fought with one another to get on a platform where a boiler was chained. There was a scuffle. One Chinese was pushed backward and fell. His head hit the metal and cracked like a nut. He gave a wriggle and died. The Russians who saw the accident were affected. The Chinese laughed. He lay for an hour in the sun until I undid his sleeping rug and spread it over his face. He was soon forgotten. A Chinese threw some hot water over a growling dog and made it howl. At this there were shrieks of mirth.

"The engine puffed and groaned and jerked the wagons into progress. The last I saw of this spot was two Chinamen pitching mud at the same dog to keep it from sniffing at the body of the dead."

Sense In Proverbs.

There is a deal of sound sense in the proverbs of a nation. Earl Russell defined a proverb as being the wit of one man and the wisdom of many, and the aptness of this is well shown in the following from the Spanish, "Since we cannot get what we like, let us like what we get." The thought is as old as the race of mankind, but ages passed before one man hit upon the happy expression of it. This saying from the Chinese is a whole homily on pride in one sentence, "When a tree is blown down, it shows that the branches are longer than the roots."

For a concise expression of the lofty aspirations of youth and the sober achievements of riper years take this sentence from Henry D. Thoreau, "The youth gets together his materials to build a bridge to the moon, or perchance a palace or temple on the earth, and at length the middle aged man concludes to build a woodshed with them."

Did Not Know What Was Going On.

There is a fact about the French revolution more wonderful in its way than any which can be discovered in old newspapers. It is the fact, gathered from private letters of the period, that in those stirring times, when all the world was ringing with the events in Paris, there were actually people in that city living in absolute ignorance of the horrors around them. There was no reign of terror for them. They lived veritable recluses in their quiet suburban houses, hearing nothing, reading nothing of the turmoil which startled and terrified the nations. One wonders much what manner of people these oysterlike folks might be. Nothing sounds more incredible today. Yet there are many things in history not half so well authenticated, though history is curiously silent on so strange a circumstance.

Temperament and Exercise.

Careful tests and observations made at the Yale psychological laboratory have demonstrated the importance of studying individual temperament before prescribing a system of physical exercise. A nervous temperament, for example, requires a different treatment from that required by a phlegmatic temperament, without regard to the physical condition of the subject.

The mental factors are more necessary than the muscular in the development of strength. A nervous person should never be required to take heavy exercise. A phlegmatic person, on the contrary, requires it. The phlegmatic temperament indicates reserve energy in both muscles and nerve cells, while the nervous temperament has less reserve power, but greater ability to use the energy at hand.—Philadelphia Record.

Mirrors of the Israelites.

The earliest mirrors of which mention is made in history were in use among the Israelites in the time of Moses. That gentleman, as recorded in the Bible, commanded in a certain emergency that these articles should be transformed into wash basins for the priests. They were made of brass. Doubtless similar utensils of this and other materials were in use long before that. At that same period black glass was employed for the purpose, as well as transparent glass with black foil on the back. It is related that the Spaniards found mirrors of polished black stone, both convex and concave, among the natives of South America.

What the Truffle Is.

The ancient Romans, at whose sumptuous banquets truffles played an important role, supposed that their existence was one of the material results of thunder. More modern botanists have classed it as a species of mushroom, but it can scarcely be termed such. To be exact, the truffle is a tuberculous fungus, a sort of morbid extravasation of vegetable sugars analogous to oak balls or nutgalls and doubtless originating, as these latter, from the sting of an insect.

Accidental Discharge of a Pun.

A capital pun may arise by pure accident, as recorded in Bucke's "Book of Table Talk:"

"A Mr. Alexander Gun was dismissed from a post in the customs of Edinburgh for circulating some false rumor. The dismissal is said to have been thus noted in the customs book at the time, "A. Gun discharged for making a false report."

Realistic.

Mamma—For goodness' sake, Elsie, why are you shouting in that disgraceful fashion? Why can't you be quiet like Willie?

Elsie—He has to be quiet the way we're playing. He's papa coming home late, and I'm you.—Philadelphia Press.

On the coast winds will be fresh to brisk northwest.

Getting In Society.

Several young men in our smartest set were asked by an inquisitive genius how they managed to get in high society. "I danced my way in," said one, who frequently leads a cotillon. Another said: "I was too ungraceful for that. But I had a serious way with me, and got into the sacred circle by means of the Sunday school. I taught a Bible class, made acquaintance of the best young men, met their mothers, fathers and finally their sisters." A third: "I got in by being a stranger in New York. While on a hunting expedition in the west I was able, through a happy circumstance, to be of assistance to a very prominent leader of New York society. In gratitude, I suppose, he exacted a promise that I would visit him if I ever came east. I came, I called, I conquered. He dined me at his club, then at his home, where I met his family. His daughter is now my wife."—New York Press.

Constantinople Beggars' Feast Day.

One day in the year Constantinople is free from the beggar nuisance—on Nov. 25. This is the festival of St. John the Almsgiver, the patron saint of the mendicant profession. No beggar of the Greek faith is on his or her beat that day. In the forenoon all, or nearly all, Orthodox mendicants attend a special service in the church of St. Constantine, at which an archbishop officiates. It is arranged by their corporation, for they are organized into a guild like any other trade. The church, spacious as it is, is none too large for the numerous congregation of cadgers, many of whom in their holiday garb look like respectable citizens. The rest of the day is spent in festivities, which are apt to extend so far into the night that many of the revelers are unable to attend to business on the morrow.

Where He Belonged.

A clergyman observed a horse jockey trying to take in a simple gentleman by imposing upon him a broken winded horse for a sound one. The parson, taking the gentleman aside, told him to be cautious of the person he was dealing with. The gentleman declined the purchase, and the jockey, quite nettled, observed, "Parson, I had much rather hear you preach than to see you privately interfere in bargains between man and man in this way."

"Well," replied the parson, "if you had been where you ought to have been last Sunday you might have heard me preach."

"Where was that?" inquired the jockey.

"In the state prison," returned the clergyman.—London Standard.

TAMMANY'S NEW CHIEF

Lewis Nixon Takes Place Long Occupied by Croker

A PLEA FOR YOUNG BLOOD

Made by the Retiring "Boss"—His Successor a Prosperous Shipbuilder, Who Pledges His Utmost Strength to Build Up the Organization

New York, Jan. 13.—Richard Croker announced his retirement from the formal leadership of Tammany Hall Saturday afternoon. The announcement was made at the meeting of the executive committee, at which the plan of organization for 1902 was agreed upon. Lewis Nixon was named as Mr. Croker's successor, as the chairman of the finance committee. The position, by long usuage, carries with it the leadership of the organization.

George M. Van Hoesen, president of the general committee, in announcing the name of Nixon for the chairmanship of the finance committee, said that this step was taken at the desire of Croker himself. At that time, however, Croker did not give any expression to his sentiments himself, and it was not until all of the various business before the meeting had been transacted that he arose and addressed the chair. Although he spoke in ordinary conversational tone, there was nevertheless something of a tremor in his voice, and he walked back and forth across the room in a manner not familiar to those who have often heard him speak.

Mr. Croker said that the appointment of Louis Nixon to the chairmanship of the finance committee had his full approval and he hoped that Mr. Nixon would receive the same consideration and good will that had been extended to himself. He added:

"I know the young man well and I believe he will restore confidence in the organization and bring back to its support the army of Democrats that we lost at the last election. I hope that you will give him the same confidence that I have enjoyed. I am continually receiving letters from young men anxious to join this organization who do not know how to join. And I hope that means will be found to bring more young men in. The people who left us for reasons of their own can never build an organization up against yours upon patronage received from the Republican party. I think it is your duty to strengthen yourselves and to stand on principles, not on patronage. You know this organization generally polls the largest vote when it has no patronage. I have been in the organization 35 years and during that period it has also polled a larger vote proportionately in years when it had no patronage. So you need never fear the efforts of men who leave us because they wish to get positions. It is neglect of yourselves and distrust of your leaders which will hurt you. If you conduct this organization honestly and comply with the laws, you can be beaten at no time."

Mr. Nixon then rose and very briefly thanked the committee for the honor done him. He said: "I need not say that this great honor was entirely unexpected and absolutely unsought by me. It was with sincere regret that I learned that Mr. Croker had determined to retire. I was willing to remain in the ranks. But I will not accept an executive position and be a mere figurehead. I am not so presumptuous as to imagine that I can control in all things, but I can say that, while I may not always have your support, I shall have it if I keep this position. I promise to apply every effort and my utmost strength to build up this organization."

A vote of thanks to Mr. Croker for his services to the organization was carried without debate and the committee adjourned.

Lewis S. Nixon, the new Tammany leader, was born in Leesburg, Va., in 1861. In 1878 he was appointed a midshipman and in 1882 graduated from the United States naval academy at the head of his class and was sent to the Royal naval college, Greenwich, Eng., by the navy department, and in 1884 he was transferred to the construction corps of the navy. In 1890 he designed the battleships Oregon, Indiana and Massachusetts, and then resigned from the navy to become superintending constructor of the Cramp shipyard, Philadelphia. In 1895 he left there and started, on his own account, the Crescent shipyard at Elizabethport, N. J., where he has built 100 vessels in six years. In 1898 he was appointed president of the East river bridge commission by Mayor Van Wyck. He is consulting engineer of the Cramp Shipbuilding company, president of the International Smokeless Powder and Dynamite company, United States Long Distance Automobile company, Carbon Axle company, trustee of Webb's academy and home for shipbuilders, director of the Idaho Exploring and Mining company. He has written several books.

Rinchard Croker was born in Black Rock, County Cork, Ire., in 1843, and came to this country when only 2 years old. In 1869 he was elected alderman and served in that capacity for two years. In 1873 he was elected coroner, serving three years. In 1883 he was made fire commissioner and in 1889 and 1890 he served the city as city chamberlain. For years he has been the recognized leader of Tammany Hall.

Fall River Schooner Beached

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 13.—Schooner Damon of Fall River, Mass., was beached and left by her crew at Hereford Inlet, between this place and Cape May, to prevent her from sinking after she had sprung aleak off that place.

CONFLICTING STORIES

Said to Have Been Told by Arnold Regarding His Son's Death

Hudson, Mass., Jan. 13.—The second autopsy on the body of George W. Arnold, son of John Arnold, who was killed last Wednesday while cutting wood with his father, was held by Medical Examiner Hoytt yesterday. At the conclusion, Dr. Hoytt said that he was of the opinion that death was the result of a blow from some blunt instrument. The inquest in the case will be held today and one of the witnesses called is the father of the boy. The state officers working on the case have discovered that John Arnold has told conflicting stories regarding the death of his son, and this, coupled with the report that Young Arnold had said that the next time his father started to whip him he should resist, has led to the suspicion that there may have been a fight between the two in the woods.

John Arnold now says that when at noon he asked his son to cut down one more tree, the boy refused, and that he went toward him. Before he reached him, however, he was suddenly struck down, and when he recovered he saw his son sitting some 20 feet away from him. He ran to him and found that his heart had stopped beating. This made him frantic and then he ran for assistance.

Sensational Attempt at Suicide

San Francisco, Jan. 13.—Captain J. D. Horne of the Ninth cavalry, U. S. A., made a deliberate attempt at suicide in the fruit store of A. Dalporto. The proprietor was dressing a chicken in the rear part of the store when the captain asked whether the knife he was using was sharp. "It is," said Dalporto, and in an instant Horne grabbed it and slashed himself across the throat. Dalporto grappled with the captain and a desperate struggle followed. The scuffle brought a crowd and Horne was finally overpowered and taken to a hospital. He probably will recover. Captain Horne arrived from Manila in December and has been an invalid for some time.

May Become Guest of Nation

Washington, Jan. 13.—The announcement that Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of Emperor William, will come to the United States at an early day, already has caused much interesting speculation as to the details of his reception. The program for his entertainment will be an elaborate one, appropriate for his high station. He is an admiral in the German navy and when he arrives at New York will be greeted by a salute of 21 guns, which is the same as a presidential salute. On his arrival in Washington Prince Henry will be received by the president and will be invited to become the guest of the nation.

Bound to Have Gunboat

Colon, Jan. 13.—The South American Steamship company had refused to charter their steamer Lantaro to the Colombian government, to be used by the latter as a gunboat. General Alban, military commander, yesterday issued a decree appropriating the Lantaro. He took possession of her and deposited a sum of money equal to her value with a banker at Panama. Cannon are now being mounted upon her.

Australia's Laudable Ambition

Melbourne, Jan. 13.—With regard to the complaint of Canadian manufacturers that the new tariff of Australia is injuring Canadian trade, Prime Minister Barton says that Canada has benefited by 35 years of protection and that he thinks the Canadians should appreciate the desire of Australia to place her manufacturers upon a sound basis like that of Canada.

Suspected of Killing Mother

Marinette, Wis., Jan. 13.—The charred and lifeless body of Mrs. Lena Christel, aged 70, was found in her room yesterday by a policeman who had seen smoke issuing from the place. The woman's death was mysterious, and Martin Christel, her son, is in jail awaiting an investigation.

Lieutenant Goes to Prison

Berlin, Jan. 13.—Lieutenant Thieme, who recently killed a student of Halle university named Held in a duel, has been sentenced to two years and three months' imprisonment in a fortress.

IT'S THE TRUTH

Tell a man it's a food and he doesn't want to pay for it. Tell him it's a medicine and he says it doesn't look like it. Then tell him it's both a food and a medicine and he thinks you're playing some game on him.

Yet these are the facts about Scott's Emulsion of pure cod-liver oil. It is the cream of cod-liver oil, the richest and most digestible of foods. The food for weak stomachs. The food for thin bodies and thin blood.

But that's only half the story. Scott's Emulsion is also a good medicine. It gives new life and vigor to the whole system and especially to the lungs.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

TRAGEDY IN A MILL

Woman Shoots a Former Shopmate and Then Kills Herself

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 13.—The attempted murder of Miss Jennie Gagnon by Miss Ledrande Lesuyer, better known as Annie Beaudry, and the suicide of the latter, caused intense excitement among the operatives of the upper canal jack room of Amoskeag mill No. 1 on Saturday. Miss Beaudry was found unconscious on the floor when the smoke cleared away and was removed to a hospital, where she died in less than 15 minutes after her arrival.

Her assailant used a 32-calibre revolver and fired but two shots. Coroner Lord was notified of Miss Beaudry's death and decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The body has been taken in charge by relatives.

That the attempt at murder and subsequent suicide was premeditated there is no question, since a farewell note was left for her father by Miss Beaudry. A mental hallucination that Miss Gagnon was responsible for her losing her place in the mill seems to have been the cause of the attack by Miss Beaudry. She had been employed in the jack room on a machine next to her intended victim for more than a year. She was always having trouble with the other girls in the room. About two months ago she had a row with Jennie Gagnon, which ended in her striking her with a stool. Trouble with the overseer followed and when Miss Beaudry left the mill she told Miss Gagnon that she would kill her. Miss Beaudry frequently complained that everyone abused her.

Two Burglars Caught

Saybrook, Conn., Jan. 13.—Six burglars broke into the village grocery store early Sunday morning and were discovered by a passer by. He went for help and the owner, Daniel Holmes, and returning to the store a fight ensued, in which several shots were fired. After two of the burglars were injured they surrendered and were locked up. The burglars had already loaded a team with merchandise and there was enough on the sidewalk to fill another. They refused to give their names.

Snow Plow Jumped Into River

Taunton, Mass., Jan. 13.—A street railway snow plow left the rails on the electric road in Dighton yesterday and as a result WilliamMorrisey is probably fatally hurt, John Gaffney has a broken leg, and two others were badly shaken up but have no serious injuries, while the snow plow on which they were riding is at the bottom of the river. The snow plow made a bad curve leading to a bridge in safety, but when half way across the bridge it jumped the rails and went over the side.

Skull to Figure In Trial

Concord, N. H., Jan. 13.—The body of Mrs. Nancy J. Folsom, who was murdered on Oct. 23 at North Boscawen, has been disinterred by order of County Solicitor Dudley, and portions of the skull removed to be used in evidence in the trial of George Greenleaf, who is accused of committing the crime. The trial is to commence Jan. 20. The skull was crushed, presumably, by a rock which was found close to the body, stained with blood.

Portsmouth's Turn

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 13.—City Marshal Entwistle has notified the proprietors of all saloons and places where liquor is sold not to open their places tomorrow, and from that time to remain out of the liquor business. The order is the result of the efforts of local temperance societies. It will be the first time in the history of Portsmouth when liquor has not been publicly dispensed.

Naval Surgeon Kills Himself

Union Endorses Settlement

Boston, Jan. 13.—The teamsters' union, representing 2500 men, yesterday endorsed the action of its conference committee which agreed to a settlement of grievances, thereby preventing a strike the past week. One firm in the city has not yet agreed to the terms upon which the strike had been prevented, and the union decided to allow this firm a reasonable time in which to get into line.

Seven-Thousand-Mile Race

Boston, Jan. 13.—The bark Thomas A. Goddard of Boston and the bark Landskrona of Windsor, N. S., sailed from this port yesterday for Buenos Ayres, the first named having two hours the start. Both are lumber laden and the race of 7000 miles is likely to be interesting to the crews should the courses be laid on the same points of the compass.

Steamer Burned at Dock

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 13.—Steamer Rambler of the Providence, Fall River and Newport line, was burned to the water's edge while lying at her dock yesterday. The fire was discovered by the engineer and fireman, who were sleeping aboard. In two hours she sank. The Rambler was built in 1879 and she was valued at $5000.

Fire In Newspaper Office

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 13.—Fire yesterday almost totally destroyed the business and editorial departments of The Daily American and Morning Sun and the office of the Postal Telegraph company. The loss will reach several hundred dollars. The damage to the mechanical departments was mostly from smoke and water.

A $5,500,000 DECREASE

In Estimate of Amount Necessary For Pensions

HIGH TIDE IS REACHED

Grosvenor and Hepburn Denounce a Report Criticising Their Course on the Veterans' Preference Bill--Rixey Makes a Plea For Ex-Confederates

Washington, Jan. 14.—The house spent yesterday in general discussion of the pension appropriation bill, the first of the annual budgets. The debate took a wide range.

Mr. Barney (Wis.), in charge of the bill, explained that it carried $139,846,480, as against $145,245,230 appropriated for the current year. The estimates for the payment of pensions decreased from $144,000,000 to $138,500,000. He was asked by Mr. Richardson (Tenn.) why the amount for pensions decreased $5,500,000 while the number of pensioners was said to be larger? Mr. Barney explained that this was accounted for by the fact that the arrearages were decreasing and the number of large pensions (those from $50 to $75 a month) was also decreasing. In reply to another question he stated that the commissioner of pensions believed that the high tide of pension payments had been reached and the amount required probably would remain stationary for some years.

Mr. Bell (Col.) made a speech denouncing the "pension sharks." He said many soldiers returning from the Philippines, discharged in a perfectly sound condition, were being induced to apply for pensions by these attorneys. He said that in some cases these soldiers yielded to importunities and applied for pensions within a month after their discharge. As against the soldier in the Civil war who had not applied for a pension until recent years he thought the present commissioner was too strict, but in the matter of ferreting out fraud he thought Commissioner Evans had been unexcelled by any of his predecessors.

Mr. Grosvenor (O.) assailed the report of a committee of the G. A. R., made to the Grand Army encampment at Cleveland last summer. The report placed at the door of certain members of the house and senate (among them himself) the failure to pass what was known as the "preference pension bill." Mr. Grosvenor characterized the report as "unjust, unfair and untruthful."

Mr. Grosvenor said that he always had supported cordially every general and special bill for the benefit of his comrades in arms. The objection to the bill he said, was that it contained a provision which would have given preference over the old soldiers of the rebellion to 250,000 men who enlisted in the Spanish-American war. He did not think the provision just and explained why he could not support it in the shape in which it appeared before the house.

Mr. Talbert (S. C.) delivered a general speech on the subject of pensions to show the growing extravagance and fraud of the present system. He thought the practice of passing special pension bills should be abandoned.

Mr. Hepburn (Ia.) again brought up the report made to the G. A. R. encampment in criticism of members of congress who voted against the veteran "preference" bill. He said he had voted against the bill and pointed out that the bill as endorsed by the G. A. R. and as originally introduced did not contain the provision giving preference to veterans of the Spanish war. Some of the veterans of the Spanish war, he said, were as much entitled to be in the preferential class as the veterans of the Civil war, but the vast majority of the 270,000 Spanish volunteers had not heard a hostile gun fired and he was unwilling that they should be placed in a preferential class, from which the civil service would be recruited for the next 25 years.

Mr. Rixey (Va.) submitted an argument in favor of a bill introduced by him yesterday to admit confederate veterans to national soldiers' homes and to extend the same national aid to state confederate homes in the south as was accorded state union homes. Mr. Rixey said that he believed that the time had come when the doors of union homes could be opened to confederate veterans. The restrictions against ex-confederates participating in the government and against ex-confederates holding commissions in the army or navy having been removed, he argued that the soldiers homes barrier which stands across the path of ex-confederate soldiers also should be removed.

Mr. Richardson, (Tenn.) the Democratic leader, interposed to declare that never would he be willing to see ex-confederates enter union homes. The debate grew lively, differences of opinion developing on the Democratic side. Mr. Richardson (Ala.) sided with Mr. Rixey, while Mr. Lamb (Va.), Mr. Bartlett (Ga.) and others opposed the suggestion. The debate is unfinished.

MISS ROOSEVELT HONORED

Kaiser's Yacht Will Be Named After Her and a Princess

New York, Jan. 14.—Emperor William's yacht, now being constructed at Shooters island, is to be christened Alice. The Tribune makes this announcement, which is stated to be on the authority of Henry G. Barbey, a member of the firm which designed the yacht. Mr. Barbey stated that the information was unofficial, but that he does not doubt its authenticity.

The name Alice will be given the yacht in honor of Miss Alice Roosevelt, who is to christen the yacht, and for a cousin of the emperor, whose name also is Alice. The cousin in question is thought to be the Czarina of Russia, who was the Princess Alix of Hesse, grandaughter of Queen Victoria.

The fact that Miss Alice Roosevelt is to christen the yacht, and that it may be named in her honor, together with the knowledge that Prince Henry of Prussia will represent his brother, the emperor, at the ceremony, has added extraordinary interest to the affair. Prince Henry probably will sail from Bremen either on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, due here Feb. 11, or on the Kronprinz Wilhelm, due on Feb. 25

Strengthening of Friendship

Berlin, Jan. 14.—Among the great provincial journals that join in pleasant comment on Prince Henry's projected visit to the United States is the Cologne Gazette which says: Emperor William, in ordering a racing yacht in 1901, wanted to show his special interest and faith in American shipbuilding, and now the sending of Prince Henry to the United States gives a fresh proof of how important Emperor William regards the maintenance and promotion of good relations with the United States. Emperor William's efforts in this direction find a full understanding and a lively response among the German people.

Arranging For Prince's Visit

New York, Jan. 14.—Mayor Low has begun a correspondence with Secretary of State Hay to make fitting arrangements for a welcome to Prince Henry of Prussia when he arrives in New York. Mayor Low does not want to have the arrangements made by the city to conflict with the arrangements at Washington.

In Contempt of Court

New York, Jan. 14.—In the litigation of William A. Brady against J. C. Kennedy and Patrick T. Powers over the cycle races conducted at Madison Square garden prior to December, 1900, the supreme court yesterday handed down a decision adjudging Kennedy and Powers in contempt of court. A referee having found that Kennedy and Powers had $22,139.28 which they were directed to deposit, together with $78.50 and expenses or the reference and $250 counsel fees, and they having failed to do so, Justice Scott also fines them these amounts.

Malicious Wrecking of Train

Wichita, Kas., Jan. 14.—A freight train on the Rock Island road crashed into a work train standing on a siding at O'Keene yesterday and killed H. K. Bear, a bridge foreman, and E. A. Colby, a carpenter. The men in the work car were asleep and were buried under the debris, which caught fire and threatened to roast everyone of them. By strong efforts all but two were saved. The cause of the wreck was the malicious breaking of a switch lock and the throwing of the switch by some unknown person.

Dual Government Objectionable

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 14.—The Cherokee, Choctaw and Chickasaw nations have passed resolutions asking congress to do away with tribal government and that territorial government be instituted. They say the two governments cannot well exist at the same time.

President the Chief Guest

Washington, Jan. 14.—Postmaster General and Mrs. Emory Smith, who soon return to their home in Philadelphia, gave their last official dinner last night at the Arlington, when they entertained President and Mrs. Roosevelt and a large company.

Enemy of Castro Caught

Caracas, Jan. 14.—Forces of the government of Venezuela have captured Senor Lutowsky. Lutowsky, who was minister of war in former President Crespo's cabinet, with two other officials, rebelled Dec. 19 against President Castro.

Nelson's Bill Goes Over

Washington, Jan. 14.—In the senate yesterday, Mr. Nelson of Minnesota called up the bill providing for the establishment of a department of commerce. He explained the necessity which, he said, existed for the passage of such a measure, and was plied with questions by several senators, who said that sufficient time had not been allowed for looking into the merits of the measure. The bill finally went over, subject to call by Mr. Nelson. The senate was in executive session for an hour and a half.

The Hepburn Nicaragua canal bill was received by the senate from the house yesterday and referred to the committee on inter-oceanic canals.

CONGRESS ASKED TO DECIDE

To Whom Should Be Given the Honor For the Victory at Santiago—Dewey Declared to Be Pre-eminently Qualified to Judge of Facts

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Resolutions calling upon congress to reopen the Schley case and make its own decision as to who was in command at the battle of Santiago were passed by the board of trade at its annual meeting yesterday.

The vote was not unanimous, but the roar of the "ayes" was three times as loud as the roar of "noes" and the vocal vote went unchallenged as expressing the feeling of the board. A brief but brisk discussion preceded the adoption of the resolutions.

R. G. Chandler introduced the resolutions, but before Secretary Stone had finished reading them, he was interrupted by J. B. Rumsey, who tried to have them tabled unread, as out of place in a board of trade meeting. He got no satisfaction, and Mr. Chandler made a speech for their passage which was so full of emotion that his voice trembled while he spoke.

The resolutions, as passed, are:

"Whereas, efforts were made, not only to detract from the glory due to Rear Admiral Schley for his signal victory over the Spanish fleet off Santiago, but to denounce his victorious plans of battle on that occasion, and to charge that gallant and generous officer with cowardice in the face of the enemy; and,

"Whereas, such efforts were so persistent that Admiral Schley was forced, out of self-respect, to demand a court of inquiry by the government; and,

"Whereas, though the verdict of the court of inquiry left no stain upon his reputation as a gallant and brave officer, yet two members of that tribunal denounced his conduct of that battle, in spite of the fact that a glorious victory was won, and denied that he was chief in command; and,

"Whereas, our great admiral, George Dewey, who, by virtue of his ability and patriotism, and who, as the hero of the greatest naval victory of modern times, was pre-eminently qualified to judge of the actions and orders of Admiral Schley on that memorable day, declared in a supplemental report that the latter had maintained an effective blockade and as officer in absolute command was entitled to the credit for the victory off Santiago.'

"Resolved, That we believe it the duty of congress to review the record of the court, to examine into all the circumstances and events tending to throw light upon the controversy and to announce its judgment as to who was in command at the battle of Santiago and as to the conduct of Admiral Schley on that occasion.

"Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing be forwarded to Admiral Schley, also to our sentors and representatives in congress."

Maryland Delegates Act

Annapolis, Jan. 14.—In the house of delegates last night Delegate Broening (Rep.) presented a memorial to congress, asking that body to adopt the report of Admiral Dewey in the Schley court of inquiry as the verdict of congress. Delegate Griffith (Rep.) presented a joint resolution authorizing the governor to have executed by a Maryland artist a bronze bust of Admiral Schley, to be placed in the state house at Annapolis.

To Await President's Decision

Washington, Jan. 14.—The Maryland delegation in congress yesterday considered the course to be pursued on the Schley case and decided that, pending the decision of President Roosevelt on the appeal to be made by Admiral Schley to the chief executive, it would be inadvisable for the delegation to urge upon congress any of the resolutions or bills introduced.

Visited Cotton Exchange

Savannah, Ga., Jan. 14.—Admiral Schley was informally entertained on the floor of the cotton exchange yesterday for more than an hour. There was no set program. Business was virtually suspended until he had bowed good-bye and departed amid a storm of applause and hand-clapping.

Says Charges Are Untrue

Lawrence, Kas., Jan. 14.—General Wilder S. Metcalf, when asked concerning the charges made against him in the senate committee to prevent his confirmation as pension agent at Topeka, said: "The charge that I shot Filipinos while they were defenseless has been made before, and after an investigation by the officers of the war department I was exonerated from all blame. They were started purely for personal reasons.

Albany, Jan. 14.—The state board of railroad commissioners announces that it will conduct a formal investigation of the New York Central tunnel disaster. The board will summon all persons who can, in any way, throw light on the accident and the conditions responsible for it.

Imprisoned In Burning Mine

Hartshorne, I. T., Jan. 14.—A fire broke out in the new slope No. 7 at Dow, one of the principal tributaries of the Choctaw coal system, yesterday afternoon. At 8 o'clock last night four bodies had been brought to the surface. Probably 10 more men are in the mine. Relief has been sent from this place.

Weavers Return to Work

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 14.—The weavers of the Pierce mill who sent in their notices last week have withdrawn them and all went to work yesterday. The trouble was settled by notices announcing that the pay of the weavers hereafter on all new work would be $2.88 a loom, which is equal to about $11.52 a week.

Donovan Is Popular

Boston, Jan. 14.—The municipal year began in earnest yesterday by the board of aldermen confirming the appointment of James Donovan as superintendent of streets, and of James H. Dodge as city auditor. Donovan received every vote, a compliment made possible by the vote of the Republicans.

Stables Were Set on Fire

Clinton, Mass., Jan. 14.—An inquest was held yesterday on the fire at the Clinton house stables on Dec. 13, and at its conclusion it was announced that the officers had decided that the fire was of incendiary origin and would be investigated further. The loss by the fire was $15,000.

Lawson Accepts Challenge

Boston, Jan. 14.—Thomas W. Lawson will accept the challenge of Fire Commissioner Scannell of New York for a race between Boralma and Fhe Abbot. D. E. Smathers of New York will also be accommodated, and Lord Derby will run a series of races during the summer.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. Good Afternoon.

On January 6th, the President had to sign with a pen on parchment, his signature to some eighteen hundred army commissions. And some people deny that the President is overworked.

Although the United States has taken no part officially in the British-Boer war according to the Rev. Mr. Broekhuysen, her citizens have contributed over $50,000 to the cause, the largest contribution the Boers have received from outside sources.

The most encouraging feature of wireless telegraphy is the possibility that it will afford complete protection from collision to ocean vessels. Nothing heretofore invented has accomplished this but on the last voyage the Umbria was made aware, by wireless telegraphy, of the presence of another vessel when it was still seventy-five miles distant.

That the committee of any church in Quincy should pass a vote forbidding sociables and lectures by the church people, as was done by the Session of the United Presbyterian church of Fort square last week, cannot be easily fathomed. It remains to be seen whether the church as a whole will back up its committee in such a Medieval vote at its meeting to be held tomorrow evening. Nowadays, the churches of all denominations emphasize the need of sociability and it is at such gatherings that the church people really become acquainted.

The next issue of the city directory will contain a feature which will be much appreciated by patrons of the company issuing it. It will have a list of residents compiled by streets this being a duplication of the name as it is set up in alphabetical order. Something of that kind has been missed very much in the old directories, the assesors' books alone supplying the information in that form.—Brockton Enterprise.

There should be a law against the publication of such a directory, and it is probably one of the reasons why the number of copies of the poll list issued by the Assessors is limited to a small number. The only ones to be benefited by such a publication of residents by streets are the book canvassers, agents of various kinds, peddlers, etc. The familarity of some of these fellows is now disgusting and they would be more audacious when armed with such a directory. Sneak thieves and burglars would know how many men there were in a house, the next house, etc. It might be added to each name for their benefit whether the house has a burglar alarm, a telephone, a safe, etc.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ No less than ten colleges, besides other institutions, were announced in the daily papers on the second day of the new year as having failed to fulfill conditions on which they were to receive large gifts from rich donors. This method of raising money is now, we believe, being over worked and cannot be relied on in the future as it has been in the past.—Congregationalist.

☞ To teach English in the secondary, normal and high schools of France, candidates must pass an examination in Mrs. Browning's "Aurora Leigh," Thackeray's "The Four Georges," Pinero's "The Princess and Butterfly," Mrs. Barbauld's "Evenings at Home," and Miss Corner's "Every Child's History of England." A successful passing of the trial would testify to a liberal education indeed.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ But though there can be no emancipation from marriage this is not saying that there may not be emancipation in marriage. Marriage is not necessarly a one-sided contract in which the woman agrees to obey or to serve. To consent to make one's self anothers' subject or servant is unworthy of a human being, even if done freely. In law we do not allow one person to sell himself into slavery into another; the contract is null and void. There is no reason in morals why a woman should put herself at the beck and call of a man. Any true marriage is a relation of equals,—it is a relation in which the freedom of each is respected by the the other; it is a relation of mutual service, in which force is never used, in which command is never heard. If the wife is obliged to submit to her husband, that is barbarism, no matter who, what rite, what Bible, what law, sanctions it. Authority may be excused over children, it may be justified in the state, but to the extent it is exercised between partners in the marriage relation, the beauty, the sacredness, of the relation is gone.—William M. Salter in the January Atlantic.

☞ What shall we do with our ex-presidents? has been chosen occasionally of late as the theme for essays by gentlemen with facile pens. The questions naturally suggests that an answer be sought and other fertile minded men have offered suggestions notwithstanding that the only ex-president we have is proving that he is quite capable of looking out for himself and would probably resent any attempt on anybody's part to do anything with him. Congressman Lovering plumes himself that he has found the best answer of the lot and he is so pleased with it that he asks his fellow congressmen to say what they think of it as they find it embodied in a bill to pay ex-presidents an annual salary for life of twenty-five thousand dollars. There can hardly be any doubt but that the majority of the congressmen will exclaim to the proposer of such a scheme, "Go to," for the proposition is not in keeping with the spirit of our government. The president is but a citizen who agrees to serve his country in the highest office it has to offer, and he does it not for the salary that attaches to the position. It would be a great mistake ever to make the pecuniary return an inducement to seek the office. As for reward or pension for service, the man worthy to be president wants neither; and as for the view of a life salary to provide in a dignified way for the support of ex-presidents there is absolute offense in it. The careers of Benjamin H. Harrison and Grover Cleveland since they left the White House do not suggest that assistance is necessary to secure a support or maintain a dignity that will not disgrace the name of president.—New Bedford Standard.

POLICE SHAKE-UP.

Officer Larkin of Ward Two Is Suspended.

The Beats of Others Are Changed.

Hand of New Mayor Felt in the Department.

There was a little shake up in the Police Department at roll call Monday night. At that time Chief Hayden read an order making the following transfers in routes. Officer Murray who has been on duty in City Square was sent to the Wollaston beat. Officer Ferguson from Wollaston to the beat at Brewers Corner and Officer Bradley from Brewers corner to the beat in City Square.

The most important change was the announcement that Officer John T. Larkin who has been on duty at the Quincy Point beat had been suspended. George A. Cahill a special officer, was put on duty on Officer Larkin's beat.

Chief Hayden is silent as to why Officer Larkin has been suspended, but following so closely upon the open letter of Henry H. Faxon published in last Saturday's Ledger and coupled with the fact that there have been many rumors in regard to certain alleged acts of Officer Larkin at the time of the gathering last December in Keating's hall, it is very evident that these had something to do with it.

It is probable however, that charges have been preferred against Officer Larkin, and that he has been suspended pending a hearing which he can demand under the civil service rules.

Behind all of these changes the hand of Mayor Bryant is seen, and it is very evident that he intends to correct some of the evils in the several departments, and keep after the heads of departments with a sharp stick until these evils are remedied.

The newspaper men have interviewed Henry H. Faxon on the shake-up, who said: "Mayor Bryant is the first Mayor who dared to criticise the Police department in his inaugural address, and he is the first mayor who dared to make his word good in this respect.

"Many members of the police force are inefficient and have been so for a long time. I have known of it and so did the Chief of Police, but nothing has been done before. In the various buildings this city which I own there have been over 400 panes of glass broken, and nothing has ever been accomplished by the police in apprehending the guilty parties, although I have complained time and time again.

"They seem to think that the enforcement of the liquor laws belongs to me, and I give them all the help I can, but I am not going to do police duty free gratis for officers who are paid for the work by the city. I annually pay over $12,000 to the city in taxes and betterments and I am entitled to some protection.

"I have often written to the present Chief, giving him information about liquor selling, but he has taken no notice of my suggestions."

W. E. Simmons, President.

Vice-president, Walter S. Pinkham.

Secretary, Edward W. Bowker.
Executive Committee, Walter E. Simmons, Frank W. White, Walter O. Parker, Edward W. Bowker, George W. Glover, Edmund S. Taylor, Frank W. Coe and Arthur Stanley.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Harry B. Smith's musical comedy, "The Liberty Belles," made an instantaneous hit at the Hollis Street Theatre last week and the crowded houses testified in an unmistakable manner to the merit of this dainty and thoroughly entertaining little play. It came to the Hollis with the prestige of metropolitan success and now that Boston has placed its stamp of approval upon Mr. Smith's latest effort the Hollis Street Theatre will no doubt be crowded to the doors at every performance. The presentation of this bright skit, abounds in the funniest of situations, charming music, pleasing dancing numbers, and unique and clever bits of vaudeville. The comedy roles are well taken care of by Harry Gilfoil, whose clever mimicry and imitations of natural and artificial sounds is one of the hits of the show; John Slavin, a diminutive, but clever comedian; dashing Harry Davenport, the handsome Jack Everleigh of the company, and J. C. Marlowe, who as the bluff old sea captain, Hiram Ketcham, contributes several good songs. While the comedy roles are all in capable hands, it is the girls who make the show, and there is an array of beauty in "The Liberty Belles" seldom seen in one organization. They all have parts and all distinguish themselves during the action of the comedy. This is the last week of this charming little comedy.

If troubled with a weak digestion, belching, sour stomach, or if you feel dull after eating, try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. All druggists.

NURSERY NOTES.

A child should never be taught that he is bad.

The sunniest and best room in the house is not too good for the child.

Extract of quassia, which is bitter, rubbed on the finger tips, will prevent a child biting its nails.

The baby should be encouraged to stretch its limbs and crawl about, but not to walk too soon, in order to strengthen it and promote circulation.

If a child is seen to have a little cold, rub the chest with sweet oil morning and evening. Warm the hand and apply about a teaspoonful of the oil, rubbing for five minutes.

The mother should regard any discharge from the child's ear as a danger signal. Consult a doctor at once, as the discharge sometimes arises from an abscess which may affect the brain.

No sweeping should be done while the children are in the room. If, however, because of sickness, this is necessary, dust the furniture and floor with a moist cloth and use a carpet sweeper instead of a broom.

An infant should not be given any food containing starch until it cuts its teeth. Starchy foods include corn, flour, tapioca, sago, rice, potatoes, etc. An infant is not old enough to digest any of these until its teeth are cut.

Is It Worth While After All?

"We pushed her, and God knows how we have suffered for our mistake."

"She graduated, but she never recovered, and in two years we had no daughter."

"I thought more of a diploma than I did of my child. Now I have only the diploma."

"Everything that love and skill could suggest was done, but our eyes had been opened too late."

"'Promotion! Promotion!' was our cry. Then our little girl was promoted, but not in the way we hoped."

"We placed an education above health, and the life of a promising boy of eighteen is the price we paid for our mistake."

"It was music and painting added to a tired brain. Now our house is still, a monument to our thoughtlessness."

"What would not my husband and I give of our means today if we could undo the past and bring our only child back! That is the hardest part to bear—the feeling of what we might have done. From the housetops would we cry out to parents to take care!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Sensitive Children.

The relations between parents and their children are too sacred, too intimate and personal to be subject to the supervision of others. Let the young mother study good models and seek for light and knowledge wherever she may find them, but let her be chary of inviting assistance from any outsider, however wise that person may be, in the matter of governing her children. She has no right to subject them to the pain and mortification of submitting to an authority which is spurious and unnatural. A child suffers extremely from any exposing of his weak points and often feels a dumb, bitter shame at being openly talked over, but nobody suspects this because he has no capacity to describe his sensations.—Florence Hull Winterburn in Woman's Home Companion.

The Woman of Forty.

It was Emerson who discovered that the woman of thirty is more fascinating than the girl of twenty. Now The Lady's Pictorial puts the zenith of feminine charm a decade later, declaring that the apple of discord is due to the woman of forty. It is an interesting profession of faith, and one wonders whether the general acceptance of it by mankind has anything to do with that increasing tendency to defer marriage till late in life which modern philosophers have often noticed and sometimes deplored.—London Graphic.

Women and Music.

We all know with what enthusiastic, even religious, devotion women have loved music in all ages and particularly in this age. One may almost say music would have perished but for the active sympathy of women for the art and its artists, and we all know, further, what brilliant heights of excellence have been attained by women as executive musicians, both in vocal and instrumental kinds, yet no woman has ever yet composed any great music.—Lippincott's Magazine.

As silver wire is only useful, but not ornamental, in hanging pictures and photographs, why not use ribbons? A girl who is very fond of blue has her little gabled room papered in pale blue cartridge paper, with window seat and hangings of blue denim. All her pictures and photographs, which are mostly framed in black, hang from the white picture rod by blue ribbons of baby width, giving her room a dainty touch of originality.

In Search of Realism.

The management of a ladies' club in London after advertising for a chef received an application from an individual who said he required no wages. The committee was curious to know the reason for so disinterested a proposal and learned that the candidate was a writer who desired to produce a book on women's clubs. The committee promptly rejected his offer and engaged a female cook.—Brussels Independence.

THE SCHOOL LOT.

Has a Mistake Been Made in Ward Two?

City Council Asked to Reconsider.

Claim that Packard Lot is Better Adapted and Cheaper.

The building of a new school-house at Quincy Point may be further delayed this year, by the filing of a petition in favor of the Packard lot, so-called. Many supposed the location was settled early last year when the City Council voted $6,500 for the purchase of the Hersey, Baxter and Chamberlin lots to enlarge the present Washington school lot. There was quite a difference of opinion at the time, but the preponderance of opinion at Quincy Point seemed to be in favor of the old location and the City Council yielded to local wishes.

In addition to the petition, Col. A. B. Packard in a circular letter renews the offer to sell his lot of 55,462 square feet, bounded by streets on three sides, for $5,000 about nine cents per square foot.

The claim is made that the present school lot is low; that it would be expensive to fill, grade and drain; that it is not central, and further, that it is near noisy manufacturing plants. Again, that it will not be satisfactory unless enlarged by the purchase of the Redding lot.

The following figures are presented by Mr. Packard in favor of his lot:

To resume, if the City built on the lot on Washington Court, a poor location, it will at some future time buy
the Redding land,	$ 5,000.00
The old school property,	5,000.00
Land of Hersey, Baxter and Chamberlin,	6,488.00
Grading, filling and drainage,	1,000.00
	$17,488.00
When it can get a better place for	5,000.00
A saving to the City of	$12,488.00

Clan McGregor Installation.

The officers of Clan McGregor, O. S. C., were installed at Doble's hall on Monday evening. Grand Chief Haliday of Hyde Park, and staff of Grand Officers were present to perform the ceremonies.

Only two changes were made in the various officers, Clansman Francis Morrison was seated as Chief and Alexander D. Booth as second officer. After the installation the Clan partook of a sumptuous repast, which was followed by an entertainment of songs, speeches, fancy step dancing and readings, by James Marr, James Orr, William Elrick, John Bisset, Alexander McKee, John Clark, John Gauld and James Hector. The speakers were Grand Chief Haliday, Grand Chaplain James Drummond, Grand Secretary George Scott and Royal Secretary Peter Kerr.

The Clan is in a most prosperous condition numerically and financially. The retiring Chief, Robert Findlay, was highly complimented on his successful guidance of the Clan during his term of office.

New Church Officers.

ADVICE FROM A WIFE.

Some Forceful "Don'ts" For Girls Old Enough to Marry.

Don't marry a man to reform him. If he needs to reform and does not before marriage it is a fallacious hope to expect to change him after.

Don't marry a man who has only his love to recommend him. There are other qualities requisite in husbands quite as important as this.

Don't marry a man because you mistake sympathy for love. It is a thousand times better for both that the "yes" should be changed into "no" before the wedding day unless you truly love him. Sympathy is a poor foundation for marriage.

Don't marry a man unless he has a head as well as a heart. Household expenses are not met with anything except a bank account.

Don't marry a man for a home. You deserve to be unhappy if you do, and you usually will be. There are many more honorable ways by which a self respecting woman can accomplish this end.

Don't marry for looks. A good looking man is no more able to provide for the necessities of life for his family than any other man and frequently less able because of his vanity.

Don't say "yes" to your first proposal unless you are sure of yourself. Never to receive another proposal is not the worst fate that can befall a girl. There are many old maids who are happier than some wives.

Don't marry for spite or out of pique or because he says he can't live without you. But do not remain unmarried if the man you love is good, brave and industrious, even though he be poor as the proverbial church mouse, should he ask you to be his wife. The right sort of wife can exert wonderful influence for good or failure over her husband. By a gracious general manner she can win hosts of friends for him and help him along in nearly every walk of life on the road to success and prosperity. The right sort of wife stands by her husband when business and other troubles depress and worry him. She infuses hope into him and points the way to a new start, however small. She works with and for him, helps him plan and save and provide for the future and is indeed a helpmate, chum and wife all in one, and when so married her life is ideally happy.—Mrs. George Nelson in American Queen.

Sleeping Apartments.

Eight hours out of the twenty-four, one-third of every day, are spent in sleep. Twenty years of absolute unconsciousness in an average human life! How much the usefulness and extent of that life are determined by the quality of the air breathed while asleep who shall say?

Twenty years of soft, unconscious respiration, not the vigorous breathing of active consciousness; twenty years of semiasphyxiation, of repeated inhalations of one's own effete, tainted breath mingled perhaps with that of another; twenty years of carbonic acid poison or twenty years of life giving ozone—which will you choose? Think of it every night when you go to bed. "Close bedrooms," says Dr. Hall, "make the graves of thousands."

There is a tradition to the effect that night air is injurious. What air can you have at night but night air? No noxious gases arising from the earth's surface at night when there is no sunlight to dissipate then are half so deadly as the emanatons from the body.

If air were taxed, we should probably use it more lavishly to get our money's worth; but, being free, we are content to take it as we do some medicines, in homeopathic doses.

Monogram Sofa Pillows.

So much money has been expended on sofa cushions, so much beautiful embroidery and handsone brocade have been used and wasted, that it is now the chic thing to have sofa cushions covered in a perfectly plain double square of denim or twilled cotton material. The edges are either bordered with silk or velvet ribbon or bound with bands of the denim. The fad is to work your crest in very large, coarse letters. The embroidery may take up nearly the entire front of the cushion, leaving just space for a scroll pattern or vine in the same rough crewel stitch for a border. Simple denim and linen covers have quite taken the place of silks, satins and brocades.

Brass and Copper.

Brass and copper articles, such as fenders, fire irons, etc., should be rubbed with a little sweet oil and finely powdered rottenstone, then polished with a leather. If, however, they are in a very bad state, the following paste should be used: One ounce oxalic acid, six ounces rottenstone, half ounce gum arabic, made into a little paste with one ounce sweet oil and a little water. Rub on with a piece of flannel, then polish with a soft cloth and a leather.

The Hall of the Present.

The tendency of the present day is to treat the hall not as a hall, but as a sitting room, with easy chairs, tables, lamps, bookcases and all the appointments of a library, an arrangement which has undoubtedly a certain picturesqueness and originated when in the reaction against the discomfort and ugliness of forty or fifty years ago attention was turned to the old colonial and English houses.

Table Decoration.

Four rather small fern dishes filled with growing ferns are sometimes used to outline the center square of the dinner board, the actual center being occupied by a slender, rather tall glass vase, which may hold any flower preferred, two or three stems with foliage being sufficient.

We Grow Old In Pieces.

The general impression is that the body grows old uniformly. From birth till the age of twenty-five it grows in size and weight, from twenty-five to fifty it remains stationary, and from that period it decays. Observations of expert physiologists show us that this impression is not a correct one.

Each organ begins to age independently, each has its period for the change, and these periods differ with the various organs and do not take place coincidently, as we may have supposed. The body attains its greatest size during the third decade and remains in about the same condition during the fourth and fifth decades, that is true, but the brain reaches its greatest size in the second decade, the kidneys reach their maximum size during the third decade, the muscles, skeleton and intestines during the fifth, the heart and lungs in the eighth decade.

Increase or decrease in the size or weight of the body consequently is not due to simultaneous increase or decrease in all its parts.

The Shark Is a Slow Swimmer.

One ill service nature has done the shark—namely, that of placing a triangular fin on his back which acts as a danger signal and gives warning of his approach. Happily the shark has not been gifted with sufficient sagacity to be aware of this peculiarity, for had he been so he would unquestionably abandon his habit of swimming close to the surface of the water and would in that case be enabled to approach his victim unobserved. The shark is a slow swimmer for his size and strength.

Byron observes, "As darts the dolphin from the shark." But Byron was a poet and does not appear to have been a close observer of the habits of inhabitants of the water, or he would have known that a shark would have no more chance of catching a dolphin than a sheep would of overhauling a hare. A shark will keep up with a s- ling ship, but it is as much as it can do to follow in the wake of a fast steamer, and a torpedo boat would be able to give it points.

The Springbok.

A peculiarity of that most beautiful of South African antelopes the springbok is that it always leaps over human tracks. It is at once exceedingly shy and marvelously active, and the reason for this strange antic is its intense suspicion of any possible enemies, among whom it has come to recognize man as the most dangerous.

It is not only with human tracks that the springbok goes through this performance, for it does the same with the tracks of lions or even when it gets wind of a lion. The leap is exceedingly graceful, and the animal covers from twelve to fifteen feet at each bound. It drops on all four feet at once and immediately rises again, making a clear spring without any run.

Its usual gait when not pursued is a light springy trot. The springbok usually travels with its nose to the ground, as if constantly on the lookout for the scent of enemies.

Pueblos and the Compass.

Among the Pueblo Indians six points of the compass are recognized, and each has its color. North is yellow, west is blue, south is red, east is white, the upper regions are many colored and the lower regions are black. All the prey gods are represented by their images in these six divisions.

For example, there is the yellow mountain lion of the north, the blue mountain lion of the west, the red mountain of the south, and so on. Likewise it is with the other beasts, and thus a very considerable number of deities is formed. All of them must receive worshipful attention lest they get angry and revenge themselves for the neglect.

Where Amber Is Found.

The largest quantity of amber is found on the southern shore of the Baltic between Memel and Konigsberg, where it is cast up by the action of the ground swell after the northerly gales. It is also found on the coast of Sicily, on the shores of the Adriatic, on the English beach of Norfolk and Suffolk and at Cape Sable in Maryland. Mining for amber in beds of brown lignite or wood coal is carried on in Prussia, and it is found in excavations all over Europe.

The Aromatic Clove Tree.

A peculiarity of the clove tree is that every part of it is aromatic, though the greatest strength is in the bud. Besides the buds, the stems are gathered and form an article of commerce commanding one-fifth the price of cloves and having about the same percentage of strength. To this is due the fact that ground cloves can be purchased in the home market at a lower price than whole cloves.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Nothing that cannot be washed should be used about a bed.

Never use heavy bedclothes. Weight and warmth are not synonymous.

Wash matting in water in which bran has been boiled and dry it well with a cloth to cleanse it.

Mirrors which are fly specked should be washed in cold water and then polished with a chamois leather dipped in alcohol.

White china, if occasionally washed in water to which a little blue has been added, will preserve its pure color for a much longer time.

In case a leaky roof has caused stains on the ceiling, try painting them over with the white lead paint you can buy at an art store.

A solution of soda and water applied with a whiskbroom kept for the purpose will remove the brown streaks made by the sediment in the dripping water in bathroom bowls.

To preserve blankets that are badly worn patch all holes too large to darn; then cover with cheesecloth and tack with colored yarn or worsted. Buttonhole with the yarn across the ends.

To make oilcloth last well lay sawdust evenly over the floor before putting down oilcloth, for thus will the sound of walking be deadened and the oilcloth will last much longer than if it were laid on the boards.

Colored Stockings Again.

When will fashion return to the white or gray stocking of undyed wool? Doctors since colored stockings have become the mode have been reaping a golden harvest from the leg maladies of ladies. Violent shooting pains, weakness and numbness, swollen joints, muscular atrophy, false or nervous rheumatism or gouty rheumatism are among the ailments attributed to colored stockings. It was remarked by a Vienna doctor that the wearers of silk stockings suffered as well from vertigo and retching. He thought of having the stockings analyzed and found they were loaded with a preparation of lead, which the skin absorbed. His patient returned to the old fashioned white stockings and has been improving since she did so. This case has made a noise in Paris, and let us hope it will dethrone the present mode. Most dyed stockings are poisonous. Those beautiful aniline red ones into which the nether limbs of children are thrust contain arsenic. Lavender stockings derive their beautiful tint from a preparation of mercury.—Paris Letter in London News.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

PANAMA TITLE IS CLEAR

Nothing to Prevent Its Valid Transfer to Us

LAMPRE AT A HEARING

Answers Questions Concerning Interest of Stockholders of Old Panama Canal Company In Pending Transaction—All Obstacles Swept Away

Washington, Jan. 14.—Admiral Walker, chairman of the isthmian canal commission, says that its supplementary report on the Panama route will probably be completed within a month. Admiral Walker adds the statement that all reports that the French Panama Canal company will be unable to convey a clear title to the Panama concession with full rights and privileges are unwarranted. There is no doubt, he declares, that the Panama concession is as good as it ever was and that there is nothing in the way of its valid transfer to this government should congress decide to accept the offer of the French company.

At the hearing before the inter-oceanic canal committee yesterday Senator Morgan questioned M. Lampre especially concerning the interest of the stockholders of the old Panama Canal company in the pending transaction. M. Lampre stated that under the agreement of the new company with the old company, the stockholders of the latter concern would receive 60 percent of the proceeds of the sale. He said that under the original subscription agreement of the old company, the stockholders had been entitled to interest amounting to 5 percent per annum on their subscription even while the canal was under course of construction, but that the interest had been suspended when the old company went into liquidation. He also said that an agreement had been reached with the liquidator, as the representative of the old company, that in case of the sale of the property he should appoint two arbitrators while the new company appointed two, these four to select the fifth, and that all five should unite in making an equitable distribution of the proceeds of the sale.

He contended that under the French law the new company had a perfect right to make the transfer, notwithstanding the interest of the old company. "I wish," he said, "to make this perfectly clear, and want the committee to understand that the new company is entitled to make a clear and perfect transfer to the United States. It would be legitimate to make the transfer without the interference of the old company, but to make the way perfectly clear and to prevent any possible entanglement we made an agreement with the liquidators of the old canal company to the effect that we should have absolute authority to deal directly with the government of the United States.

"Did you make a similar arrangement with the liquidator of the bondholders?" asked Senator Morgan.

In response to this inquiry M. Lampre said: "He did not appear in the agreement, but he gave the liquidator of the old company authority to enter into the agreement."

Senator Morgan: "Could the new company sell the property and put the proceeds in its pocket and not share them with the old company?"

M. Lampre: "Yes, it could do so under the authority of the stockholders' meeting."

Senator Morgan: "Then the transaction between the two canal companies must have been a sale to the new company without reference to the bonds and the stock held by the old company?"

M. Lampre: "Yes, it was a sale, but one of the conditions of the transaction was that we should give 60 percent of the proceeds to the old company."

M. Lampre said that of the 70,000 shares of stock of the Panama Railroad company, the new Panama Canal company owns 68,534 and that the railroad company had last year paid dividends to the canal company amounting to 400,000 francs. He said, however, he knew nothing about the details of the management of the railroad company.

"We believe that, according to American ideas of justice, every man is entitled to a fair hearing, whatever his views may be, and that without such hearing of all parties interested no just and intelligent judgment can be rendered by the people of this country, with whom must rest the ultimate decision of the question.

"For these reasons we earnestly ask that General Aguinaldo, Senor Mabini and such others as may be thought best be brought to this country, and given a full and free hearing before your honorable body and may have ample opportunity to set forth the aspirations of their countrymen and all the facts of the situation within their knowledge."

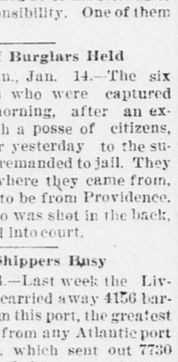
BAD BABIES

Are often only hungry babies. They cry and fret because they are ill-fed. The healthy mother is sure to have good babies; babies that coo and sleep and grow. Mothers who use Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, are generally healthy and happy, and have healthy, happy children. "Favorite Prescription" prevents nausea, soothes the nerves, promotes the appetite and causes sleep to be sound and refreshing. It gives a great physical vigor and muscular elasticity so that the baby's advent is practically painless. It is the best tonic for nursing mothers, restoring strength and promoting an abundant flow of nutritive secretions.



"I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as one of the best medicines for women," writes Mrs. Mary Murdock, Murdock, of 1045 Woodard Ave., Topeka, Kan. "I sider it the best medicine made. I know it has no equal. I am the mother of ten children and only one living—the tenth one. She is one year old and is as well and hearty as can be. She is a beauty. Of my other babies, one lived to be one year old, but she was always feeble. I tried different doctors, but none of them could tell me what my trouble was. They said I was well and strong. I was examined by surgeons but they found nothing wrong, and they were puzzled to know what my trouble was. I did not know what to do, so I thought this time I would try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I took it the entire nine months and now have a fine baby girl, and I cannot praise your medicine enough for the good it did me."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are easy and pleasant to take. A most effective laxative.

POPULARITY WANING

Rosebery's Bid For Leadership of Liberals Not Well Received

London, Jan. 14.—The inaugural meeting of the London Liberal association last night had been awaited with great interest, principally because it was probable that light would be thrown upon the future relations between Lord Rosebery and the Liberal party. Taken as a whole, the demonstration could hardly be taken as an enthusiastic welcome to Lord Rosebery's reappearance in public life.

Lord Rosebery was not present at the meeting, at which Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Liberal leader in the house of commons, and Earl Spencer were the principal speakers. The speech of Campbell-Bannerman clearly indicated that if Lord Rosebery returned to the Liberal fold he must come unreservedly and in full accord with the present policy of the Liberal party.

St. James hall was crowded and thousands of persons were turned away from the doors. Pamphlets denouncing Lord Rosebery as a traitor to the party were thrown broadcast from the galleries. The reading of Lord Rosebery's letter of regret was received with mingled cheers, hoots and hisses, the latter predominating. The letter was non-committal. In it Lord Rosebery said he hoped that the meeting would aim to secure the unity of "common sense Liberalism," to which the writer hoped he had contributed by his recent speech at Chesterfield. This statement was received with riotous expressions of disapproval and the great audience almost prevented the conclusion of the reading of Lord Rosebery's letter.

Following this episode, Campbell-Bannerman commenced his speech. Amid wild interruptions, the speaker said he welcomed Lord Rosebery's return to public life. But, in the next breath, he warned his hearers that if they expected to have a strong Liberal party in the house of commons it must be a party of Liberals. He expressed the hope that the Liberal party would have his lordship's powerful co-operation on the subject of the restoration of peace.

A Relic of Pere Marquette

Toledo, Jan. 14.—Evidence was found yesterday that proves almost beyond a doubt that the crucifix found at Frankfort, Mich., last summer by workmen excavating for the foundation for a summer hotel there was the property of Father Pere Marquette, the famous Indian missionary. The rust was cleaned from its pedestal yesterday and the date 1664 was found on one side, while on the opposite side was found the inscription "M. and C., Quebec." Marquette left Quebec for upper Michigan in 1668 and was buried at Frankfort.

Strikes Are Costly Affairs

Indianapolis, Jan. 14.—The auditing board of the United Mine Workers of America met here yesterday to examine the annual report of Secretary and Treasurer Wilson. The finances of the order, the report will show, are in good shape, notwithstanding heavy drains made on the treasury by strikes during the year. The strikes, it is said, have cost the organization more than $500,000. The secretary-treasurer handles funds amounting annually to between $300,000 and $400,000.

Mrs. Dennis has manifested anxiety that no suspicion be cast upon any of her servants or employes in connection with the assault.

Cabinet Rumors Revived

Washington, Jan. 14.—Governor Crane of Massachusetts was at the White House yesterday and later went to the navy department. His appearance in the city attracted wide attention among the political gossips, and set afloat a fresh rumor of his destination for the cabinet. To all who questioned him, however, he gave a uniform answer that his present visit had nothing to do with the acceptance of a portfolio.

Mobile, Ala., Jan 14.—Schooner Gage H. Phillips, Captain Smith, master, of Gloucester, Mass., from Rockport for New York, with stone paving blocks, has made this port after a tempestuous voyage since Nov 8. A Japanese Superstition.

Writing exhaustively of dragon flies Lafcadio Hearn says in his book, "A Japanese Miscellany," of "the dragon fly of the dead:"

"Unlike the equally weird name 'yurei-tombo, or 'ghost dragon fly,' the term shroai-tombo does not refer to the appearance of the insect, but to the strange belief that certain dragon flies are ridden by the dead, used as winged steeds.

"From the morning of the thirteenth to the midnight of the fifteenth day of the old seventh month—the time of the festival of the Bon—the dragon flies are said to carry the hotoke-sama, the august spirits of the ancestors, who then revisit their former homes. Therefore, during the Buddhist 'All Souls' children are forbidden to molest any dragon flies, especially dragon flies that may happen to enter the family dwelling.

"This supposed relation of dragon flies to the supernatural world helps to explain an old folk saying, still current in some provinces, to the effect that the child who catches dragon flies will never 'obtain knowledge.'"

How Frederick Stopped Dueling.

When Frederick the Great ascended the Prussian throne, fatal duels among officers were of daily occurrence. He resolved to put an end to the practice, and he did—for a time; as long as he reigned, in fact. He issued an edict that any officer fighting a duel and surviving would be shot or hanged.

Two officers appealed to him to be allowed to try to slay each other. Granted on two conditions, that he (the king) should chose the ground and be present at the encounter. Accepted.

Frederick chose the ground, attended the "meet" and took his seat behind the fine new gibbet he had erected in honor of the occasion. The combatants approached his majesty, saw the gibbet, became puzzled and embarrassed.

"What may this mean, your gracious majesty?" they ventured to ask.

"It means this," was the suave reply—"that the man who survives will be hanged as high as Haman on that gibbet."

There was no duel.—Pall Mall Gazette.

People Who Did Not Kill.

The inhabitants of the Canary islands, the Guanches, were, it is supposed, but the mountain shepherds of a submerged world. Though so strong physically, the Guanches were nevertheless a very gentle race. They rarely made war on one another, and when the Europeans fell into their hands they did not kill them, but sent them to tend sheep in the mountains. So tame were the birds in this happy land that when the Spaniards first landed they came and fed out of their hands.

To kill an animal degraded a man. The butcher was a reprieved criminal and outcast and lived apart, he and his assistants being supported by the state. No woman was allowed to approach the shambles, and in such horror was killing held by these giants that no man could be ennobled until he had publicly declared that he had not been guilty of killing any animal, not even a goat. Their standard of morality was high. Robbery was almost unknown among them.

Maternal Love of the Whale.

No other member of the animal kingdom displays more maternal affection than the whale, especially if its calf is harpooned. The harpooner never throws his harpoon into the little one with the the intention of killing it, for if this is done the mother will instantly forsake it. If alive and struggling, however, the dam can be easily enticed toward the boat to meet its fate. Knowing this, the whale fishermen always strike a calf if possible and thus often make captures that could not be effected under other circumstances.

As soon as the dam becomes aware of the snaring of her young she rushes toward it, encourages it to swim away and even assists it by taking it under her fin. She seems to lose all regard for her own safety and boldly attacks the boat containing the whalemen or circles about it totally regardless of the harpoons that are hurled at her and enter her flesh.

Pranks of Nature.

A shower of a remarkable character occurred in Sicily on April 24, 1781. On the morning of that day every exposed place within an extensive district was found covered with a gray water which, being evaporated, left a deposit nearly a quarter of an inch in thickness. It was determined that this solid matter must have come from Mount Etna. It is certain that vast quantities of solid substances are constantly afloat in the atmosphere. The sunsets all over the world are redder to this day on account of the dust from the mighty eruption in the strait of Sunda years ago, which has not yet entirely settled.

Mme. Kaissavow, who died lately in St. Petersburg, has left behind an immense library of unique character. It includes nearly 18,000 volumes, and every work is the product of a female author. No book from a masculine pen was permitted to "unsex" the shelves.

Mrs. J. H. Fall, a stepdaughter of President James K. Polk, has sold her stepfather's private papers to the Chicago Historical society. The collection includes his diaries in his own handwriting, covering a period of twenty-one years in American history.

Mrs. Leslie M. Shaw, wife of the prospective secretary of the treasury, is undismayed by a statement that Secretary Gage has had to spend $100,000 more than his salary on account of his social obligations. She says in an interview that $5,000 extra ought to be enough and adds, "I guess we can stand that for awhile."

HALF A MILLION LOSS

Big Building at Manchester Destroyed by Fire

RUINED IN LESS THAN HOUR

Was Considered the Finest Structure In New England North of Boston—Nearby Property Narrowly Escaped Destruction From Spread of Flame

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 15.—The destruction of the Kennard, a granite structure considered to be the finest business office block in New England north of Boston, last night, proved to be the worst fire here for many years, the total loss being $500,000. Beside the Kennard, the Smyth block was practically ruined, and considerable damage was done to the home of the Derryfield club, in the rear of the Kennard. In the Smyth block were the Park theatre, occupied last night by J. I. Little's dramatic company, presenting, "The World," and two banks.

The Kennard was totally burned, a few piles of masonry alone rising upon the site of what was once a magnificent granite structure six stories in height. The fire started in this block about 9 o'clock, on the first floor, in the clothing store of Allen & Kimball. The first warning that the occupants of the Kennard had was an explosion that resounded through the city. The firemen made a great effort to stop the fire on the first floor, but the flames had got between the floors, and the structure seemed to break out in flames in all parts. At the time the board of trade was in session, and the moment the explosion was heard a great rush for the exits was made. Everyone got out safe. Of the scores of occupants of the Kennard in business hours there were quite a number of tenants in their offices last night, and some of these had very exciting experiences before they got through the smoke in the halls and reached the sidewalks in safety.

As soon as the firemen realized that the fire was beyond their control Concord and Nashua were asked to send assistance. In the meantime the flames had spread from the first floor up through the other floors and in 45 minutes had burst through the roof over the centre of the structure. From that moment the block was doomed and soon after 11 o'clock the walls began to fall.

The flames jumped Water street and set fire to the Smyth block, wherein the Park theatre is situated. The flames caught on the hood on top of the block, which serves as a covering for the theatre stage. The block was saved and the fire damage is confined to the theatre stage.

When one of the rear walls of the Kennard fell the roof of the extension of the Derryfield club was ignited, but the firemen put out this blaze which, however, did about $10,000 damage. All the stores facing the Kennard block on Elm street had more or less damage, as the heat broke the plate glass windows and the smoke filled the buildings.

The direct cause of the fire is not known, but it is thought to have started from new electrical connections which had been made in Allen & Kimball's store on Monday.

The Kennard block was built in 1892 and cost $250,000. At an early hour this morning it was impossible to ascertain the individual losses of the occupants of the Kennard, but it was placed at from $150,000 to $200,000.

The loss on the block is total and the damage to the Smyth block will probably be from $10,000 to $15,000, while miscellaneous damage to stores and the Derryfield clubhouse will reach $10,000. Several of the finest law libraries in the state were destroyed and the business houses occupying the first floor of the Kennard were among the largest in the city.

Short Three Thousand Men

Washington, Jan. 15.—Rear Admiral Crowninshield, chief of the bureau of navigation, who was before the house naval committee yesterday, pointed out the urgent necessity for an increase in men and officers in order that the new ships may be properly manned. He advocates an increase of at least 3000 in the enlisted force.

The New Chwang Disturbances

Pekin, Jan. 15.—Paul Lessar, Russian minister to China, has arranged for telegraphic communication between Minister Conger and the consul of the United States at New Chwang. The consul at New Chwang reports that the Russians there are arresting American naval officers and sailors on groundless charges.

Allison and Dolliver Renominated

WIPED OFF THE SLATE

Corn King Phillips Caught "Long" on Millions of Bushels of Grain

Chicago, Jan. 15.—There was a tumult yesterday in the grain pits. For a time a panic of depression threatened everything. All other news was subordinated to the failure of George H. Phillips to advance margins on his deals and consequent unloading of many million bushels of cereals on the already weakening markets. After the early wide and rapid fluctuations and a heavily short market had absorbed the Phillips stuff the markets quieted and gradually came under usual influences.

Jacob Ringer, attorney for Mr. Phillips, has given out a statement saying that his client has been practically wiped off the financial slate. "He is 'broke,'" said Mr. Ringer. "Men whom he worsted in former deals went after him and they 'got' him."

Mr. Phillips gave out a statement in part as follows: "The amount involved in my trouble is about $60,000. My customers had their trades well margined and if the trades closed out bring a fair price I can meet my obligations. I was 'long' about 3,200,000 rye, 5,000,000 wheat and 600,000 corn and oats. I was for the moment unprepared, and the only alternative left was to close out. I have no excuse to offer and no complaint to make."

Omaha, Jan. 15.—The branches of George H. Phillips in this city and Council Bluffs, Des Moines and Sioux City were closed yesterday as a result of the embarrassment of the Chicago house.

Whites Must Wake Up

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 15.—Governor Aycock, in addressing the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce last night upon the subject of education, urged the importance of educating the white children of the state since the adoption of the constitutional amendment disfranchising illiterates. Men who come of age after 1908 cannot vote unless they are able to read and write, and the governor insists that the state do all in its power to fit every boy for the test. The negroes, he said, have realized the fact that they cannot vote if illiterate and they are busily preparing themselves for the educational test. The white boy must not be left behind, he said.

Important Witness Disappears

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 15.—The feature yesterday in the trial of James Howard, an alleged Goebel suspect, was the disappearance of Wesley Whittaker, a Clay county barber, who came here Monday night to testify for the commonwealth. Whittaker spent the night here, but left on an early mourning train yesterday and efforts to locate him have been unsuccessful. The prosecution claims that Whittaker's disappearance is due to intimidation and it is said that he went to Indiana.

From Booth to Dowie

London, Jan. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Booth-Clibborn recently demanded of General Booth the right to preach the Dowie doctrines of faith healing while remaining in the Salvation army. This demand was refused by General Booth, who sent his most trusted lieutenant to win them back, but in vain. The formal resignations of Mr. and Mrs. Booth-Clibborn have reached the London headquarters of the Salvation army.

Wrongful Arrest

Washington, Jan. 15.—The police have released Richard Cole, who was arrested because of a belief that he might know something about the mysterious assault on Mrs. Ada G. Dennis. His arrest was based on statements of a person who saw a man in the immediate vicinity on the night of the assault. Investigation failed to show that Cole was the person he saw.

Court of Inquiry Ordered

Washington, Jan. 15.—Secretary Long has ordered a court of inquiry to inquire into the circumstances connected with the grounding of the United States training ship Hartford, Commander Reeder, in New London harbor, on Jan. 8, and also of the collision of that vessel with a barge on the following day in the same harbor.

Many Negroes Blown Up

Relic of the Walla Walla

Aberdeen, Wash., Jan. 15.—A raft of the ill-fated steamer Walla Walla was brought into port yesterday by the steamer Melville Dollar. The raft was picked up on the 9th, 75 miles from the scene of the disaster. On the raft were found a coat, jacket, two life belts, and a felt hat.

Sign of Big Wreck

Quintina, Tex., Jan. 15.—Schooner Olga put in here yesterday to escape the gale and she reports that off Matagorda island dead cattle and mules were strewn about for a distance of 30 miles. It is believed that some big vessel with cattle has foundered.

Effort to Abolish Duelling

Berlin, Jan. 15.—An anti-duelling league has been organzed at Cassel. The league intends to uphold Emperor William in his views on duelling by vigorous social agitation to make the practice socially unpopular.

CHINESE EYES OPENED

To the Necessity of Being Friendly to Foreigners

MODERNIZATION OF COURT

Has Not Yet Been Proven to Be More Than Skin Deep—Officials Making Up For Lost Time In Peddling Out Favors In Exchange For Lucre

Pekin, Jan. 15.—The first week of the rehabilitation of the Chinese court and of its resumption of authority at the capital has been a period of the most intense interest to all classes of Chinese and foreigners. But the week has hardly sufficed to furnish proofs from which deductions can be drawn regarding the policy of the empress dowager under the new conditions. That the empress dowager governs as absolutely as before the attempt to crush progress, and that she recognizes that foreign interests and opinions must be respected, are apparent. That considerations other than the fear inspired by the evidence of foreign dominance actuate her will continue to be questioned by the Chinese officials nearest the throne and by foreigners, unless time proves the contrary.

Two powers are gaining ascendancy in the council of the empress dowager. The first of these is Yuan Shi Kai, who is pro-foreign to the extent of appreciating the strength of foreign nations and the necessity for China's adoption of the instruments by which such strength was attained. The second power is Yung Lu, the imperial treasurer, who is the most influential among the advisers of the empress dowager. He is bitterly hostile to foreigners, but is temporarily impressed with the advisability of conciliating them. Yung Shi Kai, the governor of Chi Li province, having 10,000 or 12,000 of the best troops in China in and about the capital, is the personage the empress dowager must consider.

It has not yet appeared that the modernization of the court is more than skin deep. All the old methods of corruption and intrigue for office, the purchase of favors and bribery to secure audiences have been resumed with a vigor indicating that officialdom is trying to make up for lost time.

Two edicts, which are largely the result of the insistence of M. Beau, the French minister at Pekin, for the rights of the missionaries, appeared yesterday. The first edict admonishes all officials, in strong terms, to protect and maintain the rights of native Christians. The second edict dismisses a number of officials from office for complicity in the "Boxer" movement. Among the officials thus dismissed is the vice president of the censorate, whose name was on the black-list of the foreign ministers.

M. Beau will probably present his credentials at the same time the British, German, Russian and Japanese ministers present theirs. The Chinese foreign office has suggested that this ceremony shall take place on Sunday. Ernest Satow, the British representative, will suggest another day, believing that the Chinese should respect the customs of Christian nations in such matters. Audiences have frequently been held on Sundays heretofore, and no minister ever made any objection to this custom.

Foreigners and the Chinese reformers are strongly criticising the women of the various legations here for their acceptance of an invitation from the empress dowager to an audience. They believe the Chinese will construe this acceptance as a recognition of the claims of the empress dowager to supremacy. It is argued that the women, in question should sacrince their pleasure and the indulgence of their curiosity to public interests.

Made Nearly Thirty Miles an Hour

Berlin, Jan. 15.—Meteorologists Berson and Elias, who ascended in a balloon last Thursday to try for the long distance record, write from a village of southern Russia that they made 868 miles in 29 hours. Their travels were mostly above the clouds. The highest altitude reached was 16,250 feet. The aeronauts failed to beat the long distance record of 1116 miles.

Comment Pleases Germans

At a secret meeting at Pittsburg the price of wire and wire nails was advanced $1 a ton, to go into effect at once.

Albert Keep, for 15 years chairman of the board of directors of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway company, has resigned on account of ill health, and the office has practically been abolished.

An exploding lamp wrought $25,000 damage in the home of Kilby Page, a Boston business man. The fire was in the library, the contents practically being ruined.

A vigorous discussion of Christian Science from an unfavorable standpoint was the feature of the annual meeting at Concord, N. H., of the Center District Medical society.

The sum of $1000 has been given to Yale university by Samuel A. Galpin of New Haven to establish an annual Latin prize in memory of his father, Samuel H. Galpin, of the class of 1835.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

The annual report of the State Board of Education shows the taxation cost for land and buildings for public schools in 1901 was greater than the cost of support, but usually the cost of buildings is not included in the cost of education. The report says that the cost per pupil for land and buildings was $33.99, and for support $26.49 per pupil, a total of $60.48. It is probable that the cost in Quincy, both for buildings and support is fully up to the average of the State.

Therefore, anyone with one child in the public schools, who pays a tax of less than $60 per year, has no right to complain that he does not receive anything in return for taxes paid. The chances are that the average parent will not in twenty years pay enough in taxes to support one child through his school life of eight or twelve years. And many have two, three and four children in our public schools.

But taxation for schools is not levied per child or per pupil, and it is well that it is not, as education is of benefit to the whole community, and increases the wage-earning capacity of its people, and hence the prosperity of a city or State. But it is well for taxpayers, with children in the public schools, to remember that they are getting something in return for taxes. And all the money paid in taxes does not go for schools and school buildings, but for all departments — fire, police, streets, street lighting, health, poor, library, hospital, etc. etc.

The proposed amendment to the City Charter seems to be along general lines, and will leave it optional with the City Council and Mayor to determine by ordinance whether there shall be an assistant engineer from each ward, or one assistant, or two or any number. There should be no objection on the part of the city of Quincy at the State House to the proposed amendment. If there is any objection to abolishing the Assistant Engineers it should come in the City Council when the attempt is made to amend the Fire Department ordinance.

The members of the United Presbyterian church were quick to correct any impression that theirs was an unsocial church. By emphatic votes they "vetoed" the action of the church committee, and by an equally emphatic vote stood by their pastor and endorsed his good work.

The erection of a bathhouse at Nahant beach as proposed by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners, at a cost of $66,000 is in the nature of new business. Would it not be better to construct the parkway from Quincy Bay to the Blue Hills reservation for which it has already completed its takings?

Drift of Opinion.

☞The Massachusetts legislature is to get in line with the New York solons and the wise men at the national capital and have a canal problem all her own before long. The Brockton canal survey will be reported upon at an early date, and as the estimates for the work are said to be likely to strike anywhere between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000, it is evident that the issue will be sufficient to last a long while. Possibly the Plymouth county legislators will adopt Representative McCartney's scheme for the benefit of the unemployed and advocate a measure that will make it possible to set all idle men in the state at work on the big ditch.—Haverill Gazette.

Whist Party.

The Smart Set whist club met Monday evening with Miss Grace Batson of Quincy. Miss Abbie Barnes and Miss Gertrude Bent played as substitutes, owing to the illness of some of the members. Partners were chosen by the matching of ribbons tied about the neck of exquisite little paper butterflies of all colors. During the game a graphaphone entertained the young women with a variety of songs, marches and recitations. Prizes were won by Miss Gertrude Hall, first; Miss Emma Curtin, second; Miss Gertrude Warren, booby. The individual tables were then ornamented with red and green candles, and each guest found her napkin wrapped about a pink pink and tied with ribbon of the same colors. A souvenir calendar of Quincy, daintily colored, was laid beside each plate. It was a very merry party that boarded 11.12 train for Atlantic.

Runaway.

A lively runaway occurred at Wollaston Park Tuesday morning shortly after ten o'clock. The horse and sleigh came down Elm avenue from Quincy and when turning into Willow street the sleigh struck a tree, throwing the man and the contents into a snow bank. The horse became terrified and ran up Willow, carrying the sleigh behind him, and then dashed up Beach street towards Hancock street, where he was checked. In the mean time the owner of the horse started down the street in opposite direction. Evidently he was injured, for he found it hard to run fast. After some time the man, horse and sleigh came back. By all appearances little damage was done to the horse or sleigh, but the man went away well bruised.

Bank Directors.

The annual meeting of the Granite National bank was held Tuesday afternoon and these officers elected: Edwin W. Marsh, Theophilus King, James Thompson, Joseph H. Vogel, Clarence Burgin, Rupert F. Claflin, Delevare King, Russell A. Sears.

COLBERT RESIGNS.

The Well Known Captain of Co. K. Fifth Regiment.

One of the most popular officers of of Co. K, 5th infantry, M. V. M, Capt. Maurice A Colbert, has tendered his resignation.

Co. K was organized about 14 years ago, and Capt. Colbert was one of the charter members, and the last one that was left in the company. He joined as a private and in a short time was made first sergeant. During the time he has been in the company he has seen over 600 members join and leave the company. When the Spanish war broke out Capt. Colbert went out with company as first sergeant, and shorty after he received his commission as second lieutenant.

Upon his return from the south, he joined the militia again and was made first lieutenant, and then elected captain.

At the last muster of the state militia, Capt Colbert went out with the ranks of the company filled to the limit of 61 men, the first time it has been done for several years.

Capt. Colbert has been commended several times by his superior officers for his soldierly conduct and discipline, and the members of the company regret his leaving very much. Capt. Colbert is one of the best known men in Braintree, and has been the train despatcher at the South Braintree station for several years.

Skating Park.

Skaters would like to have the Park Commissioners flood the skating rink near Merrymount park. It seems as though it would be an easy matter to let the water out at low tide which would permit the ice to settle. Then let the water on and flood the rink again. With the present cold snap one day would be enough to make skating. Then let them take a little of their surplus money and put in four electric lights. Quincy would then have a skating park second to none.

THE VOTE VETOED.

United Presbyterians are Against Church Committee

The Whole Board Is Asked to Resign.

Pastor Requested to Withdraw His Resignation.

A congregational meeting of the members of thhe United Presbyterian church was held Tuesday evening to consider the action of the pastor Rev. William W. Dornan, in tendering his resignation. The attendance was large, including most of the members of the church.

It is not within the province of a church of this denomination to accept or reject a resignation but rather the Presbytery or State body. The meeting as called to act on the appointment of commissioners to appear before the Presbytery to favor or oppose the petition of the pastor for a release.

The meeting elected two commissioners, Mr. John Russell and Mr. John W. Kerr, but instructed them to oppose the dissolution of the bond between pastor and people.

With only one dissenting vote the meeting voted not to receive the resignation of their pastor.

It also appointed a committee of two to labor with the pastor and prevail upon him, if possible, to withdraw his resignation, viz: Mr. Alexander Falconer and Mr. Andrew Stewart.

The meeting went further; it voted after debate, to ask the church committee or session, which passed the vote against sociables and lectures under the auspices of the church, to resign This committee is composed of five, viz: Messrs. Sutherland, McKenzie, Martin, McPherson and McDonald.

Rev. H. G. McVey of Lawrence, who was scheduled to conduct services at the church that evening, was present, and by his knowledge of church procedure was able to point out the proper course to pursue, which at times during the evening became entangled.

COST OF EDUCATION

$26.49 per Child for Teaching, $33.99 for Buildings.

Over Three Millions Expended on Buildings.

And Over Ten Millions for Support of Public Schools.

From the sixty-fifth report of the State Board of education presented to to the Legislature this afternoon the following facts of general interest have been taken:—

The number of children within the compulsory age limits of seven and fourteen attending the public schools during the last school year was 202,028. This number is 91 per cent. of the whole number of children within the compulsory age limits as determined by the school census taken at the beginning of the school year, and 87 per cent. of the whole number as determined by the school census taken at the end of the school year. As to the rest of the children between seven and fourteen the great majority were in private schools.

The total number of different pupils of all ages enrolled in the public schools was 468,188; the average membership was 406,081, or 87 per cent. of the total enrollment; and the average attendance was 371,048, or 91 per cent. of the average membership. The total number enrolled in private schools was 82,325.

These figures indicate that the people have a just regard for the value of the schools to their children. Parents of all creeds and parties are not only loyally meeting the legal requirements, but they are going much beyond them in accepting educational advantages.

Of the 13,622 different teachers employed, 1,214 were men and 12,048 were women. There has been an increase of $4.40 over the preceding year in the wages of men per month, the average now being $140.94 and an increase of 25 cents in the wages of women per month, the average now being $52.75. The great difference between the two rates is largely due to the fact that the men generally are superintendents or principals of important schools.

There is a rapidly growing demand that all teachers in the high schools shall have had a college or university education as well as a professional preparation and some successful experience in teaching. A growing number of college trained women are taking kindergarten and normal school preparation to fit themselves to teach children in the elementary and grammar schools, and an increasing number of pedagogical courses are offered in the colleges

The total expenditure for the support of public schools was $10,758,432.64, of which $10,381,931.37 or 91 per cent., was raised by local taxation.

The total expenditure for school building, new and old, was $3,045,013.09, of which $3,041,926.08 or 99 per cent., was raised by local taxation.

The taxation cost of support for each child in the average membership of the public schools was $26.49,—an increase of 43 cents over the preceding year; the taxation cost of land and building was $33.99 for each child,—an increase of 7 cents over the preceding year.

Of the total State valuation, the amount raised by taxation for support was $3.63 on each $1,000 thereof as against $3.62 the preceding year,—an increase of 1 cent; while the amount raised by taxation for support and buildings was $4.66 on each $1,000, a —decrease of 5 cents. This decrease is slight, but it supports the gratifying proposition that for the year reported a reduced school tax has yielded an increased sum for each child in the public schools.

The report says that increased care is now shown in approving teachers in eligible towns for the purpose of State aid in increasing their salaries, commends the growing efficiency of the normal schools, and advocates an increase in the Legislature's appropriation of last year ($50,000) for the erection of the new dormitory at Westfield.

After referring to the need of additional help in the secretary's office and the importance of preparing a new manual for the use of school committees containing the revised school laws with annotations, supreme court decisions etc., the Board concludes as follows:—

"So far as general legislation to determine the scope and ideals of public education is concerned, there is little left for Massachusetts to do; the grander outlines of its policy are well settled. So far as the requirements of the school laws impose extraordinary and conspicuously unequal burdens upon the towns the State should endeavor through suitable forms of aid to bring such burdens within the reasonable capacity of the towns to bear them; this the State does to some extent already, and stands ready presumably to continue and strengthen such policy when convinced that it is equitable to do so. So far as the great work of improving the schools in attractiveness and efficiency—the most important work of all—is concerned, that rests, and must continue to rest so long as the Commonwealth stands for highly developed individualism in its towns and cities, upon the temper, the wisdom and the capacity of the local school authorities."

AN AMENDMENT.

Movement to Abolish the Assistant Engineers.

In the legislature, Tuesday, Representative McKnight had taken from the file the bill introduced last year amending the Quincy City Charter relative to the organization of the Fire department.

Section 22 is the section which relates to this matter, and it provides for one chief engineer and an assistant engineer in each ward and such other officers as may be necessary.

The proposed amendment strikes out the words, "one assistant enigneer from each ward," and Section 22 would then read: "The City Council may establish a Fire department for said city to consist of a chief engineer and such other officers and men as it may prescribe and it may make regulations for the government of the department."

When the matter was before the Legislature last year it was referred to the General Court of 1902. As stated above, upon motion of Representative McKnight, it was taken from the files and referred to the Committee on Cities.

Run Out of Town.

A man who gave his name as James Mackey was overhauled in City Square, Thursday afternoon, by Officer Barry, and run out of town. The man had a typewritten petition asking aid to help pay his fare to St. Louis, Mo. The petition further set forth that he was a stranger in town and had met with an accident, and that he was discharged from the hospital a week ago. Also that he had lost the power of speech and hearing when a boy. Officer Barry sized the man up, and after making inquiries he became convinced that the fellow was a fraud. He took the petitions away from the fellow and gave him a short time in which to get out of town.

New Police Station.

The new police station on School street has been completed and as soon as the cement floor in the cell room has hardened it will be ready for occupancy. This floor was completed Tuesday and should have a week to harden. It will, therefore, be the first of the month before the department takes possession of its new station.

TAMMANY HALL'S CHIEF

Remarkable Rise of Lewis Nixon, the New Leader.

HIS CAREER BASED ON ENERGY.

"God Helps Those Who Help Themselves" Has Been the Young Shipbuilder's Life Motto—Interesting Incidents of His Boyhood Days. How He Won His Wife.

The motto of Lewis Nixon, the young shipbuilder and the new leader of Tammany Hall, is "God helps those that help themselves."

The story of Mr. Nixon's success in life and success in love shows how true the motto has been in his case, says the New York World. It is a pretty story of love deferred and struggle and love rewarded. Lewis Nixon was born in 1860 in the little town of Leesburg, Va. His father occupied an official position similar to that of sheriff and was in charge of the jail.

Lewis Nixon, the youngest son—there were two others and one sister—was born in the residence connected with the jail, and it is possible that this early familiarity with the legal side of the derelicts of the human family first turned his mind toward the betterment of the race through the suppression of the vices that lead the way to the jail or prison. In any case, the little Leesburg youngster, with his reddish brown curls and keen, laughing black eyes, spent his babyhood in an environment which doubtless has had a marked effect upon his life.

Lewis Nixon's father was a man of extreme probity and of humble social position. His mother was a lovely woman, gentle and amiable and possessed of every domestic virtue as well as a firm and noble character. Everybody loved Mrs. Nixon. Every one today in Leesburg speaks tenderly of her and regrets that she should have died before her idolized son had reached success. An old friend, a Virginia lady, who has known Lewis Nixon since he was in petticoats, says of him:

"Lewis Nixon was never like any other Leesburg boy. From the time he could toddle he was a personage. I recollect coming across him one spring morning as I walked toward the village. He couldn't have been over three years old at the time. He was lying full length in the road, face downward, leaning on his elbows, studying two 'spessermins,' as he called them. The 'spessermins' were a butterfly and an angleworm. The look of deep study upon the baby's face—he was still in kilts—was so amusing that I stopped and said:

"'Which do you like best, Lewis? Which would you rather be, a butterfly or an angleworm?'

"The small man did not smile, but raised his eyes to me and said, 'I'd rather fly than crawl.'

"He then gathered up his 'spessermins' and departed to seek for more.

"From babyhood Lewis was an enthusiastic naturalist, and his mother would tell of most extraordinary collections of bugs, beetles, lizards and flowers and how Lewis knew the names of every insect, animal and plant in the woods or mountains that surround Leesburg. As a mere baby, or so it seems to me now, Lewis used to go out on long solitary tramps. Sometimes he would start off early in the morning and be gone the entire day, always eager, interested, busy, acquiring through nature, the greatest of all schools, a fund of knowledge that no book made by hands can impart.

"When Lewis was about six years old, he began to take an extraordinary interest in boats. Now, Leesburg is an inland town, and boats require water. The baby in kilts, with his curls flying in the air, built his first boat after plans of his own. I will wager no such craft was ever launched since time began as that same first boat of Lewis Nixon's.

"When the time came to launch the craft, the fact that there was no water did not in the least curb the ardor of the youth shipbuilder. He informed his wondering family that he knew water would run down a hill, and if he could pump water fast enough down a gutter from the pump his ship would float. And it did. Strange and uncanny as the queerly contrived thing looked to everyday eyes, once the engineer—his curls damp with perspiration, his face crimson with the effort of pumping—managed to get a flow of water down the hill, the boat was launched, and, sure enough, she sat the water all right and floated safely down to the pool below, while the exhausted pumper gravely nodded his head and said:

"'I knew it would float. It had to. I made it to float.'

"Once when the craft was broken by running into a handmade bridge over an imaginary stream Lewis' little friends were in great dismay.

"'Oh, Lewis,' they cried, 'what shall we do now the boat is broken?'

"To which the young philosopher replied: 'What of it? If I made it, I expect I can mend it.'

"As a boy Lewis Nixon was masterful. He dominated his playmates. I recollect particularly the way he managed a pair of redheaded twins that were the terror of the community. The twins were putty in Lewis' young hands. He was always at the head of his class, and his teacher used to groan in spirit over his fertility in propounding extraordinary questions and his persistency in sticking at them until he got an answer. He played boats all the time he spent in amusements, so far as I can recollect, up to his fourteenth year, and no one was astonished when it was learned that Lewis Nixon had gone himself to General Eppa Hunton, the congressman from the Eighth district, to use his influence in getting him an appointment at Annapolis.

"We were all surprised when the appointment came and the boy left us to find that our inland baby shipbuilder was first in his class in the profession which from his babyhood had so allured him. At Annapolis Lewis Nixon began to take an interest in affairs social, and when he visited his home he was quite the beau of the Virginia town, where he led germans and was in his way the Elisha Dyer of the best set."

Mr. Nixon has had but a single love affair, and that a most romantic one. In 1888 he met Miss Sally Lewis Wood, a society belle and one of the most beautiful girls of Washington's smart set. With the same singleness of purpose that has characterized the young Virginian from birth Mr. Nixon proceeded to pay court, early, late and assiduously, to the girl who had captured him. But Miss Wood, daughter of the late Colonel Wood of the army and a direct descendant of the colonial general and friend of Washington, was a young lady not to be had for the asking.

According to the story as it is told by those who should know, the country is indebted to the blue eyed daughter of colonial stock for the inspiration that has given to a young man some right to the title of "designer of the new American navy." The story goes that when Lewis Nixon came a-wooing the proud daughter of a long line of famous progenitors said to him:

"Mr. Nixon, I shall never marry a man who has not made a name for himself. The man I marry, if he does not have a high position by inheritance, must acquire it through his own exertions."

And Nixon—so the tale is told—looked into the blue eyes of the girl who held his heart a prisoner and said:

"And when I have made a name, Miss Sally—a name which even a Wood will be proud of—what then?"

The answer to these all important words can only be surmised. Mr. Nixon resigned from the navy to become a designer with Cramp & Sons, the great shipbuilders. He also designed the Oregon. He was with the Cramps and helped to make the warships New York, Indiana, Massachusetts, Iowa, Brooklyn, Minneapolis and the St. Louis and St. Paul for the American line. He built the Holland submarine boat.

In 1895 Mr. Nixon established a shipbuilding plant of his own at Elizabethport, N. J. The concern has grown greatly under his direction and is now building a large number of torpedo boats and doing other work for the government.

In 1891, no longer an unknown young man, Mr. Nixon again paid court to the blue eyed beauty. This time the name Mr. Nixon offered the lady of his heart was one she might well exchange for her own. Mr. Nixon was accepted. In his one romance Mr. Nixon lived up to his motto. He believed God would help the man who helped himself.

The god of love joined forces with the indomitable Virginian and gave him the happiness of a life union with the woman of his choice. One little son, a magnificent chap of seven, who is named Stanhope Wood Nixon and can trace his ancestry in an unbroken line for 370 years, is Mr. Nixon's sole heir.

NEW CARNEGIE PENSION.

Gifts to Trainmen Who Once Worked Under Him.

W. W. Wike, John W. McCune and Henry Hudson, veteran Pennsylvania railroad engineers of Johnstown, Pa., who were retired on pensions some time ago, recently received checks for $20 each from Andrew Carnegie.

Mr. Carnegie was once the superintendent of the Pittsburg division, where these veterans worked, and it is understood to be Mr. Carnegie's purpose to pension all the trainmen who are yet alive who worked during his superintendency of that part of the road, says the Philadelphia Press. Messrs. Wike, McCune and Hudson are to receive $20 each month for life, and if they should die before their wives the latter will continue to receive the Carnegie pensions.

Plan to Observe McKinley Day.

The ready response of the governors of states and territories of the United States to Governor George K. Nash's request that Jan. 29 be set apart as McKinley day by official recognition has been most gratifying to the trustees of the McKinley National Memorial association. Had he lived William McKinley would have been fifty-nine years of age on Jan. 29. Governor Nash of Ohio took the initiative step in requesting the governors of the country to issue a proclamation suggesting that memorial services be held in all the churches on Sunday, Jan. 25, preceding McKinley day. On Wednesday, the 29th, a special effort in every section will be made to complete the contributions to the McKinley national memorial tomb to be erected over the grave of the late president at Canton. Eventually it is believed that McKinley day will become one on which the patriotic people of the nation without regard to section or partisanship will meet not only to remember the dead, but in emphasis of the national belief in the perpetuity of those exalted qualities of character, simplicity, dignity, devotion to duty, high ideals and pure American manhood so eminently typified in the private life and public services of William McKinley. This year the people of the nation will show this love and devotion to the man who was so shamefully and suddenly taken away from life by their voluntary contributions to the memorial fund.

WANTS INVESTIGATION

Senator Hoar Speaks on His Philippine Resolution.

PEOPLE MUST KNOW TRUTH

Says That Cheap Slander of Aguinaldo Has Been Refuted and That We Are Engaged In the Unholy Office of Crushing Out a Republic

Washington, Jan. 15.—The Philippine question was touched on in the senate yesterday for the first time. The interest taken in the subject indicates that it will occupy the attention of the upper branch of congress for some time when the tariff bill is reported. The Philippines were the subject of an address by Mr. Hoar, who spoke on his resolution providing for the appointment of a senate committee to investigate the administration of those islands.

Senator Hoar began his first remarks by saying he would speak not over five minutes, but he actually spoke nearly 40, so earnest did he become in the outlining of his plans. He said that during the Civil war, although there was always an active and alert minority in the north, it was still found necessary to have a committee see the conduct of the war. This struggle in the Philippines, because of its distance, with the difference in race, was one particularly needing trustworthy sources of information; he cited first, as a subject of controversy, the character of Aguinaldo, alluding to the report that he had sold out his people for Spanish gold. Mr. Hoar said he supposed "if ever there was a shallow, cheap, refuted slander it was this story," and yet it was persistently repeated. This was a severe though deserved reflection upon some of his well known associates, who have delighted in this slander, and the more complete its refutation the greater appears to have been the emphasis they have given to its assertion.

Senator Hoar called attention to the fact that President Schurman, of the first Philippine commission, while supporting the administration policy, denied this story and "paid a tribute to the patriotism and personal worth of the Filipino chieftain." The senator next took up the question of the American promises to Aguinaldo, showing that while Dewey denied that he had made any promises, General Anderson says: "It is true that Admiral Dewey did not give him (Aguinaldo) that promise, but I did." This General Anderson says twice under his own signature. Senator Hoar said he had seen the statement with the fac-simile of the signature of the general in command of the army. He took up other matters in controversy, showing the urgent need of some responsible body which could get at the facts, under official sanction, assuming that the American people wanted to know the truth and to be governed by the truth.

Senator Hoar desired to have this committee under the control of the majority and agreeing with it in opinions. He would not expect an anti-imperialistic investigation, readily recognizing under our system of government the power and responsibility of majorities.

Mr. Hoar declared it to be one of God's truths that "no one people has the right to crush liberty out of another people," and added: "We are engaged in the Philippines in the unholy office of crushing out a republic and if we had dealt with them as we have dealt with Cuba the Filipinos would now be a happy, prosperous people, sending their children to our schools and imitating our institutions."

Mr. Lodge, Mr. Hoar's colleague, said that he regarded the resolution as a reflection on the Philippine committee of which he was chairman, and the necessity for the latter would cease were this resolution to be adopted. His committee, he said, was perfectly able to handle any investigation which might be conducted. Mr. Carmack (Dem.) agreed with him.

Replying, Mr. Hoar disavowed any intention to reflect upon Senator Lodge's committee. All that he wished was that some committee should take the testimony bearing on the subject while it was available, and he added that if his colleague's committee would take cognizance of the subject he would be satisfied.

The discussion was rapidly leading up to an opening up of the whole Philippine question when it was agreed that the resolution should go over until today.

Pension Bill In House

Washington, Jan. 15.—The house continued the debate on the pension appropriation bill yesterday and devoted much time to the proposition advanced by Mr. Rixey of Virginia to open the doors of the soldiers' homes to ex-confederate veterans. Two speeches were made in support of the proposition, one by Mr. Gardner (Rep., Mich.) and the other by Dearmond (Mo., Dem.) With the exception of Mr. Gardner the Republicans took no part in the discussion of Mr. Rixey's suggestion. Mr. Lamb (Va.) read a number of telegrams from prominent ex-Confederates of Richmond, protesting against it.

Money Needed For Scouts

Washington, Jan. 15.—Secretary Root has called the attention of congress to the need of provision for the 50 companies of Philippine scouts, comprising about 5000 men. General Chaffee cabled to the war department recently that the pay of the scouts under the insular government ceased on Dec. 1 last, so that a deficiency appropriation of $515,000 is required for the service of the scouts from that time forward.

WHOLE FORCE SURRENDERS

Western Part of Batangas Said to Be Clear of Hostile Filipinos

Washington, Jan. 15.—The war department was advised late yesterday afternoon of an important surrender which occurred on Monday at Taal, Batangas. The surrender included one colonel, three lieutenant-colonels, one major, five captains, 12 lieutenants, 245 men and 223 rifles. Marasigan, the colonel, was a leader of importance under the insurgent general, Malver, operating in the western part of Batangas. That section is reported to be practically clear of hostile forces.

It is stated that the surrender was unconditional and due directly to the excellent service of the American troops. The loyal natives, it is added, believe this surrender will influence hostile bands in other sections of Batangas to surrender. Those prisoners not charged with serious crimes have been released.

The value of farm implements and machinery was $8,828,950 and live stock $15,798,464, making a total value of farm property $182,648,704.

SAD MESSAGE OF DEATH

Wireless Telegraph Tells Lightship Keeper of Child's End.

STORM KEPT HIM FROM BEDSIDE.

Captain Jorgenson Describes How the News of His Daughter's Death Came Through the Air—Her Last Words Flashed to Him by the Marconi System.

"Christine is dying. Come home."

Out of the mist and the storm by wireless telegraph came these fateful words to Captain James Jorgenson on the Nantucket lightship. And yet he was powerless to stir from his ocean prison house.

When the first wireless message reached the Nantucket Shoals lightship, informing Captain Jorgenson that his only daughter had been stricken with lockjaw as the result of vaccination, he determined to reach home if it were possible. When it came to launching the boat, however, it was found that no ordinary open boat could live in the angry sea which surged around the lightship. For more than a week the storm had been raging.

Though the captain was willing to brave the dangers in the hope of reaching his dying daughter's bedside, he could not conscientiously ask his men to risk their lives for his sake. He could only spend the dreary hours in wondering how his child was faring, flashing ever and anon messages to the shore making anxious inquiry. As the weary hours crept on Captain Jorgenson paced the storm swept deck of the lightship, watching the elements in hope that there would be a lull in the storm. But its fury increased from day to day.

In the captain's home the grief and anxiety were heartrending. The dying girl expressed but one wish, made but one inquiry, as the hours crept by:

"Why don't father come to me? Shall I see him before I die? Tell him to come quick."

At the signal station on shore the wireless messages were sent out from hour to hour, giving the captain bulletins of his daughter's condition. Every one knew the deep attachment which the old captain felt for his daughter. She had spent days with him on the lightship, helping him to keep his lonely vigil, cheering his dreary existence. Now death was claiming her for its own. Unless the captain were taken from the ship in time he would never see her alive.

Government officials, among whom Captain Jorgenson was a great favorite, planned to relieve the captain's torture. The lightship tender Azalea was requisitioned to effect the captain's rescue. The boat went out to sea in the teeth of the storm. When the Azalea came to within megaphone hailing distance of the lightship, it was found that she could approach no nearer owing to the high seas, and the little tender put back. Then, after days and nights of anguish, the wireless message came, "Christine is dead."

A pitiful hope now sprung up in the bereaved man's heart. If he could only reach home in time to see the dead girl's face, he would snatch from fate some meager crumb of comfort. At last the angry wind expended its fury. A westbound steamer stopped near the lightship, and, though the seas were running dangerously high, the captain managed to reach the deck of the Anchor line steamer Astoria, which enabled the unfortunate and bereaved sailor to reach his daughter's home in Braintree, Mass.

Captain Jorgenson has described for the New York World his hours of anxious waiting and agony on the storm beset lightship:

"On the day my daughter died," said he, "wireless messages which owing to some derangement of the apparatus on land had been delayed began coming at the lightship, the first telling me that my daughter was very sick, another that she was dying and a third that she was dead. It was a weird and dreadful experience, like a ghost message delivered to me by an unseen agency out of the tempest. I was frantic, for I knew it meant death for me to attempt to leave the ship. On Saturday [Jan. 4] and Sunday it was the same, for no boat could reach me, and in my despair, realizing the utter impossibility of reaching land, I nearly died. On Monday the weather cleared, but no boat hove in sight, and not until Tuesday morning, when the Atlantic liner Astoria, from Glasgow, came along, bound inward for New York, was I able to signal. She took me off, and the next day we reached New York. Then came the quarantine and other delays, so that I did not reach home until Thursday.

"I can say nothing more of my experience during that fearful week, longing and praying for one look at my dead daughter's face and fearing that she would be laid away before I could see her. But, thank God, I arrived in time. Now that it is over I feel that my affliction has aged me terribly. I was comparatively young before it happened and my hair was scarcely touched with gray. Now, as you see, it is almost white."

Though fate had played a tragic trick on the aged lightship master, yet it did not deny him the melancholy satisfaction of seeing his daughter before she was laid away in the tomb.

YANKEE TOBACCO GROWERS

Record Themselves as Opposed to Reduction of Duties on the Weed

Hartford, Jan. 15.—A lively all-day convention of the New England Tobacco Growers' association resulted in the overthrow of President Frye's plans to have the association endorse resolutions favoring tariff concessions to Cuba. Instead, resolutions were passed urging the New England representatives in congress to oppose any reduction in the duties on tobacco imported from Cuba, and any reduction on tobacco from any other source. A committee of three members was elected to go to Washington and present these viws to congress.

President Frye fought for the resolutions he had prepared for the convention to pass, and strenously denied that there was any ground for the suspicion that in favoring a reduction of wrapper duties he was employed by New York importing interests.

New Trolley Line Opened

Hartford, Jan. 15.—The electric street railway between Hartford and Springfield, which was formally opened Monday and which is an important addition to interurban trolley development in New England, is 28 miles long, and the fare for the trip is 30 cents. After leaving Hartford the route lies on the east side of the Connecticut river and it runs through the towns of East Hartford, South Windsor, East Windsor and Enfield, Conn., and Longmeadow and Springfield, Mass. The territory in which the system operates has an approximate population of 165,000.

Democrats Will Uphold Crane

Boston, Jan. 15.—Except for the passage of the annual appropriation bills, very little business has been accomplished so far by the legislature, although the session is two weeks old. The Democrats held a caucus yesterday and discussed Governor Crane's inaugural address, especially that portion relating to the abolition and consolidation of some state commissions. It seemed to be the general sentiment that the governor should be upheld. A committee was appointd to formulate bills in conformity with the governor's suggestion.

What Cuttyhunkers Want

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 15.—The Cuttyhunk islanders want better mail facilities, and have petitioned the postal authorities for a bi-weekly service. Every man on the island of Cuttyhunk has signed the petition. They explain that it is desired to have two boats a week, for if they receive a call by mail to the mainland it is now impossible to get off for a week after reading the letter, unless they come off in a sailboat, and this is not always possible in the winter months.

Many Charges Against Him

Nashua, N. H., Jan. 15.—Anthony Toulin is under arrest on the charges of theft and forgery. It is alleged that he was caught taking a gold watch and about $40 in money from the clothing of a man here and after he was turned over to the police, it was believed he was the man wanted in Petersboro for the larceny of a bank book, obtaining several hundred dollars on forged orders and passing of a worthless check on a store in Greenfield.

Ice King Takes In Banks

Gardiner, Me., Jan. 15.—All of the national bank stock owned by the Gardiner Savings institution has been bought in a lump sum by Charles W. Morse, the "ice king." This includes not only stock in national banks here, but banks in Augusta and other sections of the state. It is probable that all three banks will be united, leaving but one national bank in the city, and that controlled by Mr. Morse.

Only "Speak Easies" Open

Concord, N. H., Jan. 15.—According to the records of the collector of internal revenue for this district, there are 31 persons and firms in Concord paying the government tax for the sale of malt and spirituous liquor. They were ordered to close yesterday. The list included 21 druggists, five hotels, four "clubs," and one bottler. Kitchen barrooms are all that now remain open in this city.

Religious Institutions Unite

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 15.—Deeds were passed today transferring the property of the Bible Normal college, valued at between $60,000 and $70,000, to the Reed Realty Trust of this city, and the college will remove to Hartford at once, to begin its joint work with the Hartford Theological seminary Feb. 1. The institutions voted to unite last summer.

Insurance Men Investigating

Portland, Me., Jan. 15.—A committee of the New England Insurance exchange yesterday began a series of meetings here, and the fire protection of the city will be thoroughly inspected and investigated. Some recommendations to the city for increased protection, the placing of new apparatus, changes in pipes, mains, etc., will be submitted.

On Trial For Murder

Newport, N. H., Jan. 15.—The trial of George H. Briggs, on the charge of murdering Mrs. Florence Jones on Nov. 2, began here yesterday. About 50 jurors were summoned, and after 39 had been examined the panel was selected. It is thought the trial will last until the end of the week.

Made a Quick Passage

Boston, Jan. 15.—An instance of quick sailing was given by the five-masted schooner Arthur Seitz, which was towed in yesterday afternoon. She left Newport News with 3700 tons of coal last Friday and passed out of Cape Henry Sunday.

Bank Safe Dynamited

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 15.—The People's bank at North Enid was robbed last night of $2000, the safe being blown open with dynamite. There is no clew to the identity of the robbers.

Finding His Bride.

In one part of the canton of Ticino, in Switzerland, a very quaint marriage ceremony prevails. The bridegroom dresses in his "Sunday best" and, accompanied by as many friends and relatives as he can muster for the fete, goes to claim his bride.

Finding the door locked, he demands admittance, the inmates ask him his business, and in reply he solicits the hand of his chosen maiden.

If his answer be deemed satisfactory, he is successively introduced to a number of matrons and maids, some perhaps deformed and others old and ugly. Then he is presented to some large dolls, all of which he rejects with scorn, amid general merriment. The bewildered bridegroom, whose impetuosity and temper are now sorely tried, is then informed that his ladylove is absent and invited in to see for himself.

He rushes into the house and searches from room to room until he finds her in her bridal dress, ready to go to church. Then are his troubles over and his state as a Benedict assured.

AGAINST NAVAL MILITIA

Hale Says It Has Proved Not to Be a Success

HOAR DISAGREES WITH HIM

Says Our Independence Was Won at Sea Through the Rate of Maritime Insurance—Tillman Thinks New Englanders Get Too Much Credit

Washington, Jan. 16.—A spirited discussion was precipitated in the senate yesterday by some remarks submitted by Mr. Hale of Maine, in respect to bills relating to the formation of a naval reserve which he introduced. He took strong ground against the organization of a naval reserve.

Experience had shown, he said, that at the beginning of a war plenty of young men were ready to enlist in the navy and enter the ranks of naval militia, but at the conclusion of the war the interest in the organizations ceased and it was found difficult to maintain them.

He was of the opinion that the United States was not likely, as a nation, to take much interest in the militia forces either of the land or of the sea. In time of stress he was certain that the country would be obliged to depend upon volunteers, called out in an emergency, or upon some form of compulsory service. England, he said, had "learned this lesson from her smallest and wickedest war."

"If," he said, "we are to become a great war power, we will have to learn the lesson other nations have learned. Every one of the nations of the world that stands snarling at another depends, to some extent, upon some sort of compulsory military service."

Mr. Hale declared that England was about to resort to conscription to raise men to fight "a band of freemen thousands of miles away." It has been proved, he said, that naval militia was not a success. Of course, it could be maintained in "lingering, half-hearted manner," but it never really amounted to much.

In conclusion he said: "If we have determined that we are to become a great war power, with a great army and a great navy, no system of volunteering will answer the purpose."

In response to an inquiry from Mr. Hawley, Mr. Hale said he did not suppose that the United States ever would dispense absolutely with the militia. It would continue to be maintained in a half-hearted way. In time of war he did not think it would be worth reckoning with. What he desired to impress upon the senate and upon the country was that the naval reserve was and always would be weak and meager. It is difficult, even now, said he, to secure men enough to man the ships of the United States navy and it is impossible to maintain the interest in the naval reserve.

Several senators were drawn into the debate in defense of the militia forces of the various states. Mr. Hale finally disclaiming any intention to reflect on the national guard.

Mr. Hoar said it was manifest that in every warlike emergency the country must be protected by a trained militia or by a regular army, or by both. It had been proved that the United States ought to have a good, regular army of moderate strength, supplemented by a strong militia force.

Mr. Hoar, referring to the training of sailors in civil life, said there was another fact not generally known. Our independence in the war of the revolution had been won at sea. England could have continued for a hundred years if necessary, the land war of the revolution, because she was able to pay the cost. It was not the French alliance, but the rate of maritime insurance which compelled the unwilling monarch to come to peace. It was New England and other sailors of the maritime states who won the battle. The rate of insurance on English commercial ships then was 28 percent, in the Mediterranean. It was the shipowners of Bristol who won the battle by privateers and not the navy.

Mr. Tillman persisted that Mr. Hoar should give some of the credit of achieving independence to other colonies than New England, amid laughter and applause, he declared: "There's glory enough to go 'round, as our great admiral in command at the battle of Santiago said."

Evans to Arrange Program

Washington, Jan. 16.—Secretary Long yesterday called Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans into consultation respecting the coming visit to the United States of Prince Henry of Germany. He charged Admiral Evans with the preparation of a naval program for the reception. In view of the number of distinguished officers who will accompany the prince on his visit, it is evident that Admiral Evans will require the assistance of a number of junior officers.

BRIGGS' TESTIMONY

Defendant In Murder Case Says He Feared For His Life

Newport, N. H., Jan. 16.—The second day of the trial of George H. Briggs for the murder of Mrs. Florence Jones at Langdon, strengthened the belief that insanity will be the plea of the defense. The witnesses yesterday included relatives who testified as to the presence of insanity in Briggs' family.

Defendant Briggs took the stand in his own behalf yesterday afternoon, testifying that he had had trouble with the Jones family, who were his neighbors, over cattle and fences; that they had all threatened his life; that he was in mortal fear of them, but that he had never made threats against any of them. On several occasions Mr. Jones, his wife and son, Cleveland, had called him all manner of names and threatened to do him up, and he bought a revolver for self protection. Jones also caused an attachment to be placed on his property. On the day of Mrs. Jones' death the cattle got out and while he and his wife were rounding them up, Cleveland Jones appeared with something in his hands making a terrible noise. The boy called him names, and witness had no recollection of what happened after that. Witness then told of driving to Alstead and giving himself up, but said he had no recollection of telling the selectmen that when he shot he shot to kill.

Granite State Liquor Law Enforced

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 16.—What is considered the greatest crusade in the history of New Hampshire is on in earnest. It is a crusade against liquor saloons, and as a result nearly all the large cities from one end of the state to the others are "shut up tight." Portsmouth, hitherto supposed to be absolutely fortified against any assault by the prohibition element, is a "dry" town. Not a saloon is open, and there is not the slightest prospect of a break in the drought. It is the general opinion that the new order of things has nothing of the farce about it. There is great satisfaction among the temperance people over the situation.

A Woman's Terrible Plight

Everett, Mass., Jan. 16.—With both her lower limbs frozen to the knees, and lying in the snow, unconscious from her sufferings and cold, Mrs. Lizzie Murray was found yesterday in a field in West Everett. Bernard Helrick, who lives in the vicinity, discovered the woman and carried her to his home. The woman was taken later to a hospital, where it was discovered that her legs were so badly frozen that both of them would have to be amputated. Mrs. Murray is 38 years of age and a widow. She could not tell how she happened to wander to the spot.

Dead Babe Left In Church

Boston, Jan. 16.—The body of a still born male child found in a church has aroused the activity of the officials of the Dedham street station. Shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, two young girls, both wearing veils, entered the German Catholic church on Shawmut avenue. The two girls remained for about half an hour, then hurried out. Miss Margaret Curtin, who sat near by, saw that a bundle had been left in the pew. On opening it she was horrified to discover the body of an infant. No trace was found of the two young women.

Maine Socialists Meet

Skowhegan, Me., Jan. 16.—Socialism in its political bearing was reported to be flourishing in Maine, at the state convention held here yesterday. The chief business done was the naming of the state ticket, the nominee for governor being Charles L. Fox of Portland. The customary set of resolutions was drafted and adopted. These reiterate the party beliefs on the questions of the day and set forth the socialist idea of local and state issues.

Noted Zoologist Dead

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 16.—Probably as the result of apoplexy, Alpheus Hyatt, assistant professor in invertebrae paleonthology at Harvard university, dropped dead in Harvard Square last night. Professor Hyatt was 63 years old. He served in the Civil war in a Cambridge company, returning as captain. His scientific writings were many, and he was considered one of the leading zoologists of the country.

No Fear For Ransom Party

Boston, Jan. 16.—At the office of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions little anxiety is felt for Miss Stone's ransom party. It is pointed out that the party was composed of men of discretion, familiar with the country, and well able to take care of themselves. They started with sealed lips and no word is expected from them until their work is done.

Students to Have "Beer Nights"

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 16.—At the meeting of the freshman class at Harvard last night, plans were announced for class "beer nights," to be held every other week. Their object is said to be to make the members of the class better acquainted with each other. The president of the class said that it was fully as important for the men who did not drink beer to come as for those who did.

COMPLETE SHUTDOWN

May Result From Strike of Spinners at Maynard.

WANT PAY FOR OVERTIME

Change From Use of Beam Scales to Grain Scales in Weighing Roping Started Trouble—Agent Says Result of Strike Will Be Serious

Maynard, Mass., Jan. 16.—The Assabet mills of the American Woolen company in this place are shut down with the exception of the carding and sorting departments, in which 300 or 400 hands are employed, on account of a strike of the spinners, and these two departments are the only ones running. The probability is that they, too, will be closed tomorrow unless the spinners' grievances are adjusted. This action would mean idleness for about 1500 employes and would be a most serious blow to the town.

For 30 years the company has been weighing the roping used in the spinning department with beam scales, but a few weeks ago the discovery was made that those scales were inaccurate, and the company began the use of grain scales, which change, the spinners claim, makes it necessary for them to work harder in order to produce a given amount of yarn. The men have been working until 8 p. m., four days in the week, and they have received no pay for these two extra hours. They have been earning on an average not over $8 or $9 per week, the lowest men receiving $7 and the highest from $10 to $11. The spinners demanded that the deficiency in pay for overtime work be made up to them, and that for overtime they be paid 10 cents an hour above the regular wages.

Trouble has been brewing since last fall, when wages were cut about $2 a week, but it was brought to a climax by the change in the method of weighing. A strike was threatened several weeks ago, but as work was slack at that time it was felt that a strike might not prove effective and it was decided to await a more favorable opportunity. Now, with improved business conditions, the men feel confident of ultimate success.

Sixty spinners struck on Tuesday and a committee of three had a conference with Agent Hinchlesse, who demanded that the men return to work at 1:30 p. m., or the mills would be shut down. This they refused to do and a shutdown of all but two departments followed.

Agent Hinchlesse said that the result of a strike would prove far more serious than the strikers anticipated, and that in such event the Assabet mills would be shut down for an indefinite period. The company is building a new addition to its mill, 700 feet in length, and which is nearly completed. In this building it was intended to give employment to 1000 extra hands. It was stated by Agent Hinchlesse that unless the strike is settled, all work on this addition will be suspended, and the additional workmen will not be put to work.

The company claims a scarcity of coal as the reason for closing the mills, but to a casual observer the supply of that commodity on hand appears to be sufficient for all present needs.

Minister Allen's "Sugar Box"

Washington, Jan. 16.—Secretary Hay has sent to the house of representatives a request for a legation building at Seoul, Korea, at a cost of $40,000. A letter from Minister Allen, which accompanies the request, says that the ceilings of the present quarters are 6 feet, 6 inches from the floor, while he is 6 feet, 2 inches tall. When he stands at the front door, his silk hat touches the eaves.

CONVENTION VIOLATED

By Alleged Collection of Duties on Gifts Intended For Prisoners

"That the president, if in his judgment it be not incompatible with the public interest, be requested to inform the senate whether the department of state has any official information whether the British government exacts duties on goods intended for prisoners of war in Bermuda in violation of article 16 of the convention adopted at The Hague, which is as follows: 'Gifts and relief in kind for prisoners of war shall be admitted free of all duty of entry and others, as well as of payments for carriage by the government railways.'"

In explanation of his resolutions, Mr. Hoar said that some charitable organizations in this country had sent supplies and comforts to Boer prisoners detained in Bermuda. Upon these supplies duties had been collected in contravention of The Hague treaty. He desired merely to ascertain whether the state department had been informed of the situation.

The resolution was adopted.

Fife and Watson to Build Challenger

London, Jan. 16.—After a lengthy interview held yesterday with Thomas Lipton, there is no reason to doubt the correctness of the arrangement announced that William Fife is to build Lipton's next challenger for the America's cup. No contracts to this end have yet been signed, and this fact alone constitutes the basis for the technical denials of the previous announcement. William Fife and George L. Watson will form what amounts to a partnership in the construction of the next challenger.

Leander Caused a Spill

Philadelphia, Jan. 16.—Twelve minutes before the finish of the third day's racing in the six days' bicycle contest here there was a spill. Hatfield had his collar bone broken, Freeman badly sprained his right shoulder, and Fisher and Gougoltz were considerably shaken up. Leander had been spurting with the other riders close up. Suddenly he swerved slightly and his wheel struck that of Hatfield. The latter fell and the others also went down.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" Hurts

Louisville, Jan. 16.—At a meeting of a special committee appointed by the Albert Sidney Johnson chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy yesterday resolutions were adopted pledging the members to work in every way possible to prevent "Uncle Tom's Cabin" from being put on any stage in the state, and the book was denounced as a base libel on the south, and especially on the institution of slavery.

Addition to War Bill

London, Jan. 16.—Lord Kitchener has been authorized to expend £835,000 for the extension of railroads in South Africa, Lord Kitchener having arrived at the conclusion that this course would materially aid in the subjugation of the Boers.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

Good Afternoon

It is with considerable pleasure that Quincy people read of the achievements of local industries, and Quincy residents and particularly of late concerning our new ship yard, which Boston papers are so quick to claim for the Hub. The Globe refers to the repairing of the Isle of Kent by the Quincy company as "Boston's facilities for extensive ship work finely demonstrated. That the Fore River Company is able to do work which heretofore has gone to New York, and often times abroad, demonstrates the possibilities of this company, which are not yet generally comprehended. It is said the repairs of the Isle of Kent will be made in record breaking time.

A remarkable evidence of the esteem in which President McKinley was held by the working people was afforded in Homestead, Pa., last week when all of the employers of all grades contributed half a day's pay to the McKinley Memorial Fund.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., a pupil at the school at Groton, Mass., dismisses the subject of his relationship to the President in these words. "Of course I'm glad my father is President, but I don't see why I should be bothered about it."

Mr. Cleveland refers to the Bryan heresy which was infused into his party in 1896and 1900 as an "afflictive visitation." Mr. Cleveland is never at a loss for a descriptive phrase.

Shorter Hours.

It is probable that the quarrymen of Quincy will make a demand for an increase of pay in the near future. The quarrymen are now working nine hours per day and the demand will be for eight hours with the same pay as at present.

Some years ago the quarrymen were well organized and their union was a strong one. Then there was a strike. Their demand was considered unreasonable by the manufacturers who refused to grant it. There was a strike of several weeks duration and at the end the men gave in, and their union ceased to exist in Quincy.

No attempt has apparently been made to reorganize the union until within a few months. It is now said, however, that they are well organized.

SEVENTIETH YEAR.

Bethany Church to Celebrate Its Anniversary.

Annual Meeting Shows Progress.

Reports, Election of Officers, Appropriations, Etc.

The annual meeting of Bethany Congregational church held Wednesday was largely attended and the reports of the various officer and auxiliary societies were generally satisfactory and progressive. Delecevare King was moderator and Ernest D. Gourd clerk.

The report of the clerk showed a gain in church membership, the total being 364.

The Nominating committee presented a double list of candidates for the various officers upon an Australian ballot, and the election was the next business. Tellers were appointed to receive and count the votes and meanwhile other reports were made.

Rev. E. N. Hardy, the pastor, reported for the Church committee. During the year there had been a great many changes in the congregation caused by death, and removals from town but the new shipyard had brought many new families which now worshipped at this church. Several prominent in the church work had died the list of which members including: Deacon Franklin Hardwick, Mrs. Martha Clapp, Mrs. Lydia Willey, Mr. Fred Scannell, Mrs Elizabeth Roberts, Mrs. Ruth Williams, Mrs. Helen F. Fitts and Miss Louisa A. Nightingale.

The benevolences were the largest for any year in the history of the church, including $1057 to outside societies and $889 for general benevolence mostly in Quincy, viz:

American Board Foreign Missions,	$230
Congregational Educational Society,	56
Congregational Building Society,	104
Congregational Home Missionary Society,	549
American Missionary Association,	63
Sunday-school and Publishing Society,	64
General benevolence,	889
Total,	$1,946

The report of Charles W. Miller the treasurer, showed receipts and disbursements for the year of $5,184.51, of which $3,728.67 as received by pledges. The benevolences of the church had been in excess of $1,030.

H. Everett Crane reported the books of the treasurer to be correctly kept with vouchers for all payments.

Dr. Sherman for the Prudential committee reported on the changes and improvements made and contemplated. The new entrance made in 1901 was the most important improvement. The debt had been reduced to $3,700 and should be further reduced this year to save interest.

A budget of $4,500 was reported for 1902 by the Finance Committee, together with comments on the Finances in general. The item for music is increased.

J. O. Hall, Jr., reported at length for the Music committee, which recommended quartette singing for 1902.

Supt. Branch of the Bible school reported an average attendance for 1901 of 221, and that ten of the members had been admitted to the church. He also spoke of the work and needs of the school.

The Ladies' Circle reported increased membership and usefulness, and enumerate some of the benevolences an other work accomplished. A touching reference was made to the death of Mrs. Helen Fitts while president.

There were other reports from the Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society, the King's Daughters, the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and the Junior Society of Christian Endeavor.

The meeting was reminded of fact that April 5 would be the seventieth anniversary of the organization of the church and a suggestion made that the event be celebrated; also that a memorial pamphlet be issued together with a list of members, etc. The suggestion was received with favor and referred to the church committee.

The report of the committee on ballot was as follows, Supt. Branch being re-elected although he positively declined to be a candidate:

Up to the present time but one head has fallen, that of James F. Morrissey driver of Hose 2 at Wollaston, who was dismissed from the department by Chief Williams on Tuesday. REMARKABLE JOB

Which Fore River Company is Doing in Boston.

Repairing the Isle of Kent.

A Big Forging Furnished and Speed Being Made.

The Fore River Ship and Engine Co., of Quincy, is fast building up a reputation which is astonishing Boston and New York ship builders and machinists, and which promises to become world wide. The floating machine shop of the company, equipped with electricity is now at East Boston, and is doing a remarkable job in short period of time. The Globe prints the following story:

What a ship can stand in the way of damage, remain afloat and safely reach port was probably never better shown than in the case of the British tramp steamer Isle of Kent, Capt. Robert Hodge, which is now undergoing repairs in Simpsons' dry dock, East Boston leased by the Fore River Company. The steamer had her stem smashed, twisted and buckled back to such an extent that her bow forging and plates are practically folded upon each other like an accordion, by the terrific impact of collision with the Spanish steamer Amesti on the high seas, about 350 miles east of Boston light, on Saturday, Dec. 14 last.

The Amesti was struck amidships on the starboard side, the Isle of Kent hitting her bow on, and almost with the force of full steam ahead so great was the momentum after her engines had been ordered reversed.

The Amesti was practically cut in halves and sank within 15 minutes. Her crew of 26 were taken off by the Isle of Kent and brought to this port, for which Capt. Hodge instantly headed when it was discovered that his vessel could probably keep above water.

That she could do so was due almost entirely to the character of her cargo of cotton. This cargo acted as a sort of elastic bumper or cushion and prevented the ship buckling and also, when the sea began pouring into the forehold, the cotton stowed there absorbed a good deal of it and acted as a water-tight bulkhead in preventing a further inflow.

Hundreds of shipping and sailormen have visited the dock to see and wonder at the terrific damage to the ship and also to watch the progress of the interesting repairs, which have been undertaken by the Fore River ship and engine company of Quincy.

These repairs are most extensive—practically the most extensive—ever undertaken at this port to a "lame duck" of the size of the Isle of Kent. The usual method has been to tow such vessels around New York for repairs, if they cannot be taken across to an English shipyrard. This in itself, demonstrating the facilities and possibilities here, is a decided advantage to Boston's maritime reputation and interests.

Practically a new stem or bow is being built on the steamer, a big forging of steel 60 feet in length forming the new stem, while the six pairs of frames astern of the bow and some 28 plates are needed to restore the bow to its former condition and shape.

A floating machine shop, equipped with machinery for 60 men, and looking like a huge house boat, is being used in making the repairs, having been brought from Quincy for the purpose.

This is a complete machine plant, with lathes, drills, planers and other ship work tools all run in the present work by electricity. The, heavier work of shaping plates, however, is done at the Fore River company's plant at Quincy, and the finished materials are brought to the dock in the company's steam lighter.

TODAY'S COURT.

TEACHERS' WAGES

Considered by State Board of Education.

About 40,000 in High Schools of State.

Most Towns Now Have Superintendents of Schools.

The following is gleaned from the Secretary's report which accompanied the report of the State Board of Education to the Legislature this week:

The attendance returns cover for the first time a practically uniform school year for the State,—the natural school year that runs from one summer vacation to the next. They also reflect more completely than heretofore the rules of the new register. The fiscal returns, however, cover fiscal years that end all the way from the close of the uniform school year to the town meetings in the following spring. One of the results from the gradual adoption of a uniform school year has been to reduce the errors of double enrollment thus lifting the ratio of the average membership of the schools to the number of pupils enrolled, from 82 per cent. to 87. This difference of 5 per cent. means more than 23,000 children. It is highly creditable to the State that the average membership of the schools should prove to be so much closer to the total membership than former returns have indicated.

TEACHERS, TEACHERS' WAGES.

The ratio of men to women in public schools has remained constant for four years—1 to 10.2. The schools would be better off if the proportion of men were increased somewhat. The extension of the system of superintendents brings to some schools the only man under whose direct influence they ever come. The ratio of the number of different teachers employed during the year to the number of positions filled by them was 1.08 to 1. Ten years ago it was 1.16 to 1. Increased permanency is a good sign; it means that positions are better filled on the one hand and better worth filling on the other. The smaller towns still suffer from numerous changes; in fifty of the smaller towns the ratio of teachers to positions rising as high as 1.40 to 1. The porportion of normally trained teachers is steadily growing It is now 45 per cent. of the entire force, as against 37 per cent. ten years ago.

HIGH SCHOOLS.

The high schools of the State number 261, with an attendance of about 40,000. The number of schools that kept the full 10 months required by law was 174; the number that kept from 9 1-2 to 10 months, 124; from 9 to 9 1-2 months, 54; less than 9 months 9. Many schools that planned for 10 months fell short by two or three days only, and usually because of the closing of school for unanticipated reasons.

EVENING SCHOOL.

Fifty-one places have evening schools, with 1,326 teachers and 33,644 students. The average attendance has gained and the average cost per pupil reduced.

PUBLIC KINDERGARTENS.

Thirty-seven town have 231 public kindergartens, with 443 teachers and 14,538 pupils—a gain in every item.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF SCHOOLS.

The past year has been one of activity in extending the system of district superintendencies. After July 1, 1902, every town, every city, is required by law to employ a superintendent of schools. Up to the present time, however, the growth of the superintendency, covering a period of sixty years, has been entirely voluntary. The following facts are of public interest:—

Number of towns employing superintendents independently, 105; number of towns in a union superintendency, 2; number of towns in district superintendencies, aided by the State, 204; total, 311. These three groups reflect the three classes of provisions in the statutes for the appointment of superintendents. They cover from 96 to 97 per cent. of all the schools and pupils in the State. Of the 42 towns without superintendents, 36 are entitled to aid from the State and 6 are not. Many if not most of these 42 towns will probably succeed in making superintendency arrangements before July. One superintendent (Boston) receives a salary of $6,000; 3 (Worcester, Springfield and Brookline), a salary of $4,000 each; 13, between $3,000 and $4,000; 42, between $2,000 and $3,000; 109, between $1,000 and $2,000; and 7, below $1,000. The average for the State is $1,890.

The voluntary growth of the movement is a striking tribute to its efficiency. The new law simply makes universal what has nearly become so without it. The system of district supervision is admittedly the best in the United States for the welfare of rural schools. With care in the selection of superintendents, it can be further improved.

HELP FOR BRAINY MEN

Andrew Carnegie's Plan For Scientific Research.

MANY INQUIRIES ALREADY MADE

Some Apply For Positions and Others Seek Assistance—Millionaire's Object Is to Aid Exceptional Men Lacking Means to Develop Their Ideas, Says Charles D. Walcott.

Charles D. Walcott, director of the United States geological survey and secretary of the incorporators of the Carnegie institute, in speaking the other day of the proposed institution said to a Washington representative of the Philadelphia Press:

"It is not to be a university in any sense, although the popular impression seems to be prevalent throughout the country that such is the case. Mr. Carnegie's purpose is to establish an institution where 'the exceptional man' and those who want to follow up some particular branch of scientific research may find ample opportunity and provision for following up such research.

"The institute will undoubtedly be equipped with competent instructors and laboratories in order to further such an end. The plan is to have an administration building, but that matter must be left to the board of trustees. Just what they will do in the matter, however, is conjecture, pure and simple. They are all able men.

CHARLES D. WALCOTT.
[Secretary of the Carnegie Institute incorporators.]

"Already I have commenced to receive letters from all parts of the world asking for positions and seeking the institution's aid along the various lines they suggest."

"Then it is the purpose of the Carnegie institute to aid certain individuals in perfecting inventions?" he was asked.

"Yes," continued the director, "that is exactly what clause 2 of the purposes of the institution means. It is as follows:

"'To discover the exceptional man in every department of study, whenever and wherever found, and enable him, by financial aid, to make the work for which he seems specially designed his life work.'

"To illustrate," continued the director. "Take the case of a man like Marconi, whose wireless telegraphy achievements have astounded the civilized world.

"If such a man wanted to carry on investigations and experiments along a certain line of invention or scientific research and did not have the means financially or otherwise to do so and applied to the Carnegie institute for help, he would undoubtedly get it. Of course there will of necessity have to be a committee appointed of men acknowledged to be thorough, practical scientists to examine into each particular case, otherwise the institution might find itself embarrassed by having a lot of cranks with freak inventions applying to it for assistance."

Director Walcott said that it would be the duty of the board of trustees at their meeting in Washington on Jan. 29 or at some future meeting to elect permanent offices of the institute and outline the work that it is to accomplish and methods to be employed in its conduct. He said that the officers of the institution would undoubtedly receive salaries, the amount of which, however, would have to be fixed by the board of trustees. "It is only proposed to use the interest of $10,000,000," he said, "in running the institution."

This money is available now, and the completion of the institute depends upon the manner in which the board of trustees facilitates its organization and future work. The director would not discuss the suggestion that has been made to place the institute on a site near Rosslyn, in Alexandria county, but said that all such matters would have to be left to the board of trustees.

He said in conclusion that those who had incorporated the institute would have nothing further to do with its conduct, as their existence ceased with the appointment of the board of trustees.

There was one entirely new and original figure at the society bachelors' ball just held in New York. The lights in the ballroom were extinguished, says the New York Journal, and the dancers tossed balls lighted electrically gleaming with colors—blue, red and yellow—back and forth over a tennis net stretched for the time across the room.

A volunteer company of electrical engineers is being prepared for active service in South Africa at the express wish, it is understood, of Lord Kitchener.

CHINESE BANK IDEA LIKED.

Celestials In New York Say the Institution Would Succeed.

Chinese merchants of New York city are much interested in the news which comes from Vancouver, B. C., that Chinese reformers are about to establish banks in the Chinatown districts of several cities in the United States. The plan was first broached when Huang Yu Wei, the energetic reformer, visited the Pacific coast two years ago. He was forced to leave the country before his plans could be carried out, owing, it is said, to the arrival of several highbinders who were commissioned by the empress dowager to kill him. During the Boxer uprising and the resultant trouble, in which the allies took a part, Huang Yu Wei kept in the background.

The reform party in China is now gaining strength every day, and Huang is said to be in possession of considerable funds. He has always desired to gain some hold over the Chinese in America, many of whom lean toward the reform party, and it is said that he believes the chain of banks will give him much influence. The headquarters of the banking system, according to the accounts which have reached New York, will be at Hongkong. The first bank will be established at Vancouver, where there is a large Chinese population.

There is no regular Chinese banking house in New York, though there are many Chinese with large bank accounts. Most of the business goes to the savings banks in the Bowery. The Chinese who get rich in this country seldom invest in real estate, and the stock market is entirely too involved and uncertain to claim any of their profits. They keep most of their wealth in cash and are content with the interest which the banks pay. The poorer Chinese deposit their savings with the merchants, from whom they receive no interest. They are glad to have their money in a safe place and promptly available in case of need. Considering the number of Chinese who leave their money without any particular security with the merchants of the quarter the number of cases in which there has been an attempt at fraud is very small. The Chinese merchant who would violate a trust of this kind would be driven from the quarter as a punishment for his breach of faith.

A great deal of money is sent to China every month by the merchants and other Chinese residents. This exchange would be the principal source of business for a local Chinese bank. It is now handled almost exclusively by the express companies, which issue drafts on Hongkong. Chinese bankers have established a reputation for honesty throughout this country, and if the prospective New York bank is established on a solid basis the Chinese say it will surely succeed.

LOVES THE GAME.

Why Rich Pierpont Morgan Continues to Work For Money.

A friend recently asked J. Pierpont Morgan why it was he devoted so much time to accumulating money when his income already was so large, concluding that it must be because he simply loved money, says a New York correspondent of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

"No, no!" exclaimed Mr. Morgan. "I do not love money for its sake, I assure you; but, candidly, I do enjoy the excitement, the fun and the battle in making it. With my bank interests I could not retire if I would. I have my work to fulfill and I must continue in business. It is a very true saying that 'Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown,' and there is no end to the responsibility and no rest for the leader, whether in affairs of state, at the head of an army or a financial house. It is only the excitement of the game, so to speak, that keeps one up, not the prospective gain, I assure you. Success or wealth, like the snowball, gathers unto itself. I long ago made the sum of money which in my boyhood days I dreamed that I would like to have, but I had created an enterprise that demanded my time and attention to develop, and I have never since been able to get away from the treadmill and now never expect to until senility or death claims me."

Quay as a Faith Healer.

Senator Quay of Pennsylvania is not a laughing man. He rarely lets anything move beyond the twinkle in his eye, but a Florida farmer's impression regarding him made him "let loose," says the New York Times. The senator, returning from a fishing trip to his bungalow at St. Lucie, Fla., rode in an accommodation train, and the farmer sat beside him and questioned him. Quay's knowledge of countryside gossip proved limited and discouraging.

"Don't belong in these parts, do ye?" said the farmer. "Don't know much about Floridy, do ye?"

"I have been here several times in my wanderings," said Quay.

"And what might be the reason ye air wanderin'?"

"I am trying to ameliorate the condition of man—the inner man," replied Quay solemnly.

The farmer moved to another seat and remarked to the man beside whom he sat, "Talked to thet feller back thar a good bit 'fore I found out he was one o' them dern faith healers."

The Birthday of a Nation.

The new Australian federal government is appointing a Commonwealth day on the lines of the American Independence day. It is now engaged in weighing the claims of July 1, when Queen Victoria assented to the constitution; Sept. 30, the date of the proclamation; Jan. 1, the inauguration of the commonwealth, and May 9, the date of the Duke of Cornwall's opening of the first federal parliament. The January date is the one most favored.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. For sale by all druggists.

CUBAN SUGAR INDUSTRY

A Losing Investment Under Present Conditions

RECIPROCITY A BENEFIT

Which Would Be Greatly Felt In the United States—Large Amount of Cane Will Not Be Harvested Unless Concessions Are Made to Planters

Washington, Jan. 16.—The hearing before the ways and means committee on the Cuban question began yesterday. The questioning which followed revealed the feelings of the committee. Tawney (Rep., Minn) and Metcalf (Rep., Cal.) representing the beet sugar interests, and Robertson (Dem., La.) speaking for the cane sugar interests, displaying the most critical spirit.

The Cuban industries were represented by Messrs. Place, Mendoza, Munois and Francke, chosen by commercial organizations in various parts of the island. The American interests engaged in sugar production in Cuba were represented by Edwin F. Atkins of Boston, spokesman for an organization controlling a large part of the sugar production of the island. William Hayward was present in behalf of the Hawaiian sugar planters and Henry T. Oxnard for the domestic beet sugar interests. The tobacco and other interests affected by Cuban production also were well represented.

Chairman Payne stated at the outset that the hearing was in reference to that portion of the president's massage relating to reciprocity with Cuba. Mr. Atkins made the opening statement in behalf of reciprocity. He spoke of the enormous overproduction of sugar throughout the world, amounting to about 1,500,000 tons, which had resulted in a crisis in the industry. European countries had met this by bounties, so that the German producer, by means of a bounty, was able to sell sugar at half a cent a pound below its cost of production. The cost of production in Cuba was 2.6 cents a pound, which was somewhat above the selling price. Mr. Atkins stated that there was now about $20,000,000 worth of standing cane in Cuba and at present prices a considerable part of this would not be harvested. While not an alarmist, he said the effect would be serious loss to the planters and the laborers employed. The loss to labor, he thought, was likely to lead to disturbances. At the time set for the withdrawal of American troops there would be, in his opinion, a deficit in the insular revenues which were largely recruited from the sugar industry.

Mr. Atkins stated that a 50 percent reduction of duties was desired on the various large products of the island, but in response to inquires from Mr. Payne he said that the sugar industry felt they should have 100 percent reduction. Mr. Atkins stated that the opposition to Cuban reciprocity came from different sources, namely, the domestic beet sugar industry, the Hawaiian planters and the snugar interests in Porto Rico and Louisiana, aggregating 890,000 tons production. To Mr. Payne he stated that a very large percentage of the Cuban sugar industry was owned by citizens of the United States. Aside from the advantage of reciprocity to Cuba, Mr. Atkins maintained that it would be of material advantage to the United States, including a reduction in the price of sugar to the people. Asked by Mr. Payne if his sugar business was profitable last year, Mr. Atkins said he conceded that it had been, but general inquiry among planters showed that they had not done a profitable business.

Too Busy to Go Visiting

Berlin, Jan. 16.—Emperor William has occasionally told Americans that he would like to visit the United States and he still desires to do so. But there is not the least probability of his gratifying this desire, as reasons of state imperatively forbid his leaving Germany for the period of time required to go to the United States, just as the duties of President Roosevelt would prevent him from visiting Germany.

A Sick Liver

Can work havoc with human happiness. It can change the cheerful philanthropist into a morose misanthrope and the optimist into a pronounced pessimist. The liver has a great deal to do with the removal of the waste of the body. When it is sluggish in its action the whole body must suffer by reason of clogging accumulations.

The excretory organs in general promptly respond to the action of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It restores the liver to healthy activity, purifies the blood, and cures diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

Mr. Edward Jacobs, of Marengo, Crawford Co., Indiana, writes: "After three years of suffering with liver trouble and malaria I gave up all hopes of ever getting stout again, and the last chance was to try your medicine. I had tried all the home doctors and received but little relief. After taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets,' I am stout and hearty. It is due entirely to your wonderful medicines."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains: you lose. Therefore, accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assist the action of the "Discovery." They are easy to take, agree with the weakest constitution, and do not beget the pill habit.

OKLAHOMA OUTLAWS

Add Murder of Sheriff and His Deputy to Their List of Crimes

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 16.—Sheriff Smith and his deputy, George Beck, were killed by highwaymen yesterday in the vicinity of Anadarko, the home of the officers. A posse of 100 men started immediately on the trail of the murderers, but no arrests have been reported. The posse expects a fierce fight before the men shall be taken. The notorious highwaymen, Bob McCune, Ben Cravens and Bob Sims, are at the head of the gang in that region. A number of murders and robberies are charged to the gang that murdered the officers and efforts to capture them have been made by all the officers in that vicinity.

Smith and Beck met death while storming an Indian hut eight miles west of Anadarko. Highwaymen on Sunday night held up and robbed persons going home from church and Smith and Beck, accompanied by Deputy Briggs, located the robbers in the hut. In attempting to enter, Smith was shot through the breast and died in a few minutes. Deputy Beck was also shot through the breast and his left arm was shattered. Briggs was not injured. The highwaymen robbed the dead bodies of the officers and then fled. Sheriff Smith made a dying effort to arrest the robbers and shot several times through the door and walls after being wounded. Beck continued to fight until killed.

THE TEXTILE INDUSTRY

Important Questions Come Up at Fall River

NO DECIDED ACTION TAKEN

But Matters of Interest to the Craft In Various Sections of the Country Are Considered—The International Union Asked to Settle Strike Debt

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 17.—An important meeting of the executive council of the United Textile Workers of America was held here last night, and matters affecting a wide stretch of territory were considered. The principal purpose of the meeting was to consider a communication received from the textile workers in Augusta, Ga., stating their various grievances and requesting an advance of wages of 10 percent. Another communication was received from the operatives of the Hickman mills at Grantville, S. C., where the operatives have been locked out since last Tuesday morning. In relation to these two matters and other minor grievances in connection with the industry, Secretary Hibbert was instructed to make a tour of the south, visiting all the labor unions in that part of the country and obtaining their version of the trouble, together with that of the manufacturers, and report back to the council for further consideration.

A small strike is in progress in the woolen mills at Seneca Falls, N. Y., and the secretary was instructed to obtain statements from both sides regarding the situation. These operatives ask for an advance of wages from 63-4 cents to 7 cents a yard.

A communication was received from the mills at Plymouth, Pa., notifying the council of the extremely low wages paid in that town. The communication was taken under consideration.

The secretary was also instructed to investigate fully the troubles of the textile workers in Allamance county, N. C., which are the result of the recent strike in that section. This strike was endorsed before the organization was merged into the United Textile Workers and it was said the operatives were given to understand that all debts contracted would be paid by the International union. At the time of the recent convention in Washington it was agreed that the new organization would pay all bills as soon as possible, but action has been deferred until the council could learn the result of the appeals for assistance which were sent out.

The question of adopting a standard price list for all branches of the industry was brought before the council by a delegation from New Bedford. The council has gone on record as being in favor of a standard price list and endorses any action similar to the one above which might be taken by any of the unions. In regard to a test being made in New Bedford, the council did not care to make any recommendation or to take action until the matter could be more fully investigated.

Matthew Hart of New Bedford made a strong appeal for the United Textile Workers taking a stand on this matter, and insisting upon its adoption in every mill in the United States as the only method of preventing trouble continually cropping out. He urged that the time to force its adoption is at present, when the country is in a prosperous condition, when the market for cotton goods is active, and when manufacturers are receiving good prices for their products. Backed by the New Bedford Weavers' union, Mr. Hart explained that the New Bedford weavers stand ready to fight this battle for the the weavers of the United States, provided the New Bedford weavers are given the assurance of support by the executive council of the United Textile Workers of America, which, in his opinion, will be necessary in such an important undertaking.

An Underground Battle

Victor, Col., Jan. 17.—A desperate battle 400 feet under ground between ore thieves and officers and trusted employes occurred in Independence mine on Battle mountain yesterday. Between 50 and 75 shots were exchanged between the parties. One member of the company's force was shot, but not seriously injured. The thieves finally forced the company men to retreat toward the big shaft, giving the thieves an opportunity to escape.

A HOPEFUL VIEW

London Financial Circles Hear of Negotiations For Peace

London, Jan. 17.—A strong belief prevailed in financial circles here late yesterday that negotiations for peace had been reopened between leading Boers and the British government. South African stocks rose in sympathy with the reports. The exact nature of what was going on was not known, but a representative of The Associated Press learned that leading Boers had indirectly approached the government, protesting against the appropriation of farms in the Transvaal and Orange River colonies by British settlers, which system is now being rapidly pushed, and that strong influence had been brought to bear on the Boer leaders to save at least a vestige of property for their followers.

Whether what is passing between the Boers and the British government can be termed peace negotiations or what will be their result, can only remain speculation for the present. The stock exchange evidently takes a hopeful view of the outcome.

Nothing definite can be ascertained with regard to the alleged peace movement. The Vienna papers declare that the government of the Netherlands has entered into confidential negotiations with the Boer leaders with the view of bringing the war to an end.

Indians Threaten Trouble

Dowagiac, Mich., Jan. 17.—Three hundred Pottawattomie Indians are besieging Lee Bros.' bank, which they threaten to break open if they are not paid the money they expected to receive for signing over their claims to lake front land in Chicago. The Indians were to have received $100 each. Just as the agent was about to issue the money an order was received from the probate judge of the county instructing him to make payment only to the guardians of the Indians. The judge feared the Indians would spend the money in saloons and after becoming intoxicated, cause trouble. If any attempt should be made to wreck the bank a serious conflict is sure to follow.

Miners' Terrible Sufferings

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 17.—A dispatch from Nelson says that J. P. Stevens, W. G. Thomas, S. Rockaway and M. Hall, miners, started across the mountain opposite Slocan City to visit the bondholder claim. Before night they became lost in seven feet of drifts of soft snow on the mountain top. They missed their way and spent three days of torture caused by the extreme cold and biting wind of a terrible blizzard. On the fourth day, Wall, Stevens and Thomas managed to reach a camp, and at once sent back for Rockaway, who had been left exhausted on the trail. He was found frozen to death.

Bill Gives Too Much Power

Washington, Jan. 17.—The senate yesterday had under consideration the bill creating a department of commerce, and the discussion tended to show that the measure will have to be amended in many particulars before it can receive the approval of the senate. It was pointed out that if the bill, as reported, became a law, it would create the greatest department of the government and that the secretary of commerce would have more power even than the secretary of the treasury.

Five Less Indians

Washington, Jan. 17.—Five Indians were killed during the recent trouble at the Tongue river agency in Montana, according to the official report received by Commissioner of Indian Affairs Jones yesterday from Agent Clifford. The agent recommends that 50 men from the United States army be stationed permanently at Camp Merritt, near the agency, where there are now only 11 men.

Confesses Murder of Long Ago

Elkhart, Ind., Jan. 17.—James Mather, formerly a well known business man here, has confessed to the murder of Peter Olson, near Muskegon, Mich., 20 years ago. The murder was the result of a quarrel. Olson's body was not found until the following spring. Mather is a patient at the state hospital in Logansport. He declares he was driven mad by the memory of the crime.

Witthaus Can Collect

New York, Jan. 17.—A jury in the supreme court yesterday rendered a verdict for $6639.65 in favor of Rudolph Witthaus, who had sued the city to recover $6180 for services rendered by him in making a chemical analysis on portions of the remains of Henry Barnet, whose death figures in the indictment and trial of Roland B. Molineux.

Murderers From Leavenworth Prison

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 17.—Deputy United States Marshal Bennett says that the men who killed Sheriffs Smith and Beck, near Anardarko, are two of the fugitives from the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, five of whom are still at large. Governor Ferguson has offered a reward of $500 each for the arrest of the men.

Got President's Canal Views

Washington, Jan. 17.—Senator Morgan, chairman of the committee on interoceanic canals, visited the White House yesterday and discussed the subject of canals with the president. He would not make any statement until he had first communicated it to the committee for which he is acting.

TOWN TREASURER ARRESTED

Charged with Forging the Names of the Selectmen.

Aristocratic Wellesley is Shocked by Trusted Official.

Has Dabbled in Stock and Extent of Loss to Town is Unknown.

Wellesley, Mass., Jan. 17.—Town Treasurer Albert Jennings was arrested late yesterday afternoon by State Officer Rhodes, on complaint of State Treasurer Bradford, on the charge of forging the names of the selectmen of Wellesley on a town bond of $5000, and passing the same on Treasurer Bradford in Boston on Dec. 20 last. Early last evening the officer took Jennings to Boston and the selectmen of the town held a long session, but they refused to make known the result of their deliberations.

The books of the town treasurer are being examined by an expert, and the result of the examination will be awaited with a great deal of interest by the townspeople, who have always regarded Jennings as one of the best men in the town. His salary as town treasurer is $500 a year. He also has charge of the water board funds, his total yearly salary being about $875.

Jennings has been engaged in the real estate and insurance business, which, it is believed, has been lucrative. He is a member of the church and highly respected by all who have been connected with him financially or socially. He has a wife and son, the latter being at Harvard at the present time. Mr. Jennings appeared in good spirits when he left town with Officer Rhodes and spoke pleasantly to many of his townspeople who were not aware that he was under arrest.

Jennings, according to the state treasurer, presented himself at the office of the state treasurer at Boston on Dec. 20 and told that official that Wellesley needed about $5000. The treasurer advanced the amount, deducting 3½ percent interest, the rate agreed upon. This gave Jennings $4825 approximately.

Not many hours after the town treasurer had departed with the funds, the state treasurer was called upon by Wellesley officials. They suggested that Wellesley wanted about $20,000. The treasurer said he had already let the town treasurer have $5000. Investigations followed and, although two of the selectmen made good the amount, this did not alter the fact in the mind of the state treasurer that forgery had been committed. Hence Officer Rhodes was sent to Wellesley to arrest Jennings.

Rhodes to Deal In Meat

London, Jan. 17.—Cecil Rhodes has secured contracts amounting to several millions pounds sterling for supplying South Africa, especially the British troops in that part of the world, with fresh meat, which will be taken to South Africa in refrigerator vessels, from British colonies and elsewhere. One of his motives for so doing emanates from long standing differences which have existed between himself and the head of one of the South African cold storage concerns, which, at present, practically controls the fresh meat trade of South Africa.

Adams Indicted by Grand Jury

New York, Jan. 17.—Indictments were found yesterday by the grand jury against Al Adams and the 16 men who were arrested with him some weeks ago in the raids made on certain alleged policy rooms. Adams is charged with the ownership, maintenance and the proprietorship of policy houses as well as having in his possession policy paraphernalia.

Vassar Indebted to Rockefeller

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Jan. 17.—It is announced at Vassar college that John D. Rockefeller has promised to double every gift made to the college before commencement day, 1902, to a sum not exceeding $200,000. Besides lesser gifts, Vassar already owes her recitation hall and one residence hall to the generosity of Mr. Rockefeller.

Mexico City Shaken Up

Mexico City, Jan. 17.—Four distinct shocks of earthquake shook this city yesterday afternoon. The shocks were very sharp. Thousands of people rushed into the middle of the streets for safety and many knelt in prayer. Telegraph poles bent like trees in a gale of wind and most massive buildings were shaken.

The Kaiser's Wonderful Treasures

Berlin, Jan. 17.—Emperor William's silver treasures, from which there have been selected nearly 1000 of the choicest pieces for use at Prince Henry's banquet at New York, compose one of the richest collections of silver possessed by any sovereign of Europe, and is valued at upwards of 5,000,000 marks.

Soldiers' Row at Pekin

Pekin, Jan. 17.—In a disturbance here yesterday evening between three Japanese soldiers and an Austrian sentry, one of the Japanese was killed and the sentry was badly bayonetted.

Schley Must Be Called Victor

Baltimore, Jan. 17.—The Baltimore County Taxpayers' convention has placed a ban upon any text book which does not give Admiral Schley credit for the naval victory at Santiago.

Good Afternoon

King Oscar of Sweden is exhibiting a liberality which would do credit to the ruler of a greater nation. He has just taken steps towards granting home rule to Iceland. His course will confirm the loyalty of his Icelandic subjects.

The Dingley tariff bill contains a reciprocity clause which was intended to render unnecessary any immediate change by Congress of the provisions of the bill. There are those who pronounce any attempt to meet new conditions by means of the reciprocity clause a violation of the protection policy, but they are in grave error.

While Mayor Bryant in his inaugural address recommended a new city department, an inspector of wires, the experiences of the city of Waltham may be of value. The Free Press of that city says: "The matter of consolidating the Fire and Electric Wires Department and the appointing of a permanent chief which came before the Board of Aldermen last year and was at that time referred to the Joint Committee on Ordinances and Fire Department, was finally referred to the present Board. In making his report last year Chairman Sears of the Joint Committee stated as one of the reasons for recommending that the matter be referred to this year's Board was on account of the length of Chief Hodgdon's term of office. He was appointed for three years and has one more year to serve, and the committee did not think it advisable to make any change at the time. This year the matter will probably be acted definitely upon and the change may be made next year. Chief Hodgdon has said that he would not accept the permanent office."

The electric wires of Quincy should undoubtedly be supervised for the protection of life and property and the trees, but it is questionable whether we need another city department. Either the Chief Engineer of the Fire department or the electrician under him should supervise the running of all new wires and have authority to compel all companies to do it properly.

The movement to amend the City Charter relative to abolishing district engineers, will probably lead up to a permanent chief who shall give all his time to the city. Such an official would have time to supervise all electric wires, and the cost would be less to the city.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Quincy built 123 new houses last year, which is the strongest kind of evidence that the city is progressively prosperous and residentially attractive.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞Marconi favors Wellfleet on the Cape for one of his wireless telegraph signal stations. The enterprise requires a good deal of sand and there is a big heap of it at Wellfleet.—Mansfield News.

☞Canada is experimenting with a four dollar note—a useless piece of currency we should suppose. Two especially hard criticisms are made—one that it looks like a one dollar note and the other that the picture is that of the United States Sault Ste. Marie canal instead of the Canadian lock.—New Bedford Standard.

☞Some ministers in our day are coming to grief through their trust in the new gospel of "hustle." The great things are not done through hustling. The characteristics of the most enterprising and successful men are patience, steadiness, and perseverance. They "get there" by virtue of a clear intelligence constantly applied to the problems before them.—Christian Register.

☞The undesirability of using lead service pipe for water distribution, owing to the danger of lead poisoning, is particularly emphasized by the State Board of Health in its annual report and too wide circulation cannot be given its caution in that respect. While no harm may be perceptible from the use of pipes of that sort in quite extended service, the only way to absolutely prevent the instance where trouble does result is to not use pipes of that material at all in connection with domestic consumption. — Lynn Item.

☞A man may lack the qualities which insure financial success in the bustling world of business, and yet as an administrator of public affairs he may accomplish more than would the man who has those qualities if he were sent to the senate or the house. Some of the most successful, influential men in congress whose retirement would be a sensible loss, perhaps never could have earned $5,000 a year if they had remained in private life. There are others who would be earning now much more than $5,000 a year if they had kept out of public life and devoted themselves exclusively to money making.—Chicago Tribune.

☞Fifteen months ago the Worcester Telegram announced that the New York, New Haven & Hartford steam road was buying up the electric lines in the Connecticut valley which came into competition with its lines. The report was denied at the time but now the steam road management has come to the point where it is necessary to show its hand and confesses to the ownership of an extensive system. It is not at all unlikely that if the syndicates and combinations which appear as the owners of other electric lines in New England were scratched deeply enough the "real thing" in their management would be discovered to be a close connection of the steam railroad interests.—Haverhill Gazette.

Disabled Veterans.

Representative Drinkwater of Braintree introduced a bill of interest to certain veterans in the Legislature on Thursday, which provides that:

"All veterans who served in the civil war from 1861 to 1865 in the quota of Massachusetts or any veteran who had a residence here at said time and who enlisted in another state and has resided in this state continuously since said war to the passage of the act who has lost an arm or leg, or the use of same by wounds, and who is dependent on his own exertions with what pension he may receive from the general government, shall be paid a pension of $12 a month from the passage of the act, the same to be in lieu of any state aid that he might be entitled to receive."

Did Anybody Faint?

The Brockton Enterprise tells of a young man who took a sensational method of announcing the attainment of his majority. On the morning of his 21st birthday anniversary, shortly after midnight, the young man's family were suddenly started from their slumbers by a loud voice calling, "There's a man in the house! There's a man in the house." The valiant paterfamilias rushed from his room, bearing in his hands a heavy billet of fire wood to learn the cause of the disturbance and to capture the intruder. His son was standing in the hall shouting at the top of his voice. "Where's the man? exclaimed the old gentleman. "Here, sir; here!" proudly replied the young man. "This is he. At last I'm 21!"

Instructive Lecture.

Rev. E. C. Butler, Mrs. Butler and Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Pratt dined with Dr. and Mrs. Willard at Quincy Mansion school on Wednesday evening. After dinner Dr. Butler gave his most interesting and instructive lecture on the "Waldenses."

The close attention and hearty applause of every one present proved the pleasure each one experienced and all even to the youngest pupils expressed the highest appreciation of the lecture and of the kindness of Dr. Butler.

GRANITE SHIPMENT.

Over One Hundred Thousand Tons.

By Rail from Quincy Last Year.

And Thousands of Tons More Over the Road.

Complete returns from the several granite shipping terminals for the year 1901, viz: West Quincy, South Quincy and the Quarry Railroad show the total amount of granite shipped during the year to have been 215,762,042 pounds. This does not include the amount of rough and finished stock shipped by team of which it is impossible to obtain any figures whatever. It is safe, however, to say that the amount is enough to swell the total amount shipped to 250,000,000 pounds.

These figures however do not represent the amount of finished granite for much of the granite shipped by the Quarry railroad and by teams represents rough or unfinished stock. It is safe to say however that practically all of the granite shipped from Quincy Adams and West Quincy was finished stock. The following table compiled from the Ledger files gives the amount shipped each month from the three railroad terminals:

	Quincy Adams	West Quincy	Quarry R. R.
January,	1,714,760	3,158,705	2,884,350
February,	2,973,440	1,958,452	5,064,240
March,	4,166,975	3,709,140	5 211,100
April,	7,016,245	5,915,755	4,222,480
May,	8,122,675	12,300,590	9,334,840
June,	4,073,880	10,353,405	7,155,430
July,	4,623,555	10,137,820	8,917,950
August,	5,460,810	11,412,670	8,331,690
September,	5,899,725	7,876,620	4,858,420
October,	6,447,310	10,828,180	6,517,740
November,	6,127,365	4,297,560	5,527,380
December,	4,202,215	3,702,060	1,980,510
Total,	60,828,955	84,836,957	70,0 6,130

May, it will be noticed was the biggest month at each of the three. At Quincy Adams, April, October, December, September and August followed in order, the lightest month being January.

At West Quincy, the rivals of May business were: August, October, June and July, with February as the lightest month.

On the Quarry railroad July and August fell but little below May, while January was the lightest month. The grand total at the three terminals was 215,762,042 pounds or over one hundred thousand tons.

American Beauties.

Armour & Co's "Society Girl" calendar for 1902 is a highly artistic achievement. The idea is unique. It embodies six types of the American girl of today as described by six of the foremost American illustrators — William T. Smedley, A. B. Wenzell, Albert Sterner, Howard Chandler Christy, Henry Hutt and A. I. Keller. All save one of the drawings are in color; all are full length figures placed against softened backgrounds. The artists chosen for the task were in no instance restricted. They were simply asked to give their ideal type of modern womanhood. All have done so, and the result as set forth in the six original drawings is all that can possibly be desired. All of the artists are well known through their various contributions to leading magazines, as well as to important art exhibitions. Armour & Co., Chicago, will send this beautiful calendar, securely packed, postpaid, to any address on receipt of twenty-five cents in postage.

Emile Gaboriau
Is the Author of our Next Serial Story
From a sketch of the distinguished author in A Library of the World's Best Literature, edited by Chas. Dudley Warner, we clip the following:
"To speak of the detective novel is to speak of Gaboriau. He can't be called the father of it; but the French novelist made his field so peculiarly his own, developed its type of human nature so painstakingly, created so distinctive a reputation associated with it, that it is doubtful whether any one can be said to have outrivaled him. * * * Gaboriau elevated the detective story to something like a superior plane in popular fiction. It is a question whether he did not say in a large measure the strongest word in it, and to all intents and purposes the last word."

SCHOOL FIGURES.

Relative Percentages of Expenditures.

State Aid, Institutes, Normal Schools, Etc.

The concluding instalment of the review of the annual report of the State Board of Education is given below:

EXPENDITURES.

Of the total expenditure for the support of schools $11,134,934, about 74 per cent., or $8,230,431 went for teachers' wages; 1 4-10 per cent. or $151,773, for conveyance of children; 12 per cent, or $1,353,296 for fuel and the care of buildings; 1 4-10 per cent., or $161,294, for school committees 2 6-10 per cent., or $285,865, for superintendents; 5 7-10 per cent., or $629,666, for text-books and supplies; and 2 9-10 per cent., or $322.608, for school sundries.

Of the total expenditures for school buildings, $3,045,013. 70 per cent., or $2,135,632, went for new buildings; 18 per cent., or $554,701, for permanent improvements and 12 per cent., or $354,680 for ordinary repairs.

The total expenditure for support and buildings was $14,179,947, of which all but $379,588 was borne by local taxation.

The average municipal tax cited in the sixty-fourth report was $15.66 of which $4.71 went to the schools. For the present report the average municipal tax for the State stands at $16.18, of which $4.66 is for the schools a decrease of 5 cents for the schools and an increase of 52 cents for other municipal purposes.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

The total aid extended to the towns by the State for high school tuition, district superintendencies, the salaries of teachers, the tuition and conveyance of State wards, and from the school fund, was $207,004. The principal of the school fund is now $4,470,548. The income Jan. 1, 1901, for the preceding year, was $213,066, the average interest being about 4 8-10 per cent. The income for Jan. 1, 1902, will be the regular income increased by the excess of income for a year from the Fitchburg Railroad securities loan sinking fund, which amounts to $175,000. As a moiety of the income goes to the school fund towns, their shares the present year, but for the present year only, will be largely increased.

There were 26 institutes held by the agents of the Board during the year, with an attendance of 2,915 teachers, from 214 towns.

The normal schools examined 942 candidates for admission, of whom 658 entered the lowest class and 110 higher classes. Of the remaining 174, some took preliminary examinations only, the rest being rejected. The total attendence was 1,773; the number of graduates, 545; the number of students from the beginning, 23,613; of graduates from the beginning, 12,120.

As important and delicate work as any during the year has been the approval of teachers for the purposes of State increase in their salaries, work that involves over 50 towns and nearly 300 teachers. Every new teacher appointed and recommended for such increase in pay is personally visited by an agent of the Board, and no increase is authorized unless the service rendered is as good as the conditions warrant.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

—Northampton, England, has purchased its street car system from a private company for the purpose of converting it from horse power to the electric system.

—An Alabama man returned to life just as they were lowering him into the grave. This may not be escaping by the skin of the teeth, but it's getting out of a pretty bad hole.

—A Lisbon lady was being buried when a cry from the coffin disclosed the fact that she was still alive. Five hours afterwards she died from fright.

SOME FOOLISH PEOPLE
Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it will wear them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 25c. and 50c. Trial size free. At all druggists.

CHIEF NOT WORRIED

City Clerk Knows Nothing of the Coming Storm.

The staid old Boston Advertiser is ather sensational and sarcastic in its comments on Quincy and its Police department, but next time should send a reporter and not its funny man, for the latter was unable to get any real facts on his recent visit. His story makes interesting reading and it is printed for the entertainment of our readers more than anything else:

Quincy, Jan. 16,—Since the note of warning sounded by Mayor Bryant's inaugural address the members of the police force have kept their uniforms spotless, their buttons as brilliant as miniature suns, and best of all, their eyes wide, wide open.

The force is not a large one. It includes only ten men beside Chief Hayden and has 96 miles of street to cover. Consequently many of the men have miles of country road to patrol.

Not a squirrel can patter over a fence rail now without being investigated; not a rabbit can scamper through the brush without strictly accounting for his business and destination. Ten lynx-eyed men are looking for trouble and glory with so much zeal that doubtless any able-bodied chief out of a job could secure an advantageous offer from anxious patrolmen to come to this quiet town and be captured.

Since the chuages made Monday night nothing farther has been announced. The mayor is as silent as a sphinx, but knowing ones construe this silence to mean danger.

A reporter called at his office yesterday, but he was out.

"Do you know anything of the coming storm?" was asked of the city clerk.

"No."

Do you know really whether any radical changes are anticipated or not?"

"No."

"Who does?"

"Mayor Bryant!"

"Who else?"

"No one."

Such is power: This one man holds the whole police force of Quincy—10 good men and true — in a state of horrible suspense.

Chief Police Hayden was seen in the little basement room which now serves as police headquarters, station 1, and has a capacity of two prisoners.

He alone of all the force does not seem to be worried.

Nothing has happened, said he, since Monday.

"Anything going to?"

A suggestive shrug of the shoulders was his only reply.

"But really," he went on "we have many decided improvements on hand. We are soon to have a new station house; in fact expect to move in by Feb. 1.

"A system of signal boxes is now being installed which will be of great help to us.

"We are going to have a brand new patrol wagon and a man to drive it.

"Finally, we expect to add five new men to the force."

After the reporter had recovered himself, the chief went on:—

"The new station house is going to be a good one. It will contain a private office, a general office, a cell for women, eight cells for men and one padded cell."

It really made one feel like jumping up and shouting, after listening to this glowing account. Not that the subject itself was particularly interesting, but the chief, like Homer, could have made even a list of names sound well had he recited them with all the glowing enthusiasm with which he enumerated his new possessions.

"But do all these extra precautions argue an increase of crime of late in the district?"

"Not at all. We have been remarkably free from criminals for a year."

Thus matters in policedom stand here today; the mayor, silent and grim; the chief calm and hopeful; the force spotless and trembling.

A Boston Husband.

Hetty—Oh, Bertha, you must show me that bonnet your husband said he was going to buy for you. The last time I was here, you know, he said it was a dream.

Bertha—And it is still a dream, Hetty.—Boston Transcript.

Unsatisfactory.

The man who writes a novel has a fate that's very queer,
For if the public like it critics usually sneer,
And if the critics view it with a mild and generous eye
The public talks about it, but it never stops to buy.
—Washington Star.

Queens.

"I called on four ladies last night," said the fickle beau.

"Gee whiz!" exclaimed Jack Potts. "You must be a lobster. I'd keep on raising all night if I had a hand like that!"—Philadelphia Press.

Cause and Effect.

"Mercy sakes! What's the matter with your husband? Has he been in a fight or a railroad smashup?"

"No; my brother Fred gave him a safety razor for a present."—Chicago Record-Herald.

SPEEDWAY WANTED.

To Settle Owner of Fastest Trotter in Quincy.

Move to Set Apart a Street.

Washington Street and Coddington Street Are Suggested.

Almost everybody who owns a horse runs away with the idea that their particular animal is a little faster than the one of someone else and all that they desire is an opportunity to prove it, in a friendly brush. The spirit of a friendly contest is always uppermost in their minds when there is good sleighing as at present.

In many places there is a speedway where the merits of the horses can be tried, but in Quincy there is none. A number of horse owners in City Square have worked themselves up to the point where nothing will satisfy them but the setting apart of a street where they can have a little racing each afternoon with a couple of police officers to keep the crowd that is sure to gather from being run over, and the turnouts on the right side of the street.

Doubtless the best street for this purpose is Washington street, between Chubbuck street and the Quincy Point bridge. Here is a good piece of level street and just about long enough.

Coddington street has also been mentioned, the course to be from Newcomb street to the Almshouse. This is probably the most unfrequented street, the only objection being its shortness. However, it is better than nothing at all.

The horse owners are moving in the matter and it would not be at all surprising if there was some trotting in the near future.

GORDON---WOOD.

Wedding Followed by Feast and Good Time at Malnati Hall.

Thursday evening Jan. 16, Miss Kate Wood, third and youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wood of Trafford street, was united in marriage by the Rev. Edwin N. Hardy to Mr. George Gordon of Quincy, late of Aberdeen, Scotland.

The wedding ceremony took place at the home of the bride, the house being tastefully decorated for the occasion.

The bride was becomingly gowned in steel grey cashmere, prettily trimmed with white mull and ribbon, and veil to match; she carried a bouquet of flowers. The maid of honor, Miss Agnes Reynolds was dressed in pink. Mr. Gordon, the bridegroom had at his side his brother, Mr. Adam Gordon.

After the nuptial knot was tied the wedding party repaired to Malnati's hall, Liberty street, where a bounteous supper was provided. The tables were splendid in floral decoration.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, after a short trip, will take up their residence in Quincy.

THE HABIT OF GIVING.

Governor E. D. Morgan's First Taste of Real Happiness.

To the present generation the name of Governor E. D. Morgan of New York is scarcely more than a dim echo from the pages of history, but there are men still living who remember him as one of the group of great war governors whose firmness and courage served their country so magnificently in her darkest hour. It was one who so remembered him who told this incident:

Governor Morgan was a very rich man, but until he was seventy years old he never had given away any of his wealth. Then one day he sent for his old friend, Dr. Adams, the president of Union Theological seminary, and told him that he wished to give a large sum of money to the college. The doctor, almost incredulous at first, was soon convinced of the sincerity of the offer, and a time was set at which he was to go and get the bonds.

At the appointed hour the doctor appeared, and bonds to the value of more than $200,000 were put into his hands. The governor stood and watched until the doctor's carriage was out of sight. Afterward he spoke of it to another friend.

"I am an old man," he said. "I have had a successful life and done about all that I had planned to do, and I supposed that I had been happy. But I know now that until I stood and watched Dr. Adams drive away with those bonds I never had known what happiness was. I cannot regret too deeply that early in life I did not form the habit of giving."—Youth's Companion.

The Wills of Noah and Jacob.

The origin of testaments is lost in obscurity, but doubtless they followed soon after the first institution of private property. Eusebius says that Noah made a will soon after the flood wherein he disposed of the whole world. He was certainly possessed of a considerable landed estate, but Eusebius' story of the testament in writing and witnessed under his seal needs confirmation.

In the forty-eighth chapter of Genesis, however, we do find mention of a will, wherein Jacob bequeathed to his son Joseph twice as much as to his other children. This was not a testament in writing, but a verbal or nuncupative testament, declared by the testator "in extremis" before witnesses and depending upon oral testimony.

Such nuncupative testaments were at one time recognized in English law, but in the eighteenth century, Blackstone says, they had fallen into disuse and were hardly ever heard of.

Weighing Machines.

Weighing machines and scales of some kind were in use 1800 B. C., for it is said that Abraham at that time "weighed out" 400 shekels of silver, current money, with the merchant to Ephron, the Hittite, as payment for a piece of land, including the cave and all the standing timber "in the field and in the fence." This is said to be the earliest transfer of land of which any record survives and that the payment was made in the presence of witnesses.

The original form of the weighing scale was probably a bar suspended from the middle, with a board or shell suspended from each end, one to contain the weight, the other to contain the matter to be weighed. The steelyard was probably so called from the material of which it was made and from its former length. It is also known as the Roman balance and is of great antiquity.

Cunning Siberian Natives.

When compelled to travel all night, the Siberian natives always make a practice of stopping just before sunrise and allowing their dogs to go to sleep. They argue that if the dog goes to sleep while it is yet dark and wakes up in an hour and finds the sun shining he will suppose that he has had a full night's rest and will travel all day without thinking of being tired. One or even two hours' stop at any other time is perfectly useless, as the dogs will be uncontrollable from that time forward until they are permitted to take what they think a full allowance of sleep.

Policemen In the Blood.

A writer in Knowledge thus denominates certain wandering cells found in the healthy human body which destroy harmful microbes introduced into the system. "The tonsils, for example, are crowded with these guardian cells." The scene under the microscope when protective cells are introduced into a lively culture of typhoid bacilli is described as very striking, irresistibly bringing before the imagination "the fierce struggle which goes on when disease germs invade the body."

Neither Better Than the Other.

"This dollar"— began the cashier of the restaurant as he scrutinized the coin.

"Is bad, eh?" interrupted the sour looking patron.

"Well, it doesn't look very good."

"That so? Just bite it, and if it's anything like the dinner I had it'll taste even worse than it looks."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. KING EDWARD'S SPEECH

Indefinite Reference to Situation In South Africa

OFFERS OF THE COLONIES

Will Be Accepted to Relieve Overworked Troops In the Field—Advises Stopping of Sugar Bounties and Notes Completion of Canal Treaty

London, Jan. 17.—King Edward opened parliament with a ceremonial in all respects similar to that of February last. The procession to the house of lords was of the same character as that witnessed on the occasion of the opening of the first parliament of King Edward's reign, while within the upper house was seen the same state pageantry, the same historical dresses and the same revival of ancient forms.

The king's speech opened with a reference to the tour of the Prince and Princess of Wales. "They were everywhere," said the king, "received with demonstrations of the liveliest affection, and I am convinced their presence served to rivet more closely the bonds of mutual regard and loyalty by which the vigor of the empire is maintained."

Referring to Great Britain's relations with foreign countries, the king said: "My relations with the other powers continue to be of a friendly character."

Contrary to expectations, the king's reference to the war was just as indefinite as the statements on the subject made in the last half dozen messages from the throne. "I regret," said his majesty, "that the war in South Africa is not yet concluded, though the course of the operations has been favorable to our arms, the area of war largely reduced and industries are being resumed in my new colonies. In spite of the tedious character of the campaign my soldiers throught have displayed a cheerfulness in the endurance of the hardships incident to guerilla warfare and a humanity, even to their own detriment, in their treatment of the enemy which are deserving of the highest praise. The necessity for relieving those of my troops who have most felt the strain of war has afforded opportunity of again availing myself of the loyal and patriotic offers of my colonies, and further contingents will shortly reach South Africa from the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand."

In regard to the sugar conference, the speech says: "I trust its decision may lead to the abandonment of the system by which the sugar producing colonies and home manufactures of sugar have been unfairly weighted in the prosecution of this important industry."

Then came the following clause: "I have concluded with the president of the United States a treaty, the provisions of which will facilitate the construction of an inter-oceanic canal under guarantees that its neutrality will be maintained and that it will be open to the commerce and shipping of all nations."

Next followed references to the Anglo-Brazilian treaty, to the referring of the British Guiana-Brazil boundary question to the arbitration of the king of Italy, to the necessity for the continuance of famine relief measures in India, and to the death of the ameer, "whose son, Habiabullah, has expressed an earnest desire to maintain the friendly relations of Afghanistan with my Indian empire."

After announcing that the estimates have "been framed as economically as due regard for their efficiency renders possible in the special circumstances of the present exigency," the speech concluded with mentioning proposed legislation, of solely domestic interest, with the exception of a bill to facilitate the sale and purchase of land in Ireland.

Their majesties then retired amid a fanfare of trumpets and attended by the same regal ceremony as accompanied their entry into the house.

After the speech from the throne had been formally read in the house of commons and the address in reply had been moved and seconded, the Liberal leader, Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, spoke against the course of the government in South Africa. He said the same, to a large measure, was true of Ireland, where the government, at present, was floundering between concession and coercion. He urged the adoption of the most liberal program toward Ireland.

In the house of lords Earl Spencer (Liberal), criticising the address, said that while he recognized the impossibility of granting the Boer demands for independence, yet he deprecated insistence on unconditional surrender. He urged the government to promise the Boers autonomy similar to the government of Australia and Canada.

Lord Salisbury said he was glad to hear Earl Spencer vent an utterance for which he (the premier) had been frequently and unsparingly condemned. It was quite true that there was no possibility of granting the Boers independence. Neither was it the government's business, after being gratuitously attacked, to inform the Boers on what terms they would be forgiven, especially since the Boers had not yet expressed a wish to be forgiven.

Customary Amendments Coming

London, Jan. 17.—The Irish members held their usual sessional meeting yesterday afternoon and decided to move amendments to the address in reply to the speech from the throne condemning coercion, the South African war, the concentration camps in South Africa and the financial relation between Ireland and Great Britain.

RATHBONE'S TESTIMONY

Has Not Developed Any Criminal Intent on His Part Thus Far

Havana, Jan. 17.—At the trial of the charges growing out of the Cuban postoffice frauds yesterday, the examination of Estes G. Rathbone, ex-director general of posts of Cuba, was concluded, Rathbone was questioned further relative to the furnishing of his residence from the postal funds. Rathbone said he could not have been expected to furnish his official residence from private funds, that he did not know how long he was going to remain in Cuba and that General Brooke, former military governor of Cuba, and General Ludlow, former military governor of the city of Havana, had furnished their official residences from government funds. Rathbone said his superiors knew of his expenditures in this respect and had not made objection thereto and that these bills were only for moneys spent for house furnishings and not on his private account.

The examination of Rathbone did not bring out any strong points for the government, the matters touched upon involving only small amounts compared to the large amount of embezzlement charged. In most of the incidents taken up during Rathbone's examination, it was only a question of whether he had been authorized to make the expenditures in question, and there was a lack of evidence showing criminal intent.

The matter of the expenses of the witnesses who have been brought here from the United States to testify in these cases is now worrying the postoffice officials. The clerk of a New York hotel, one of the witnesses who was brought here to show that Rathbone had lived extravagantly while at this hotel, has put in a bill to the government of $40 a day expenses.

Jest Ends In Matrimony

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Meeting and marrying a woman whom he had never seen before was an undertaking which Dr. Andrew S. Hackney of Kansas City accomplished on his arrival in Chicago yesterday. Miss Josephine Mulock of Middletown, N. Y., and the physician were married last night at St. Paul's church. The marriage was the outcome of a jest made by Miss Mulock when a mutual friend told her that Dr. Hackney would make her a good husband. Miss Mulock said she would marry him. A correspondence was started and soon a proposal came from Dr. Hackney which was accepted. Dr. Hackney is 56 years old and his wife is 34.

Indicted For Coercion

East Liverpool, O., Jan. 17.—D. S. Brookman, manager of the Wellsville plant of the American Sheet Steel company, was indicted by a grand jury at Lisbon for unlawful coercion. The indictment charges that Brookman discharged Leonard Shaffer, an employe of the Wellsville mill, solely because of his connection with the Amalgamated association, and that he unlawfully attempted to coerce Shaffer to leave the association. The case will be carried sufficiently far to test the constitutionality of the Ohio statute which forbids the discharge of employes because of their connection with labor unions.

Halleben Will Entertain Prince

Washington, Jan. 17.—Ambassador Von Hollenben has given notice that he will entertain Prince Henry and suite at the German embassy here. Dr. Hill, the first assistant secretary of state, who is perfectly conversant with the German language, may be charged to represent the department of state in the ceremonies connected with the reception to the prince.

Big Shoe Factory In Mexico

Torreon, Mex., Jan. 17.—A $300,000 shoe factory has been completed here. Arrangements are being made to open up all departments of the tannery and factory proper. A dozen skilled shoemakers from Brockton, Mass., are here for the purpose of teaching the natives how to operate the shoe machines.

A Central American Deluge

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 17.—Incoming freight steamers report a severe storm in Colombia and Costa Rica and all along the Central American coast that began Jan. 1 and was still raging when the last vessel sailed on Jan. 9. Heavy rain accompanied the storm and everything was flooded.

THE QUESTION IS

What to do? It is not a pleasant sensation—that first certain knowledge that one has consumption. Nor is it a happy announcement for one's family and friends. But it is no time for sentiment. You can't begin right treatment too soon.

Fresh air and Scott's Emulsion! That's a good beginning. That treatment alone has cured many cases of consumption. It is always a help.

You must not lose weight. Scott's Emulsion keeps the body in good flesh and has a special action on the lungs. Take it in time.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

MAY FORM NEW UNION

Shoe Workers Said to Be Planning Disruption of Present Organization

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 17.—Considerable excitement prevails in local labor circles over the report that an attempt will soon be made to disrupt the local Shoe Workers' union, which is one of the strongest of its kind in the world, embracing every branch of the shoe workers' craft. It is stated that several members of the Shoe Workers' union who had become dissatisfied with that organization recently held a secret meeting for the purpose of organizing a new union, with a shoe council to act in direct opposition to the present organization.

The Shoe Workers' union, as it is now constituted, has branches in Lynn, Marblehead, Somersworth, N. H., and Newburyport, and the several branches have become a powerful factor in the shoe manufacturing business during the past year. Jeremiah Donovan of this city is general agent of the Shoe Workers' union and it is said that the new movement is started in an attempt to oust Donovan from the office. Agent Donovan and Secretary Woodcock profess ignorance of any such plans, but certain union members state that the new organization is quite well under way.

Twenty-Eight Horses Perished

Boston, Jan. 17.—When fire broke out last night in the stable at 26 Duncan street, Roxbury, occupied by Alden Bros., milk dealers, 34 horses were in their stalls within. Despite the utmost efforts of firemen, policemen and bystanders to rescue them, 28 perished. Nineteen of the horses burned were owned by Alden Bros., and were valued at $3800. Alden Bros. also lost 11 wagons, valued at over $1200, and harnesses, hay and grain worth more than $1000. The building was damaged to the extent of $1000.

Arbitrators Haven't Appeared

Maynard, Mass., Jan. 17.—No change is reported in the strike situation at the Assabet mill. The members of the state board of arbitration, who, it has been stated, would come to Maynard, did not arrive during yesterday. The townspeople fear that the difficulty will not be adjusted right away, and it looks as if the strike would prove a serious matter to all concerned.

Got Bullet In the Leg

Boston, Jan. 17.—Locked up at station 4, James McLean, 28, is charged with assault with intent to kill upon James McPhearson, 26, and the latter has a bullet wound in his right leg. The shooting occurred about midnight on Boylston street but neither of the parties tell anything as to the cause of the trouble between them.

Democrats Not Well Represented

Boston, Jan. 17.—The Public School association showed its disposition to control all the school matters in Boston the coming year, by holding nearly all committee chairmanships on the school board. The committee appointments were announced last night and the Democratic minority got less than was anticipated.

Briggs Case Goes to Jury

Newport, N. H., Jan. 17.—The fate of George K. Briggs, who for three days past has been on trial here for the murder of Mrs. Florence Jones of Langdon on Nov. 2, 1901, now rests with the jury, the testimony and arguments having been completed and the case given to them about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Too Much Stock on Hand

Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 17.—Notices were posted in the Alice Rubber mill of the Woonsocket Rubber company yesterday, announcing a shutdown of the plant after Jan. 25. The duration of the shutdown is not stated in the notices. Over-production is believed to be the cause of the shutdown.

For Alleged Theft of Sealskins

Boston, Jan. 17.—William Davis and his wife, who claim New York as their place of residence, were brought here last night from that city, where they were arrested on a charge of larceny of sealskin sacques valued at $400 from two Boston firms.

Smallpox Victim Dead

East Weymouth, Mass., Jan. 17.—The single case of smallpox which has appeared here had a fatal termination yesterday. The victim was George M. Ford. For 10 days he had the infection.

Howard Claims Innocence

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 17.—James Howard took the stand in his own defense in the Goebel murder trial yesterday. Judge Gordon, in the opening statement for the defense, paid a high tribute to the character of Mr. Goebel and was severe in his arraignment of ex-Governor Taylor and Caleb Powers. He contended that his client, the defendant, however, was innocent. Howard's defense is an alibi.

High Rank Officers Needed

Washington, Jan. 17.—The navy department is experiencing trouble in finding enough officers of high rank to meet the demands for sea service and at the great naval stations and yards where the custom requires the detail of an officer not below the grade of rear admiral to command.

More to Follow

Emperor In "Temple of Heaven"

Pekin, Jan. 17.—The emperor went from the Forbidden City to the Temple of Heaven yesterday, offered sacrifices and gave thanks for his safe return to Pekin. A military escort surrounded the emperor and a great body of nobles and officials followed him.

CASE 113 By... Emile Gaboriau

CHAPTER I.

IN the Paris evening papers of Tuesday, Feb. 28, 1866, the following announcement appeared:

"A great robbery, committed against one of our most honorable bankers, M. Andre Fauvel, caused intense excitement this morning throughout the neighborhood of the Rue de Provence. The robbers with extraordinary skill and boldness succeeded in making an entrance to the offices, in forcing the lock of a safe that has heretofore been considered impregnable and in getting away with the enormous sum of 350,000 francs in bank notes. The police, immediately informed of the robbery, displayed their accustomed zeal, and their investigations have been crowned with success. Already, it is said, one P. B., a clerk in the bank, has been arrested, and there is every reason to hope that his accomplices will be soon overtaken by the hand of justice."

But this time the newspapers were inaccurate in their information. The sum of 350,000 francs certainly had been stolen from M. Andre Fauvel's bank, but not in the manner described. The following are the facts as they were related with scrupulous exactness at the preliminary examination:

The banking house of Andre Fauvel, 87 Rue de Provence, is an important establishment and, owing to its large force of clerks, presents very much the appearance of a government department. On the ground floor are the offices, with windows on the street, protected by strong iron bars, sufficiently large and close together to discourage all burglarious attempts. M. Fauvel's private office is on the first floor over the offices and leads into his private apartments. This private office communicates directly with the bank by means of a narrow staircase, which opens into the room occupied by the head cashier. This room, which in the bank goes by the name of the "cashier's office," is proof against all attacks, no matter how skillfully planned. Fastened in the wall by enormous iron clamps is a safe, a formidable and fantastic piece of furniture, calculated to fill with envy the poor devil who easily carries his fortune in a pocketbook.

The safe is opened by a curious little key. But this is the least important part of the mechanism. Five movable steel buttons, upon which are engraved all the letters of the alphabet, constitute the real power of this ingenious piece of furniture. Before inserting the key into the lock the letters on the buttons must be in the exact position in which they were placed when the safe was locked. In M. Fauvel's bank, as everywhere, the safe was always closed with a word which was changed from time to time. This word was known only to the head of the bank and the cashier. They each had also a key. There was but one danger—that of forgetting the word which was indispensable.

On the morning of the 28th of February the employees were all busy at their various desks about half past 9 o'clock when a middle aged man of very dark complexion and military bearing, in deep mourning, presented himself in the office adjoining the safe, where he found five or six employees. He asked to see the cashier. He was told that the cashier had not yet arrived and that the cashroom was not opened till 10 o'clock, a notice of which was posted in the entry.

"I thought," he said in a tone of cool impertinence, "to find some one here ready to attend to my business, having arranged the matter with M. Fauvel yesterday. I am Count Louis de Clameran, an iron maker at Oloron, and have come to draw 300,000 francs deposited in this bank by my late brother, whose heir I am. It is surprising that no orders were given about it."

Neither the title of the noble manufacturer nor his explanations appeared to affect the clerks.

"The cashier has not yet arrived," they repeated, "and we can do nothing for you."

"Then conduct me to M. Fauvel."

There was some hesitation, then a clerk named Cavaillon, who was writing near a window, said:

"The chief is always out at this hour."

"Then I will call again," said M. de Clameran. And he departed without saying "Good morning" or even touching his hat.

"Not very polite," said little Cavaillon. "But here comes Prosper."

Prosper Bertomy, cashier of Fauvel's banking house, was a tall, handsome man of thirty, with light hair and blue eyes, and dressed in the height of the fashion.

"Ah, here you are!" cried Cavaillon. "Some one has just been inquiring for you."

"Who? An iron manufacturer, was it not?"

"Precisely."

"Well, he will return. Thinking that I would be late this morning, I attended to the matter yesterday."

Prosper had unlocked his office and as he finished speaking entered and closed the door behind him.

"There is a cashier," exclaimed one of the clerks, "who never lets anything disturb him. The chief has quarreled with him twenty times for being tardy, and his remonstrances have no effect upon him whatever."

"And with reason—he knows he can get anything he wants out of the chief. Besides, how could he come any sooner? He sits up all night and leads a fast life. Have you noticed how pale he looks this morning?"

The cashroom door opened, and the cashier appeared before them with tottering step.

"Robbed!" he gasped out. "I have been robbed!"

Prosper's expression, his hollow voice and trembling limbs betrayed such fearful suffering that the clerks got up from their desks and ran toward him. He almost dropped into their arms. He was sick and faint and fell into a chair.

His companions surrounded him and begged him to explain himself.

"Robbed?" they said. "Where? How? By whom?"

Gradually Prosper recovered himself.

"All I had in the safe."

"All?"

"Yes, all—three packages, each containing 100 notes of a thousand francs, and one package of 50,000. The four packages were wrapped in a sheet of paper and tied together."

With the rapidity of lightning the news of the robbery spread throughout the bank. The curious clerks rushed in

M'KINLEY MEMORIALS

Work of National Association in Perpetuating Memory of Martyred President

The site of the memorial tomb to President McKinley has been decided upon by the McKinley National Memorial association, which is now raising funds to erect the memorial. The site will be the mound in a remote section of Westlawn cemetery at Canton, O., which Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, one of the trustees of the association, pronounced "the finest spot out of doors in all the world."

This mound is about seventy-five feet high and rises in a gentle slope from the little stream at its foot. A carriage drive lies at its base. Another mounts the hill and encircles it. About five acres will be used. Westlawn cemetery itself is only sixty-five acres in extent. It is well diversified, however, and has a goodly share of rolling ground. Its many natural beauties have been wisely preserved, and all the improvements have been along harmonious lines. It is especially rich in noble and impressive oak trees. Considering its size and unpretentiousness, it is a little gem of a cemetery.

The mound is not only the highest bit of land in the cemetery, but the dominant point in the surrounding landscape. Canton, two miles away, practically lies at its foot, and the memorial tomb will be distinctly visible from there. It overlooks the entire cemetery, and within its shadow lie the graves of the little McKinley girls, Katie and Ida, whose death in babyhood gave their parents a lasting sorrow. It was always his wish to lie quietly beside them, but from his lofty memorial they will still be under his protection.

In the same lot Mr. McKinley's father and mother lie buried. Their graves are just in the rear of the children's tiny mounds. They are marked only by simple headstones, characteristic in this very simplicity of the strong, unpretentious natures which lie beneath and to whom William McKinley owed so much.

The character of the monument and its size will depend upon the final result of the offerings, which so far have been of an extremely generous nature. It will be, however, worthy of the man and the nation which honors him in its architecture and symbolism.

The McKinley Memorial association has its headquarters in Cleveland. It has twenty-one trustees, all warm friends of President McKinley and appointed by President Roosevelt at the expressed desire of Mrs. McKinley. Its officers are William R. Day, Canton, O., president; Marcus A. Hanna, vice president; Myron T. Herrick, Cleveland, treasurer, and Ryerson Ritchie, Cleveland, secretary. It seeks to have the memorial the free will offering of all the people and wishes many contributions rather than a few large ones. It has no connection with any business enterprises and especially warns the public against any claiming such sanction.

Until the memorial tomb is completed the remains of President McKinley will lie in the receiving vault where they were placed the day of the funeral. A squad of forty-five United States regulars under the command of Captain W. A. Biddle guard this vault night and day.

The plan of the association is to make the memorial in the highest sense the sincere expression of all the people of the country of their love for the martyred president and of their admiration for the qualities expressed so eminently in his life and deeds.

The purposes of the association, as defined in its certificate of incorporation, are the erection and maintenance at Canton, O., of a suitable memorial to the late president and raising the necessary funds for those purposes, and after fully providing therefor the surplus of such funds, if any, is to be devoted to such memorial as may be provided at the national capital.

The association will distribute to all donors to the fund a souvenir certificate which will be worthy of preservation as evidence of participation in the work. By a resolution passed by the American Bankers' association all banks have been designated depositories for subscriptions. All postmasters will receive and forward moneys and all express companies will issue money orders free of charge. In every case the name and address of the subscriber should be forwarded to the treasurer, Myron T. Herrick, Cleveland, O., for preservation in the permanent archives of the association and in order that souvenir certificates may be forwarded.

Besides the memorial tomb in Canton the late president's memory will be conserved in many parts of the country by enduring tributes to his life and character. A bill has been presented to the national congress which is sure to become a law which provides for a commission to select a site and secure plans for a memorial arch in his honor to be erected in the District of Columbia. The commission is authorized to select any unoccupied land belonging to the United States in the District except in the grounds of the capitol and Library of Congress and to erect thereon an arch commemorative of the late chief executive. Plans and specifications are to be asked from competing artists and the sum of $25,000 appropriated for such competition.

M'KINLEY BURIAL PLOT.

In Philadelphia the main corridor of the postoffice will soon be adorned by a bronze bust of McKinley by Edward L. Pausch, the sculptor engaged by the United States government to take the death mask at Buffalo. This will cost $2,500 and is the result of the efforts of the postoffice employees.

Citizens of Austin, Tex., have arranged to purchase a tract of 100 acres for a park to be consecrated to his memory.

At Tower, Minn., a memorial shaft has already been raised and unveiled. It is of iron, resting on a granite foundation, and was erected by the miners and lumbermen of Tower and Sowdan.

Even faraway Hawaii has not forgotten to lay its wreath of laurel on his untimely grave, and its people have decided to build a monument in Honolulu that shall fitly show their admiration for the man and at the same time express their loyalty to the government he represented.

But it is in the peaceful and modest cemetery of Westlawn, on the mound that overlooks the town of Canton, whose chief glory he was and where he expressed a desire to repose, that his countrymen will erect the tomb that will contain his ashes. Perhaps if his wishes could be consulted he would prefer a simple headstone, such as mark the graves of his parents. He owed much to these sturdy, unpretentious people and would have raised a towering monument above them, but he obeyed their wish and bestowed on them for their last sleep only the simple dignity they preferred.

NEW FANCY WORK.

DECORATIVE DARNING ON LINEN IS EASY AND EFFECTIVE.

Real Linen Huck Toweling and the Best Silk Floss Are the Materials. The Darned Huck Is Suitable For Cushions, Doilies and Scarfs.

The new and most attractive darning executed with Roman floss on linen huck is a form of fancy work which will appeal to those who do not wish to tax their eyesight and who wish to produce articles that, in spite of their daintiness, will stand considerable hard usage. The cost of the materials is comparatively slight, and, as nearly all the floss used in the darning appears on the right side, the working method will commend itself to the economical, says The Designer in furnishing the following details of the work:

The darned huck is suitable for sofa pillows, centerpieces, doilies and bureau or sideboard scarfs, and the designs employed are conventionalized flowers, leaves and scrolls. The first illustration shows clearly the mode of working. Only the upper threads of the weave are caught up by the needle, which should be blunt at the tip, short and have a long eye that will carry the floss without fraying it. This darning may be done with one shade of the silk, or a second shade may be carried diagonally across the first. The darned portion forms a background for the conventional design, making it stand out in pure white against the dark ground made by the floss. The leaves, scrolls, etc., are outlined with Kensington or stem stitch and are veined with featherstitch.

The darned huck when intended for a pillow cover may be finished by a deep ruffle of the huck featherstitched with the various shades of floss used in working the cushion top. The centerpieces are worked about the edge in buttonholed scallops, white Caspian floss being usually employed for this part of the work. The cushion top shown in the second cut is worked in different shades of red and requires thirty-two skeins.

As the floss used for working should be of fast color, the cushion tops, doilies or scarfs may be laundered as readily as a linen towel, although it goes without saying that strong soap or chemicals of any kind should never be employed, and it is better to dry the articles in the shade instead of sunlight. They should also be ironed on the wrong side on a padded ironing board, which will raise the pattern.

The scallops of the doilies or the centerpieces are cut out after they are worked and will appear much handsomer if they are padded before being buttonholed with the floss.

It is not worth one's time or skill to embroider or darn on anything but the real linen huck toweling nor to work with any save the best floss.

If preferred, the cushions may be completed by a heavy linen cord or with a wide ribbon ruffle instead of with the huck ruffles. Either the cord or the ribbon must be removed, of course, when the top requires laundering. Ribbon of about two inches in width of the same shades as those of the floss may be featherstitched together for a ruffle instead of the huck, or three ruffles of ribbon four or five inches in width placed one over the other make a very handsome finish. The back of the pillow may be made of the plain huck or of denim or linen the color of one of the shades of floss used. The colored back is preferred by many, as the plain white huck shows the slightest dust mark.

The huck pillows are suitable for the city bedroom or sitting room, but for summer time make delightful hammock or porch cushions, as they are durable and pretty and can be renovated for merely the cost of soap and water. For the hammock or the porch the huck ruffles or the cable cord of linen should be used to finish the cushions.

Bureau or sideboard scarfs of the huck have darned borders or merely darned ends and are finished with featherstiched or hemstitched hems of any preferred width or else with a scallop.

Marking Towels.

Fine towels are marked at one end, exactly in the center. Interlaced letters are more elegant than the monogram, and a large single letter is also correct. Block or script letters are used.

Topic.—Caleb choosing a hard thing.—Josh. xiv, 6-14.

Caleb was the son of Jephunne. Nothing is known of his early history. That he was a foreigner and a proselyte to Judaism is altogether probable, as he is called a Kenezite. He was one of the twelve men sent to spy out the land of Canaan when the Israelites first came to its borders. He and Joshua were the only ones of the twelve who reported in favor of entering the land, and they alone of those who left Egypt were permitted to enter the promised land. Once entered, the new land had to be conquered. Caleb asked Joshua for that portion of the land which the spies had visited and which Moses had promised him. It was a most difficult position to take. His request was granted, and he conquered it and possessed it.

The task that Caleb chose in the conquest of the land of Canaan was a most difficult one. He did not seek a place of ease and of luxury, but chose a hard thing. Hebron was naturally fortified. It was a mountainous country. It was also artificially defended. "The cities were great and fenced." The inhabitants were called Anakim (long necked). They were so large in stature that they were called giants. They were also warlike in disposition and courageous in action. The sight of these very people had filled ten of the spies with terror, and they advised the Israelites not to enter the land of Canaan because of them. Joshua, then a man of forty years of age, was not afraid of them, and, now an old man of eighty-five years, he asks for the difficult task of conquering these warlike, courageous people. His example should be an inspiration to all young Christians. We should not fear the difficult tasks or the arduous duties, but should ever be ready and willing to serve God in the most difficult places. The soldier seeks the most dangerous and difficult tasks. Why should not the Christian soldier?

Caleb did not undertake his dangerous and difficult task in his own strength, but in the strength of the Lord. He was not a fool rushing in where angels feared to tread. He had taken his own strength and the strength of the enemy into consideration and also the necessity of having the presence and help of God. "If so be the Lord will be with me, I shall be able to drive them out, as the Lord hath said." Hard things are not to be chosen in rashness, but in faith. Trust in God will assure us victory over any enemy that it may be our duty to face or success in any task that it may be our duty to undertake.

Caleb's faith and efforts were crowned with success, and he received the land of the Anakim as his reward. Success and reward always follow the faithful performance of duty. With the intelligent faith and courage of Caleb let us "wholly follow the Lord," and success and reward will be our portion.

We should feel that He has given us a lower rank in the scale of creation and shorn our race of its greatest glory—the possibility of sharing His holiness. CASE 113

By... Emile Gaboriau

"Did you find the safe broken open?" said young Cavaillon.

"No; it is untouched."

"Well?"

"Yesterday I put 350,000 francs in the safe, and this morning it is gone."

A messenger had already informed M. Fauvel of the disaster, and at this moment he entered the room. M. Andre Fauvel appeared to be a man of fifty, inclined to corpulency, of medium height, with iron gray hair, and, like all hard workers, he had a slight stoop. Never did he by a single action belie the kindly expression of his face. He had an open countenance and a lively, frank eye.

"What's this I hear?" he said to the clerks, who stood before him respectfully. "What's happened?"

The sound of M. Fauvel's voice inspired the cashier with the energy of a great crisis. The dreaded and decisive moment had come. He arose and advanced toward his chief.

"Monsieur," he began, "having, as you know, a payment to make this morning, I yesterday drew from the Bank of France 350,000 francs."

"Why yesterday, monsieur?" interrupted the banker. "It seems to me that I have a hundred times ordered you to wait until the day of the payment."

"I know, monsieur, and I did wrong to disobey you. But the evil is done. Yesterday evening I locked up the funds. They have disappeared, and yet the safe has not been forced."

"You are crazy," exclaimed M. Fauvel, "or you are dreaming!"

"I am not crazy, neither, unfortunately, am I dreaming. I am simply saying what is true."

This calmness at such a moment appeared to exasperate M. Fauvel. He seized Prosper by the arm and shook him roughly.

"Speak!" he cried out. "Speak! Who do you say opened the safe? Answer me!"

"I cannot say."

"No one but you and I knew the secret word. No one but you and I had keys."

This was a formal accusation. At least, all the auditors present so understood it. Yet the cashier's strange calmness did not leave him. He gently released himself from the chief's grasp and said:

"In fact, monsieur, I am the only one who could have taken this money."

"Unhappy man!"

Prosper drew himself up and, looking M. Fauvel full in the face, added: "Or you!"

The banker made a threatening gesture, and there is no knowing what would have happened if they had not been interrupted by loud and angry voices in the entry. A man insisted upon entering in spite of the protestations of the employees and succeeded in forcing his way in. It was M. de Clameran. The clerks stood looking on, bewildered, motionless, in profound silence. It was easy to see that some terrible question—a question of life or death—was being weighed by all these men. The iron founder did not appear to observe anything unusual. He advanced, his hat on his head, and said in the same impertinent tone:

"It is after 10 o'clock, gentlemen."

No one answered, and M. de Clameran was about to continue when he for the first time saw the banker. He went straight to him.

"Well, monsieur," he said, "I congratulate myself upon finding you in at last. I have been here once before this morning and found the cashroom not opened, the cashier not arrived; you were absent."

"You are mistaken, monsieur; I was in my office."

"I return, and this time not only the cashroom is closed, but I am refused admittance to the office. I am compelled to force my way in. Will you tell me, yes or no, can I have my money?"

M. Fauvel listened, trembling with anger, yet he controlled himself.

"I would be obliged to you, monsieur, for a short delay."

"I thought you said"—

"Yes, yesterday, but this morning, this very instant, I find I have been robbed of 350,000 francs."

M. de Clameran bowed ironically and said:

"Shall I have to wait long?"

"Long enough for me to send to the bank."

Then, turning his back on the iron maker, M. Fauvel said to his cashier:

"Write a note to the bank for a loan of 300,000 francs. Send at once. Let the messenger take a carriage."

Prosper did not move.

"Do you hear me?" said the banker angrily.

The cashier trembled. He seemed as if he was in a stupor.

"It is useless to send," he said. "There is a credit to this gentleman of 300,000 francs, and we have less than 100,000 in the bank."

M. de Clameran evidently expected this answer, for he muttered:

"Naturally."

Although he only pronounced this word, his voice, his manner, his face, clearly said:

"This comedy is well acted, but nevertheless it is a comedy, and I don't intend to be duped by it."

"Oh, don't be alarmed, monsieur," said the banker. "This house has other resources. Have patience till my return."

He went out and up the narrow steps leading to his study and at the end of five minutes returned, holding in his hand a letter and a bundle of securities.

"Here, quick, Couturier," he said to one of his clerks, "take my carriage, which is waiting, and go with monsieur to M. de Rothschild's. Give him this letter and these securities. In exchange you will receive 300,000 francs, which you will hand to this gentleman."

The iron founder was visibly disappointed. He seemed to wish to apologize for his impertinence.

"I assure you, monsieur, that I had no intention of offending. For some years our relations have been such that I"—

"Enough, monsieur," interrupted the banker. "I desire no apologies. In business friendship counts for nothing. I owe you money. I am not ready to pay you. You are pressing. You have a right to demand what is your own. Follow my clerk. He will pay you your money."

Then he turned to his clerks who stood curiously gazing on and said, "As for you, gentlemen, resume your desks."

In a moment the room was cleared of every one except those who belonged there, and they sat at their desks with their noses almost touching the paper before them, as if absorbed in their work. Still excited by the events so rapidly succeeding each other, M. Andre Fauvel walked up and down the room with quick, nervous steps, occasionally uttering some low exclamation. Prosper remained leaning against the door, with pale face and fixed eyes, looking as if he had lost the faculty of thinking. Finally the banker, after a long silence, stopped short before Prosper. He had determined upon his line of conduct.

"We must have an explanation," he said. "Let us go into your office."

The cashier obeyed without a word, and his chief followed him, taking the precaution to shut the door after them.

Nothing in the cashroom bore evidence of the entrance of burglars. Everything was in perfect order. Not even a paper was misplaced. The safe was open, and on the top shelf lay several rouleaus of gold, overlooked or disdained by the thieves. M. Fauvel, without troubling himself to examine anything, took a chair and ordered his cashier to be seated. He had entirely recovered his equanimity, and his countenance wore its usual kind expression.

"Now that we are alone, Prosper," he said, "have you nothing to tell me?"

The cashier started, as if the question surprised him. "Nothing, monsieur, that I have not already told you."

"What? Nothing? Do you persist in asserting a fable so absurd and ridiculous that no one can possibly believe it? It is folly! Confide in me. It is your only chance of salvation. I am your chief, it is true, but I am, above all, your friend—your best and truest friend. I cannot forget that here fifteen years ago you were intrusted to me by your father, and ever since that day have I had cause to congratulate myself on possessing your faithful service. Yes, it is fifteen years since you came to me. I was then just commencing to build my fortune, and you have seen it gradually grow step by step from almost nothing to its present size. As my wealth increased I endeavored to better your condition, you who, although so young, are the oldest of my clerks. At each inventory I increased your salary."

Never had Prosper heard his chief express himself in so feeling and paternal a manner. Prosper was silent with astonishment.

"Answer!" pursued M. Fauvel. "Have I not always been like a father to you? From the first day my house has been open to you. You were treated as a member of my family. My niece, Madeleine, and my sons looked upon you as a brother. But you grew weary of this peaceful life. One day a year ago you suddenly began to shun us, and since then"—

The memories of the past thus evoked by the banker seemed too much for the unhappy cashier. He buried his face in his hands and burst into tears.

"One can confide everything to his father without fear," resumed M. Fauvel. "A father not only pardons, but forgets. Do I not know the terrible temptations that in a city like Paris beset a young man? There are some inordinate desires which break down the firmest principles. Speak, Prosper, speak!"

"What do you wish me to say?"

"The truth. An honorable man may yield to temptation, but his first step toward atonement is confession. Say to me: Yes, I have been tempted, dazzled. The sight of these piles of gold turned my brain. I am young. I have passions."

"I!" murmured Prosper. "I!"

"Poor boy!" said the banker sadly. He paused, as if hoping for a confession, which, however, did not come.

"Come, Prosper, have courage. Make a clean breast of it. I will go up stairs. Go again to the safe. I am sure that in your agitation you did not search thoroughly. This evening I will return, and I am sure that during the day you will have found, if not the 350,000 francs, at least the greater portion of it. And neither you nor I will tomorrow remember anything about this false alarm."

M. Fauvel had risen and was about to leave the room when Prosper arose and held him by the arm.

"Your generosity is useless, monsieur," he said bitterly. "Having taken nothing, I can restore nothing. I have searched carefully. The bank notes have been stolen."

"But by whom, poor fool? By whom?"

"By all that is sacred, I swear that it was not by me."

The banker's face turned crimson. "Miserable wretch," cried he, "do you mean to say that it was I?"

Prosper bowed his head and did not answer.

"Ah, it is thus, then," said M. Fauvel, unable to contain himself any longer. "You dare— Then between you and me, M. Prosper Bertomy, justice shall decide. God is my witness that I have done all I could to save you. You will have yourself to thank for what follows. I have sent for the commissary of police. He must be waiting in my study. Shall I call him?"

Prosper, with the fearful resignation of a man who abandons himself, replied in a stifled voice:

"Do as you will."

The banker was near the door. He opened it and after giving the cashier a last searching look said to an office boy:

"Anselme, ask the commissary of police to step down."

A CONFESSED FORGER

Jennings' Downfall Due to Desire to Get Rich Quickly

IS HELD IN $4000 BAIL

Officers Believe Him Guilty of Other Forgeries Besides the Charge on Which He Was Arrested—Has Been Custodian of Large Amounts

Boston, Jan. 18.—Albert Jennings, Wellesley's town treasurer, who yesterday was held in $4000 for a hearing on Jan. 28 on the charge of forging a $5000 town bond which he sold to State Treasurer Bradford, obtained bail last night and was released from the Charles street jail.

The surprise to Wellesley people that Jennings is charged with so serious an offense has become a sensation, for now State Officer Rhoades says that he is trying to obtain possession of a $15,000 note said to bear the selectmen's signatures which they say are not genuine, and which it is claimed Jennings discounted Dec. 24. The examination of Jennings' books as town treasurer is now in progress.

Jennings was not called in the municipal court yesterday until after a lot of men and women accused of drunkenness, assault and battery, etc., had had their cases disposed of, and the town treasurer looked decidedly out of place. Charles F. Richardson, an attorney, appeared as the representative of Jennings and at the request of the defense the case was continued until Jan. 28 for a hearing. There was a private conference between Judge Sullivan, Attorney Richardson and Officer Rhoades, with the result that bail was placed at $4000.

People interested in the case look upon the bail as exceedingly small considering the fact that there is little doubt that the evidence of his wrong-doing is likely to increase as the hours go by. The state police officers at work on the case, Rhoades and Dunham, are reticent as to the additional information in their possession, but admit that they believe that the prisoner is guilty of other forgeries besides the charge on which he was arrested. Much of this information in the possession of the prosecuting officers comes from admissions made by Jennings himself on his way in from Wellesley, when he was under arrest.

After his arrest Jennings admitted that his downfall was simply the result of his trying to get rich quickly through the medium of speculation. Officers Rhoades and Dunham have reason to believe that after all facts are known it will be shown that it was not one, two three or even five years ago, but long before then, that Jennings' alleged "crookedness" began.

The story of the downfall of the town treasurer is the old, old one, of a man prominent in business and social affairs, who became interested in stock speculation and from time to time was carried down by the slump in the market, and had to resort to illegitimate means to try to keep up. Mr. Jennings is a native of the town, having been born there 49 years ago, before Wellesley was set off from Needham. He was a pillar of the church, married happily, with a son at Harvard, his social relations have been of the best, and he has generally been regarded as a man of the highest integrity.

Upon being arrested it is said that Mr. Jennings at once admitted his guilt to State Officer Rhoades, and that he forged the note which resulted in his arrest for the purpose of taking up a similar note which he forged in December, 1900. Mr. Jennings told the officer that his downfall was caused by stock speculation. Mr. Jennings has received in taxes every year from residents of the town about $100,000, from water rates he has taken in about $60,000, and he has always been the custodian of large amounts that came to the town in the shape of loans, and it is not believed by the selectmen that he misappropriated any of this money.

He had more or less to do with the finances of the Congregational church, and he has every year handled many thousand dollars, the property of estates with which he has had a business connection. He was a prominent Odd Fellow in the lodge of Wellesley, and his advice was taken by it in financial matters. As town treasurer his salary was $500 a year and for looking after the funds of the water board he received $375 a year extra.

A Maryland security company is responsible to the town to the extent of $20,000 for his honesty. Mr. Jennings is a man of striking appearance, over six feet tall, as straight as an arrow, and dresses neatly, but not expensively. He wears short mutton chop whiskers and a mustache, almost gray, and has a sharp, penetrating eye.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The board of health of New Jersey has decreed that hereafter no discarded cigar butts shall be gathered up in the streets or public places and made over for a second sale to the public. A penalty is to be imposed on anyone who collects, remakes or sells tobacco of this character. Dr. McGill, president of the board declares that this measure is absolutely demanded for the protection of the public health. "I believe this tobacco to be a fruitful source of disease," he adds.—Lowell News.

☞ Mr. Hamlin undoubtedly struck at one of the roots of the evil of corporation control of our legislation when, in his address before the Democratic club, Monday night, he referred to the practice of public official using their power to secure employment for their supporters from corporations interested in the course of legislation. The love of money is not greater as a source of legislative corruption than the love of power and many a man who would spurn the offer of a bribe in the shape of cash, gladly accepts one when it comes in the shape of a favor done for a friend through himself. It is a pleasant thing to have a "pull," and still more pleasant to have that possession recognized by others and the desire for such a possession oftentimes blinds the mind of the legislator to facts that he would ordinarily see and which if he saw them no money could induce him to disregard. Not many people regard this practice as bribe-taking, and the majority of constituents draw upon this power of their representative with perfect freedom, wholly regardless of the fact that this power is never attained without a price, and that if the legislator is granted a favor by this or that interest, there is an implied if not a stated indebtedness created by the legislator that is very apt to be cancelled whenever the obliging interest calls upon the favored member for settlement. Mr. Hamlin suggests a drastic law, but no more drastic than the importance of the reform demands. — Haverhill Gazette.

The New Yacht Club.

A meeting of those interested in the formation of a new yacht club in Quincy was held last evening at the office of Dr. McSweeney. There was a good attendance and the general sentiment was that there was a field for another club. The feasibility of securing a location on Great Hill was also discussed. No definite action, however, was taken on the matter. Arthur Cavanagh presided, and the meeting, which took the form of an informal discussion, was adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

FIRST GOVERNOR.

John Hancock Was Born in Quincy.

Adams Academy Now Marks Site.

Alfred S. Roe Writes of Governors of Massachusetts.

A very entertaining historical article opens the January number of the New England Magazine. It is part one of "The Governors of Massachusetts" written by Alfred S. Roe, and is illustrated with portraits. As a Quincy man was the first governor, it is of especial local interest, but the summary taken as a whole has lots of information. It is only one of many entertaining articles in this progressive magazine. Concerning Hancock the paper of Mr. Roe says:

"The Constitution of Massachusetts was evolved in the midst of Revolutionary chaos. Under its provisions the first election was held September 4, 1780. Of the 12,281 votes cast, above 11,000 were for John Hancock. His leading competitor, James Bowdoin, had a trifle more than one thousand a and scattering votes were thrown for at least fifteen others. There had been no nominating convention, so the people had been allowed to go as they pleased and accordingly they remembered many of the distinguished men in different portions of the Commonwealth.

"If at that time Massachusetts had an aristocracy, the first governor might be considered a representative. The son of a clergyman, his birthplace stood on the present site of the Adams Academy in Quincy. Born January 12, 1737, he was graduated from Harvard in 1754, and by inheritance was one of the richest men in the state. With such advantages there is little wonder that he early acquired prominence. Of an impulsive nature, somewhat overbearing at times, he made numerous enemies while his general worth and outspoken patriotism engendered popular approval. He was not thirty years old when he entered public life with Otis, Cushing and Sam. Adams, and there never was any uncertain tone to his voice as he denounced British tyranny. The speech ascribed to him after the Massacre of March 5, 1770, has thrilled American school boys during all the intervening years.

"So energetic was his course in the pre-revolutionary days that he won from General Gage the special distinction of exception, along with Sam. Adams, to the general pardon offered by that officer to all other rebels. His expression, 'Burn Boston and make John Hancock a beggar,' has long stood as an example of patriotic devotion, while his signature appended to the Declaration, written so boldly that King George III might read it without spectacles was, for nearly a month, the only name affixed to that immortal document.

"He was inaugurated governor October 25 and by annual re-elections held his place till his resignation February, 1785. Alden Bradford says the assigned reason was his infirm health, never robust, but the same writer implies that popular discontent on account of the burden of taxation, following the Revolutionary War, had its influence. However it is noteworthy that he at once accepted an election to the General Court and was by that body sent to the Continental Congress where he was soon elected to his old position of president. In justice to Hancock, it must be stated that illness prevented his filling the latter office. Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Cushing filled out the remainder of his official year in Boston.

"Governor James Bowdoin, in his rigid enforcement of the laws, had so far estranged the voters of the Commonwealth that in 1787 they again elected Hancock and by an overwhelming majority more than three to one, and until his death they thus continued to honor him. Twelve times, in his two terms, was he the successful candidate. During his second term it was Hancock's privilege to favor the adoption of the Federal Constitution and to preside over the convention which voted to accept it. He specially favored laws adding to the efficiency of the public schools.

"In October 1789 President Washington visited Boston and the punctiliousness incident to his reception has given rise to many stories, some of them doubtless much exaggerated. So careful a writer, however, as Jared Sparks states that Governor Hancock stood too much upon his dignity, from which, at last he was compelled to depart and to pay the first visit to the President. To be sure, he was swathed in bandages as he was borne into the august presence of Washington, upon the shoulders of his retainers but Bay State dignity was spared too great impairment. The governor's gout was not only aristocratic, but it was at times very convenient. It served as an excellent excuse for not doing that to which he was disinclined. With such notions of what was due the governor of a state from the President of the United States it would seem that Governor Hancock's Federalism had developed some qualifications.

"His residence on Beacon Hill was the most noted in Boston and should be in existence today. In his specially contructed dining room, he could entertain fifty guests and hither he was frequently carried to beam upon his friends and to add zest to the feast. Could he, by any means, revisit his ancient haunts, attired as was his wont, how the people would stare at scarlet coat, embroidered blue silk waistcoat; with drab small clothes and silken hose, powderd wig and snuff box, he would create a sensation. No one knows what the old governor would think of a generation of men who part their hair in the middle.

"After many years of invalidism he died October 8, 1793 and was buried in the Old Granary Grounds, close to the walls of the present Park Street Church, but, notwithstanding his wealth and position, it was not till 1897 and then, through legislative appropriation that an adequate monument was erected to his memory.

"Of no man of his times have there been more diverse opinion. For nearly fifty years the cynosure of all observers, ready, courtly, brave and patriotic, he was as thoroughly disliked by some as he was honored by others Save a small volume by A. E. Brown, covering over twenty years of his career, put forth in 1898, the Life and Times of John Hancock await their historian.

THE COMMITTEES.

President Alden Expected to Announce them Monday.

President Alden of the City Council will probably appoint his committees at Monday night's meeting of the City Council.

The most important committee is that of Finance, of which R. R. Freeman has been chairman for two years, and doubtless he will again receive that appointment. Councilmen Faxon and Newcomb are the only members of this year's Council other than Mr. Freeman and President Alden who served on that committee last year, and they will doubtless be reappointed. This leaves four vacancies to be filled.

The committee on Streets is another important committee but with one exception all of last years committiee are members of this years Council, and without doubt Mr. Newcomb will again be appointed chairman.

The chairmanship of Committee on Sewers is in doubt, although it is more than likely that those who served on the committee last year, who are members of this year's Council, will remain, and Councilman Adams may be given the chairmanship.

Of last year's Committee on Fire Department and Police but two are members of this year's Council, and report has it that Councilman Gasset or Thomson will receive the chairmanship of this committee.

Councilman DeNormandie was chairman of the committee on Public Buildings last year, but he is not a member of this year's council. Councilman Langelier will probably be given the chairmanship. It is possible, however, that Councilman Nichols, who so gracefully withdrew in favor of Councilman Alden, in the contest for the President of the Council, may be rewarded with a chairmanship of something more important than that of Legislative Matters, which he filled last year.

Sons Daughters.

John Adams Chapter, Junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution met on Saturday morning, January 11th, with Miss Ethel B. Sprague, Pearl street, South Braintree. The meeting was called to order by the President, Maynard Stearns. A debate was hdd on the subject: Resolved:—"That the Chinese should be excluded from the United States."

Miss Pitts of Quincy gave two pleasing recitations and Miss Gertrude Young of South Braintree played several selections on the piano.

The President, Edith R. Sanderson, and Secretary, Mr. Rodney P. Gallagher, of the Jonathan Thompson society, Children of the American Revolution of Charlestown were guests ofthe Chapter, and spoke of the work of their society.

After refreshments the meeting was adjourned until the second Saturday in February.

Mrs. Sarah Cilley Butler, who lives on Atlantic street, Atlantic, has a pair of pistols which were presented on the 19th March, 1779, to her great grandfather, Gen. Joseph Cilley, by the State of New Hampshire. "As a token of the State's good intention to reward merit in a brave soldier and show an appreciation of his service."

On January 6th, the President had to affix with a pen on parchment, his signature to some eighteen hundred army commissions. And some people deny that the President is overworked.

A masquerade party under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Foresters of America was held at Hancock hall last night. The affair was quite largely attended and was very enjoyable.

Although the United States has taken no part officially in the British-Boer war according to the Rev. Mr. Broekhuysen, her citizens have contributed over $50,000 to the cause, the largest contribution the Boers have received from outside sources.

There are no new developments in the smallpox cases in Quincy and the Board of Health hope by general vaccination that they have checked its spread. All of the patients sick with the disease are reported as doing well and all will recover.

The City Engineer is making more plans of the city for the assessors. It is reported that already the department has found considerable property that has never been assessed, and it would not be at all surprising if before the work was completed enough land was found to more than cover the expense of the survey.

The Rev. Dr. Todd is to be the orator of the evening at Music hall Quincy, on Burns anniversary on the 24th inst., to be observed by Clan McGregor, the Loyal Ladies and their friends. He was also asked to perform the same duty in Mechanics hall, Boston, for the Burns gathering there, under the auspices of the Caledonian club, but owing to the Quincy engagement he declined.

The Evangelistic services at the First Presbyterian church, Water street, have been well attended during this week, and a fine spirit has prevailed at all the services. Drs. Kilpatrick and MacKinnon, of Boston, and Rev. W. W. Dornan of this city, assisted the pastor. They will be continued all next week until Friday. Rev. Dr. McKinnon will preach Sunday night, and the Rev. J. J. Dunlop will preach on the following evenings. All are invited.

Includes Over 16 Miles of Sewers.

Will Add a District 21 Miles Square.

The high-level sewer now being constructed through Quincy is based upon a scheme and estimates prepared by William M. Brown chief engineer of the metropolitan water and sewerage board for which has been appropriated $4,600,000 by the legislature.

At the present time the large intercepting sewer, pumping station, reservoirs and outfall of these works are used, in part, for the reception and disposal of sewage from districts for which trunk sewers have been provided by the Metopolitan sewerage commission. These include parts of West Roxbury, Dorchester and Boston proper together with Brighton, Brookline, Newton, Watertown, Waltham, Milton, Hyde Park and Dedham a total of 81 square miles.

The local sewers of these cities and towns discharge into metropolitan sewers forming what are known as the Charles and Neponset Valley systems which are connected in their towns with the Boston and main drainage works.

The city of Boston receives a considerable rental from the commonwealth assessed annually upon the interested localities for handling the large volume of sewage thus discharged through the city works. These were not originally designed for dealing with the sewage of these areas and although considerable extensions have been made such as doubling the reservoir capacity it was foreseen that a condition of permanent surcharge must result from the steady increase of population and sewage volume.

The object of the high-level sewer is to intercept the sewage from the whole of the districts enumerated above, together with additional areas in Roxbury, West Roxbury and Dorchester. It will also receive the sewage of the city of Quincy, which is now lifted by steam power and discharged, under a separate agreement, into the outfall of the Boston system, at Squantum.

These added districts amount to 21 square miles, making, with the former area, a territory of 102 square miles, known as the south metropolitan sewerage district, to be provided for by the new sewer. The present population of this area is about 260,000 and provision is made in the project for an estimated population of 986,000 in the year 1940.

The works comprise a total length of over 16 miles of sewers. This includes the harbor outfall, consisting of 60-inch cast iron pipes, carried under the bed of Boston harbor to a point a mile beyond Nut island, where the sewage will be discharged into favorable currents at a depth of about 30 feet below low water. Two such lines are intended to be laid in the early future, to be increased as the augumented scheme of sewage may require.

The high-level, sewer where it joins the headhouse and other structures on Nut island, will be 11 feet 3 inches by 12 feet 6 inches in diameter. These dimensions will be gradually diminished to 6 feet 6 inches by 7 feet, as the sewer extends upwards through Quincy, Milton and Hyde Park, to the proposed pumping station in Ward street, Roxbury.

The function of this station is to lift the sewage from the Charles river valley system about 40 feet into the high-level sewer. A contract has now been let for the installation of two engines and pumps, each set having a capacity of 500,000,000 gallons per 24 hours. These will force the sewage through two lines of 48-inch cast iron pipes, each about 1,000 feet in length. The sewage from other parts of the south metropolitan district, with the exception of reduced area in Quincy will reach the high level sewer by gravity.

Provision is also made for a future reduction of the volume otherwise requiring to be pumped at Ward street by the construction of a main in addition extending northwesterly from Jamaica Plain, designed to intercept, by gravity, the sewage of Newton, etc, above a defined elevation, but this does not form part of the present work.

Of the total length of sewer, four miles are in tunnel, chiefly in hard rock. Other special features of this work are the crossing at Stony brook and the Neponset river by parallel lines of large iron pipes laid underneath the bed of the stream in each case. At the present time, six miles of the sewer are completed, seven miles are under construction and the remaining length, including the harbor outfall, is in readiness for the letting of contracts during the coming season.

On the completion of the whole line, the connection between the metropolitan sewers and the Boston main drainage system will be cut off, and the payment of rentals to the city will terminate.

The work of construction was commenced in the fall of 1899.

The total expenditures on account of Metropolitan sewerage works to Nov. 1, 1901, have amounted to $9,688,305.26. Of this amount, $8,712,591.08 has been paid for construction, damage and general expenses and $975,714.18 for a maintenance.—Boston Globe.

The Magazines.

Little Folks for January has much of interest for youngest readers. It opens with the second part of "The Elf that stayed over winter," followed by an illustrated sketch of Robert Burns, Amthusa's story, and other gems included part three of "Mary's Little Lamb," where objects are substituted for works.

While Winter millinery is still a pressing theme and little diminution is to be noted in the output of new headgear for cold weather, the attention of the manufacturers is already focussed upon the models for Spring and early Summer. The February delineator presents a number of original effects in straw that will hold high place among the best products of the year. Mlle. Mirabella, a prominent milliner of New York and Paris, presents the first of a series of twelve illustrated lessons in hat making and shows a fashionable afternoon hat from the very first stage to the finished article.

John Luther Long's new novel, "Naughty Nan," is published entire in the January number of Lippincott's Magazine. After awhile it will be brought out in book form, costing four or five times the price of the Magazine form. In this tale Mr. Long proves that he is a master hand at love-making in other lands than Japan, and in picturing the tender passion of a wilful New York girl he excels himself. Nan's aunt calls upon a favorite nephew to save Nan from a flock of matrimonially inclined men, so that the girl may "remember Cawdor," a theological student to whom her aunt has alloted her.

REV. F. H. KENT.

Installed As Pastor at Unitarian Church, Northampton.

Rev. Frederick H. Kent, well known in Wollaston, was inducted to the pastorate Thursday evening, January 9, at the Unitarian church in Northampton.

The exercises themselves were most impressive, while addresses were given by widely known ministers. The auditorium was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and red carnations. There was a large representation from many of the neighboring churches about Northampton.

Prof. A. L. Norris, on the organ, accompanied a double quartet who rendered "Prepare Ye the Way of the Lord" and "O send out Thy Light."

An invocation and Scripture reading was conducted by Rev. Alfred Free of Florence, and responsive reading by Rev. John Day of Amherst.

Rev. A. L. Hudson delivered the installation sermon, which was full of gems of thought and advanced theology. His texts was "Being workers together with God."

The installation prayer was offered by Rev. L. C. Cornish of Hingham, after which Rev. Edward Hale of Cambridge gave charge to the pastor. He felt that there were very few places where man dwelt more beautiful than this locality situated in the Connecticut valley. He said: "Such beautiful surroundings brought one to his duties." Mr. Hale referred to his having once before given charge to Rev. Frederick Kent. His thought was that minister should give in complete devotion of his heart and his mind, to the people in the spirit of love which carries with it intuition of the needs of the people.

Rev. C. E. St. John of Brookline gave the charge to the people.

Rev. Bradley Gilman, of Springfield, extended the right hand of fellowship, and clearly showed how the Christian minister's was the noblest calling on earth.

Rev. Dr. H. T. Rose extended a cordial welcome to pastor.

Rev. F. H. Kent closed the ceremony with the benediction. An informal reception followed in the church parlors.

Hefferson of Engine 19, and Capt. Littleton of engine 20 of Boston, and others.

Chief Choate was marshal, and Assistant Chief Holmes was assistant marshal. Lieut. Bronsdon was floor director assisted by a large corps of aids.

The grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Holmes.

HARVESTING ICE.

Meadow Brook Company Began This Morning.

Eaton Bros. Have Pond Marked.

Crystal Spring Company Also Making Preparations.

The ice men have great hopes of getting in their crop of ice during the present cold snap, as they realize if they do not harvest their crop before the January thaw the chances would be slim of getting ice thick enough to cut later.

At the pond of the Meadow Brook Ice Co. the ice is from ten to twelve inches in thickness.

It is entirely free from foreign substance of any kind and is so clear as to be almost transparent. Work marking off the pond commenced two days ago and this morning work was commenced putting it into the houses.

The modus operandi of housing ice is an interesting one. The pond is first marked off by means of a horse plow into squares that measure four feet each way. By means of ice chisels these are broken off into floats one cake wide and from six to eight cakes in length. These are then floated toward the house where they are again broken apart, and taken up by an endless chain, which drops them off at the run desired. They are then pushed along the main run from which they are then guided into branch runs leading into the different houses, where they are packed away not to be removed until wanted next summer. As the cakes come up the elevator they pass beneath a steel scraper which removes whatever snow or other matter that may have clung to the top of the cake.

When once started it is surprising how easily and quickly the heavy cakes are handled, for hardly a minute elapses from the time the cake leaves the water until it has been packed away in the house.

Were it possible to keep the machinery working without interruption it would not require a great amount of time to fill the houses. There are however some unavoidable delays caused by the men on the runs not handling the cakes fast enough which means temporary stops of the elevator. Yet with all these stops two or three days at the most is sufficient to fill the houses.

Mr. Patch of the Meadow Brook Co. says that while he had excellent ice last year that of this year surpasses anything he has ever cut. This is largely due to the efforts made to protect the meadow during the summer and to keep it free from foreign substances of all kinds, a high board fence has been built around the pond on the street sides which keeps out trespassers. Aside from this fence is an embankment which keeps out any possible street wash. All of these precautions may seem foolish but in this enlightened age people realize that too much care cannot be exercised in keeping everything used about the household free from foreign substance, more particularly ice, which is used largely in the summer in cooling drinks.

Eaton Bros. have between ten and twelve inches of fine ice. The pond has been marked off, and work will be commenced putting in the crop early in the week.

The Crystal Spring Co. have not done anything as yet toward cutting their ice. Their pond has been cleared of snow and they have got nine or ten inches of good clear ice. They are not satisfied with this, and prefer to take their chances by waiting a few days more, believing that it will pay them to do so.

PROGRESS OF FILIPINOS

THE RESPONSIBLE POSITIONS

Not Yet Filled by Natives, Who Are Subject to Competitive Examination With Whites—Drop From the White to the Native Salary Is Very Sudden

Washington, Jan. 18.—Frank M Kiggins of the Philippine civil service board, who has returned to Washington, speaks very interestingly of the condition of the service of the islands.

The merit system has been well established there, but of course is subject to the usual inequalities and crudnesses of such enterprises in their experimental stage. Both whites and natives have been admitted to public employ through the competitive examinations. The difference between the races appears most plainly in the character of the work each is naturally best fitted to do. The natives are clever at tasks which are essentially mechanical Many of them are skilled penmen, for instance, and in draftmanship they excel. But in matters requiring sound discretion or technical knowledge they are deficient. Their work of any sort in which precision is the chief account has to be scrutinized with especial care.

A pretty good evidence of the stage of clerical efficiency reached by the Filipinos is the record of the examinations up to and including May 31 of the present year. Of those natives who applied, none passed the stenographer's or typewriter's examination, though there were five applications for the former and 14 for the latter; in bookkeeping, there were 27 applicants, but only one who passed, and so on.

All the natives take their examinations in Spanish, that language and English being the only ones used among the official class in the islands. The native tongues alone are spoken by a large majority of the natives, while the more intelligent and better educated know Spanish as well. Indeed, the only classes of natives who could be of any use in clerical places understand Spanish, and most of these are studying English also with great industry. All official records and proceedings, of course are in English, and our tongue is spreading over the more thickly populated parts of the islands with such rapidity that the coming generation, if the Philippines continue under control of the United States, will have a good practical command of it.

Even the newsboys now cry their papers in the streets of Manila in English; and the natives generally seem to delight in practicing their linguistic accomplishments on any stranger wearing the appearance of an "Americano," albeit all they have learned to say may be "good morning" or "how do you do?" The fears entertained in many quarters a while ago, that the language barrier would prove an irremediable menace to happy relations of the races, seem therefore to have been groundless.

The more ambitious natives, although taking their examinations in Spanish and often making a pretty bad fist of them, are willing to work to hard to get ahead and attend diligently the night schools established to prepare candidates for government employ. Thus far is has been impracticalle to appoint even the best of them to clerical positions of responsibility; the lower places, however, which they are competent to fill, embrace, including laborers, about four-fifths of the whole number. The pay and privileges in the civil service at large are graded according to the respective importance of the places. This is what makes the natives appear to suffer so by the competition with the whites; but the reason offered for this discrimination is that the white clerk cannot live as the native does, and must pay more for everything. Sometimes the difference seems harsh, especially when the drop from the white to the native salary is very sudden.

Not long ago, for instance, several ex-soldiers of the United States army were called upon to resign places worth $60 a month to make room for native employes at $12.50. To the natives this was a pretty large salary, the figures under the Spanish rule ranging from $6 upward; but they found it hard to understand why they should not have $60 a month like their white predecessors. Moreover, the discharged men could see no reason why they should give up their places to natives who could do the same work no better. It was fruitless, perhaps, in their state of mind, to try to make them appreciate the fact that the government's policy is to use Filipinos in all the civil branches for which they are competent.

The principle which regulates the difference in salaries holds good also in the matter of vacations. Mr. Kiggins is of the opinion that a white civil servant who takes care of himself has no necessary difficulty in living in the Philippines. He must adapt himself reasonably to his environment, and he will then get along. But it is necessary for him to go away from time to time and refresh himself with a taste of life in another climate. The annual leave for the higher grades of the service is 35 days, and it is cumulative; so that any clerk who feels that this period will be too short for his full recuperation may save up his vacations for two or three years and go to the United States for his recreation. The favorite vacation countries within easy reach are China and Japan. In the lower grades the vacations have been made shorter.

LOVE'S SACRIFICE.

An Engagement Ring Which Amputates a Finger Joint.

Ethnological experts agree that with most Australian tribes every woman is betrothed in infancy or even in anticipation of her birth. According to some mysterious law of their own, this is arranged by the old men of the family, the women having no voice in the matter. The age of the proposed husband is not taken into consideration, so that it frequently happens that by the time the girl is of a marriageable age her intended is an old man. If in the meantime some younger man has set his heart upon her, this means a fight, in which the unfortunate bride to be, as she is dragged away, is certain to come in for a share of the blows which the rival suitors deal out to each other.

In some of the coast districts, where not all the girls are promised in infancy, the betrothal of a young woman to a man who follows the occupation of a fisherman compels her to lose the first joint of the little finger of her left hand. This slow and painful operation is performed by a stout string bound tightly about the joint—an engagement ring with which one would willingly dispense! A marriage license, equally unique, is common in some sections, where the chief gives to the prospective groom a peculiarly knotted string, possessing which he is free to seek the wife of his choice.—Woman's Home Companion.

How Muskrats Are Trapped.

Trapping is one of the modes by which muskrats are secured. The traps are made of boards about six inches wide and three feet long. These are nailed together like an ordinary box trap, the open ends being secured by swinging doors of wire network, fastened to the upper part of both entrances. These doors allow easy ingress to the trap, but once in the rat cannot get out without opening the door by pulling it to him, which secret they seem very slow to discover. These traps are put in the leads running from the houses to the water when the tide is at low ebb and the rats are out feeding. On the return they crawl up the leads, push against one of the wire doors of the trap, which immediately opens into the trap, but they cannot go farther, as the next door opens toward them. Before they can gnaw out the tide makes up, and they are drowned in the trap.

A Story Told by Disraeli.

Disraeli once said: "You know I have the honor of being one of the elder brethren of the Trinity House. Well, there is a special uniform belonging to the office. One day I was about to attend a levee at St. James' palace, and my valet laid out my diplomatic uniform ready for me to put on. Placing implicit confidence in him, I put it on and went to the levee. On appearing before the prince his royal highness jocularly remarked: 'It won't do. You're found out.' 'In what, sir?' I inquired. 'Oh,' said the prince, 'you've got the wrong trousers on.' And to my horror, on looking down I found that I had got my diplomatic uniform coat on with the Trinity House trousers. It seemed to amuse the prince immensely."

The Oldest Epitaph.

The oldest epitaph in English, which is found in a churchyard in Oxfordshire and dates from the year 1370, to modern readers would be unintelligible not only from its antique typography, but from its obsolete language, the first two lines of which run as follows and may be taken as a sample of the whole:

"Man com & se how schal alle dede be: wen yow comes bad & bare: noth hav ven we away fare: all ye werines yt ve for care."

The modern reading would be: "Man, come and see how shall all dead be when you come poor and bare; nothing have when we away fare. All is weariness that we for care."

Ears.

If your ears burn, people say, some one is talking about you. This is very old, for Pliny says, "When our ears do glow and tingle, some do talk of us in our absence."

Shakespeare, in "Much Ado About Nothing," makes Beatrice say to Ursula and Hero, who had been talking of her, "What fire is in mine ears!"

Sir Thomas Browne ascribes this conceit to the superstition of guardian angels, who touch the right ear if the talk is favorable and the left if otherwise. This is done to cheer or warn.

One ear tingles, some there be
That are snarling now at me.

Before Mirrors.

Mrs. Snaggs—I read a paragraph in the paper which said, "Woman was made before mirrors, but it wasn't her fault." Don't you think that is a mean remark to make about woman?

Mr. Snaggs—Yes, I think it is. What the writer meant to say was that woman was made before mirrors and had been before them ever since.—Exchange.

VISIT TO BOER CAMPS

Shows Them to Be Suffering From Lack of Food.

THE PRISONERS IN BERMUDA

Have No Clothing Except What They Wore When Captured—Have Organized Into Communities and Spend Much Time In Study

Boston, Jan. 18.—Rev. Edward Everett Hale, as president of the Lend a Hand society of Boston, which for months past has been collecting and shipping clothing, food and other things to the Boer prisoners held by the British in Bermuda, recently sent his assistant, Rev. W. S. Key, to make a visit to the prison camps and to report on the conditions.

Mr. Key has just returned and has an interesting story to tell. He was permitted to visit all the camps on six different islands and to talk at will with the prisoners. There are now about 5000 men and boys in the prison laagers. About 200 of them are boys under 16 years of age; 100 of them are very old men over 66 years, many of the latter very weak and decrepit. Less than one-half the entire number were taken prisoners with arms in their possession or when engaged in any way in the war. The youngest boy is only 8½ years old. He was tending sheep when captured.

The prisoners are kept within the enclosures by barbed wire fences, while armed troops guard them, and battleships ride at anchor among the islands and flash powerful searchlights on the camps through the night.

There are 37 life prisoners in solitary confinement and not allowed to speak to anyone. They are Cape rebels and after being tried for treason were sentenced to be shot, but only one was executed, the sentence of the rest being commuted to imprisonment for life. One has died and others are dying. Eight of them have wives and families in South Africa. All the prisoners complained of having no clothing excepting what they wore when captured. Some of them had not had a change of underwear for 16 months.

During Mr. Key's visits to the camps, clothing was distributed, but hats, caps, socks, towels, handkerchiefs, underclothing, suspenders and soap, needles, thread, buttons and jack-knives are sorely needed.

Their daily ration of food is very insufficient, as all the prisoners had been accustomed to an active outdoor life, had splendid appetites and before the war were always within reach of plenty of substantial food. All have large frames with sad, hungry-looking faces. The restraint is affecting their health, and through the small food allowance many are emaciated. Some few of them are allowed to work for the British government in the prison laagers, for which they receive 2 cents an hour. To while away the time and earn a little money many of them carve toys, curious and useful articles with jack-knives out of wood, stone, slate, and bones from their meat, and make odd things out of copper, tin, brass and silver and silk. Some draw and paint quaint pictures.

There are many generals and high officers of state in the Transvaal and Orange Free State among the prisoners. All letters and newspapers are censored before the prisoners receive or send any mail matter. They have organized themselves into communities and have men to fill all offices. They have, too, churches, day and Sunday schools, Y. M. C. A., and Christian Endeavor societies, and libraries and reading-rooms. Many are learning English, French and German, as well as shorthand and other studies. There is a regular schoolmaster in each camp. There are nearly a dozen different nationalties among them, but they all speak Dutch. They are intensely religious, have daily papers and catechism classes. They are as confident they will preserve their national independence as when the war began.

They need plenty of such food as oatmeal, corn meal, condensed milk, all kinds of cereals, tea, coffee, peas, beans, rice, sago, evaporated apples, canned corn, dessicated vegetables and tobacco for the old men. Money is also needed. The Lend a Hand society, Boston, receives and ships all contributions.

Real Diamonds In Montana

Lewiston, Mont., Jan. 18.—Diamonds, said to be of the first water, have been found in the northern part of Fergus county, according to a report which reached here yesterday. The news of the discovery caused commotion among the prospectors of this region, and dozens of them are on their way to what they believe is a new land of riches. The discovery was made on Blood Creek.

Perhaps Three Hundred Killed

Mexico City, Jan. 18.—A terrible catastrophe is reported to have occurred Thursday afternoon in the state of Guerrero, when an extremely violent earthquake shock was felt at Chilpancingo. Details from the stricken district are very meagre, but scattering reports indicate that probably 300 persons were killed and as many more injured.

Dixon Still a Fighter

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 18.—George Dixon and Joe Tipman fought 20 rounds to a draw here last night. Tipman had about 20 pounds the advantage of Dixon in weight, but George made it up in reach and science and the fight proved a very even proposition from start to finish.

FURTHER PEACE TALK

Withdrawal of Demand For Unconditional Surrender Asked For

London, Jan. 18.—Although the Brussels dispatch to the effect that the executive committee of the South African republics has decided to approach Great Britain with the view to securing peace is supported by statements of similar character from other correspondents, it must be recalled that such reports have been frequent for months past, the highest and most reliable sources being generally claimed as authority for them, yet nothing has resulted.

The Rotterdam correspondent telegraphs: The executive committee of the South African republics hed a meeting at The Hague on Tuesday. He was informed on high authority that after hearing a report from one of the leading members of the committee who was in communication with Mr. Kruger the previous day it was unanimously decided to approach England with a view to arrange terms of peace. A member of the committee said that if the demand for unconditional surrender was withdrawn there would certainly be peace before the end of the month. It was stated that Dr. Kuyper, the Dutch premier, had just come from London, whither he had gone to sound the British authorities as to the probable results of a direct approach by the committee on lines that were indicated. He was assured on high authority that the most careful consideration would be given to any proposals that might be made.

Will Sacrifice Independence

Amsterdam, Jan. 18.—It is definitely known that the recent visit to London of Dr. Kuyper resulted directly from Mr. Kruger and the Boer delegates having been persuaded officiay to waive their claim for independence, pending approval by the Boers who are still fighting.

Four Thousand People Fooled

Philadelphia, Jan. 18.—Tom Sharkey and Peter Maher, who were heralded to fight six rounds for the championship of Ireland here last night, were stopped by the referee in the middle of the third, in one of the poorest exhibitions ever given in this city. The men had been arrested and bound over in $5000 bail to keep the peace, and this dampened their vigor. There was not a blow struck which would have rocked a bantam's head. When the bout had progressed for 2½ rounds amid incessant cat calls, hisses, and yells of "take them off" and "fake," Referee Rocap stepped to the side of the ring and said that he had been engaged to referee a contest. "This is no contest," he concluded, and the men took their corners and the "contest" was over. The 4000 spectators who had paid $2, $3, and $5 for seats broke chairs and benches in their desire to "get even."

Liabilities of $123,000

Albany, Ga., Jan. 18.—An application for a temporary receiver has been filed by the directors of the Commercial bank of Albany. The bank did not open for business yesterday and posted a notice stating that the bank had suspended payment pending the action of the state authorities. The liabilities of the bank are estimated at $123,000.

Brave Fighters to Return

Washington, Jan. 18.—Orders have been prepared at the war department for the return to the United States of the Ninth infantry, which played such a gallant part in the seige of Pekin and has seen much fighting in the Philippines, but it is hardly likely the movement will begin for several weeks yet.

Willing to Extend Time

Cleveland, Jan. 18.—The Everett-Moore bankers' committee gave out a statement yesterday to the effect that out of $11,500,000 liabilities, creditors to the extent of $10,000,000 had signed the asked for extension of time agreement, leaving only 10 percent of the creditors to be heard from.

Fatal Mine Cavein

Joplin, Mo., Jan. 18.—In a cave-in at the Ada mine at Carterville yesterday, three miners lost their lives, another was injured fatally and several others were seriously hurt. The accident was caused by a premature explosion of dynamite, which blocked the entrance to the mine.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. The National Period of American Literature

BY LORENZO SEARS, LIT. D.,
Professor of American Literature in Brown University.

XII.—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW'S antecedents were of the bay, the maternal line running back to John Alden and Priscilla at Plymouth, his father and grandfather being graduates of Harvard. If the poet missed anything in not following the family precedent in education, he doubtless made it up in his graduate course as professor in the university for 17 years, to which he was called five years after leaving his alma mater, where he had served an apprenticeship for two years in a similar capacity.

But his first post collegiate study was in the greater academy of Europe, whither he went to prepare himself for the chair of modern languages at Bowdoin. Three years of residence and travel overflowed in "Outre-Mer," the first of his books not a translation. The title itself was significant of his mission to his countrymen. From beyond the sea he was to bring them the treasures of old world story and song, but first he would tell them how the towns and cities, the mountains and rivers, the castles and abbeys, the towers and spires, looked to an American youth whose head was already well stocked with their lore and legends. Irving's example and "Sketch-Book" were before him, and he frankly confesses at Gottingen in 1829, "I am writing a kind of 'Sketch-Book' of scenes in France, Spain and Italy."

France suggests many reflections, but in his chapter on the Trouveres and the literature of song in the olden time the youthful poet is reveling in the sources whence he will draw both material and inspiration in the years to come. Rome and the Italian cities rouse the same spirit of reflection upon their stratified history in 1827 as they will this year, but the story of it was fresher to Americans three-quarters of a century ago than it is today. Comparatively few of his countrymen had made the continental pilgrimage, and the poet felt himself commissioned to bring out of Europe all that he could carry to America. It is significant of his comprehensive purpose of a wider culture for his fellow citizens that a translation of a French grammar was the first fruit of his stay abroad, to be followed by a version of a Spanish play, and then came the journal of his tour in the book already mentioned, published in parts in 1833-4 and in two volumes the following year. Then came "Hyperion," five years later, a romance version of his wanderings, gathering up the fancies which do not so well adjust themselves to a notebook as to a love story, especially if the principal characters be the author himself and his future wife. It is the harvest of travel in Germany and Switzerland, as "Outre-Mer" had been of loiterings along the Mediterranean shore.

Longfellow's first volume of poems was published in the same year, 1839. He called it "Voices of the Night," perhaps with a young man's paradoxical inclination toward somber reflection. Possibly it was a trace of the Puritan gloom which delighted in the shadows of Dr. Young's "Night Thoughts," for the Cambridge poet was not one to obtrude a single personal sorrow into all his verse at the age of 32. Whatever may have been the reason of the title, the "Hymn to Night," "The Midnight Mass of the Dying Year" and "The Light of Stars" are not songs of the day. Even "The Beleaguered City," with its moral of the dawn, is chilly and damp with spectral mists, put to flight not by the rising sun, but the cathedral bell. He is not yet free from the solemnity of the "Earlier Poems" of 15 years before, when Bryant's sober and solemn mood had acknowledged attraction for him as he wrote "Autumn" and the "Woods in the Winter."

With "Ballads and Other Poems," published in 1841, a new spirit is apparent. "The Skeleton In Armour" bristles with the spears of viking ancestors and is linked to ages which were prehistoric on the American coast. In this, as in his translation of "Fridthof's Saga" and "Study of Anglo-Saxon," he directed contemporaries to a Scandinavian mythology which rivals that of southern Europe and the ancients and has special interest for the descendants of the Norsemen. Incidentally he showed that his culture was wide as the literature of the west could make it. This he was glad to introduce to the children of those who had pushed the dominion of the Gothic race across the Atlantic. He called their attention to the rude and strong elements of a primitive faith and a primeval verse, to myth and edda, saga and song of scald.

His inherited love of the sea, fostered by a boyhood on the Maine coast, appears here and there in poems like "The Wreck of the Hesperus" on the reef of Norman's Woe, "The Bird and the Ship," "The Building of the Ship," "Sir Humphrey Gilbert," "The Lighthouse" and the rest of the group "By the Seaside." Still, it is apparent that he did not delight in storm and wreck and the tragedies of the ocean, neither in the battle and war nor any kind of strife. He was a poet of peace and of the home virtues and the heart's affections. The patient endeavor of the "Psalm of Life," the youthful aspiration of "Excelsior," the resignation of the "Rainy Day," the immortal hope of "God's Acre," are all simple in theme and unambitious in treatment, but they have been as the voice of their own hearts to thousands who read poetry for what it is worth to them in sentiment rather than in high art or mystic suggestion. The day had not yet arrived when a poet to be great and famous must write in a diction that needs a neighborhood club to interpret his orphic lines, and yet there was no affected simpleness in this poet's simplicity, no flatness into which Wordsworth sometimes descended in his zeal for a new poetic theory.

Longfellow.

Longfellow's own idea of a poet's mission is stated in the "Belfry of Bruges," whose old world suggestions are like cathedral chimes in the traveler's memory, illustrating also the author's favorite manner of bringing a homely truth to the minds of his readers through the foreign legend or picture. In this instance he compares the rhymes of the poet to the stricken hours at night falling unnoticed on the drowsy ears of the multitude, on roofs and stones of cities. Only here and there some sleepless wight may listen to the melody till he hears thoughts long cherished intermingled with the song.

In "Nuremberg" he finds "memoirs of the middle ages and a wondrous world of art," but the lesson he brings from the city of Durer and Hans Sachs, the cobbler bard, is "the nobility of labor, the long pedigree of toil," and in the "Norman Baron" dying in his turreted castle the one redeeming feature of a life of greed and wrong was the freeing of his serfs.

The time came when, with the rest of New England poets, he raised his voice against slaveholding in a country professing to be free, but the protest was in his own pacific manner and not in the philippic strain of Whittier or the derisive reasoning of Lowell, and therein he kept his own individuality and that quality which made him the best loved of all our poets. This may not be the highest ambition or be accompanied by the greatest achievement, but perhaps it is the reward which he himself would most have coveted.

This kindly endearment of all classes in two countries the poem of "Evangeline" did more than any other single one to win and augment. The poet turned English and American sympathy to the French side by enlisting that love which all the world has for a lover, particularly when it happens to be such a sweet and saintly maiden as the daughter of Benedict Bellefontaine or so valiant a youth as Gabriel Lajeunesse, the son of Basil, the blacksmith. From the start all human interest is with the separated lovers in the long search of one for the other, a tale of unrest and wandering, of hope deferred and of a deathbed meeting at last and the slumber side by side in their nameless graves. It was the floodtide of a humanism that had been growing in our literature, first in the verse of sentimental strain and then in romantic. But this was a welling up of genuine sympathy for the betrothed torn asunder by the fate of war, and the volume and extent of compassionate sorrow were as the mighty tides of Fundy spreading over the basin of Minas close by the acres of Grand Pre. All classes of readers follow the sad quest of love and become Acadian peasants and pilgrims for the time.

They also become humanists with Longfellow and friends of the poet who had touched fountains where others had only stirred the surface of the pool. In America and in England he became the "writer of 'Evangeline,'" by distinction, and it was this idyl that led strangers to find the same humane elements in his minor productions and to love him as the expositor of hearth and home virtues and affection.

Next to this poem the "Song of Hiawatha" commends itself to American readers as the most agreeable reproduction of the aboriginal sources of our verse. The Indian in literature has generally taken the hue of the writer's imagination. He has been portrayed with inks of as many colors as his own war paint, red and blue and black. If, however, a cheerful dye could be found, Longfellow would be sure to dip his Indian in it. Accordingly the light that pervades the poem or is best recalled is that of the setting sun cast over a departing race. The whole poem is the swan song of a departing race, recounting its golden age of pristine happiness, its later decline and finally the coming of an alien people "from the regions of the morning," followed by the crowding nations of many tongues. None better than our poet of all humanity could have sung this song so truly as to cherish the little sentiment that a conquering race can keep for the conquered.

The song of the invader was sung in "The Courtship of Miles Standish." In it also is the same touch of humanity that makes all in love with lovers one more and with the poet of whose kindly heart they are the creation. Everywhere its genial sunshine illumines the page, even though the record be as a black letter chronicle of want and death in the pilgrim settlement, or of exile and distress, as in Acadia, or of a dispersed people in the far northwest. And if this be true in the sadder phases of life how much more in the glad experiences which he has filled with light and joy. For this reason, whatever position in the present or future Longfellow may or may not hold, he will always be the best beloved of our American poets.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

A Continued Drop In the General Average of Prices

New York, Jan. 18.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Readjustment of prices continued during the second week of January and the general average reached a much lower point than prevailed when the year opened. Manufactured products were scarcely disturbed, but both staples and securities suffered. Business conditions are sound, liberal distribution and prompt payments being reported, except at a few southern cities. Transporting interests are less behind with deliveries. Nothing has transpired to disturb the bright outook in the iron and steel industry.

Footwear products have at last made a general advance of from 2½ to 5 cents. Annual inventories made such unsatisfactory exhibits that makers found no difficulty in agreeing on higher prices.

Stocks of cotton goods are not burdensome, and demands gradually expand with the advancing season, especially for fine grades. Heavy brown goods move slowly. Woolen goods opened lower than expected, and purchases were retarded rather than stimulated by the declines. Changes were few and small, yet there had been such confidence in a higher level that the trade hesitated. Woolen and worsted yarns tend upward.

Grain reacted sharply from the high point and a large western operator was caught with more than he could carry. Forced liquidation of this account facilitated the work of manipulators for a decline. Another unsatisfactory feature was the recent falling off in foreign demands. Provisions weakened slightly in sympathy with grain.

Full returns of foreign commerce for the year 1901 make a more gratifying exhibit than even the most sanguine anticipations. All previous records of imports were eclipsed, a tribute to the prosperous conditions of this nation, which took freely of luxuries and also required large quantities of material for its expanding industries.

Reeves Tries to Shift Blame

Havana, Jan. 18.—The cross examination of Estes G. Rathbone, ex-director general of posts of Cuba, at yesterday's session of the court, which is trying the charges growing out of the Cuban postoffice fraud, brought out no new facts. Counsel for ex-Deputy Auditor Reeves, who is also on trial, endeavored to put the responsibility on Rathbone for the neglect on the part of Cuban postmasters to render monthly statements. Rathbone insisted that it was Reeves' duty to report irregularities of this kind.

Friend of Railroad Workingmen

Little Rock, Jan. 18.—Miss Helen Gould and party arrived here yesterday and a location for a handsome Y. M. C. A. building for employes of the Iron mountain system was chosen. The purpose of Miss Gould's trip south is to inspect personally the needs of the railroad workingmen in the hope of aiding their condition by establishing suitable Y. M. C. A. departments, with appropriate buildings, at concentrating points.

German Extension of Trade

Sydney, N. S. W., Jan. 18.—A German trading company has obtained important trading rights over the Ellice and Gilbert groups of islands in the Pacific ocean, similar to those exercised by France over the New Hebrides group, on the ground that its trading will result in the Germanization of the islands. The federal government has been urged to send a protest to Secretary Chamberlain in the matter.

They Needed the Money

Dowagiac, Mich., Jan. 18.—Every man, woman and child in the Pottowattamie tribe of Indians yesterday received from Attorney Robert Baines of Chicago a check for $100. The probate judge had interfered and directed that the money should not be paid to the Indians, but to their guardians. It was shown that the Indians were badly in need of money and the court withdrew its objection. The Indians are now in a very friendly mood.

Was a Famous Yachtsman

New York, Jan. 18.—Captain Joseph Ellsworth, one of the best known of American yachting captains, died last night at his home in Bayonne, N. J., aged 71. In 1885 he sailed the American cup defender Puritan against the Genesta and won all the races. In the following year he commanded the cup defender Mayflower and won against the challenger Galatea.

Shortage of Over $40,000

Louisville, Jan. 18.—Former City Treasurer Young's shortage is placed at $40,520 by expert accountants who have been examining the books of the treasurer's office. Young committed suicide in November, when news of his shortage was published in a newspaper.

Pan-Americans Reach Agreement

Mexico City, Jan. 18.—The atmosphere of the Pan-American conference was suddenly cleared yesterday and both the plan of compulsory arbitration and The Hague agreement passed the conference.

WON'T HOLD OUT LONG

Likelihood That Strikers at Maynard Will Soon Return to Work

Maynard, Mass., Jan. 18.—Little has developed in the situation at the Assabet Woolen mills, where the spinners are out on strike. The entire plant now is shut down. A committee of the Spinners' union went to Boston yesterday to confer with the state board of arbitration, and returned late in the afternoon with the report that little had been accomplished, owing to the absence of the directors of the American Woolen company, which owns the mill, from Boston. Yesterday being the regular pay-day, all the operatives were paid off.

The strikers appear to favor submitting their grievances to arbitration, but it is understood that the officials of the mill are unwilling to do this. While there is some talk of remaining out until their demands are granted, it is believed that the majority of the strikers are not in favor of holding out very long. The general sentiment seems to be that an early settlement is likely to be reached.

Double Loom Weavers Quit Work

Providence, Jan. 18.—There is no change in the strike at the Weybosset mills in Olneyville since the 60 double-loom weavers on fancy goods quit work yesterday fornoon. It was thought the balance of the weavers working on single looms might come out in a sympathetic movement, although the local Textile union officials oppose it and advise holding to the single issue against fancy work on double looms.

Organization Blocked

Wareham, Mass., Jan. 18.—The attempt to organize the town clerks of Plymouth county into an association has been stopped temporarily by the disappearance of William R. Tabor of this town, who was elected as treasurer and secretary of the Town Clerk's association of Plymouth county. Unless the records of the association are found among his papers, the organization will be forced to dissolve.

New President of Williams

I had been in poor health for four years. Suffered greatly with my right side, also with bearing down pains, and my nerves were in a dreadful state. After using four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' I am now well. I am the mother of two children. With the first child I suffered twenty-eight hours, and with the second I used your medicine and was sick only three hours. "Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

Miss Susie Clark of Braintree entertained a company at whist Tuesday afternoon. Miss Mamie Foss received the first prize and Miss Helen Foss the second.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

A revival of the famous drama "The Marble Heart" will make the Castle Square Theatre attraction for the coming week, and few of the plays in the Castle Square company's repertoire are worthier of reproduction than this. Its earlier performances, two seasons ago, attracted immense audiences and frequent requests have come to the management for its revival. Some very elaborate stage settings are being prepared and the changes in the membership of the company, since the play was last presented, will give additional interest to this revival. The story of the play is one of fascinating interest, its scenes are planned with great dramatic skill, and the lines are full of bright, well written dialogue. The cast of leading characters has been arranged as follows: The Dream: Gorgias, Edvard Wade; Alcibiades, James A. Keane; Phicias, John Craig; Diogenes, Charles Mackay; Strabon, William J. Hasson; Thea, Mary Sanders The Reality: Lord Melton, Warren Cook; Viscount Chateaumargaux, James A. Keane; Ferdinand Volage, Charles Mackay; Raphael Duchatlet, John Craig; Mademoiselle Marco, Eva Taylor; Clemintine, Marion A. Chapman; Marie, Mary Sanders; Madame Duchatlet, Leonora Bradley. At the Monday matinee each patron will be presented a box of choice chocolate bonbons.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

"The Cycle Whirl Sensation" as it is called, has certainly attracted as much attention from theatregoers as any novelty act presented in vaudeville for several years, and its vogue at Keith's Boston theatre gives promise of being greater than anything done at that popular playhouse, with the possible exception of the living pictures, since it was opened It will be continued the week of January 20 as the special feature of an excellent show. The newcomers will include: Eugen Sandow, the world famous athlete, who is making his reappearance in this country after an absence of six years, and will give a spectacular exhibition of strength; Marion Manola, the former operatic prima dona, in a repertoire of selected songs and ballads; and Barto's Bijou Circus, which includes trained animals, a trapeze performer and a clown, and will prove a particular attraction for the juveniles M. Rudinoff, the artistic and versatile French entertainer, is to remain for another six days, but will vary his performance somewhat.

CHILDREN'S THEATRE.

The third play to be given by the Children's Theatre Company was successfully presented Saturday, January 11th, before a delighted audience that completely filled the theatre It is an opera in three acts and a prologue called "The Magic Fiddle." The performance passed off with credit to every member of the company, and the audience that saw it, repeatedly showed its undoubted pleasure. The Boston press was unstinted in its praise. The orchestra of boys, which has been added to the theatre with this play, came in for its meed of appreciation also. It will play at every performance. The play will run about four weeks Performances will be given every Saturdays at 2.30 o'clock The theatre is in Huntington Chambers, 30 Huntington Avenue, Boston, and is just opposite the Public Library.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

"My Antoinette," the Americanized English musical comedy, has taxed the seating capacity of the Columbia theatre, Boston, ever since its first presentation last Monday night The book is by George Dance, and the music by Ivan Caryll. The piece has run for two years in England, and is still the rage. The book and songs have been brought down to date and in addition to interpolated musical numbers, the lyrics, which were written by Richard Carle, with music by Alfred E. Aarons, a number of local hits have been introduced, much to the satisfaction of the big audiences. "My Antoinette" with its swinging waltz chorus, sung by Mr. Tamplar Saxe and a chorus of celebrated beauties elicits many encores at each performance. Miss Josephine Hall, who, it need scarcely be said, is always deliciously funny, and gets all the humor possible out of her lines without any apparent effort, has several delightful numbers. She scored her biggest hit with the topical song, "When I make my Deboo." This song elicited no fewer than ten encorer on the opening night. Chas. E. Evans, as Pincher, is seen to better advantage than ever before. This is saying a great deal, as many of our readers will agree, who have seen Mr. Evans in "A Parlor Match," "Naughty Anthony," and other great successes. He enacts the role of a livery servant with stage aspirations, and is irresistibly funny. The comedy is well put on scenically the view of the dressing rooms behind the scenes being especially effective. The airs are catchy, the lyrics dainty, the comedians funny, the costumes handsome and appropriate, and above all, the chorus is both beautiful and talented. "My Antoinette" is a very enjoyable pot pourri of mirth and melody, and is destined to make a run at the Columbia.

If troubled with a weak digestion, belching, sour stomach, or if you feel dull after eating, try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. All druggists.

The rowdyism of a few boys has become very offensive to many Park and Downs people. A gang of young fellows gather on Hancock and Beach streets each afternoon and make themselves a nuisance with their snow balls. Perhaps, unintentionally, their balls have hit several people, some being ladies who know the boys and would not like to complain against them, but if it continues a policemen should be detailed.

Perhaps It's Worms

The worried mother often wonders what ails a child who is cross and languid. She generally treats it for everything but the most probable cause—worms. Over 75 per cent. of the ailments of children can be traced directly or indirectly to worms. You can see the result in the languid looks, irritable disposition, restless sleep, variable appetite. What the child needs is

Ex-Treasurer Jennings Is Placed Under Arrest

ALLEGED LARCENY OF $5000

Revealed by Notice Sent by Bank to Wellesley Selectmen—Accused Said to Have Admitted Forgery and Embezzlement to Amount of $25,000

Wellesley, Mass., Jan. 20.—Albert Jennings, the town's ex-treasurer, who is at his home under bail awaiting a hearing on a charge of forgery, was rearrested Saturday night, this time on a complaint alleging larceny of $5000. This second case against him was the outcome of a notice sent by the Natick bank to the selectmen. The expert accountant at work on Jennings' books said he could find no trace of such a note. On Saturday afternoon the bank delivered the note to State Officer Dunham, who brought it here.

After conferring with the selectmen, Officer Dunham went before Judge Mulligan and swore out a warrant charging larceny of $5000. The warrant was served on Jennings at his home. It is understood that the note was drawn in 1896, and that Jennings had paid interest on it ever since. But according to the expert accountant, the money was not credited to the town, and no record was made of this note.

In his statement to the selectmen, Jennings had admitted acts of forging and of embezzlement, placing the amount at $25,000. In the statement Jennings says: "I will take my oath that all the money which I have obtained by forgery and embezzlement was $25,000. There is nothing more."

The $25,000 includes the forged $5000 note, cashed by State Treasurer Bradford, Dec. 24, 1901, on which the arrest was made, and a forged check for $15,000 which was discounted in Boston.

The alleged embezzlement apparently involves this note of $5000 presented by the Natick bank, evidence of which was obtained by the selectmen through the bank's notice. According to Jennings' statement the act was committed last year, although it is understood that the note was dated 1896.

A note for $5000 was drawn by Jennings, who took it to the selectmen for their signatures. They signed it. Then Jennings carried the note to the Natick Savings bank, where it was cashed. This note, Jennings stated, was never entered on the books of the bank, and as the bank holds considerable of the town's papers, in the ordinary course the note would have passed unnoticed among the papers in the bank's hands.

The new town treasurer is Lyman K. Putney. His bonds are $20,000.

She Wanted Ragtime Music

Montgomery, W. Va., Jan. 20.—William Slaughter and Ralph Johnson, colored musicians, were shot and instantly killed, and Powell Calloway, white, mortally wounded at Morris Creek at midnight Saturday night. Lillian Williams entered a dance hall and ordered the musicians to play some ragtime music and play it quick. When her demand was not complied with she whipped out a revover and began firing at the orchestra. She escaped lynching only by the timely arrival of officers.

Borrowed Money "Blown In"

Washington, Jan. 20.—Prince Euiwha, the second son of the King of Korea, against whom a suit has been filed by Wolf Bros. & Co., to recover $30,000 claimed to be due on a promissory note, last night said no defense would be put in. He said the money had been borrowed and spent. The king, he said, had been informed of the matter and no doubt would send the money to pay the debt.

Williams' New President

Williamstown, Mass., Jan. 20.—Dr. Henry Hopkins, who was elected president of Williams college, has accepted, and will soon leave Kansas City to take up the duties of his position. Dr. Hopkins is a son of Mark Hopkins, former president of the college. He has been pastor of the First Congregational church in Kansas City for the past 22 years.

A Throne For Sale

Vienna, Jan. 20.—The Belgrade correspondent of The Neue Freie Presse declares the question of succession to the throne of Servia to be ripe for solution, as King Alexander is willing to abdicate in favor of Prince Alexis Karageorgevitch, claimant to the throne of Servia, if guaranteed a sufficient pension.

Admiral and Prince Old Friends

Berlin, Jan. 20.—Prince Henry of Prussia, in talking over his plans of travel with Ambassador White, said he was especially pleased with President Roosevelt's selection of Rear Admiral Evans to receive him in the United States, as there was an old sailor's friendship between them.

MURDER CHARGED

John Arnold Is Accused of Having Caused Death of His Son

Maynard, Mass., Jan. 20.—The arrest of John Arnold of Hudson, charged with the murder of his son, has been made by Officer King, assisted by Officer Scally of Hudson.

There has been a growing, popular feeling that Arnold's story of the death of his son, George W. W. Arnold, in the woods, Jan. 8, was not by accident, but at the hands of his father. The pith of the case is this: On the date named, father and son were cutting wood in this town. Soon after the noon hour the father reported that his son had been killed by a falling tree. Medical examination and investigation of the premises threw doubt on the story, and the sequel is the arrest of the father.

Arnold is under lock and key in the town lockup, inaccessible to any newspaper men, and were he available, he would say nothing, as he is under orders from his counsel, John J. Shaugnessey, not to say a word. However, Arnold's original story, told after the fatality, is not changed by his subsequent utterances.

Maynard Strike Ended

Maynard, Mass., Jan. 20.—The striking spinners held a special meeting and heard the report of the members of the spinners' committee who visited the state board of arbitration and conciliation in Boston. After hearing the opinion of the state board the strikers voted practically unanimously to return to work today and continue at work under the conditions against which they rebelled, pending settlement of existing difficulties. The estimated cost of the strike to the employes of the mill is $7000.

Looks Like Incendiarism

Webster, Mass., Jan. 20.—A house and barn, of which a family of Polish birth were tenants, were burned Saturday night. The firemen were called, but the run was too long for them to save property. On the rear steps of the house was found a can of gunpowder, and from the house to the barn there had been laid a train of powder. The property loss is about $3000. The family could not be found.

Died In His Buggy

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 20.—Deputy Sheriff Frank F. Porter of this city was seen in his buggy on South street, Bridgewater, last night, with the reins hanging and the horse taking its own course. He was taken from the carriage and found to be dead. Medical Examiner Paine pronounced death due to natural causes, Mr. Porter having been a sufferer from heart trouble. He was 45 years old.

An Undisturbed Cocking Main

Braintree, Mass., Jan. 20.—One of the most exciting cocking mains in this section for years was pulled off in this town yesterday. Quincy won the majority of fights and defeated birds from Rockland and North Weymouth. The stakes varied from $25 to $100, in several matches. About 150 sports were present from Providence, Cleveland, Syracuse, New York, Boston and adjacent towns.

Five Hundred Men to Strike

Boston, Jan. 20.—Because of the refusal of 47 of the master teamsters of this city to be governed by the agreement entered into a short time ago between the Team Drivers' union and the the Master Teamsters' association, 500 employes of these concerns voted last night to strike today. Of the employing teamsters who will be effected by the strike the most of them are small concerns.

Children Under Horses' Heels

Boston, Jan. 20.—Five children, none over 12 years old, on a double runner, were in collision with a sleigh at the foot of Elm Hill, Brookline, but none was fatally hurt. Three of the number were badly hurt, however, for the shock was a terrific one. The children were thrown under the heels of the pair of horses, but the animals did not kick until the little ones were gotten out of danger.

No Sunday Consultations

Barnstable, Mass., Jan. 20.—Judge Bixby of Brockton, senior counsel for Miss Jane Toppan, who is in the Barnstable jail awaiting trial on the charge of murder, came here yesterday for the purpose of having a consultation with his client, but was denied admission to the jail by the jailer, who said he was acting under strict orders.

Gendarmes Shot to Kill

Budapest, Jan. 20.—During an agarian riot in the village of Alsoideos, Transylvania, a mob attacked the government officials and the gendarmes fired on them. Ten of the mob were killed. One of the wounded has since died and four of them are not expected to recover.

Schley Bagged a Deer

Savannah, Ga., Jan. 20.—Admiral Schley's hunting party returned yesterday from St. Catherines island. The party secured a large bag of game. Admiral Schley is credited with having brought down one deer.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

CASE 113

By... Emile Gaboriau

CHAPTER II.

THE commissary sent for by M. Fauvel soon made his appearance. A short man dressed in a full suit of black, which was slightly relieved by a crumpled collar, followed him. The banker, scarcely bowing to him, said:

"Doubtless, monsieur, you have been apprised of the painful circumstance which compels me to have recourse to your assistance?"

"It is about a robbery, I believe."

"Yes; an infamous and mysterious robbery committed in this office, from the safe you see open there, of which my cashier"—he pointed to Prosper—"alone possesses the key and the word."

This declaration seemed to arouse the unfortunate cashier from his stupor.

"Pardon me, monsieur," he said to the commissary in a low tone. "My chief also has the word and the key."

"I should have said so."

The commissary at once understood that these two men accused each other.

"Well," he said, "a robbery has been perpetrated, but by whom? Did the robber enter from without?"

The banker hesitated a moment.

"I think not," he said at last.

"And I am certain he did not," said Prosper.

The commissary was prepared for those answers, but it did not suit his purpose to follow them up immediately.

"However," said he, "we must make ourselves sure of it." Turning toward his companion, "M. Fanferlot," he said, "go and see if you cannot discover some traces that may have escaped the attention of these gentlemen."

M. Fanferlot, nicknamed "The Squirrel," was indebted to his prodigious agility for this title, of which he was not a little proud. Slim and insignificant in appearance, he might, in spite of his iron muscles, be taken for a bailiff's under clerk as he walked along buttoned up to the chin in his thin black overcoat. He had one of those faces that impress us disagreeably—an odiously turned up nose, thin lips and little restless black eyes. Fanferlot, who had been on the police force for five years, burned to distinguish himself, to make for himself a name. He was ambitious. Alas, he was unsuccessful, lacking opportunity or genius.

Already, before the commissary spoke to him, he had ferreted everywhere—studied the doors, sounded the partitions, examined the wicket and stirred up the ashes in the fireplace.

"It would be very difficult," said he, "for a stranger to enter here."

He walked around the office.

"Is this door closed at night?" he inquired.

"It is always locked."

"And who keeps the key?"

"The office boy, to whom I always give it in charge before leaving the bank," said Prosper.

"This boy," said M. Fauvel, "sleeps in the outer room on a sofa bedstead, which he unfolds at night and folds up in the morning."

"Is he here?" inquired the commissary.

"Yes, monsieur," answered the banker.

He opened the door and called:

"Anselme!"

This boy had been a confidential servant of M. Fauvel for ten years. He knew that he would not be suspected, but the idea of being connected with a robbery is terrible, and he entered the room trembling like a leaf.

"Did you sleep in the next room last night?" asked the commissary of police.

"Yes, monsieur; as usual."

"At what hour did you go to bed?"

"About half past 10. I had spent the evening at a cafe near by with monsieur's valet."

"Did you hear no noise during the night?"

"No, and still I sleep so lightly that if monsieur comes down to the cashroom when I am asleep I am instantly awakened by the sound of his foot steps."

"Does M. Fauvel often come to the cashroom at night?"

"No, monsieur; very seldom."

"Did he come last night?"

"No, monsieur; I am very certain he did not, for I was kept awake nearly all night by the strong coffee I had drunk with the valet."

"That will do," said the commissary. "You may retire."

He opened the door of the banker's private staircase.

"Where do these stairs lead to?" he asked.

"To my private office," replied M. Fauvel.

"Is not that the room," asked the commissary, "to which I was conducted when I first came?"

"Precisely."

"I would like to see it," said Fanferlot, "and examine the entrances to it."

"Nothing is more easy," said M. Fauvel eagerly. "Come, gentlemen, and you come, too, Prosper."

M. Fauvel's private office consisted of two rooms—the waiting room, sumptuously decorated, and the study, where he transacted business. The furniture in this room was composed of a large office desk, several leather covered chairs and on either side of the fireplace a secretary and a bookshelf. These two rooms had three doors. One opened on the private stairway, another into the banker's bedroom, and the third into the main vestibule. It was through this last door that the banker's clients and visitors were admitted. M. Fanferlot examined the study. He seemed puzzled like a man who had flattered himself with the hope of discovering something and had found nothing.

"Let us see the adjoining room," he said.

He passed into the waiting room, followed by the banker and the commissary of police.

Prosper remained alone in the study. Notwithstanding the disordered state of his mind, he could not but perceive that his situation was every minute becoming more serious. Seating himself on a sofa near the fireplace, he was absorbed in the most gloomy forebodings when the banker's chamber door suddenly opened and a beautiful girl appeared upon the threshold. She was tall and slender. A loose morning gown, confined at the waist by a simple black ribbon, betrayed to advantage the graceful elegance of her figure. Her black eyes were large and soft, her complexion had the creamy pallor of a white camellia, and her beautiful dark hair, carelessly held together by a tortoise shell comb, fell in a profusion of soft curls upon her ex-

Good Afternoon

Should not Ward One with some of the oldest members of the City Council, have a chairmanship of one of the important standing committees of the Council?

Members of Congress from the Pacific coast are deeply interested in the construction of a Chinese wall around the United States—only this wall is to keep the Chinese on the outside.

The not distant future promises to demonstrate the correctness of President Roosevelt's view that it is the investor in the trusts rather than their competitors that need to be protected from them.

Inasmuch as cock fights which occur in one town are reported as taking place in another, it is more than possible that Quincy birds did no tparticipate at Braintree on Sunday, as reported at length with a big scare head in a Boston daily. This is notoriety which Quincy does desire.

The division of the city into two districts for the choice of Representatives to the General Court might give better satisfaction, and at the same time abolish nominations in a double district, wherein the voters do not have a fair opportunity to express their preferences.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ If there is any man that should have a short days's work and abundant rest that man is the railway engineer. If he is not given these essentials to his own safety and that of the public, it is high time that the public authorities and the unions of railway employes should take the matter up and never rest until every railway engineer is assured that he will not be worked beyond the bounds of prudence and reason.—Chicago Post.

☞ A president is just an American called from the ranks for a little while and then returning to them. He needs no coddling or special privileges after he goes out of office. Mr. Cleveland has a good time and is not complaining. He is not asking for $25,000 a year. It is certain that Mr. Roosevelt will not loaf and invite his soul when he ceases to be president. Mr. Lovering like other gentlemen who have felt a call to do something for ex-presidents, means well but he is wasting paper.—New York Sun.

☞ A hue and cry is being raised because the new department of commerce as planned would have been the most important of the country. There may be some changes made, but if the new creation is left true to its name it will be the most important in the administration, in spite of its detractors. It isn't just the "proper thing" to bow down to commercialism, but, just the same, the commercial prosperity of this country is the basis on which all of the other lines of prosperity and achievement are based.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ The president of Bryn Mawr makes the profound observation that "college women, like other women, are dependent upon men for marriage." Naturally. By the way, men are dependent upon women for marriage.—New Bedford Standard.

P. O. BUILDING.

Congressman Naphen Looks for Success.

Mayor Bryant Going to Washington.

Appropriation Expected at this Session of Congress.

Mayor Bryant has been called to Washington by Congressman Naphen, in relation to the erection of a government building in Quincy, which is to come up Thursday. Mayor Bryant will leave for the capital on Wednesday. This has occasioned the postponement of the reception and banquet to have been held Thursday evening at the United States Hotel, Boston. The date upon which the affair will be held is in doubt.

Low, the Washington correspondent of the Globe, in dispatch Jan. 17 says: Congressman Naphen is greatly interested in the passage of the public building bill as he is desirous of securing an appropriation of $100,000 for the erection of a post office building at Quincy.

Mr. Naphen had a hearing before the committee on public buildings during the last session of congress, and a favorable impression was made on the members of that committee. But, unfortunately for Quincy, there was no bill providing for the erection of public buildings reported to the house during the last session.

Mr. Naphen intends to have another hearing before the committee, and as he has heard that a public building bill will be reported this year, he feels as if an appropriation will be made for Quincy.

Mr. Naphen has been told that the river and harbor bill will carry an appropriation of $10,000 for the improvement of Town river. He believes a river and harbor bill will pass both houses and of congress this session, and that Boston harbor and Town river will be well taken care of.

Early Car Wanted.

Editors of the Ledger:

The writer, who is a resident of Quincy Point but whose business in Boston compels him to be there at 7 A. M. is obliged to stay away from home through the week simply because there is not an electric car from Quincy Point to the station in season to connect with the 6.12 train in the morning. It seems to me that 6 o'clock in the morning is not an unreasonable hour to expect cars to be running. I find that there are early cars from every other point but this one. Why this discrimination?

I am under the impression that franchises are granted to street railway companies, not alone that the companies may make money but that the public may be convenienced also.

A petition has been signed by a large number of citizens and sent to the Street Railway Company, asking for this accommodation, and I hope you will give this a place in your valued paper, and that by agitation we may secure this acommodation which will contribute to the growth and prosperity of Quincy Point.

Yours sincerely,
T. F. Merrill.

Hospital Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Quincy City Hospital will be held tonight in the chapel of the First church. For several years past the annual meetings have been held at the residence of Dr. Gordon and so little interest has been shown that there was difficulty in getting a quorum. This year it was thought advisable to hold the meeting in some other place, and it is hoped that there will be a much larger attendance than usual. Aside from the election of a clerk and board of trustees, there will be reports from the trustees and treasurer.

Nervous Weakness and Paleness

Are commonly found together, the reason being that where there is nervous weakness there is derangement of the nutritive processes, and the blood loses color.

Peptiron, The New Iron Tonic,

Both medicine and food for the nerves and brain, cures nervous weakness, and reddens the lips, cheeks and ears.

It is an Aromatic Cordial Elixir, agreeable to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, and the only preparation of iron that does not cause constipation nor injure the teeth.

Note.—Peptiron is guaranteed to do what we say: if it does not, money will be refunded.

SILVER WEDDING.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Wrisley Entertained.

The palatial residence of Hon. John Shaw of Goffe street was ablaze with light, Friday evening January 17, in honor of the twenty-fifth marriage anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Wrisley who were married in Wakefield, January 17, 1877, by the Rev. Dr. Keyser. The guests consisted of relativ s of both parties, including talent. The spacious rooms were beautifully decorated with festoons of trailing Lycopodium, while graceful ferns added tropical luxuriance to the scene.

Mr. and Mrs. Wrisley were assisted in receiving by their only daughter, Gertrude, and also in a very graceful manner, by Hon. and Mrs. John Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. George Pfaffmann.

After congratulations had been extended to the still youthful appearing couple the following talent was listened to with marked appreciation. Singing, Miss Roache of Dorchester; violin solo, Mr. Alexander Dearborn of Wakefield; piano solo, Miss Bessie Higgins of Dorchester; violin solo, Mr. A. Vogel of Brookline; song, Mr. Dan Macniven of Brookline; song, Mrs. Pfaffmann; duet, Mrs. Pfaffmann and Mr. W. W. Slade; song, Mr. George Pfaffmann; and song, Master Jack Pfaffmann.

Mrs. W. W. Slade and Mr. Frank Heald were able accompanists. One of the pleasing features of the program was the song by little Jack Pfaffmann, entitled "Stay in your own back yard." Language cannot portray the richness of Miss Roache's deep contralto voice, so well known to lovers of music, while to see Mr. Macniven's "shuffle," and hear his ragtime songs, cannot fail to create a longing for better acquaintance with the young man.

After the enterainment the floor of the beautiful hall, with its depth of sixty feet, had cognizance of the feet of merry dancers, who thought not of rest until invited to the dining room. Then it became evident that thoughts of the inward man were predominant, and for a time mirth appeared to give place to despondency "so completely did viands of various kinds allure the taste."

Mr. and Mrs. Wrisley were recipients of many gifts. The most unique and suggestive being a box containing one hundred bright silver quarters, the gift of Hon. and Mrs. John Shaw.

Cutting Affray.

There came near being a serious cutting affair on Union street Sunday night. Fortunately the victim wore a heavy coat which prevented the razor from reaching his neck.

It was about 9 o'clock when a man rushed into the police station and in broken English said there had been a cutting affair on Union street.

From the story told it appeared that an Italian named Favare Novarrile was passing through Union street on his way home when he passed a crowd of Italians. They spoke to him and asked him where he was going. He replied that he was going home. Upon that the crowd set upon him and one of them slashed at him with a razor. The razor struck the heavy coat collar which prevented it reaching his neck. Before the blow could be repeated he got away. Inspector McKay and Officer Bradley went to the scene and arrested three Italians who gave their names as Salalend Pascalli, Mattie Ditlsio and Guesippi Castantenti and locked them up on charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

An examination of the coat worn by Novarrile showed how narrow an escape he had.

Ice Harvesting.

Hundreds visited the ice pond of the Meadow Brook Ice company on Sunday and watched the interesting work of gathering ice. Good progress was made as thousands of tons of clear eleven inch ice was housed. This company use the endless chain operated by steam power and fill all four of their houses at the same time.

TODAY'S COURT.

Salalend Parsalli, Guesippi Castanterile and Mattie Ditlesio were arraigned for assault upon Farare Novarrili at Quincy. Case continued until Tuesday.

William Brett was sent to the house of correction for two months for drunkenness at Braintree.

John Gallagher was fined $10 for drunkenness at Braintree, and Daniel Murphy $10 for drunkenness at Milton.

Charles M. Norton was sentenced to three months in the house of correction for larceny of money (less than $100) from Martin Piaffmann at Quincy.

Myron Thomas and George Ruggles were fined $3 each for disturbing a religious meeting at Weymouth.

A Card.

We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a 50 cent bottle of Greene's Warranted Syrup of Tar if it fails to cure your cough or cold. We also guarantee a 25-cent bottle to prove satisfactory or money refunded.

After the coasting was over, the party repaired to Mr. Field's home on High street where a collation wasserved. The remainder of the evening was devoted to music, vocal and instrumental. The party broke up at a late hour, all concerned expressing themselves as having spent a delightful evening.

Short Talk on Sleep and Rest.

The humblest workman in England owns a better and more comfortable bed than the average well-to-do American. He expects to pay between 10 and 12 pounds sterling for his bed, because he knows he cannot get what he wants at a lesser price.

Over 99 per cent of the American population have never enjoyed the comfort of high grade bedding. We refer to Royal Upholstered Springs and Imperial Mattresses.

These Springs cost from $12.00 to $25.00.
These Mattresses cost from $25.00 to $35.00.

The price seems high, but no money you can invest in all the world will bring you such comfort, rest and sleep, as money spent in this class of bedding.

It will please us to show it to you.

Smart Set Sleighride.

The first effort of the Smart Set whist club, outside of their game every fortnight, was a sleighride Saturday evening which was successful from the perfection of the night to the minutest detail, for having a jolly time. Twelve young women laden with pillows, candy, crackers, shawls and miscellaneous necessities for making a "racket" met at the corner of Newhall and Billings streets and made themselves comfortable in the great pung with its pair of prancing horses. The party started at seven, driving through Atlantic first and waking the echoes with horns, cowbells and voices. Quincy greeted the Smart Set's hilarity with returning cheers, and one man went as far as to slip down while looking after the departing pung. The ride continued through the Braintrees, Milton and Ashmont. One of the most unique features of the evening was a small electric flash-light, owned by one of the members of the club. The light, pointed at any person, flashed full in his face for a second, and many an innocent couple were left smiling foolishly after an electric revelation. The good time was general and everyone returned home in superfine spirits.

City Council Business.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight, at which time it is expected that Mayor Bryant will announce the balance of his appointments, and President Alden will name his committees.

A manager of the Woodward Fund is to be elected, and the Registrars of Voters will submit the jury list.

Reports from special committees may be expected on the orders for $55,000 for a new school building at Quincy Point; on printing the annual City Report, and upon printing the calendar of matters pending before the City Council.

Christian Science.

A meeting of those interested in Christian Science was held Sunday afternoon at Colonial hall. There were forty or more present. The object of the meeting was to talk over the advisability of holding Christian Science services in Quincy. Samuel Davis was chairman of the meeting and Edwin S. Bennett treasurer. A committee was appointed to look up the cost of obtaining a reader, and the expense of a hall, as well as to see how much money could be raised to carry on the meetings.

St. Chrysostoms.

The membership of St. Chrysostoms church includes 95 families and 19 others. The total number confirmed is 121 of whom 7 were received during 1901. The actual communicants number 90. The Sunday school has 8 officers and teachers and 122 pupils. The expenses of the parish for 1901 were $3,309.30, and the missions and charities amounted to $401.09 more.

"David Harum."

Possibly the greatest success achieved by any play seen in Boston this season is that which has been won by "David Harum," now being presented at the Colonial Theatre with the well-known actor, William H. Crane, in the title role. As is to be imagined, the play is a dramatization of Edward Noyes Wescott's popular novel, and since its original production last year it has had more favor showered upon it than was given to any other work that has reached the stage from between the covers of a book. For sixteen weeks the play ran in New York City and for six weeks it was given in Chicago to phenomenal receipts. In all of the important cities in which it has been given it has established records for large receipts. A compilation of figures at the Colonial Theatre in Boston proves that during the four weeks the comedy has already been there it has been given to more people than was "Ben Hur" at the same house during the same length of time. "Ben Hur" played to more money, but that is explained by the fact that the scale of prices for that production was higher than it is for "David Harum." As for Mr. Crane's portrayal of "David Harum," it is said to be by long odds the best piece of character delineation seen on the stage in years. It is a masterpiece in its way and the best piece of work ever shown by this artistic actor in all of the time that he has been before the public. Mr. Crane and the play are to remain in Boston until the first week in February.

Magazines.

Are England, Scotland and Ireland destined, ultimately, to become part of "The United States of America and Great Britain?" is the startling inquiry which William T. Stead makes in the January Cosmopolitan. He has been one of the prophets of Great Britain, and has, at all times, been able to see in advance of the contemporaries—as events have proven. However much one may differ from Mr. Stead, his speculations will be found vastly interesting. He is the first British subject who has had the courage to suggest such an outcome.

An article in the Review of Reviews for January outlines the career of the late Alfred Nobel, of Sweden, the inventor and manufacturer of dynamite, who left over $9,000,000 for the advancement of science and literature and the promotion of international peace, through the distribution of five annual prizes of over $40,000 each. The award for the year 1901 was announced on December 10, and the Review article contains the portraits of two of the prize winners—M. Armand Sully-Prudhomme, the French poet and essayist, who received the prize for idealistic literature, and Prof. Rontgen, the discoverer of the X-rays, to whom was awarded the prize in physics.

DELIBERATE MURDER

Aged Farmer Brutally Shot and Cut by Former Employe

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 20.—Sampson Seaverns, 83 years old, a well-to-do farmer, living on a cross road running from Princeton to Rutland, was murdered while he slept Saturday night at his home. Leon Hapgood, formerly employed by Mr. Seaverns, shot his former employer through the head, and to make sure his work was complete struck the old man over the head three times with the sharp edge of an axe.

After his foul deed, Hapgood went upstairs in the house to a room where Seaverns' wife and daughter, Clara, sat, and told the girl that he had murdered her father. He made her find a fur robe he had left at the house when he quit work and then left, carrying an axe and lantern with him. He has not yet been apprehended.

It is supposed Hapgood gained entrance through a window in the lower part of the house in which the murdered man was sleeping. Tracks were discovered on the outside. The wife and daughter of the murdered man were sleeping upstairs and heard a noise, followed by a pistol shot. Soon after then footsteps were heard on the stairs and there was a knock at the door. Suspecting who was there they called and Hapgood made himself known to them. He was accused by the daughter of having murdered the old man and he admitted it coolly, promising at the same time not to harm the women if they allowed him time to escape. He then asked for a robe which he said belonged to him and had been left when he went away a year ago.

This was given him and he went away, as near as the women could tell, in the direction of Worcester.

The daughter then went down stairs, saw the dead body of her father, hitched up a team and drove to the home of the nearest neighbor to give the alarm.

Hapgood is 40 years old and has been living in the vicinity of the Seaverns home since he left it in anger a year ago. He has been known to threaten the life of the old man and has made more or less talk of it among friends during the last year.

Aged Merchant Murdered

Rochester, Jan. 20.—Bela E. Brown, aged 65, dealer in diamonds and manufacturer of jewelry, was found murdered in his store last night. His legs were tied together and he was gagged with a neck scarf. The eyes were staring wide open. Abundant evidence of a brutal murder was seen in the terrible wounds on the head, evidently made by a hammer. All about were evidences of a fierce struggle. The murderers evidently had placed Brown before the safe, which was locked, and tried to force him to work the combination for them. Failing in this the assassins pounded the back of the old man's head to a jelly and departed.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Bemedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. ADVISES ACCEPTANCE

Canal Commission Favors the Panama Offer.

PRESIDENT GETS REPORT

Senate Will Seriously Consider It, Causing Delay of the Nicaragua Project, Which Is Strongly Endorsed by the House

Washington, Jan. 20.—Rear Admiral John G. Walker, retired, president of the isthmian canal commission, gave President Roosevelt Saturday evening the report of the commission on the reduced offer of the Panama Canal company, recommending its acceptance. It will be transmitted by the president to congress, where it will have an important effect.

Two members of the commission, Professor L. M. Haupt of Philadelphia and ex-Senator Samuel Pasco of Florida, while agreeing with all the others in preferring the Panama route to any other, were disposed to doubt whether it was practicable for the United States government to acquire such control of it as it ought to have for the proper construction and operation of the proposed canal, in view of the questions raised as to unwilling stockholders in the canal company and unwilling minority stockholders in the Panama Railroad company, and proposed to submit a minority report. But Admiral Waker and the other members of the commission exercised their powers of persuasion and diplomacy and, it is understood, induced them to refrain from doing so.

The report submitted by the commission at the opening of congress, expressing a preference for Panama on engineering grounds, was unanimous, and the members were very desirous to make their supplemental report also unanimous. It is believed that this result was obtained by agreeing to state frankly the possible difficulties in the way of acquiring the route as desired, but to add that they could be overcome.

The senate will take the commission report very seriously, but it will undoubtedly proceed to investigate the matter on its own account. Beyond the fact that there will be deliberation and hesitation, which will at least delay the Nicaragua canal project, nothing can now be predicted.

The Nicaragua canal project now has to face the opposition of the Panama canal advocates, the friends of the so-called Darien route and the opposing railroads. The Darien route has no chance of success whatever, but it can be used to complicate the matter. The choice of routes is between that of Nicaragua and that of Panama, as the isthmian canal commission, which has discarded the Darien route, has pointed out in expressing a preference for the Panama route. At this time it seems just as likely that one or the other or neither of them will be adopted.

Of the two routes, that of Panama now has the advantage given by the report of the isthmian commission, while the Nicaragua route has the advantage of the great vote in the house and the supposed preference for it in the country at large.

An Unaccountable Collapse

Detroit, Jan. 20.—Four buildings, each four stories high, located in the heart of the wholesale district of this city, collapsed at 8:30 o'clock last night without any apparent cause, and all that now remains is a heap of ruins. The buildings were occupied by five concerns, and their stocks are a total loss, which is estimated at $152,000, exclusive of the loss on the buildings, which amounts to $50,500.

Terrible Result of Explosion

Barcelona, Jan. 20.—The explosion of the boiler of a spinning mill destroyed half the village of Puente de Vilumara. The hospital at Manresta is filled with the injured. Sixteen mutilated bodies of working people who were buried in the debris have been recovered. Of the persons injured, 60 are not expected to recover.

Disastrous Prairie Fires

Great Falls, Mont., Jan. 20.—Extensive prairie fires are reported on the other side of the international boundary. Practically all the range between Milk river and Leth bridge has been swept by the flames. Many hundred tons of hay have already been destroyed.

Log Punched Hole In Steamer

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 20.—The river steamer Frank S. Stone was wrecked by a floating log in Mobile river last night and lies careened in mid-channel. No lives were lost. The bow of the boat was pierced by the log. The boat was valued at $30,000.

St. Paul, Jan. 20.—A check amounting to $1,000,000 has been received here for payment of the policy on the life of Frank H. Peavey, the late Minneapolis miner. It is said to be the largest check ever drawn in payment of a life insurance risk.

A Worthy Cause

Paris, Jan. 20.—A crusade has been started here to fight the adulteration of milk, to which the great mortality of infants is largely attributed. The agitation is an outcome of the grave concern expressed at the depopulation of France.

quisite neck. She was M. Fauvel's niece, Madeleine, of whom he had spoken not long before. Seeing Prosper Bertomy in the study, where probably she expected to find her uncle alone, she could not refrain from an exclamation of surprise.

"Ah!"

Prosper started up as if he had received an electric shock. His eyes, a moment before so dull and heavy, all at once sparkled with joy as if he had caught a glimpse of a messenger of hope.

"Madeleine," he cried; "Madeleine!"

The young girl blushed crimson. She seemed about to hastily retreat and stepped back; but, Prosper having advanced toward her, she was overcome by something stronger than her will and extended her hand, which he seized and pressed eagerly. They stood thus face to face, but with bowed heads.

Finally Madeleine said in a scarcely audible voice:

"You, Prosper—you!"

These words broke the spell. Prosper dropped the white hand which he held and answered bitterly:

"Yes, this is Prosper, the companion of your childhood—suspected, accused of the most disgraceful theft—Prosper, whom your uncle has just delivered up to justice and who, before the day is over, will be arrested and thrown into prison."

Madeleine, with a terrified gesture, cried in a tone of profound sympathy:

"Good heavens! Prosper, what are you saying?"

"What! Do you not know? Have not your aunt and cousins told you?"

"They have told me nothing. I have scarcely seen my cousins this morning, and my aunt is so ill that I felt uneasy and came to tell uncle. But for heaven's sake speak. Tell me what has happened."

Prosper hesitated. Perhaps it occurred to him to open his heart to Madeleine, of revealing to her his most secret thoughts. A remembrance of the past coming up chilled his confidence. He sadly shook his head and replied:

"Thanks, mademoiselle, for this proof of interest, the last, doubtless, that I shall ever receive from you. But allow me, by being silent, to spare you distress and myself the mortification of blushing before you."

Madeleine interrupted him with an imperious gesture:

"I insist upon knowing," she said.

"Alas, mademoiselle!" answered Prosper. "You will only too soon learn my misfortune and my disgrace. Then, yes, then you will applaud yourself for what you have done."

Won't Join Combination

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 20.—The efforts of outside parties to induce Haverhill manufactures to join a proposed combination of cut sole concerns has not met with success. Without the aid of Haverhill manufacturers, it is claimed such a combination is not likely to be formed, for the opposition would be too strong.

Hotel and Restaurant Men Organize

SEVEN TO ONE

From reports received we figure that one bottle of Scott's Emulsion sometimes builds seven times its weight of solid, healthy flesh! Why is this so?

Because Scott's Emulsion is itself the richest and most digestible of foods.

Because Scott's Emulsion gives strong appetite.

Because Scott's Emulsion makes all good food do good—strong stomach—strong digestion.

Because Scott's Emulsion wakes up the dormant system—new life to the tissues—so that the body uses it's food for bone making and flesh building.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

THIS WEEK IN CONGRESS

Philippine Bill Has First Place In the Upper Branch

Washington, Jan. 20.—The calendar of the house of representatives is still rather meagre in important bills, so that there does not promise to be a heavy pressure of business during this week. Today is the regular suspension day, but there are few measures likely to be passed by suspension of the rules.

The urgent deficiency appropriation bill will occupy most of the time during the first few days of the week. It carries a total of $16,700,000, which is rather large for a deficiency measure, and it is expected that two days will be occupied in its consideration. Beyond this there is practically no program for the week.

The Philippine question will be precipitated on the senate when the committee on the Philippines which has had the house Philippine tariff bill under consideration reports the measure. The bill with its committee amendments will be sent to the printer and Senator Lodge will give notice of his intention to ask for its continued consideration until finally disposed of.

There is a general acquiescence of Republican senators in this program. There are other important measures to be presented at the proper time by administration senators, but the present agreement is to pass the Philippine bill first, as being of the most immediate importance.

A long discussion of the bill is expected by the Republicans and promised by the Democrats. The Democratic leaders say they do not expect to be able to defeat the bill and disclaim all intention to delay a vote unnecessarily, but they say frankly that they consider that it affords an opportunity for the presentation of the view of the entire Philippine question which they cannot afford to let pass.

FIRE IN YARN MILLS

Water Helped to Cause Damage of $200,000 at Fall River

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 20.—Fire broke out yesterday in the Globe Yarn mills of the New England Cotton Yarn company, and before it was extinguished the plant had been damaged to the extent of about $200,000.

The cause of the fire is not known, but it originated in a belt box connected with the main engine, in the basement of No. 1 mill. It was discovered by one of a number of carpenters who were making repairs in the mill.

The damage consists mostly in the destruction of machinery and damage by water to finished products. In this mill three of the most valuable kinds of cotton are used, Sea Island, Egyptian and Peeler cotton, varying in price from 11 to 24 cents a pound.

A considerable portion of the water which caused the greatest damage was furnished by the automatic sprinklers, which opened at the first sign of fire.

There was a large amount of finished and unfinished product in the mill, all of which will be a total loss. In addition there was a large quantity of raw cotton, which was also destroyed by water.

Heavy Diamond Robbery

Glendive, Mont., Jan. 20.—Robbers secured between $10,000 and $20,000 worth of unset and set diamonds yesterday by stealing two trunks from the baggage room of the Northern Pacific station and breaking them open. Nothing is missing from the trunks except a bag of unset diamonds and about 350 rings. A tray containing 24 set diamonds was overlooked by the robbers. The trunks were the property of C. B. Clausen, a traveling salesman.

A Smallpox Riot

Easton, Pa., Jan. 20.—A serious riot, following an attempt upon the part of the health board to bury the body of an Italian woman who died of malignant smallpox, occurred at Bangor yesterday. Four hundred Italians attacked the police and probably fatally injured Peter Ross and prevented the interment. The woman's corpse is now in the Catholic church, closely guarded. The sheriff will send a posse to Bangor to disperse the mob.

Strike Cost Union $200,000

Youngstown, O., Jan. 20.—"The Amalgamated Association went into the last strike with the United States Steel corporation with $72,000 in the treasury and spent $200,000 in the fight. It will go into the next convention with $100,000 in the treasury," said President Shaffer of that organization in addressing a mass meeting of the men yesterday.

Captives to Soon Be Released

Constantinople, Jan. 20.—Reliable news has been received here to the effect that Miss Ellen M. Stone, Mme. Tsilka and the latter's baby, are well. Negotiations are proceeding which, it is expected, will result in the early and safe return of the captives. Mr. Leishmann, the American minister here, admits there is ground for the above report.

Promise of Howard's Counsel

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 20.—Attorneys for the defense in the James Howard murder case say that they will put on the witness stand reliable persons who will give all the details of the alleged Goebel murder conspiracy. They say that this testimony will show that Howard had nothing to do with the crime.

TRICKERY OF FILIPINOS

They Act as Enemies While Posing As Friends

HUMANITY OF AMERICANS

Is Also a Contributory Cause Toward the Prolongation of Warfare—Suppression of Brigandage Handicapped by Presence of Civil Government

Manila, Jan. 20.—General Chaffee, in the annual report which has just been issued, sums up the situation from the military point of view by saying that the provinces of Batangas and Laguna, in southern Luzon, and the islands of Samar, Mindoro and Cebu constitute the disturbed area in which bodies of insurgents in force are to be found.

General Chaffee says the prolongation of guerilla warfare is due to the physical character of the country and to the nature of the warfare carried on by the insurgents, who pose as friends and act as enemies in the same hour; to the humanity displayed by the American troops, of which the insurgents take advantage, and to the fear of assassination on the part of those natives who are amicably disposed toward the Americans, should they give the latter information concerning the movements or whereabouts of the insurgents.

Municipal and provincial governments are being organized. These governments have not yet received a practical trial. They constitute the only certain and reliable method of ascertaining progress of the Filipinos toward self-government.

According to the opinion of army officers, the disaster to Co. C., of the Ninth infantry, at Balangiga, Samar, when 48 men were killed, is attributed to the too great confidence of these men in territory which they assumed to be pacified.

In the same report Judge Advocate Groesbeck says the suppression of brigandage will probably be one of the most trying problems of the future. If the military arm be left free to deal with the marauders, there is no doubt of their final suppression. But the presence of the civil government complicates the situation considerably. With the civil and military authorities working in harmony, says Judge Groesbeck, no evil results should be anticipated.

A report has been received here that a dug-out canoe, in which 11 men of Co. L., of the Second infantry were travelling, is missing and probably lost. It is believed the men either perished or were captured.

General Wade has cabled from Cebu that 365 insurgents surrendered on the Island of Bohol last Friday. The authorities here say that if this statement is accurate, it is astonishing, as the secret service had failed to learn of the existence of any such body of insurgents on Bohol.

An important capture was made in Laguna province, Luzon, when eight men of the Eighth infantry captured a woman insurgent named Aquoda Kahabagan. She recently commanded an insurgent force of 800 men, 300 of whom carried rifles, while 500 were armed with bolos. For six years past she has been leading insurgent bands against the Spaniards and the Americans.

General Bell is still active in Batangas province, Luzon. Colonel Wint, of the Sixth cavalry, who is operating in Batangas and Laguna provinces, reports numerous small engagements.

Twenty-Five Mills to Shut Down

Kaukauna, Wis., Jan. 20.—A general strike was ordered today at a joint meeting of the Appleton, Kaukauna and Neemah lodges of the United Brotherhood of Paper Makers, which will result in closing the 25 mills in Wisconsin, throwing out of employmyent 3000 laborers and cutting off over 780 tons a day from the supply of the paper market, unless the demands of the union for shorter hours shall be granted.

Timber Deal Involving $4,500,000

Titusville, Pa., Jan. 20.—The largest sale of timber land ever made in the state in a single deal was consummated at Kellettsville, when one-half the holdings of T. D. Collins were sold to G. M. Watson and Buzzard & Son. The purchase comprises 16,000 acres of hemlock pine and hard wood, worth approximately $4,500,000.

City Must Be Rebuilt

Mexico City, Jan. 20.—The volcano of Colima is again active and scientific men connect this fact with the prevalence of seismic phenomena. Governor Mera of Guerrero has taken charge of the ruined city of Chilpancingo in person. The populace is camping out. The city will have to be entirely rebuilt.

Peace Rumors Will Not Down

Brussels, Jan. 20.—In spite of the Boer denials, a strong feeling exists here that some peace movement is afoot between Great Britain and the Boer delegates, but that there is difficulty in arriving at any acceptable basis of terms, Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds being reluctant to commit themselves.

Snags Not All Passed

Mexico City, Jan. 20.—Though the arbitration question in the Pan-American conference is supposed to have been disposed of, there is some prospect of its being again agitated. However, a strong effort will be made by the more conservative delegates to prevent anything of the kind.

A Boer Leader's Fate

Graaf-Reinet, Cape Colony, Jan. 20.—Lord Kitchener has confirmed the death sentence passed upon the Boer commandant, Scheepers, who was captured last October. He will be shot next Saturday.

FIFTY-TWO FIRMS OUT

Refuse to Sign Agreement With Their Teamsters

THE LATTER ARE EXCITED

Non-Union Men Pulled From Wagons When Argument to Quit Work Failed to Have Desired Effect—Business Men Glad It Is No Worse

Boston, Jan. 21.—The turmoil caused by fully 2500 striking teamsters in their efforts to coerce teamsters who were at work to join their ranks gave the business men along Atlantic avenue and Commercial street yesterday afternoon an intimation of how bad the conditions might have been had ten times the number been involved, as was threatened some 10 days ago.

Although many firms were directly interested in yesterday's strike, they were all small ones, the large firms having reached an agreement with their employes through the efforts of President Lincoln of the Chamber of Commerce and the state board of arbitration. But the smaller firms refused to sign this agreement and yesterday the men went out.

By noon a number of these firms had arranged matters, but 52 still held out and until 7 o'clock last night nearly 300 excited teamsters surged through Atlantic avenue and the adjacent streets endeavoring to induce non-union men hired in their places to leave their wagons.

In many cases they were successful, but where a man hesitated he was pulled from the vehicle and was subjected to rough treatment. None of the men was badly hurt, and no arrests were made, but there was a good deal of shouting and unpleasant badinage between the men.

The crowd would sight a team of one of the non-complying firms and then there would be a rush. Immediately the unfortunate driver would be surrounded by a throng, some threatening, some joking, but all intent on getting him off his seat. Those who yielded were received with cheers, and were soon lost to view in the ranks of the strikers.

It took a stout-hearted man to refuse. Then his progress to his destination was slow, and while the strikers did not go so far as to offer violence the non-union men had a hard drive.

The strikers undoubtedly had many sympathizers which materially swelled their ranks. The business men along the water front all expressed themselves as thankful that the main body of teamsters had settled their difficulties.

How Austria Views Prince's Visit

Vienna, Jan. 21.—The Vienna papers continue to comment upon the mission of Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia to the United States. The Allgemeine Zeitung, praising the astuteness of Emperor William, remarks upon the possibility of Germany seeking the friendship of the United States in view of the possible breaking up of the triple alliance, and a combination by Austria and Russia against the German tariff.

Planning to Reduce Revenue

Washington, Jan. 21.—The Republican members of the ways and means committee decided yesterday to begin consideration of the bill for reducing war revenue taxes upon beer and tea and will begin hearings on Jan. 27. Some significance seemed to attach to the restriction of the hearings to these two interests, but it was explained that they were the only ones for which hearings had been asked.

Arnold Held Without Bail

Concord, Mass., Jan. 21.—A week's postponement was granted yesterday in the case of John W. Arnold of Hudson, who is charged with manslaughter in having caused the death of his son, George W. Arnold, at Maynard, week before last. Arnold pleaded not guilty and he was held without bail. He was taken to Cambridge jail at the conclusion of the hearing.

Tithes to Aid Construction

Prison Birds Left No Trace

GOVERNOR ALBAN KILLED

Government and Revolutionary Forces In Naval Battle at Panama

Washington, Jan. 21.—Only meagre details of the fighting between the vessels of the Colombian government and those of the insurgents in Panama bay were received yesterday in official circles. They consisted of one dispatch from Consul General Gudger at Panama and one from Captain Mead, the commander of the cruiser Philadelphia, which is lying in Panama bay. The dispatches were as follows.

"Fighting in bay. Governor killed. Excitement great. Gudger."

"The insurgent steamship Padilla attacked the Lautaro yesterday morning at close quarters. Crew has deserted her. Is now on fire and sinking. Mead."

The officials of the state and navy departments are watching the outcome of the contest with considerable interest. At the Colombian legation great regret is expressed by the officials over the death of General Alban, the governor of Panama. He proved a very successful officer and in the recent operations incident to the capture and surrender of Colon by the rebels he played a conspicuous part. He was about 50 years of age and a man of brilliant attainments. Formerly he was attorney general of Colombia.

In Congress

Washington, Jan. 21.—Debate on the Philippine tariff bill will begin in the senate today. Chairman Lodge reported the measure yesterday. During the greater part of yesterday's session, the measure providing for the establishment of a department of commerce was under consideration. An effort was made by Mr. Nelson to secure a vote, but the opposition to many of its provisions became so strong that the effort had to be abandoned.

The time of the house was occupied yesterday in general debate on the urgent deficiency appropriation bill. An item in the bill carrying $500,000 for a military post at Manila precipitated a long discussion. A semi-humorous speech by Mr. Clark of Missouri elicited a reply from Mr. Cannon of Illinois, which in turn drew the fire of Mr. Dearmond of Missouri.

Hoyt Estate Appraisement

New York, Jan. 21.—According to an appraisement which has just been made of the estate of Charles H. Hoyt, the playwright, the interest of Frank McKee is $21,121, and that of the Lambs and Actors' fund each $17,267. Besides this Mr. Hoyt provided in his will that his residence at Charlestown, N. H., was to be maintained for the use of the Lambs. Deducting the numerous bequests in the will, there is left a residuary estate of $55,655 for final distribution among the residuary legatees.

Shipload From Manila

San Francisco, Jan. 21.—The United States transport Grant with Governor Taft on board arrived from Manila last night and went into quarantine immediately. Since the transport arrived after sundown she was not released by the quarantine officials. The Grant has 74 cabin, 4 second-class, 1110 steerage passengers, 858 enlisted men, 203 discharged soldiers, 47 prisoners and 116 sick soldiers. Four deaths occurred on the voyage. Twenty-eight days were consumed in the passage from Manila.

Speculated and Embezzled

Helena, Mont., Jan. 21.—Herbert H. Matteson, cashier of the First National bank of Great Falls, was arrested here yesterday, charged with embezzling the bank's funds on Jan. 15. Bail was fixed at $5000. As he was unable to furnish this, he is now a prisoner in the county jail. It is understood that Matteson's defalcation may reach $175,000. Speculation, it is said, was the cause of the defalcation.

Riches Took Wings

New York, Jan. 21.—John C. Carr, once prominent in the affairs of the Guttenberg race track, who has been confined in the Morris Plains (N. J.) insane asylum for some time, died last night. At one time he was very wealthy, but he is said to have lost much of his fortune.

SECRETS OF DIPLOMACY

Austria Proposed Intervention In the Spanish War

ENGLAND FLATLY DECLINED

Led to Withdrawal of Proposition Which Had the Endorsement of France, Germany, and Russia—An Official Avowal In Parliament

London, Jan. 21.—In the house of commons yesterday, amid an absolute silence, which was a striking tribute to the deep interest felt in the matter, Lord Cranborne, under secretary for foreign affairs, made the first official statement which has ever emanated from the British government regarding its private attitude toward the United States in the war with Spain.

The subject of proposed European intervention in the Spanish-American war was brought up by Henry Norman (Liberal) in the form of a question asking whether any communication proposing, or concerning, joint or collective action by the European states in view of the outbreak, or expected outbreak, of the late war between the United States and Spain, was received from the Austrian or any other government, and, if so, what was the nature of the reply of her majesty's government. Mr. Norman further invited Lord Cranborne to lay the papers in the case on the table.

Lord Cranborne, in reply, said no such communication had been made to the government after the outbreak of the war; but, that immediately before the war communications were received from other powers, suggesting the presentation of a joint note to the President of the United States. Her majesty's government agreed to join with the others in a note expressing the hope that further negotiations might lead to a peaceful settlement, accompanied by guarantees acceptable to the United States, for the preservation of order in Cuba. The government first took steps to ascertain whether the presentation of the note, as well as its terms, would be acceptable to the president. Her majesty's government, Lord Cranborne continued, declined to associate itself with the other subsequent proposals, which seemed open to the objection of putting pressure on the government of the United States and offering an opinion on its action. The under secretary concluded with saying he was unable to lay the papers in the case on the table.

This statement was received with a burst of ringing cheers such as seldom greets the mere answer of a parliamentary question. Inquiries made by The Associated Press concerning the "subsequent proposals" mentioned by Lord Cranborne elicited important information from the foreign office. There it was stated that Great Britain was twice formally approached on this matter, but only once after the commencement of hostilities between Spain and the United States. Lord Cranborne's references to more than one proposal were evidently generalization, which included tentative proposals not officially recognized.

The occasion upon which Great Britain deliberately put down her foot, according to the foreign office, was when the Austrian ambassador at London interviewed Lord Salisbury and asked him if Great Britain would be willing to join in a collective note from the European powers urging the United States to desist from war with Spain. Such a note was not to threaten reprisals or intervention, but was to be in the nature of a strong protest and a plea for arbitration. Lord Salisbury regarded this proposition as unwarrantable interference in the affairs of a friendly country and frankly said so, declaring that Great Britain would not be a party to any such step. The foreign office heard nothing more on this subject, the matter of a collective note being dropped apparently.

Regarding the much disputed point as to what powers were previously prepared to sign this note, had Great Britain acquiesced therein, the following statement from a high official of the foreign office, through whose hands all secret dispatches passed, had best be given in his own language. This official said:

"We have no documentary evidence to prove that any power other than the one which formally approached us was concerned in this effort to send a collective note to the United States, the purport of which, however polite the wording, must naturally have been that of a threat.

"We had at the time, however, every reason to believe that this power was merely put forward as a sort of buffer in order to sound us and that France, Germany and Russia were behind her, and only awaiting our assent formally to announce their own. We have never had reason to change that belief which, in the case of France, amounts to moral certainty.

"There are a hundred and one diplomatic secrets which, pieced together, convinced us that our estimate of the situation was correct, and doubtless there are documents in the European chancelleries which detail the negotiations that occurred prior to our being approached. Subsequent diplomatic reports convinced us that the collective note was dropped on account of our refusal."

Opinion in the foreign office is somewhat divided as to the advisability of the announcement in the house of commons, several high officials of this office believing this announcement will only tend to strain the relations between Great Britain and the continental powers.

Anxiety For Missing Warship

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 21.—Alarm is now felt over the warship Condor. Yesterday's mail advices from Honolulu contained no word of the missing vessel at the islands up to Jan. 10, 39 days from the time she sailed from Esquimault, bound to Honolulu, at which port she was due on Dec. 13. The Condor passed out of the straits into the heavy southeaster of Dec. 20.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Anato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

There are still a few city appointments to be made in which the people are interested, viz: City Treasurer and Assessor, the latter for three years.

There is originality in the photo of the City Clerk elect presented today. He was evidently the victim of some snap shot fiend, and will be surprised to find himself in print.

The appointment of James F. Harlow as City Clerk meets with general favor. He is a college graduate has been admitted to the bar, and has had experience in the office, three very essential qualifications for an office of this kind.

For the city to furnish bonds where required of officials is a new departure and one which should be considered at length. Perhaps it is right that the city should, but it is such matters as these which should be referred to a committee.

It is pleasing to note that the debt of the Quincy Hospital has been materially reduced, and that the finances of the institution are much brighter than for several years. All this, too, in one of the busiest years, for the hospital has had a larger number of patients than ever before.

Mayor Bryant and Chairman Freeman of the Finance Committee of the City Council should be able to present convincing arguments why the government should erect a public building at Quincy. Our post office is now in the first class; our postal receipts are increasing by jumps; the population of the city is increasing rapidly by each census and the percentage of gain 1905 over 1895 will be the highest yet; our new shipyard will continue to do government work for many years, requiring the presence of government inspectors and office accommodations. Quincy is a sea coast city and destined to be more and more a port of entry, and a custom house will be necessary. Many smaller cities, which are making but little gain in population have government buildings and it would seem that Quincy's turn has come.

TODAY'S COURT.

The continued cases of Salalend Parealli, Mattie Dilesio and Gusseppi Castauleiili, for assault on Farare Novariili at Quincy was heard Parealli was fined $33.80 and the others were discharged.

Patrick McDonough was arraigned for drunkenness at Milton, and John Mullen for drunkenness at Quincy. Cases continued until Jan. 27.

Burleigh Won't Be Tried

Boston, Jan. 21.—Joseph A. Burleigh of Laconia, N. H., who was doing business in Boston and was arrested on Dec. 27 for alleged larceny of $39,500, had his case nolprossed yesterday. The complainant was W. W. Potter, who alleged that Burleigh by false pretenses sold him 1000 shares of stock of the American Linen Fibre company.

CITY COUNCIL.

More Appointments by the Mayor Received.

Standing Committees Announced.

The City to Pay for Bonds of Its Officials.

There was a large attendance of citizens at Monday night's meeting of the City Council. This was probably due to the fact that it was what might be called the first meeting of the new Council, and also because Mayor Bryant's appointments were expected to be announced. Mayor Bryant was present during the entire session and occupied the Mayor's seat at the right of the President. He took no part in the meeting, but was a close observer of what took place.

Councilman Elcock was the only absent member

Upon motion of Councilman Nickerson the chairman of the Finance committee, Councilman Freeman, was delegated to represent the City Council with the Mayor in Washington.

MORE FOR SEWERS.

A communication was received from the Sewer Commissioners stating that the amount available for sewer construction was but from $25,000 to $30,000. They believed the main sewer should be built to Quincy Point and that plans should be made for Ward Four. Short Talk on Sleep and Rest.

The humblest workman in England owns a better and more comfortable bed than the average well-to-do American. He expects to pay between 10 and 12 pounds sterling for his bed, because he knows he cannot get what he wants at a lesser price.

Over 99 per cent of the American population have never enjoyed the comfort of high grade bedding. We refer to Royal Upholstered Springs and Imperial Mattresses.

These Springs cost from $12.00 to $25.00.
These Mattresses cost from $25.00 to $35.00.

The price seems high, but no money you can invest in all the world will bring you such comfort, rest and sleep, as money spent in this class of bedding.

It will please us to show it to you.

Finances of Hospital More Encouraging.

More Patients in 1901 Than Ever.

Nurses, Home and Contagious Ward Among Needs.

The increased interest manifested in the Quincy City Hospital during 1901 was felt at the annual meeting on Monday evening, which was more largely attended than usual. Hon. W. B. Rice, the president and benefactor of the city presided, and W. W. Adams was clerk.

Timothy Reed, for the Trustees, reported that the number of patients admitted in 1901 was 268 which was more than in any preceding year Several times it was necessary to turn applicants away. Increased accommodation was desirable. The medical cases numbered 107, including 26 typhoid fever cases. There were 23 cases of appendicitis. Four nurses had been graduated, and there were now 6 pupils. It was with regret that the Trustees received the resignation of Miss McCrae, the head nurse. Hospital collection week had been very successful. A bequest of the late Amos Churchill had increased the endowment fund $1,000, and it now amounted to $46,205.

H. M. Faxon, the treasurer, submitted his annual report, showing all bills of 1901 paid and a reduction of over $500 in the debt of the Hospital:

President Rice commented on the better financial standing and increased interest in the hospital. The loans paid off were $500 in excess of the new loans showing a reduction of $500 in the debt. All the debt should be cancelled before making further improvements. However an enlargement was urgent, also a nurse's home. He hoped some one would donate money for the later. It would bring an income to the institution and be an advantage to the whole people.

The election of officers was next in order. The nominating committee was Dr. J. A. Gordon, F. B. Rice, Ramon Burke, James H. Stetson and Charles W. Hall.

Only one candidate was presented for clerk and Warren W. Adams was re-elected and sworn.

The ballot resulted in the election of the following: Dr. John A. Gordon, William B. Rice, Timothy Reed, William G. Tinney, Henry M. Faxon, Dr. John F. Welch, James F. Burke, Roger H. Wilde, Dr. Joseph M. Sheahan, Henry McGrath, Albert Keating, and Fred B. Rice.

During the counting of the ballots R. D. Chase asked questions relative to investments which were answered by Mr. Rice.

Dr. Gordon spoke of the needs of the hospital and placed a nurses home first. The surgical cases were increasing rapidly, and an addition would soon be an absolute necessity, also a contagious ward

Dr. Hunting also favored these improvements. One of his suggestions caused the most debate of the evening, and that was his motion that the names and amount given by each contributor be published.

F. B. Rice objected. He said several contributors last year had requested that their names be not published.

E. H. Angier favored. He knew of at least one case where a person would have given more had he expected the list would be published.

It was voted 17 to 9 that all contributions in the future be published.

The vote does not apply to contributions of 1901.

The Nominating Committee was re-elected for next year.

President Rice announced that he would soon announce a list of lady visitors and make assignments for visits.

At Sailors' Mission.

The Edward Hewitson Associates of Wollaston gave a concert at the Sailors' Mission on Hanover street, Boston, Monday night. This was the first time in the club's history that an entertainment has been given outside of Wollaston. They seemed to enjoy the boys fully as much as those to whom the members were accustomed to sing.

The entertainment opened at seven thirty and lasted until nine-fifteen.

The club not only sang, but instrumental music was furnished by different members. There was also a quartet and a reading. The latter was probably too long for such characters as listened to the reader but he rendered his selection so expressively that his audience listened very attentively.

Mr. John R. Anderson in about ten minutes gave such an enthusiastic address on temperance to the sailors that several signed the pledge.

After the entertainment a few words were said and all who had not signed pledges were encouraged to do it. The boys went amongst the sailors and talked with them and it seemed to brighten up many of them to see such an interest taken in them. The club before departing, served coffee, buns and doughnuts to all. The poor sailors seemed very hungry and ate ravenously.

A Wanderer.

Along toward 10 o'clock Monday night Officer Bradley found a man wandering aimlessly about on Hancock street. Upon questioning the man, the officer became convinced that he was mentally deranged. He was taken to the Police station where he gave his name as L. H. Plaisted of Village street, South Boston. His people were communicated with.

FOOLING THE EXPERTS.

Experience of a Man Who Bought a Diamond Brooch.

"I am convinced that few people know anything about diamonds, no matter how much they may pose as experts," said a young business man the other day. "A recent experience of mine has forced me to this conclusion. I bought for my wife a brooch containing a cluster of diamonds and took occasion to show it to several of my friends at the club. They examined it very closely, looked wise and then started to show me where my judgment had been at fault. Every man in the crowd seemed to be a diamond expert. By the time they had got through I really felt as though I had been bunkoed and was considerably depressed.

"Next day I got to thinking the matter all over and came to the conclusion that my friends had been talking of something they knew nothing about. At any rate, I determined to make a test. I went to one of those imitation diamond stores and for 50 cents bought a brooch, which I placed in the box that had formerly contained the real one.

"Again I went to the club and announced to my critical friends that I had taken their collective advice and by paying an extra $50 had exchanged the brooch in which they had picked so many flaws. They all agreed that the fifty cent bauble which I showed them was a great improvement over the other, and when I told them of the trick I had played on them they wouldn't believe me. To a man they contended that they couldn't be fooled on diamonds.

"Now I feel better satisfied with my purchase."—Philadelphia Record.

Wyclif's Bible.

The first complete translation of the Bible into the English tongue was effected by John Wyclif about 1380. This was the Lollards' Bible, and a large number of manuscript copies must have been written and circulated, for 170 copies are still in existence. There were also many transcripts of certain books as well as of the whole Bible. Wyclif could not go to the original texts, so he translated from the Vulgate, or accepted Latin version. It was not a perfect performance, but the reformer was prevented by death from revising it, as he doubtless intended to do.

The revision, therefore, was undertaken by John Purvey and completed in 1388. It is curious that the whole of Wyclif's Bible was not printed as one book until 1850, when it was published under the editorial care of the Rev. Josiah Forshall and Sir Frederic Madden.

The Natural Remedy.

There is an old negro in Washington who believes that the art of healing is a "gift" not to be acquired. A friend who knew his point of view recently attempted to draw him out.

"You say you're a natural doctor, Uncle Enos. Now, what would you recommend in a case of ague?"

Uncle Enos leaned on his broom in silence for a moment lost in thought, but when he spoke it was with the calm assurance of an oracle.

"De bes' medicine for de ague would be an efflorescent powder to puff out de skin an' lift it off de bones. When de skin is drawed tight over de bones an' de ague begins to shrink it, de bones jes' nachelly painful an' acheful, sah. But de efflorescent powder it fizz an' fizz inside an' puff out de skin an' obliviate de difficulty in a sho't time, sah."

Women and Seasickness.

Men are less subject to seasickness than women, according to an old sea captain, but when attacked by it make more fuss. They take immediately to their berths, where they grumble and groan until they are well enough to go on deck again.

A woman fights the unpleasant malady until she can fight no longer. Then she becomes maudlin and pathetic. She retires to her room and invariably asks three questions—first, whether people die of seasickness; then, how many miles we are from shore, and when we shall get there. The doctor is always talked over. When the patient gets so ill that she loses interest in the doctor, she usually lies on her side and cries by the hour. —London Doctor.

She Was Fat.

The small boy had been warned by his nurse as to the awful result of biting his nails.

"If you bite your nails," she said, "you will swell out like an air balloon and burst."

The small boy believed, took heed and didn't bite his nails any more. The small boy went to a children's party, where he stood and gazed at the hostess for some minutes in silence. Then he spoke.

"You bite your nails," he said.

Nothing More to Be Said.

"My wife always lets me have the last word," remarked the meek looking man.

"Indeed?" exclaimed his friend in tones which implied a doubt of the other's veracity.

"She does, really. Whenever I say, 'Yes, my dear, you are quite right,' she stops talking immediately."—New York Herald.

BULLET TAKEN FROM HEAD

Murderer Hapgood Will Recover From Self-Inflicted Injuries

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 21.—Leon Hapgood, self-confessed murderer of Sa upson Seaverns, the Rutland farmer, when arrested yesterday at the home of William Fitzpatrick in Holden, was found to be suffering from a self-inflicted bullet wound. He was brought to this city and successfully operated on at the city hospital. The bullet was removed and Hapgood is reported as out of danger.

Dr. Chamberlain, the medical examiner, performed an autopsy on the body of the murdered man yesterday and found that the bullet fired from a revolver, by Hapgood caused instant death and that any of the three or four blows struck with an axe later by the murderer would also have caused instant death. The revolver with which the murderer was armed was purchased in Worcester last week.

Traditional Disorder Diminished

New Haven, Jan. 21.—At the promenade concert of the junior class at Yale last night the freshman class was permitted to carry to the gallery small quantities of confetti and paper streamers, cards bearing addresses to the fair visitors and their chaperones, advice to the upper class men, jokes and gibes. The freshmen were not permitted to go into the gallery until they had been searched for contraband. In some years past they have smuggled chickens, doves, and even lobsters into the galleries and there liberated them. All forbidden articles were confiscated last night.

Reform Club Heard Both Sides

Boston, Jan. 21.—Two radically divergent views on the Philippine question were presented at the dinner of the Massachusetts Reform club last evening. President Schurman of Cornell took the affirmative side of the question under discussion: "Can the United States with honor withdraw from the Philippines?" while Herbert Walsh of Philadelphia, editor of The City and State, made an eloquent plea for a change in the present policy of the government.

New Freight Line by Water

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 21.—Arrangements have finally been made for the establishment of a new freight line between this city and Boston by water, and four steamers will be put on next summer to run between these cities by way of the Merrimac river and Massachusetts bay. There was a conference yesterday between citizens of Newburyport and local shoe manufacturers, and it was stated that satisfactory arrangements had been made.

A Net and Twine Combination

Boston, Jan. 21.—It is announced here that arrangements for consolidating the net and twine mills of the country has been practically completed. The Gloucester Net and Twine company voted to submit an offer of the property to the promoters. It is understood that the Gloucester mill is to be continued in operation and may be enlarged. All the twine used will be made in one mill, probably in an establishment near the cotton belt.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then 1 thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. FOR THE PANAMA ROUTE

Unanimous Verdict of Isthmian Canal Commission

A SUPPLEMENTAL OPINION

Brought About by Changed Conditions Since First Report Was Submitted—Acceptance of Offer to Sell Property For $40,000,000 Advised

Washington, Jan. 21.—The president yesterday sent to congress the supplemental report of the isthmian canal commission, in which it is unanimously recommended that the offer of the new Panama Canal company to sell all its rights, property and unfinished work to the United States for $40,000,000 be accepted. The president accompanied it only with a note of transmittal. The senate ordered that the report be reprinted in the congressional record and also in document form.

After quoting the correspondence which passed between the commission and the officers of the Panama Canal company in Paris the report gives the "totality, without exception, of its property and rights on the isthmus."

Summing up these items, the total value of the property is found to be:

Excavation done, $27,474,033; Panama railroad stock at par, $6,886,300; maps, drawings and records, $2,000,000; total, $36,360,333. To which add 10 percent to cover omissions, $3,639,667; total, $40,000,000.

The last item is intended to cover any buildings, machinery, railroad shares, additional excavation to date of purchase and other assets which may be of value to the United States and have not been included in the other items.

The estimated cost of constructing the Nicaragua canal is $45,630,704 more than the cost of completing the Panama canal. The estimated annual cost of maintenance and operation is $1,300,000 greater at Nicaragua than at a Pnama.

The Panama route would be 131.6 miles shorter than the Nicaragua route from sea to sea, with fewer locks and less curvature, both in degrees and miles. The estimated time of the passage of a deep draft vessel through the Nicaragua canal was placed at 33 hours, as against 12 hours through the Panama canal, these estimates being the time of actual navigation and not including delays for winds, currents or darkness.

If the passage were made without interruption, about a day could be saved by the Nicaragua route over the Panama route, by ordinary steamers, handling commerce between our Pacific ports and all Atlantic ports, and about two days by steamers of the same class trading between our gulf ports and north Pacific ports. The advantages of the Nicaragua route in time would be less in case of fast high powered steamers, the use of which is increasing. Between Atlantic ports and the west coast of South America the Panama route has the advantage of about two days and between gulf ports and the west coast of South America the Panama route has the advantage of about one day. The trade of the western coast of South America is a very important one, which has hitherto been in European hands.

The Panama route is an old highway of commerce along which no considerable industrial development is likely to occur. During the construction of a canal on the Nicaragua route business relations would be established with Costa Rica and Nicaragua which would be likely to continue. Present conditions indicate that there would be hygienic advantages at Nicaragua, though equally effective sanitary measures must be taken in both cases.

The offer from the new Panama Canal company to convey all its property, including all its interest in the Panama railroad, to the United States, will make the estimated cost of the two canals as follows: Nicaragua, $189,864,062; Panama, $184,233,358.

The transfer would give title to all of the land now held by both the Panama Canal company and the Panama Railroad company, which covers nearly all lands required for the construction of the canal. The land held by private parties at Nicaragua must be acquired and its acquisition may prove expensive.

Besides the Panama canal property which the old company acquired under a concession from the Colombian government, nearly all of the shares of the Panama Railroad company are owned by it. By purchasing these it obtained control of the concessions under which the road had been built. The latter concession will continue in force until 1966; the canal concession is to run for 99 years from the day on which the canal shall be opened to public service and the date for this in the concession, according to its latest extension, is Oct. 31, 1910. When these periods shall have expired the different properties are to belong absolutely to Colombia, without compensation, and the government is under no obligation to extend either concession.

The report concludes as follows: After considering the changed conditions that now exist and all the facts and circumstances upon which its present judgment must be based, the commission is of the opinion that "the most practicable and feasible route" for an isthmian canal to be "under the control, management and ownership of the United States" is that known as the Panama route.

The report is signed by the entire commission.

ENGLAND WILL NOT BE DEAF

To Any "Reasonable Peace Overtures" She May Receive From Boers

London, Jan. 21.—The first important debate of the session began in the house of commons last night, on an amendment moved by Frederick Cawley, Liberal, to the address in reply to the speech from the throne. While the amendment constituted a recognized part of the opposition program, strangely enough it was not supported by a single front bencher. The debate, however, called out Mr. Chamberlain, who vigorously took the field in defense of the war. He made the statement that if the Boers believed they could at any time secure a repetition of Lord Kitchener's terms, he wished to inform them that they were mistaken.

Mr. Chamberlain added, however, that the government's program was not one of extermination. The Boers had already been offered terms whose liberality surprised even England's most severe critics. Since they had been rejected, the government did not propose to embarrass itself with a further, specific offer, and certainly would not withdraw the proclamation of Aug. 7, 1901. It would not propose any general confiscation of property. Justice would be meted out for military offenses and other crimes. But there would be large amnesty, and the government expected to extend to the conquered people full political rights so soon as practicable. The government would not be deaf to any reasonable peace overtures it might receive.

A representative here of The Associated Press learns that the British government contemplates offering special encouragement and facilities for emigration on a large scale to South Africa at the close of the Boer war.

Mr. Chamberlain has cabled the governors of Australia and New Zealand inviting each to send a further contingent of 1000 men to South Africa.

Bay State Legislature

Boston, Jan. 21.—That the present session of the legislature will not lack for interesting material for debate was shown yesterday by the introduction of a bill cutting down the board of transit commissioners of Boston from five to three and bringing forward the annual measures for the investigation of the Boston gas companies. This latter provides that the governor shall appoint a commission of three to investigate the entire gas question of this city, involving half a dozen companies, as well as the New England Gas and Coke company.

A Present to Hanna

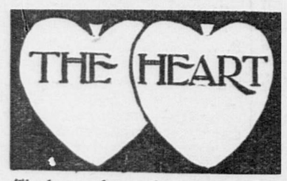
Cleveland, Jan. 21.—Because of his efforts to bring about more amicable relations between labor and capital a hundred or more of his friends in this city gathered in Seator Hanna's home and presented to him a fine statue emblematic of "Peace." The figure is that of a beautiful girl. It is of the finest marble and is the work of an Italian sculptor. Judge Sanders made the presentation speech, which was followed by a fitting response by the senator.

Steamer Astoria Crippled

New York, Jan. 21.—Captain Jones of the steamer Bovic, from Liverpool, reports that on last Friday he passed the Anchor liner Astoria displaying signals "Met with accident, floating obstructions." The vessel was on her proper course and was steaming at apparently about 12 or 14 knots. The Astoria left this port last Tuesday, bound for Moville and Glasgow. She carried a number of passengers and a good cargo.

Explosion and Fire In Mine

Walsenburg, Col., Jan. 21.—A courier from Pictou, a coal mining camp located three miles from Walsenburg, brings news that a terrible explosion occurred in one of the mines operated by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company at that place yesterday, in which six men were instantly killed and 10 or more wounded, many of them perhaps fatally. The mine immediately caught fire and is now a seething furnace.



The human heart, that most wonderful of engines, is scarcely larger than a man's fist. Yet in each twenty-four hours the dual heart moves approximately six tons of blood, equivalent to about two barrels of blood per hour. And this continues without ceasing from the first breath of infancy to the last sigh of age. Is it any wonder that when continued extra strain is put upon so delicate and busy an organ, it should break down? Is it any wonder that in this age of overwork there should be an increasing number of deaths attributed to heart failure?

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition and purifies and enriches the blood. One of the ingredients entering into the "Discovery" is one of the best heart tonics known to medicine. Thus while through the action of "Golden Medical Discovery" the body is nourished into strength, the heart is also strengthened and an adequate blood supply is pumped to the stomach and kidneys thus improving the action of these organs.

Sick people, especially those suffering from chronic diseases, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free, and so obtain without charge, the opinion of a specialist on their ailments. All correspondence strictly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I had been troubled with catarrh of the stomach and heart trouble," writes Mr. W. D. Merchant, of Tylersburg, Clarion Co., Penna. "Had doctored for some time without relief, then I began to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took seven bottles. Before I began to take it I weighed 119 pounds, and now I weigh 176. I am working steadily and feel like a new man. I send you many thanks."

CASE 113

By... Emile Gaboriau

But she became more urgent. Instead of commanding she entreated, but Prosper was inflexible.

"Your uncle is in the adjoining room, mademoiselle, with the commissary of police and a detective. They will soon return. I entreat you to retire that they may not find you here."

As he spoke he gently pushed her through the door, she resisting, and closed it upon her. It was time, for the next moment the commissary and M. Fauvel entered. They had visited the main entrance and waiting room and had heard nothing of what had passed in the study. But Fanferlot had heard for them. This excellent bloodhound had not lost sight of the cashier. He said to himself: "If he believes himself to be alone, his face will betray him. I shall detect a smile or a wink that will mean something."

Leaving M. Fauvel and the commissary to pursue their investigations, he posted himself to watch. He saw the door open and Madeleine appear upon the threshold. He lost not a single word or gesture of the rapid scene which had passed between Prosper and the young girl. It mattered little that every word of this scene was an enigma. M. Fanferlot was skillful enough to complete the sentences he did not understand. As yet he only had a suspicion, but a suspicion is a point to start from. He was prompt in building a plan upon the slightest incident, thinking he saw in the past of these people whom he did not know glimpses of a domestic drama. If the commissary of police is a skeptic, the detective has faith. He believes in evil.

"This is the situation," said he to himself. "This man loves the young lady, who is really very pretty, and as he is quite handsome I suppose his love is returned. This love affair vexes the banker, who, not knowing how to get rid of the importunate lover by fair means, has to resort to foul and plans this pretended robbery, which is very ingenious."

Thus to M. Fanferlot's mind the banker had simply robbed himself, and the innocent cashier was the victim of an odious machination.

Meanwhile, the search up stairs completed, the searchers returned to Prosper's office. The commissary, who had seemed so calm when he first came, now looked serious. The moment for taking a decisive part having come, he hesitated.

"You see, gentlemen," he began, "our search has only confirmed our first opinion."

M. Fauvel and Prosper assented.

"And what do you think, M. Fanferlot?" continued the commissary.

The detective did not answer. Occupied in studying the safe lock, he manifested signs of surprise. Evidently he had just made an important discovery. Noticing this, M. Fauvel, Prosper and the commissary rose and surrounded him.

"Have you discovered any trace?" asked the banker eagerly.

Fanferlot turned around with a dissatisfied air. He reproached himself for not having concealed his impressions.

"Oh," said he carelessly, "I have discovered nothing of importance!"

"But we should like to know," said Prosper.

"I have merely convinced myself that this safe has been recently opened or shut, I know not which, with great violence and haste."

"Why so?" asked the commissary, becoming attentive.

"Do you see this scratch near the lock?"

The commissary took a magnifying glass that the detective had used, stooped down and carefully examined the safe. He saw a light scratch on the outer coat of varnish.

"I see it," said he. "But what does that prove?"

"Oh, nothing at all," said Fanferlot, "as I said before."

Fanferlot said this, but he did not think it. This scratch recently made had for him a signification that escaped the others. He had discovered a confirmation of his suspicions. If the cashier had stolen millions, there was no occasion for his being in a hurry. The banker, creeping down in the dead of the night softly for fear of awakening the boy in the anteroom in order to rifle his own money safe, had every reason to tremble, to hurry, to hastily withdraw the key, which, slipping along the lock, scratched the varnish. Resolved to unravel by himself the tangled thread of this affair, the detective determined to keep his conjectures to himself. For the same reason he was silent as to the interview which he had overheard between Madeleine and Prosper. He hastened to withdraw attention from the scratch.

"To conclude," he said, addressing the commissary, "I am convinced that no one outside of the bank could have obtained access here. The safe is intact. No suspicious pressure has been used on the movable buttons. I can affirm that the lock has not been tampered with by burglar's tools or false keys. Those who opened the safe knew the word and had the key."

This formal affirmation of a man whom he knew to be skillful ended the hesitation of the commissary.

"That being the case," he replied, "I must request a few moments' conversation with M. Fauvel."

"I am at your service," said the banker.

Prosper foresaw the result. He quietly placed his hat on the table to show that he had no intention of attempting to escape and passed into the adjoining office. Fanferlot also went out, but not before the commissary had made him a sign and received a response. The sign signified, "You are responsible for this man." The detective needed no admonition to make him keep an attentive watch. His suspicions were too vague, his desire for success was too ardent, for him to lose sight of Prosper an instant. Therefore following the cashier into the office he seated himself in a dark corner of the room, and, pretending to be sleepy, he fixed himself in a comfortable position for taking a nap, gaped until his jawbone seemed about to be dislocated and finally closed his eyes. Prosper seated himself at the desk of an absent clerk. The others were burning to know the result of the inquiry. Their eyes shone with curiosity, but they dared not ask a question. Unable to restrain himself any longer, little Cavaillon, Prosper's defender, ventured:

"Well, who is the robber?"

Prosper shrugged his shoulders.

"Nobody knows," he replied.

Was this conscious innocence or hardened recklessness? The clerks observed with surprise that Prosper had resumed his usual manner, that sort of icy haughtiness that kept people at a distance and made him enemies in the bank. Never would a stranger entering the room have supposed that this young man, idly lounging in a chair and playing with a pencil, was resting under an accusation of robbery and was about to be arrested. He soon stopped playing with his pencil and drew toward him a sheet of paper, upon which he hastily wrote a few lines.

"Ah, ha!" thought Fanferlot the Squirrel, whose hearing and sight were wonderfully good in spite of his profound sleep. "Eh, eh! He makes his little confidences on paper, I see. Now we will discover something positive."

Having written his note, Prosper folded it carefully in the smallest possible size and, after furtively glancing toward the detective, motionless in his corner, threw it to little Cavaillon with a simple word:

"Gipsy!"

Fanferlot was confounded and began to feel a little uneasy.

"The young man has more pluck and nerve than many of my oldest customers. This, however, shows the result of education."

Yes, innocent or guilty, Prosper must have been endowed with great self control and power of dissimulation to affect this imperturbable calmness and presence of mind at a time when his honor, his future happiness, all that he held dear in life, were at stake. And he was only thirty years old. Either from natural deference or from the hope of gaining some ray of light by a private conversation the commissary determined to speak to the banker.

"There is no doubt, monsieur," he said as soon as they were alone, "this young man has robbed you. It would be a gross neglect of duty if I did not secure his person."

This declaration seemed to distress the banker. "Poor Prosper!" he said.

Prosper was now called in with Fanferlot, whom they had much trouble to awaken, and with the most complete indifference listened to the announcement of his arrest.

In response he calmly said:

"I swear that I am innocent."

M. Fauvel, much more disturbed and excited than his cashier, made a last attempt.

"There is still time, poor boy," he said. "In the name of heaven, reflect!"

Prosper did not appear to hear him. He drew from his pocket a small key, which he laid on the mantel, and said:

"Here is the key of your safe, monsieur. I hope for my sake that you will some day be convinced of my innocence, and I hope for your sake that it will not come too late." Then, as every one was silent, he added: "Before leaving, here are the books, papers and accounts necessary for my successor. I must at the same time inform you that, without speaking of the stolen three hundred and fifty thousand francs, I leave a deficit in cash. There is a deficit of three thousand five hundred francs on my cash account, which has been disposed of in the following manner: Two thousand taken by myself in advance of my salary and fifteen hundred advanced to my fellow clerks. This is the last day of the month. Tomorrow the salaries will be paid, consequently"—

The commissary interrupted him.

"Were you authorized," he demanded, "to draw money whenever you wished to to make advances?"

GREEN GOODS DEALERS

Captured by Inspector of Post-office Department

HEADQUARTERS AT BOSTON

From Whence They Sent Their Alluring Literature to Cities In the West–One of the Pair Has a Bad Record–Held In $10,000 Bail Each

Boston, Jan. 22.—Two arrests of national importance have just been made in Boston by Inspector Snow of the post-office department. Two men, at least one of them a notorious crook, who for more than a month have been conducting a green-gods game with this city as headquarters, were run down and their outfit seized. The particular importance of the arrest is the fact that the principals themselves are caught, and not—as is usual in these cases—a mere petty go-between.

The men when arraigned before Commissioner Hale yesterday gave the names of William C. Woodward and Otto Schuler. The fact that they were working in the western states from Boston or its vicinity was suspected by Chief Insepctor Evans of the postoffice department some weeks ago, and Inspector Snow was detailed on the case. After two weeks of steady work he succeeded in locating Woodward, the better known of the two, on Washington street. He telephoned to Captain Westcott, who detailed Inspector Betts to help him, and the two followed the man to a south end hotel, where he was placed under arrest in the office. They took him to his room and waited 10 hours for the other to show up, and then brought them both to the jail. In the room was a loaded revolver, but neither had a chance to offer resistance when arrested.

The officers seized the men's effects and among them were a bundle of mimeographed leters, a machine for turning them out, a sheet of imitation newspaper clippings, stationery of different kinds, a Bradstreet's for 1901 and various other commercial directories.

They did not, however, use these directories in getting the names of victims. They had a different method from this, and one which helped greatly in their undoing. Under the name of the New England Directory company they wrote to the county clerks in the far western states—Wyoming, Washington, Oregon, Indian Territory, and Colorado—saying that they were getting out a directory of cattle breeders, hog dealers, etc., and asking for names. Each letter enclosed an order for $25 in payment.

The weak point was here. Indignant letters from all over the west not long ago began to pour into the offices of the Boston Directory company from county clerks who had found their checks worthless. They were handed over at once to the postoffice inspectors. Mr. Snow, as soon as he saw the writing on the bad drafts, recognized it as the same as that on the green goods envelopes.

Of the two Woodward has within eight months completed a six years' term in the New York state prison, for working a confidence game. In the rogues' gallery he is known as "Big Hawley," and his great height bears out the nickname. He is tall and dark, with sharp eyes and bristling black moustache. His hair is close-cropped, and grows with that wilful erectness common to prizefighters and ex-convicts. His pal is shorter and thicker, more prepossessing in appearance, decidedly blonde—a typical German.

A Boston lawyer presented himself as counsel for the men, but Woodward refused to have anything to do with him, and insisted that the charge against him be read. He answered "not guilty," and the commissioner, on the request of District Attorney Casey, continued the case for ten days, fixing the bail at $10,000. The other man's bail was fixed at the same figure and his case continued until the same day.

In default of bail both were committed.

Against Dissolution

Washington, Jan. 22.—The annual meeting of the National Board of Trade began here yesterday. The report of the executive council upon the proposition of the St. Louis Merchants' exchange to dissolve the board was adverse to the proposition. The council submitted a request for the appointment of a committee to consider the question of strengthening the board and its influence.

Money Ready For Brigands

Constantinople, Jan. 22.—It is ascertained that the money subscribed for the ransom of Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka has been forwarded to the Americans who have been negotiating with the brigands for the release of the two women. The whereabouts of the negotiators is withheld by the officials here.

A HORSE'S MAD RUN

Results In the Killing of One Person and Injuries to Many Others

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 22.—One man was killed, another will probably die and two other persons were seriously injured last night as a result of a wild dash by a runaway horse on Massachusetts avenue. The horse was hitched to a sleigh which contained three men. The horse became frightened and after throwing the three men out went madly along Massachusetts avenue toward Harvard bridge.

After going but a short distance the horse struck Peter Lefrancis, aged 74 years, who was so badly injured that he died on his way to the hospital. The horse continued on toward Boston and knocked down Charles Pearson, his head and left side being badly injured, while his internal injuries are such that attendant physicians believe he will not live.

The horse soon after came in contact with Hannah Lynch and William H. Parmenter, both of whom were quite seriously injured, yet able to go to their homes. The runaway horse continued over Harvard bridge and later was stopped in Boston. Several other persons whose names could not be learned received injuries while the horse was making its mad run.

Bitzer's Statement Not Disproved

Greenfield, Mass., Jan. 22.—Louis Bitzer of Turners Falls, charged with the murder of his clerk, Miss Ida Columbe, and his son, Louis M. Bitzer, was given a preliminary hearing here yesterday, but as the evidence had not all been presented an adjournment was taken until Friday. Nothing was shown to disprove the statement made by Bitzer that the shooting of Miss Columbe was accidental and that, when he realized he would be considered a murderer, he was overwhelmed with frenzy and rushed to his home to take the life of his wife and children and then end his own life by shooting.

Church Destroyed by Fire

New Britain, Conn., Jan. 22.—An explosion in the basement of St. Mary's Catholic church here early this morning caused a fire which totally destroyed the interior of the structure. Fathers Herty and Leddy ran into the burning building and attempted to save the blessed sacrament. The flames were so hot, however, that they did not succeed, and the priests were rescued with difficulty by the firemen. The church was built in 1888, and is one of the most beautiful in New England. It is estimated that the loss will be $50,000.

Over Ten Thousand Signatures

Boston, Jan. 22.—Secretary Preston of the Boston Chamber of Commerce started for Washington last evening to lay before Senator Hoar petitions urging that a reciprocal trade arrangement between the United States and Canada be negotiated and ratified. The petitions have been endorsed by boards of trade of about 40 cities and manufacturing towns and have been signed by business men of those places. In all, more than 10,000 names are enrolled.

Damage of $30 000 by Fire

South Framingham, Mass., Jan. 22.—Two four-story buildings and a storehouse occupied for manufacturing purposes were burned early this morning, causing a loss of $30,000. The fire broke out in the rattan chair factory of A. H. Ordway and spread to the storehouse of that factory and to the building of H. H. Wilcox, who employed 50 hands in the manufacture of calendar pads. Within an hour after the flames broke out all of the buildings were in ruins.

Students Used Their Guns

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 22.—Harvard students last night held their usual celebration called "gun night" to usher in the midyear examinations, and although the use of firearms is prohibited by the faculty shooting was heard on every hand from 9 o'clock until nearly midnight. Rainy weather prevented any extensive celebration, and no damage resulted from the firing.

Silk Workers on Strike

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 22.—The strike of 125 girls at the Nonotuck silk mill in Florence is unchanged. The girls want a restoration of the wage schedule to that of a year ago, which was 20 percent higher. The girls at present make from $6 to $8 a week.

Prince Wants to See Harvard

Boston, Jan. 22.—Prince Henry of Prussia has notified the German embassy at Washington that he desires to visit Boston and Harvard about the first week of March.

Uneasy Feeling In Cuba

Havana, Jan. 22.—The governor general's palace here is besieged with commissions from all parts of the island who are interested in the question of reciprocity. A critical period in Cuban affairs is approaching. Bankers have refused to advance Cuban planters more money in view of the present outlook for the sugar market. This action means the closing up of many plantations in a short while.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

NO REST FOR POLICE

Must Be In Constant Readiness For Duty at Boston

RIOTOUS STREET SCENES

Considered Likely to Be Repeated–Attacks Aimed Principally Against One Large Firm–Sympathetic Strike May Cause a General Tieup

Boston, Jan. 22.—The unlawful demonstrations resulting yesterday from the strike of the 400 or more teamsters employed by the 47 master teamsters who refused to pay the schedule of wages recently agreed upon between the Team Drivers' union and the Master Teamsters' association, bid fair to be repeated, and in anticipation of such a contingency the entire police force of the city is held in readiness to respond to a call at a moment's notice.

Seven arrests, nearly all of union men, were made during yesterday and last night upon charges of disturbing the peace and obstructing traffic.

Scenes of wild disorder were enacted in various parts of the city during the day and early evening, the spite of the crowds being directed wholly against the drivers of teams owned by the R. S. Brine Transportation company, the largest of the concerns that have declined to sign the schedule, and which has thus far steadfastly refused to recognize the union. Wherever one of these teams was sighted, it at once became quickly surrounded by a wild, boisterous crowd, and its driver was made a target for volleys of imprecations, and in many cases for missiles more deadly. Union drivers of other teams pocketed the Brine teams at every possible opportunity, and in nearly every case forced their drivers to abandon them, making it necessary for either the police or union men designated for that purpose to return them to their stables.

Conferences were held yesterday afternoon between representatives of the drivers, the state board of arbitration, and President Lincoln of the Chamber of Commerce, to which a representative of the R. S. Brine Transportation company was sent several invitations, which, however, were ignored. Nothing definite was agreed upon and another conference will be held today.

At a meeting of the various unions represented in the Allied Freight Transportation council last night it was unanimously voted to give the conciliation committee of the council full power to order a strike whenever they may deem it advisable. This in effect means that if this strike is not settled shortly, all the men included in the membership of the Allied Freight Transportation council will be called out rather than handle the business brought them by the R. S. Brine Transportation company. It is difficult to realize what a sympathetic strike of this nature would mean to the commerce of the city.

Of the 47 teaming concerns against whom the present movement was started, 22, mostly small employers, signed the new agreement yesterday. The others, with the exception of the Brine company, have kept in the background, the union choosing to fight out the matter to a finish with this company, which employs in all 134 men. Four of the latter joined the union yesterday. It is stated that six concerns for which the Brine company did the teaming, including one large sugar refinery, withdrew their business yesterday and transferred it to contractors who will employ union labor.

A Cure for Lumbago.

W. C. Williamson, of Amherst, Va., says: "For more than a year I suffered from lumbago. I finally tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it gave me entire relief, which all other remedies had failed to do." Sold by all druggists.

VAGUE PROMISES

Should Be Avoided In Dealing With Philippine Questions

Washington, Jan. 22.—The senate had the Philippine tariff bill under consideration for nearly three hours yesterday. The measure was made the unfinished business and it probably will hold that position of preference until it shall have been finally voted upon. The debate was opened by Mr. Lodge, who sketched the reasons which actuated the majority in presenting the measure and strongly urged its enactment into law at an early date. He explained the necessity for the legislation embodied in the bill and concluded with an appeal to the senate and to congress to deal with questions relating to the Philippines as they might arise, and to keep clear of vague works and vaguer promises which would be likely to be misinterpreted and raise false hopes in the minds of the Filipinos. He besought congress not to give mortgages on an unknown future.

Mr. Rawlins of Utah delivered a vigorous speech in support of the minority substitute, in which independence is promised the Filipino people as soon as a stable government can be established in the Philippines.

At the conclusion of the debate Mr. Bacon of Georgia sharply criticised the secretary of war for an alleged violation of the law in issuing an order permitting vessels flying a foreign flag to participate in the commerce between the United States and the Philippines.

In the absence of other pressing business the party managers in the house are allowing the widest latitude in the debate on the urgent deficiency bill now under consideration. The irrigation of arid lands in the west and the advisability of retaining control of the Philippines were the main topics of discussion yesterday.

Rebels' Object Accomplished

Panama, Jan. 22.—All is quiet here. General Perrera, the revolutionary leader, informed Captain Meade of the United States cruiser Philadelphia, that he came here to prevent the Colombian government using the steamer Lautaro against the Liberals. He had accomplished this end, and, therefore, retired. The number killed cannot be precisely ascertained.

Quick Justice Administered

Norfolk, Jan. 22.—Neal Stanback, an 18-year-old negro, who assaulted Mrs. Elizabeth Preifer, a white woman, aged 70, last Saturday, was caught by a party of white men, brought to the county jail and locked up. Yesterday he was indicted by a grand jury, tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged on March 12.

Concerning Crazy Snake

Washington, Jan. 22.—The reported purpose of Chief Ellis of the Indian territory Indian police to recommend that Crazy Snake, the chief fomenter of the troubles with the Creeks, be arrested and held a life prisoner of war, receives no serious consideration at the war department.

Fishermen Smuggled Liquor

St. Johns, Jan. 22.—The captains of several American fishing vessels on the southern coast of Newfoundland, seeking cargoes of frozen herring, have been fined from $50 to $200 by the colonial authorities for having smuggled liquor from St. Pierre, Miq.

Good Afternoon.

Success to Mayor Bryant and the Quincy gentlemen on their mission to Washington.

One of the advantages of assessments by consumption for water in the Metropolitan district upon the cities and towns, is that each municipality will endeavor to prevent waste and thereby keep down the assessment and the cost of the whole supply. Quincy, as at present situated might gain by such a plan of assessment, but it might not in the end. On the other hand, rich towns like Milton and Brookline would escape with much smaller assessments. On general principles taxes are levied on the valuation, and we should not depart much from that principle. It is probably a fact that Boston is not paying the proportion it should for the cost and maintenance of the Metropolitan system which is primarily and largely for Boston.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ South Carolina added more than $500,000 to the State treasury last year, profits from the sale of rum and other spirituous liquors. If South Carolina was at all sensitive she'd take that snake from her coat of arms.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

☞ Speaker Myers is getting worked up because the house does not get down to business. It is early yet Mr. Speaker, and most of the members do not care to leave the cool shades of the gilded dome until about the glorious Fourth. With a whole summer spent by a competent committee in revising and compiling the existing laws it would seem as if there was not much opportunity for the enactment of new legislation, unless it be for special purposes. This is too much the case of recent legislatures.—Somerville Times.

☞ The Boston Post is consistent to a rare degree in calling upon the Democratic management in municipal affairs to follow the lead of the governor in his state policy—by abolishing or merging the superfluous offices in the city administration. The Post very truly reminds these leaders that they have absolute control in Boston, that the situation in the city is similar to to that in the state, and even more so, and that if this is Democratic policy in the state it is none the less to be applied in Boston. The Democrats have a grand opportunity to demonstrate their ownership of this principle of administration. Will they improve it?—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Mrs. Roosevelt is said to be finding the strenuous life of the White House too much for her strength. It would not be surprising. The social pace in Washington is speeded up to an exacting gait, such as finds many victims of broken down health. Plain people do not see the sense in the hurried, complex, and complicated life which so-called society affects, and wonders if a plainer and simpler way would not be better for the country and better for the people themselves. In spite of the fact that such reflections are called old-fogyish, we think the country would be as well satisfied if the president's family took good care of their health even at the sacrifice of alleged social demands.—New Bedford Standard.

TO INVESTIGATE.

Representative McKnight on the Sub Committee.

Unexpectedly, the hearing before the joint committee of the Legislature, relative to the abolition of the office of State Fire Marshal on Tuesday, came to a sudden close, as no one spoke either for or against the recommendation of the governor.

The only business was the election of Representative McKnight of Quincy as secretary, and the appointment of a sub-committee of five to inquire into the facts and get information relative to the duties of the fire marshal and the chief of the district police.

A bill will probably be drawn when this committee reports embodying the Governor's recommendtion, although no formal vote has yet been taken on the subject.

The sub-committee consists of Senator Dean of Berkshire, chairman of the committee on public service; Senator Munroe of Worcester, chairman of the committee on Insurance, and Representative Dana of Newton, Bartlett of Pittsfield and McKnight of Quincy.

When asked by a reporter why he had kept quiet at the hearing on the proposition to abolish his office, Fire Marshal Whitcomb said he had not accepted the general invitation was only for those who desired either to advocate or oppose the Governor's recommendations.

If he had been personally asked to speak, he said, he would have replied that he had nothing to say; that he was present neither to oppose nor to advocate the recommendations. He asserted that he felt in an entirely agnostic state of mind on the proposition, and simply didn't know whether the proposed consolidation was practical and economical or not. He said if the committee felt that he could be of any assistance in helping them in forming a better judgment, he was at its service, but, not having been called and not having been requested to be present he naturally assumed that the committee didn't care to hear from him.

Sleigh Party.

A number of young married people of Chestnut street participated in a sleigh party Tuesday evening. It rained a little in the early evening, but in no way dampened the enthusiasm of the party. Rockland was the objective point, which was reached in due season. A stop was made at one of the hotels, where supper was served. It rained quite hard during the evening which rather knocked out the sleighing. When the party started for home a light rain was falling, but aside from being slippery it was not bad walking.

Whist Party.

Mr. and Mrs. William W. Jenness of Presidents hill, entertained friends at whist on Tuesday evening. Red and white pinks were the favors bestowed, and it was not long after 8 o'clock before the guests at the seven tables were pleasantly engaged at the popular game. At the conclusion of the evenings play a lunch was served. Souvenirs for the best scores were awarded as follows: A pudding dish to Mrs. W. W. Ewell; silver spoon to Miss Thompson, stein to R. D. Gordon and a silver spoon to G. B. Bates.

Exceptions Taken.

The inmates of the house on Wilson street, released this week from quarantine, take exceptions to the published report that their house contained only four rooms, two of which were furnished. They say there are five rooms, all of which were furnished. Further that there were not eleven in the family, but nine. There is no doubt, however, but the Board of Health acted wisely in removing the afflicted girl to other quarters, and that prompt action prevented a spread of the disease.

BY CONSUMPTION.

How Quincy Would be Assessed for Water.

Plan Favored by Commissioner Knowlton.

Part on Valuation and Part on Population in Past.

Commissioner Knowlton of this city attended the hearing on Tuesday before the Committee on Metropolitan affairs, relative to water charges to cities and towns in the Metropolitan district.

In the past the assessment has been one-third on valuation and two-thirds on population. There was some sentiment in favor of substituting consumption in place of population, but near the close Mr. Knowlton argued in favor of making the entire assessment upon consumption, and his idea met with so much favor that the hearing was continued instead of closed.

Chairman Jones first called upon Hon. Henry H. Sprague, chairman of the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board, to speak upon the governor's proposition that in making assessments on account of the Metropolitan Water system the consumption of water by each municipality be substituted for population as a basis for assessment.

Mr. Sprague said that the calculations made in 1895 at the time the metropolitan water act was passed had already been largely exceeded. The assessment in Boston is on the basis of valuation this being different from any other city. It might appear to be a discrimination against Boston, but it was offset by the fact that the water act discriminated in favor of Boston in providing that her entire water system, reservoirs, pumping stations, etc., should be purchased, a provision which did not extend to the water systems of the other municipalities, with the single exception that Spot Pond was taken.

In the remainder of the cities and towns of the district, the assessment for the expense and maintenance of the water supply is upon the basis of population and valuation, one-third being upon valuation and two-thirds upon population. He saw no reason why, for population, the quantity consumed should not be substituted. The consumption in Boston will be looked out for anyway, as Boston has to pay over eighty per cent of the entire expense, and, therefore, has every incentive to prevent waste.

Such an act could not be put into effect until next year, as arrangements must be made to measure the water furnished each municipality. The act should, therefore, be made to apply to the assessment of 1903. It would cost about $100,000 but he believed that the expenditure would result in a saving in the end.

Chief Engineer Stearns of the Water and Sewerage Board produced a table which showed that the consumption of water in the district had nearly doubled in the last ten years. At the present increase, next year the capacity of our present aqueducts will be reached but there will be no water famine, as another aqueduct and a dam are being constructed to increase the supply. Last year the construction of this new aqueduct was begun, the expense of which will be $5,000,000, which means the annual payment for interest, sinking fund and maintenance of $200,000. After a careful consultation with the water boards of the various municipalities it had been the general opinion that instead of insisting on meters for every water taker, the water furnished each municipality should be metered. Mr. Stearns presented a table to show more plainly the situation, it being of the consumption of water in the metropolitan water district and Swampscott between 1890 and 1901.

It showed a consumption of 73 gallons per inhabitant per day in 1890, and 117 gallons in 1901. The increase in the decade from 1890 to 1901 was as follows:

In population,	32 per cent.
In consumption (per inhabitant),	49 per cent.
In total consumption,	97 per cent.

In answer to questions Mr. Stearns said all engineers are agreed that it will ultimately be necessary to apply meters to the fixtures of all water consumers. This is the most efficient way to prevent waste and by this method the present supply of the metropolitan district could be made sufficient to last until 1920. The meters could be put in at a cost of $100,000 per year for ten years with an additional $46,000 per year for new meters.

The hearing was continued to Tuesday of next week at 10.30.

BROWNING NIGHT.

At Meeting of the Monday Evening Club of Atlantic.

The Atlantic Monday Evening club reached the high water mark of its membership at its meeting Monday evening when three hundred was the list enrolled in the secretary's book. Of this membership two hundred and twenty were present to listen too a most inspiring address on "Robert Browning" by Rev. Dr. Beale of the Immanuel Congregational church, of Roxbury.

Dr. Beale's eloquent and enthusiastic characterization of Browning as the poet whose world was the human soul and whose mission was to fill the heart with courage and hope, searching out the springs of human passion and by hisr ealistic descriptions making manifest the optimism which believes that right will triumph—received the closest attention of the audience throughout and the spontaneous applause which followed was a fine testimony of the club's appreciation.

Miss Annie T. Kelley read a paper on "Fables in Slang" by George Ade, introducing, in her own original way and reading two of his fables "The men at the woman's club" and "The preacher," and expressing her ideas on the value of slang to the language.

Miss Bertha Cherrington played a piano solo, "Hungarian March" by Kowalski, with fine effect.

Mrs. Willianna Folsom of Jamaica Plain sang a group of four Browning songs—

"Ah! love but a day,"	Virginia Gabriel
"Ah! love but a day,"	Mrs. Beach
"I have more than a friend,"	Mrs. Rogers
"The year's at the spring,"	Mrs. Beach

Although just recovering from a painful illness Mrs. Folsom sang to the great satisfaction of the club as usual.

Inez Storey of Neponset, a young miss of fourteen of great promise, sang "He was a prince" by F. Lymes, and "Only a Year Ago" by Tosti, beside two encore responses. It will be interesting to note the development of this young girl's voice whose present training has succeeded in advancing her voice so far beyond the ordinary.

The committee for the evening were Miss Florence Gray and Mr. Charles E. Cherrington.

The next meeting will be February 3, when Mr. Frederic W. Plummer of the Woodward Institute will address the club on "Adam Bede."

Given a Send Off.

At no store does there prevail a better feeling among the clerks than at the store of E. H. Doble & Co., and when good fortune falls to one, they all rejoice. One of the clerks at this store is Everett Pollard, who has been connected with the firm for nine years. Mr. Pollard has recently resigned his position to go to Dorchester, and Monday evening after the business had been closed for the day, the clerks gathered to give their co-worker a send-off. The program began with the presentation to Mr. Pollard of a handsome gold ring. The presentation speech was made by Eugene McCormack, and was responded to by Mr Pollard, who thanked them one and all. Ice cream and cake was then served, after which an adjournment was made to the home of C. S. Jose where a musical program was rendered, nearly all of twenty-five present contributing solos.

Serious Quarrel.

There was a little dispute on Quincy avenue Tuesday afternoon, which resulted in Joseph Smith being removed to the Quincy City Hospital quite badly bruised and Warren Ver Kampen being landed in jail, charged with assault. Smith drives a dry goods wagon and Ver Kampen an oil wagon. The two met on Quincy avenue, and after some talk it is said that they called each other some names that are not considered good form by those posted on rules of etiquitte. It is then alleged that Ver Kampen and his companion jumped on Smith and used him up quite badly.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE.

Quincy Officials Going to Washington.

The Mayor and Four Others.

Congressman Naphen to Render All Assistance Possible.

The Quincy party will leave tonight for Washington to be present Friday at the hearing on the matter of public buildings, and with Congressman Naphen will try to impress upon the committee the need of a government building in this city. In the delegation will be Mayor Bryant, Chairman Freeman of the City Council Committee on Finance, City Solicitor Sears, Paul R. Blackmur who takes the office of City Solicitor on Feb. 1, and Postmaster Hammond.

The legal gentlemen of the party have prepared a brief which will set forth facts about Quincy. The most convincing argument however will be presented by Postmaster Hammond, who will present facts and figures showing the growth of the post office in Quincy during the past few years. He will also show some of the needs of the department in Quincy, and that of the present quarters are entirely inadequate to handle the large business, and that the office is seriously handicapped for room.

That additional room must soon be provided, and that if a government building is not erected another location must be provided, and this can not be done without forcing some of the business firms to move and seek a location elsewhere which would not only be detrimental to the business firm but might entail a serious business loss to them.

The growth of Quincy will also be touched upon and the attention of the committee will be called to the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. plant where several government vessels are being built.

Mayor Bryant and his party will leave no stone unturned to impress upon the minds of the committee the advisability of a government building, and it is believed that this time with the able assistance of Congressman Naphen they will be successful.

Notable Monuments.

In the Pine Grove cemetery at Lynn Mrs. C. B. Tebbetts has erected a monument to her husband. In view of Mr. Tebbetts' interest in Egyptian antiquities and the fact that death overtook him at Cairo, the monument is an obelisk of cut stone, 31 feet high. It is said to be the only one of its kind in this country, and is one of the very largest pieces of stone ever cut at Quincy.

The above is from the Record of the 21st. This obelisk was erected by Thomas & Miller. They now have at their works a beautiful obelisk to be erected in Pennsylvania in commemoration of the heroes of the Battle of Brandywine. This one is ten feet square at the base and stands forty feet high, and is the largest all polished obelisk in this country. This monument has been one in which the Daughters of the American Revolution have taken a very active interest. Thomas & Miller expect to ship this one about Feb. 15th.

DENIAL FROM GERMANY

Of Effort to Intervene In the Spanish-American War

TOOK A NEGATIVE STAND

Toward Such Suggestions Whenever Occasion Offered—Official Circles Annoyed by Statements Tending to Discourage a Growing Good Feeling

Berlin, Jan. 22.—The foreign office denies that Germany desired, or associated itself with any other government that may have sought to have brought about European intervention in the Spanish-American war.

The correspondent here of The Associated Press yesterday communicated to the German foreign office the statement which emanated from the British foreign office to the effect that Germany, France and Russia supported the Austrian ambassador at London in his attempt to induce Great Britain to sign a collective note addressed to the United States proposing action by the European states, in view of the outbreak, or expected outbreak, of the late war between the United States and Spain. Later in the day the following statement was handed to the correspondent of The Associated Press:

"The foreign office declares with all positiveness, that Germany, neither before the outbreak of the Spanish-American war nor during its course, proposed intervention to other powers. Neither did Germany support such a proposition made by any other power. It is true that in several instances suggestions were made to the German government from another source, in the sense of intervention. But the German government, without exception, maintained a negative standpoint whenever occasion offered. It must further be remarked that it was not from an Austrian source that such suggestions reached the German government."

Some annoyance has been expressed in official circles here that Lord Cranborne and the British foreign office should make statements at this moment tending to discourage the growing good feeling between Germany and the United States and seemingly designed to spoil the pleasant prospect of the visit of Prince Henry to the United States.

The interpellation in the British house of commons to which Lord Cranborne replied is considered here to have been gotten up especially to give opportunity for saying something in parliament which might be taken as a basis for reviving stories adverse to Germany in the matter of German relations with the United States.

Explanation From Austria

Vienna, Jan. 22.—Inquiries made by The Associated Press at the Austria-Hungarian foreign office confirm the essential points of the statement made by Lord Cranborne in the British house of commons. The dynastic relations of Austria with Spain, the queen regent being an archduchess of Austria, led Austria, before the declaration of the war between Spain and the United States, to begin a peace propaganda, which was carried on not only in England, but throughout Europe. France was ready to second the efforts of Austria, and Germany and Russia maintained a passive attitude. Great Britain was at first disposed to sign the proposed note; but, after a confidential report from Washington, declined either to sign such a note as the Austrian ambassador proposed, or to take any further steps. Afterwards, Austria and France made direct representations at Washington, but ceased their efforts after the declaration of war, whereafter they relied on the efforts of the pope, who was backed by the tacit approval of all the powers.

Cranborne Didn't Tell All

Washington, Jan. 22.—The state department will not be drawn into the controversy which has sprung up between the European powers respecting the efforts made by them to prevent the United States from going to war with Spain. Lord Cranborne's statement is recognized as absolutely correct as far as it went, but there are chapters in the story which he did not touch upon and it is recognized here as inexpedient to develop all the facts even now, lest animosity spring up without sufficient reason. The frank statement touching Austria's earnest efforts to prevent war caused no resentment here, where it is realized that there were reasons that at least extenuated the Austrian purpose.

Government Will Finish Job

Washington, Jan. 22.—The navy department has taken over the torpedo boat Goldsborough, which is being built at Portland, Ore., by Wolff & Zwicker, and will complete the boat at the Puget Sound naval station, deducting an allowance from the contract price for that purpose. CASE 113

By... Emile Gaboriau

"No, but I knew that M. Fauvel would not have refused me permission to oblige my friends. What I did is done everywhere. I have simply followed my predecessor's example."

The banker made a sign of assent.

"As regards that spent by myself," continued the cashier, "I had a sort of right to it, all of my savings being deposited in this bank—about fifteen thousand francs."

"That is true," said M. Fauvel. "M. Bertomy has at least that amount on deposit."

This last question settled, the commissary's errand was ended, and his report might now be made. He announced his intention of leaving and ordered the cashier to prepare to follow him. Usually this moment, when stern reality stares us in the face, when our individuality is lost and we feel that we are being deprived of our liberty—this moment is terrible. At this fatal command, "Follow me," which brings before our eyes the yawning prison gates, the most hardened sinner weeps and begs for mercy. But Prosper lost none of that studied phlegm which the commissary secretly pronounced consummate impudence. Slowly, with as much careless ease as if going to breakfast, he drew on his overcoat and gloves and said politely:

"I am ready to accompany you, monsieur."

The commissary folded up his pocketbook and bowed to M. Fauvel, saying to Prosper:

"Let us go."

They left the room, and, with a distressed face and eyes filled with tears that he could not restrain, the banker watched their departure.

"Good heaven!" he exclaimed, "Gladly would I give double the sum stolen to regain my old confidence in poor Prosper and be able to keep him with me!"

Fanferlot had resolved to obtain possession of Prosper's note, which he knew to be in Cavaillon's pocket. To obtain this written proof, which must be an important one, appeared the easiest thing in the world. He had simply to arrest Cavaillon, frighten him, demand the letter and, if necessary, take it by force.

Fanferlot began talking with an office boy and, after a few apparently idle questions, had discovered that the Fauvel bank had no outlet on Victory street and that consequently all the clerks were obliged to pass in and out through the main entrance on Province street. From this moment the task he had undertaken no longer presented a shadow of difficulty. He rapidly crossed the street and took up his position under a carriage gate.

After awhile Cavaillon appeared at the door of the bank, but before stepping on the pavement he looked up and down the street hesitatingly. He soon decided, entered the Faubourg Montmartre and walked up Notre Dame street so rapidly, utterly regardless of the grumbling passersby, whom he elbowed out of his way, that Fanferlot found it difficult to keep him in sight. Reaching Chaptal street, Cavaillon suddenly stopped and entered the house numbered 39. He had scarcely taken three steps in the narrow corridor when he felt a touch on his shoulder and, turning abruptly, found himself face to face with Fanferlot.

He recognized him at once, and, turning very pale, he shrank back and looked around for means of escape. But the detective, anticipating the attempt, barred the passageway. Cavaillon saw that he was caught.

"What do you want with me?" he asked in a voice tremulous with fear.

"You will be kind enough, my dear monsieur," said Fanferlot, "to excuse the great liberty I take. It is only about a trifling matter, and you will overwhelm me with obligations if you will do me the honor to accept my arm and step outside for a moment."

What could Cavaillon do? He took Fanferlot's arm and went out with him.

"What I wished to say is, my dear monsieur," began the detective, "that M. Prosper Bertomy threw you a note this morning. I am sure you will be kind enough to give it to me. Believe me, nothing but the most absolute necessity"—

"Never!" exclaimed Cavaillon. And, believing the moment favorable, he suddenly attempted to jerk his arm from under Fanferlot's and escape.

But his efforts were vain. The detective's strength was equal to his suavity.

"Don't hurt yourself, young man," he said, "but take my advice and quietly give up the letter."

"I am in your power," said Cavaillon, then suddenly drew from his pocketbook the unlucky note and gave it to the detective. Fanferlot's hand trembled with pleasure as he unfolded the paper. Yet, faithful to his habits of fastidious politeness, before reading it he bowed to Cavaillon and said, "With your permission." Then he read:

Dear Nina—On the receipt of this note take everything you have in the house, absolutely everything, and establish yourself somewhere at the other end of Paris. Do not appear in public, but conceal yourself as much as possible. My life may depend on your obedience. I am accused of an immense robbery and am about to be arrested. You will find 300 francs in the secretary. Leave your address with Cavaillon, who will explain what I cannot say. Be hopeful, whatever happens. Goodby. PROSPER.

Had Cavaillon been less bewildered he would have seen blank disappointment depicted on the detective's face after the perusal of the note. Fanferlot had cherished the hope that he was about to possess a very important document, and who knows but that it would clearly prove the guilt or innocence of Prosper. Whereas he had only seized a love letter written by a man who was evidently more anxious about the welfare of the woman he loved than about his own. Vainly did he puzzle over the letter, hoping to discover some hidden meaning. It proved nothing for or against the writer. The two words "absolutely everything" were underscored, it is true, but they could be interpreted in so many ways. Fanferlot folded up the note and slipped it into his pocket.

"A thousand thanks, monsieur, for the information, and in return, if you please, I will relieve you of the trouble of executing your commission. I will myself take this note to Mme. Nina Gipsy. I will also give you a piece of advice. If I were in your place, I would return quietly to business and have nothing more to do with this affair."

The poor fellow obeyed. Slowly and with swelling heart he returned to Notre Dame street. He asked himself how he could serve Prosper, warn Mme. Gipsy and, above all, be revenged upon this odious detective who had just made him suffer such cruel humiliation. He had no sooner turned the corner of the street than Fanferlot went into the house, gave his name to the porter as Prosper Bertomy, went up stairs and knocked at the first door he came to.

A young servant dressed in the most fanciful livery opened the door.

"Is Mme. Gipsy at home?"

The little groom hesitated. Seeing this, Fanferlot showed his note.

"M. Prosper charged me to hand this note to madame and wait for an answer."

"Come in, and I will let madame know you are here."

The name of Prosper produced its effect. Fanferlot was ushered into a little room furnished in blue and gold silk damask. But he had no time to pursue his inventory. One of the door curtains was pushed aside, and Mme. Nina Gipsy appeared. Mme. Gipsy is, or, to speak more correctly, was, quite young, small and graceful, with a brown, or, rather, gold colored quadroon, complexion and the hands and feet of a child. She eyed her visitor with the most disdainful surprise.

"What do you want?" she said.

"I am charged, my dear madame," he answered in his humblest and softest tone, "by M. Bertomy to give you this note."

Fanferlot slowly drew Prosper's note from his pocket and with a bow presented it to Mme. Gipsy.

"Read," he said.

At a glance she read its contents. She turned very red, then very pale. She trembled from head to foot. Her limbs seemed to give way, and she tottered so that Fanferlot, thinking she was about to fall, extended his arms to catch her. Useless precaution! Mme. Gipsy was one of those women whose inert listlessness conceals indomitable energy—fragile looking creatures whose powers of endurance and resistance are unlimited, catlike in their soft grace and delicacy, especially catlike in their nerves and muscles of steel.

"Explain yourself! What does all this mean? Do you know anything about the contents of this letter? Prosper is to be arrested, accused of being a thief?"

"Yes, madame; he is accused of taking 350,000 francs from the bank safe."

"It is false, infamous, absurd!" she cried. "Prosper steal! It is absurd! Why should he steal? Is he not rich?"

"M. Bertomy is not rich. He has nothing but his salary."

This answer seemed to confound Mme. Gipsy.

"But," she insisted, "I have always seen him have plenty of money. Not rich—then"—

She dared not finish. But her eye met Fanferlot's, and they understood each other.

"No," she cried, "I regret to say that Prosper would never have stolen one cent for me! One can understand a man who is trusted robbing a bank for a woman he loves, but Prosper does not love me. He never has loved me. But I love him, and it is for me to save him! I will see his chief, the miserable wretch who dares to accuse him. I will prove that he is innocent. Come, monsieur, let us go, and I promise you that before sunset he shall be free, or I shall be in prison with him."

Mme. Gipsy's project was certainly laudable and prompted by the noblest sentiments. Unfortunately it was impracticable. Besides, it would be going counter to the plans of the detective.

"What will you gain by acting thus, my dear madame?" asked Fanferlot. "Nothing. I can assure you that you have not the least chance of success. You will compromise Prosper. Who knows if you will not be suspected as his accomplice? M. Bertomy expressly forbade such a course in his letter."

Mme. Gipsy remained thoughtful for a moment, then a ray of light seemed to cross her mind, and she cried:

"Oh, I understand now! Fool that I was for not seeing it before! But where am I to go?"

"Did not M. Bertomy say, my dear lady, to the other end of Paris—to a boarding house or hotel?"

"But I don't know where to find any."

Fanferlot seemed to be reflecting, but he had great difficulty in concealing his delight at a sudden idea that flashed upon him. His little black eyes fairly danced with joy.

"I know of a hotel," he said at last, "but it might not suit you."

"Where is it?"

"On the other side of the river, Quai St. Michel the Archangel, kept by Mme. Alexandre."

Mme. Nina was never long making up her mind.

"Here are writing materials. Write your recommendation."

"With these three lines," he said, handing her the letter, "you can make Mme. Alexandre do anything you wish."

"Very well. Now how am I to let Cavaillon know my address? It is he who should have brought me Prosper's letter."

"He was unable to come, dear madame," interrupted the detective. "But I will tell him where he can find you."

Mme. Gipsy was about to send for a carriage, but Fanferlot said he was in a hurry and would send her one. He seemed to be in luck that day, for a cab was passing the door, and he hailed it.

"Wait here," he said to the driver after telling him that he was a detective, "for a little brunette who is packing her trunks. If she tells you to drive her to Quai St. Michel, crack your whip. If she gives you any other address, get down from your seat and arrange your harness. I will keep in sight."

He stepped across the street and stood in the door of a wine store. He had not long to wait. In a few minutes the loud cracking of a whip apprised him that Mme. Nina had started for the Archangel.

"Aha!" said he gayly. "I hold her, at any rate!"

Missing Marines Heard From

Manila, Jan. 22.—The anxiety recently felt concerning the whereabouts of Captain Porter of the marine corps, and 35 marines who have been absent in the interior of Samar, has been relieved by the arrival of Captain Porter and 26 of his men on the coast of that island. The other nine marines, it is expected, will soon reach the coast also. The party and Captain Porter has been in the interior for two weeks past. Their progress was delayed and they suffered great hardship.

Made Sensational Statements

Vienna, Jan. 22.—The police of this city have seized a Socialist newspaper, The Arbiter Zeitung, for having published articles declaring the innocence of Lieutenant Mattasich, who has been imprisoned for the alleged forgery of a bill for £12,000 in the name of the Archduchess Stephanie, and for hints that the Princess Louise, whose friend he was, forged her sister's name. Princess Louise is now in an asylum.

Schley's Appeal Before President

TAFT IS ENCOURAGED

By the Great Change For the Better In Conditions In the Philippines

San Francisco, Jan. 22.—Governor General Taft, who arrived from Manila Monday night, landed yesterday afternoon. He expects to start for Washington today. Discussing conditions in the Philippines he said:

"I wish the press would correct the impression that there is war on all the islands. The insurrection is confined to two localities—the provinces of Batangas and the island of Samar. This morning I received a most encouraging cable from General Wright, who is the acting governor in my absence. It said that owing to General Bell's strong repressive measures the trouble in Batangas was being quieted.

"I do not think General Bell will have to adopt the reconcentrado principle in Batangas, as his dispatch plainly indicates that the province is in a fair way of pacification.

"I wish to impress upon everybody that civil government is a success. There is a strong peace party in the islands and it is composed of the most influential men among the Filipinos. They are working earnestly and zealously toward bringing about happy relations between their countrymen and the government. I have never been so encouraged as to the prospects of the Philippines as I have within the past three months. The people are beginning to appreciate the fact that civil government means better times for them. I am encouraged, and I shall so report to Washington."

Croker Out For Good

New York, Jan. 22.—Richard Croker was given a dinner and a silver service last night by the honorary staff of the First battery New York National Guard. In reply to the speech of presentation, Mr. Croker said in part: "I want to say that I have retired from politics for good and all time to come. We must expect our opponents in politics will use unfair means to keep up the talk that I am not out and that this is only a blind. I assure you that this is not so." Mr. Croker astonished all by announcing that he was to sail for England today.

Churchill Advises Compromise

London, Jan. 22.—Winston S. Churchill, in the house of commons yesterday, gained the approval of the opposition benches by his criticism of the government's shortcomings in regard to the conduct of the war in South Africa, the insufficiency of the troops supplied to Lord Kitchener and other matters. He said he preferred a settlement by compromise rather than by force, as the latter would entail the tremendous expense of long military occupation.

In Behalf of Scheepers

Washington, Jan. 22.—Representative Smith of Michigan, a member of the house committee on foreign affairs, introduced a resolution yesterday directing the state department to request the British government to withhold the sentence of death passed on Commandant Scheepers, who is about to be shot, and to accord him the customary immunities and privileges of a prisoner of war guaranteed under the Geneva convention.

Lucky Harvard

Berlin, Jan. 22.—The gift of Emperor William to Harvard university will be much larger than was at first supposed. The emperor's gift consists of casts and some bronzes illustrating every phase of the German plastic arts from the Romanesque period to the renaissance. Every city of the empire possessing anything distinctive or beautiful is represented. The entire cost of the collection will be defrayed from the emperor's private purse and is estimated at 500,000 marks. Ambassador White has written to Harvard university that the collection requires a special building.

Rich Gold Strikes

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 22.—Steamer Amur, from Skagway, brings news that rich pay dirt has been found running from 4 to 7 cents to the pan on Good Pasture creek. A stampede has occurred. Another rich strike has been made on No. 27 claim, where pans ranging in value from $1 to $5 have been taken out. Two prospectors have $10,000 as a result of two weeks' work on Mush creek.

Lumbermen Roasted Alive

Hambleton, W. Va., Jan. 22.—A camp of the Otter Creek Boom and Lumber company, several miles from here in the forest, took fire yesterday. It burned so rapidly that seven out of the 40 men asleep in the building failed to get out and were burned to death.

Double Execution

Mississippi City, Miss., Jan. 22.—Lewis Johnson, the assassin of City Marshal Richardson of Gulfport, and Victor Johnson, who murdered a little girl, were hanged here yesterday from the same scaffold in the presence of a large crowd.

Plebiscite Idea Not Popular

Copenhagen, Jan. 22.—Less support than was expected is being given to the agitation for a plebiscite before effecting the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States, and it is not unlikely that this idea will be abandoned.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. TEAMSTERS SURPRISED

At Attitude of Brine Transportation Company

ENTERED INTO AGREEMENT

Which Would Have Prevented Disorderly Scenes at Boston—Now Absolutely Refuses to Treat With the Strikers—Police Guard Teams

Boston, Jan. 23.—The R. S. Brine Transportation company is now in fact, as it has hitherto been to all intents and purposes, the sole object of the attacks of the striking teamsters, 19 of the little more than 20 master teamsters who have hitherto refused to abide by the new schedule having signed the agreement yesterday, while 150 of their employes made application for membership in the union. The strike now becomes purely a fight between the Brine company and the union, and neither side shows the least inclination to yield a single point.

Two conferences were held at the rooms of the state board of arbitration yesterday afternoon, but except to formulate a general course of procedure nothing was accomplished. The Brine company absolutely refused to be represented at the conferences, declaring that it had nothing to arbitrate.

Harrison Loring, Jr., treasurer of the R. S. Brine Transportation company, sent a letter to the state board of arbitration, explaining his company's position in the matter and declining to attend any conference. In answer to it the arbitration committee of the Master Teamsters' association gave out the following last night, which has a most important bearing upon the strike, as showing the feelings of that body toward the Brine company, which is not a member of the association:

"We deem it proper to make the following statement with a view to assisting the public to place the responsibility where it belongs. There was a meeting at Hotel Essex on Jan. 8, 1902, to which all master teamsters in Boston had been invited. The R. S. Brine Transportation company, responding to the invitation, was present throughout the session. By unanimous vote a committee was appointed and given full power to negotiate a settlement in the presence of the board. The committee conferred with a like committee of employes on Jan. 10 at the state house, and in the presence of the state board made the best settlement that could be made under the circumstances. The Messrs. Brine & Co. were and are still bound in honor by the agreement made by their committee, and their attitude at this time is singular."

In addition to this statement, members of the union deny Mr. Loring's assertion that the reasons for the strike have never been formulated; also that his statement that his firm is paying union wages has become a laughing stock.

Mr. Brine, when seen last night, stated that he stood as firmly as ever in the position he has taken in the matter, and that his teams would be sent out as usual under the police protection which had been given him yesterday.

The first real trouble yesterday occurred about 1 p. m. John Scott was seen to cut a rope on one of Brine's teams that had been pocketed on India street, and the load fell to the ground. A crowd of sympathizers gathered and for a time prevented the police from assisting the driver to reload his team. Scott was placed under arrest, as was also George Whitty, who smashed a policeman's helmet with a piece of iron which he had thrown at the driver.

During the rest of the afternoon there were no serious disturbances, until just after 5 o'clock five of the Brine company's teams left their India street office for the stables. Sixteen mounted officers accompanied the wagons, besides others on foot, and from India street down Atlantic avenue to South Boston bridge it was one continuous battle with the mob. The drivers were greeted with all sorts of scurrilous remarks, while heavy drays loaded with shouting union men blocked their way and caused frequent stops.

With every pause the crowd would surge forward and surround the wagons, shouting and howling, only to be charged and sent flying in all directions by the mounted police. So dense was the crowd that there was a good deal of crushing, and one woman was knocked down and badly hurt.

After a clearing had been made the procession would start again, only to be similarly held up a little farther on. At the Summer street bridge a vast crowd hemmed in the teams, and for a while it seemed as if they would never reach their destination, but again the police made a wild charge and swept the throng before them.

The police then formed a solid line in front of the bridge, the Brine teams and their escort passed between files of bluecoats, who then closed in again, presenting a solid front to the crowd, which was kept from getting nearer the objects of their wrath.

After a short time the crowd thinned out and the teams reached their stables without any more trouble. Several of the drivers were cool and collected throughout their trying experiences, while others were evidently fearful for their lives.

DR VINTON CHOSEN

To Be Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Western Massachusetts Diocese

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 23.—Rev. Dr. Alexander Vinton, rector of All Saints church, Worcester, was elected bishop of the new Protestant Episcopal diocese of western Massachusetts, and has signified his intention of accepting the office if the action of the diocesan convention is confirmed by the house of bishops and a majority of the standing committees of the Episcopal diocese. The other candidates were Rev. Dr. William S. Rainsford of New York city, and Rev. Dr. Edward S. Lines of New Haven.

There was a little acerbity in the preliminary contest, and a little bickering over the manner of making nominations, but this was finally arranged to the satisfaction of all. The clerk of the diocese, Rev. H. H. Morrell, presented the name of Dr. Vinton to the conference, and Rev. J. C. Tebbetts seconded the nomination. Then Rev. Dr. Lawrence eloquently nominated Dr. Lines and Rev. J. C. Brooks seconded that nomination.

So far things had gone as was expected and the delegates were preparing to ballot, when Rev. Harold Arrowsmith moved the nomination of Rev. Dr. William S. Rainsford. Promptly the nomination was seconded by Rev. J. F. Carter, Jr. The naming of Rr. Rainsford startled the convention, inasmuch as the extreme western part of the diocese, with the exception of Pittsfield, had generally been understood to favor Dr Vinton, but the balloting was commenced without any further nominations.

Dr. Lawrence moved that the election of Dr. Vinton be made unanimous, and it was so voted.

Row May Have Fatal Ending

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 23.—George Brown, an Armenian, was assaulted in the village of Hebronville by Nicholas Guntus, a fellow countryman, and lies at the point of death here with a fractured skull. Both men were employed in the mill of the Hebronville Manufacturing company, and engaged in a row of words while at their work. The trouble continued until they left the mill last night, when the assault took place in the mill yard. Brown says that Guntus struck him with a rock.

A Robber's Unique Defense

Boston, Jan. 23.—James Hogan got a five years' state prison sentence yesterday for highway robbery. Hogan had been found guilty of having robbed Edward O. Godfrey, at the same time rendering him insensible by a blow. Hogan claimed that Godfrey was being robbed by two men and he went to his assistance, and in the struggle got two watches which had fallen out of the victim's pocket. Godfrey's testimony exploded this.

House No Longer Watched

Wellesley, Mass., Jan. 23.—Inasmuch as the detectives who have been watching the house of Albert Jennings, Wellesley's former town treasurer, lay and night since he was released on bail have been withdrawn, it is assumed that the bond company is convinced that it need not fear that Jennings will leave town or that it will lose anything by his shortcomings. Interest now centres on the whereabouts of the alleged forged note for $15,000.

Says Miss Beaudry Was Insane

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 23.—Miss Jennie Gagnon, who was shot and seriously wounded in the head on Jan. 11 by Annie Beaudry, who immediately afterwards fired a fatal shot into her own brain, was discharged from the hospital yesterday. In an interview Miss Gagnon declared that she believed that Miss Beaudry was clearly insane.

Contributions For Strikers

Providence, Jan. 23.—In the course of a protracted meeting of the weavers of the Weybosset mill at Olneyville last evening, it was decided that the single loom weavers shall remain at work and each one shall contribute from $2 to $3 per week to the support of the double loom weavers, who are to remain on strike.

Advocates Protest Against War

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 23.—Dr. H. P. Andrew, instructor in economics at Harvard, today publishes a two-column letter in The Harvard Crimson advocating an immediate and widespread protest in the United States against the British government in its present conduct of the South African war.

Receivership Ended

Providence, Jan. 23.—The Phenix iron foundry was yesterday declared by a final decree entered in the appellate court to be in sound financial condition and the receiver of the corporation was discharged and ordered to turn back all the assets of the corporation.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

MORE EXPLANATIONS

As to Intervention In Spanish-American War

GREAT BRITAIN'S LEANING

Toward the United States Declared by France to Have Not Been as Strong as She Would Have Us Believe—Russia's Contribution

Paris, Jan. 23.—In view of the statement made by Lord Cranborne in the house of commons Monday on the subject of representations made to Great Britain before and after the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, the correspondent of The Associated Press made inquiries in an authoritative quarter here and received the following explanations, which throw a somewhat different light on the question:

In the first place, in the Spanish negotiations, at the end of March, 1898, to secure the intervention of the powers in her favor, Great Britain took the same attitude as France and the other powers. She neither refused nor consented to join in collective action. All the powers were hesitating until they ascertained the intentions of the others. Russia clinched the matter by the late Count Mouravieff's blunt rejection of the proposal. Subsequently, after Spain had indicated the extent of the surrender she was willing to make to the United States demands, the Austrian government, believing Spain's surrender was sufficiently complete to satisfy the United States, instructed its ambassadors to propose to the European governments that a note be presented at Washington urging the United States to accept Spain's offer and avert war. The Spanish ambassador in London saw A. J. Balfour, (who was acting as secretary of state for foreign affairs during the absence of Lord Salisbury) who promised to instruct Lord Pauncefote how to act, with the view to maintain peace. No collective action was definitely agreed upon, though Russia, France and Germany were disposed towards a movement which would avert an outbreak of hostilities. A few days before the war, however, it was declared that Mr. Balfour had raised the objection to which Lord Cranborne alluded last Monday, against any note which would have the appearance of putting pressure on the United States or offering an opinion on the United States attitude. The Austrian proposition then fell through, and the subsequent joint resolution of congress rendered any further action out of the question.

This was the extent of Great Britain's action in favor of the United States.

The statement of a prominent British foreign office official regarding France's alleged support of the Austrian proposal is declared to be incorrect. France did not back up the proposal and the French ambassador in London confined himself to making an inquiry as to what view the British government took of the matter. France's attitude, throughout, was friendly to the United States as well as to Spain, her ardent desire being to avert war. She took no initiative in any suggestion tending to put pressure on the United States nor at any time encouraged Spain to resistance. Her influence was always directed, in the pour parlers of the powers, to maintaining peace.

The exact value which should be placed on Great Britain's leaning towards the United States can be gauged by the fact that when war was declared Senor Gullon (the Spanish foreign minister) was furious, firstly against Germany, secondly against Russia and only thirdly against Great Britain. His resentment against Germany was due to the latter having encouraged Spain to resist and then having abandoned her at the last moment.

How Russia Stood

St. Petersburg, Jan. 23.—The correspondent here of The Associated Press has obtained the following statement from the Russian foreign office: Russia has always been and now is extremely desirous of maintaining amicable relations with the United States. Russia never had any intention of participating in any collective step in the Spanish-American dispute, which did not directly concern her. Nor did Russia receive any proposition having such action in view. Indeed, we received no information regarding Austria's alleged initiative or about an attempt on the part of any of the powers to interfere in the interest of Spain.

Planning For Prince's Journey

Washington, Jan. 23.—The committee on arrangements for the reception of Prince Henry is studying figures which have been submitted by railroad experts, relative to possible itineraries. It is now pretty well settled that he will go to Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Milwaukee and Boston. March 8 is the probable date of his visit to the last named city.

Steamship Company's Big Claim

Santiago De Chili, Jan. 23.—The Compania Sud Americana de Vapores of Valparaiso will demand £60,000 for the loss of their steamer, the Lautaro.

(The Lautaro was seized by the late Colombian general, Carlos Alban, and sunk by the Colombian Liberals during the naval engagement of last Monday in the harbor of Panama.)

Made Sure of Election

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 23.—The legislature met in joint session yesterday and duplicated its recent action, thus making certain the election of James B. McCreary to the United States senate. The repetition was due to the obscurity of the law as to the date for senatorial elections.

Cleveland on Hunting Trip

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 23.—Ex-President Cleveland left Princeton last night for the south, where he will remain several days. He will spend the time hunting with Colonel Benedict, Rear Admiral R. D. Evans, General McCook and Herman May. Mr. Cleveland appears to have regained his normal health.

Two Races For Boralma

New York, Jan. 23.—Articles of agreement were signed yesterday for two match races for $20,000 a side, between Thomas W. Lawson's Boralma and E. E. Smather's Lord Derby and John J. Scannel's The Abbot. The Boralma-Lord Derby race will take place first.

Against Maclay's History

Annapolis, Jan. 23.—The senate yesterday unanimously adopted an order directing the state librarian to remove from the state library the third volume of Maclay's history of the United States navy.

Good Afternoon.

Mr. Bryan devotes nearly a column of his newspaper to drawing a moral from the defeat of Mr. Perry Belmont. Well, Mr. Bryan ought to be an authority on defeats.

Ward Three is the only ward of the city which has no chairmanship among the standing committees of the City Council, but then Wards One, Two and Three have only Three out of eight.

If it is desirable to get the City Reports for 1901 out early, it is important that copy be given to the printers early. There should be nothing to prevent a start each year before the fifteenth of January.

Had Edwin Markham never written anything else he would have been entitled to respect for his statement "A man becomes religious only when he comes into brotherly relations with his fellows not forgetting his hairy and feathered kinsman of the fields and sky."

And now they say the robins are with us once more, a large flock being seen this morning in the vicinity of Adams street. That means usually an early spring but in this case the robins are more than likely to experience some pretty cold weather in February before spring arrives for good. The lady who saw the robins is renowned for her goodness, and like George Washington never told a lie.

Undoubtedly Mr. Roosevelt desires the nomination of his party at the next national convention. It is hardly to be supposed that he would care to go down in history as what John Tylers' coachman called "a sort of second hand president." At the same time the President is too honorable a man to do anything unworthy in order to secure it.

There is a feeling of relief among parents now that the smallpox scare is over and there is to be no more compulsory vaccination at school. The Board of Health were probably taking more drastic steps than were necessary, and have exceeded their powers. The Board of Health undoubtedly has the right to say children shall not attend school unless they have been vaccinated, but it is quite another thing to seize children when away from home and make them submit to vaccination. In one case a child had been successfully vaccinated within a year, but this made no difference.

Is not the city a little reckless on its sewer appropriations? Last year the sewer station was sold for about $100,000, yet the Sewer Commissioner say that this large sum is about gone, and they desire new legislation that $200,000 more may be appropriated. Thus far the taxpayers of the whole city have not felt the burden of the sewer expenditures, as assessments paid by abutters have cancelled most of the current expenses, but this week the City Council was told that the receipts had not been large enough to meet the requirements, and it is probable that a direct tax for sewers must be levied each year hereafter. The abutters are supposed to pay one-half the cost of sewer construction, but has half the debt been paid off? Or must the abutters as taxpayers pay the cost in taxes? By the way have any assessments been levied for sewers put in during 1901?

Drift of Opinion.

☞It is said that the Boston Elevated company has a new subway bill which is to be presented to the legislature shortly and predictions are made of the renewal of the contest of the last session. There is likely to be some disappointment when the issue gets before the house. It is not to be supposed that the elevated will submit a bill that will meet with unanimous approval, but it is not giving the astute legislative manager of that company credit for his stock of common sense to suppose that he will introduce a bill which will not when it is finally hammered into shape, conform somewhere near to the ideas of his excellency the governor.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞Reciprocity with Canada is by no means the dead issue in this country that the statesmen of the Dominion have in their heartsickness, induced by hope deferred, pictured it to their compatriots. We have very lively proof on the contrary, that it is just now a burning question in the west as well as in the east, a representative of the local chamber of commerce, at present in Chicago for the purpose of ascertaining the sentiment on the subject there giving it as his opinion that no fewer than 3,000 of the most prominent merchants, manufacturers, bankers and professional men of that city will join in petitioning congress to establish a reciprocal trade agreement with our northern neighbors of the sort they have for years longed for, but have recently despaired of ever obtaining.—Commercial Bulletin.

☞The financial downfall of "Corn King" Phillips should not be interpreted as some critics put it, as the inevitable end of a daring speculator who had still more daring opponents with longer purses. It is more probably the truth that the final crash in this young and nervy speculator's career is due partly to lack of conservatism in business methods, but mainly to a blind disregard of the old law that the man who undertakes a corner or even a partial corner in any corner of the world's great food staples is doomed to disaster. It would seem as if the lessons of the past ought to deter new victims, but they do not. Probably so long as youth and ambition considers itself immune from the retributions that overtake others so long will the grain pits be strewn with financial wrecks and blasted hopes. — Chicago Chronicle.

☞Captain Hobson, the hero of Santiago harbor, believes that hereafter every war in which this country shall engage will be fought upon the seas. If this be so, and there is strong reason for the belief, it then becomes necessary for us to maintain our navy as the leading sea power of the world. With 17,000 miles of coast line, along which billions of dollars of treasure have been accumulated and stored, our best protection is our ships of war. We can help to keep the peace of the world if we have the navy such a nation as ours should maintain. There may come a time in the near future when such an emergency may arise, for if China is divided, war in Europe is sure to follow. Captain Hobson is alive to the situation, and his words are in the direction of a wise preparation.—Lynn Item.

FOUR LOCATIONS.

Considered for New Government Building.

The Coddington Street Corner Favored.

Would Be Attractive in Connection with Library.

Mayor Bryant and the Washington committee took with them four sets of plans of sites for the proposed public building. These were: The Briesler lot, at the junction of Hancock and Granite streets; the Brackett estate on Hancock street; the Nightingale lot at the corner of Washington street and Temple streets and the lot bounded by Washington, Coddington and Spear streets and next the Thomas Crane Public library.

The latter location is considered the most desirable by the committee, not only on account of its size but because it would open up all the land between the Library and Coddington street, and would be a great improvement to the city.

The committee also took estimates of the cost of the several sites.

NO CONVENTIONS.

Plan Proposed for Direct Nominations for Elections.

Representative Luce of Somerville addressed the members of the Lynn Republican Club at Oxford Club hall, Lynn, Wednesday night, on the subject of caucuses and conventions.

Mr. Luce explained the provisions of the bill he introduced in the House Tuesday and is reported by the Herald as follows. He said that it proposed to do away with nominating conventions and matters would be so arranged that a caucus would be held and nominations made direct by the people. It was somewhat after the system in vogue in Minnesota.

The caucus and conventions scandals of the fall campaign added fuel to the flame of public indignation, he said and the demand for reform is both universal and imperative, confined to no party and no locality, but voiced with earnestness and emphasis by practically all the citizens of the commonwealth who take any interest in public affairs.

The evils of caucus and convention, said Mr. Luce, have been effectively met elsewhere by an antidote that is not invention, not inspiration, but a growth, a product, like the evils themselves. In the state where this antidote has first reached maturity, Minnesota, it is called the primary election.

The system is based on two essential principles that are quite distinct, but produce the best results when brought together. They are first, direct nomination, and secondly, state conducted primaries.

Beyond question the Minnesota law remedied the evil of non-attendance completely. In Minneapolis 32,000 voters took part in the primaries, actually 10 per cent more than had voted for Governor at the preceding state electon.

The objections to the reform come from the same classes that opposed the Australian ballot, the machine politicians, the men who profit by the present system, the men who made possible the exercise of money influence in politics and the conservatives.

More important than any theoretical arguments for or against are the actual results achieved by the system. In Minneapolis these were wonderfully satifactory, unequalled perhaps by those of any political experiment ever before made and surpassing the expectation of the most ardent advocates of the idea. The effect on the state as a whole was that whether party leaders approved or not, the people rose in their might and demanded that reform be extended so as to benefit them all. And after it was all over the Governor said the only thing he was sorry for was that the state officers were not included in the full law. In Michigan an experimental bill was passed for Grand Rapids and the trial last spring was a pronouced victory for the idea. Oregon adopted the system last winter, but its courts have declared unconstitutional the provision for secrecy of party choice, maintaining that no voter must have the chance to join in nominating candidates of a party other than his own and so only part of the system will go into effcet there at once. The Massachusetts bill avoids the objection of the Oregon court. California has adopted much of the system.

Old Home Week.

Massachusetts may have an "Old Home Week" this year. Representative Adams of Melrose introduced in the Legislature on Wednesday, a resolve providing that the third week in July in each year be designated as "Old Home Week," and set apart as a special season during which any city or town may arrange for appropriate celebrations to welcome returning sons and daughters of Massachusetts and other invited guests, and for exercises of historical interest. The City Councils of cities and the towns may at any legal meeting grant and vote such sums of money as may be necessary to defray the expenses of "Old Home Week." This was referred to Committee on Towns.

Sang in Boston Town.

The Old Stoughton Musical Society captured Boston Wednesday evening. The announcement that the famous society would give an old-fashioned "sing" in Horticultural hall was sufficient to fill the hall to its utmost capacity.

There was a chorus of 125 under the leadership of Nelson Mann of Randolph together with an orchestra of 25 pieces under the leadership of Edwin A. Jones of Stoughton. The following-named soloists assisted: Mrs. C. C. Farnham, soprano; Miss Fannie E. Buck soprano; Mrs. S. L. French, contralto and Mr. L. W. Standish, tenor.

The society sang the songs in the manner of the period of their composers. This method has been handed down in the society.

COSTLY BUILDINGS

Have Been Erected for High Schools in Many Cities.

Apropos, the movement for enlarged High school accommodations in this city the report of Supt. Balliet of Springfield and the figures he has gathered are of value. He says in discussing the question of new High school for Springfield that the demands for a new building in less than four years after the present building was completed is only an example of the phenomenal increase in high school enrollment, which he says is the most strikng fact about the public school system of the whole country.

Taking the United States as a whole, the increase in ten years has been nearly 100 per cent. In Massachusetts, where the High school enrollment was beyond that of most states, the increase has been 61 per cent., while the increase in population has been but a little more than 25 per cent.

The increase in population of Fitchburg from 1890 to 1900 was only 43 per cent., while the increase in high school attendance was 12 per cent. The population of Worcester increased during the same period a little less than 40 per cent., and the high school enrollment increased 124 per cent. The population of Springfield increased 40 per cent., while the enrollment in the high school during the same period increased 108 per cent.

Mr. Balliet discusses the question of cost purely as a matter of information, as the department of which he has charge has nothing to do with the construction of school buildings. He makes the pertinent suggestion, as applicable here as in Springfield that a building of moderate cost be erected and that instead of spending an unusually large sum of money on the building we spend more on its equipment and on its teaching force. An unusually strong corps of teachers is of vastly more importance than an unusually fine building, and as we cannot have both it is to be hoped that the sum spent on the building will not be so large as to make it necessary to equip the school scantily or to make it impossible to secure a superior corps of teachers '''

That Quincy has not been extravagant in erecting High school buildings is shown by the following figures, but it should be noted that most of the places quoted are either larger cities, or unusually wealthy towns:

Fitchburg—
Building, exclusive of lot, $162,766
Heating and ventilation, 15,907
$178,673
Accommodates 900-1,000 pupils.

Newton—
Building, exclusive of lot, but including heating and ventilating, $218,000
Furnishing, 17,000
$235 000
Accommodates 900 pupils.

Holyoke—
Building, $183,458
Lot, 25,000
Heating and ventilation, 24,000
Furnishings, 29,600
$262,058
Accommodates 800-1,000 pupils.

Brookline—
Building, $180,000
Lot, 60,000
Furnishings, (about) 25,000
Ventilating, 19,000
$284,000
Accommodates 550-600 pupils.

Lowell—
Building, $146,000
Heating, ventilating and plumbing, (one bid) 10,000
Furniture, 4,000
$160,000
Accommodates 734 pupils.

Cambridge, English High—
Building, including the heating apparatus and furnishings, $239,000
Accommodates about 650 pupils.

New Latin—
Building, $250,000
Contract for heating and ventilating apparatus, which is included in $250,000, 19,200
This is cost of the building exclusive of land and furniture,
Accommodates 800 pupils.

Springfield, Central High—
Building, exclusive of lot, but including heating apparatus and furniture, $350,000
Accommodates 800 pupils.

Discussing this matter of cost, the report of the Springfield school committee states that in Worcester a commodious and dignfied high school building, to accommodate 700 pupils, has been erected at a cost of $125,000.

VERDICT FOR $800.

Frederick W. Tirrell et al. Recover That Amount.

The case of Frederick W. Tirrell et al. vs. the city of Quincy was heard in Superior civil court at Dedham this week and went to the jury on Wednesday. It is a petition for the assessment of damages for land taken for sewer construction. William G. A. Pattee and Thomas E. Grover for petitioner; Russell E. Sears and M. P. Spillane for city.

The petitioners claim that when the city constructed the sewer from Hancock street, near the Kincaide building, across lots to School street, it took 1,040 feet of land causing said petitioners great damage.

The jury returned a verdict this morning for the plaintiff for a little over $800.

Washing Away the Earth.

A French geologist has made a careful calculation of the amount of solid matter yearly carried off into the ocean by the action of the rivers of the world and other causes. He estimates that the reduction of the average height of the surface of the solid land is .006 inches each year. Making allowance for the corresponding rise in the bed of the ocean and taking no account of the occurrence of volcanic and other exceptional phenomena, the general tendency of which is to hasten the process of disintegration, the period at which the solid land will have ceased to exist and the surface of the earth will be covered with water has been estimated. As, however, that period is 4,500,002 years distant, the prediction need cause no immediate disquietude.

A Curious Apache Belief.

The Apache Indians' religious belief prevents them from committing murder in the dark. If a dozen Apaches should discover a man sleeping by his campfire at night, no amount of money would hire them to attack him until the sun came up. They believe that if they kill a man at night their own souls will walk in eternal darkness forever. Knowing this curious superstition, hunters, scouts, trappers and others traveling through the Apache nation in the old days moved about during the night and lay by in some safe retreat during the day.

Introspection.

"Perhaps you wrong me," said Senator Sorghum mildly, "when you call me a practical politician."

"But you take a very businesslike view of affairs."

"Exactly. I have certain political ideals, but I don't devote too much time to them. I am a theoretical politician and a practical business man."—Washington Star.

Reckless Railroading.

"There is a heavy draft engine to this train," said the young man who wanted all to know that he understood railroad terms.

"A heavy draft engine?" echoed the old lady by his side. "Why, the idea of running such things this weather! We shall all take cold."

There are lots of men who should never leave a town of the size where it attracts attention when a man paints his barn.—Atchison Globe.

STREET BLOCKED.

No Travel Over Hancock Street Except by Electrics.

Hancock street at the junction of Greenleaf street, is closed to travel except the narrow space occupied by the street railway tracks. The contractors building that section of the Metropolitan sewer worked nearly all night Wednesday moving buildings, containing the engine and drum operating the bucket railway, into their new position. The boiler and engine house occupy the east side of the street and the drum house the other side, and as the bucket railway adjoins the later building things are pretty well blocked. Work has commenced opening the ground for the last end of this section, which extends from the Murphy house at the extreme easterly end of Greenleaf street to Hancock street and by another month this section should be completed.

It is said that Hancock street will not be torn up but will be tunnelled. From here the sewer passes through land of Charles H. Porter and across Adams street thence probably through the estate of Charles A. Howland, and under the railroad track It then follows the railroad track in a northerly dirction to Adams street joining the section being built on that street near Presidents bridge.

HIS WRATH AROUSED

Congressman Cummings Acts Independently of Other Democrats

Washington, Jan. 23.—Some partisan fire was injected into the proceedings of the house yesterday when the item in the urgent deficiency bill appropriating $500,000 for a military post at Manila, which the Democrats have been taking as a text for speeches in opposition to the Philippine policy of the administration, was reached. Mr. Cannon, who is in charge of the bill, admitted that the appropriation was subject to a point of order and it went out. In lieu thereof he offered an amendment that the same sum be appropriated for the "shelter and protection" of the officers and enlisted men of the army on duty in the Philippines.

This, the chair held, was in order, and it at once became the subject of a very spirited debate in which Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, Mr. Williams (Miss.) and Mr. DeArmond (Mo.) were pitted against Mr. Cannon. Partisan applause rang out on each side to cheer on the respective champions and there seemed to be alignment on each side of the political aisle.

When the vote was taken upon Mr. Cannon's amendment the entire Republican side arose in support of it and with them rose a solitary Democrat, Mr. Cummings of New York. Turning upon his fellow Democrats and shaking his fist in their faces Mr. Cummings shouted: "When I refuse to vote to protect the life of an American soldier I hope I may be paralyzed." The amendment was adopted by a vote of 127 to 100.

Debate on the Philippine tariff bill was not continued in the senate, no member of that body being prepared to proceed with the discussion. The bill providing for the establishment of a department of commerce was under discussion for nearly two hours. Little progress was made with it.

Ministers Present Credentials

Pekin, Jan. 23.—The present ministers to China from Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia Japan and Portugal presented their credentials yesterday. Chinese soldiers and officers escorted them from their respective legations, while small escorts of foreign soldiers accompanied them to the emperor's gate of the Forbidden City. The foreign ministers and the attaches rode in chairs to the hall where the audience was held.

Funds Piled Up Quickly

Havana, Jan. 23.—The testimony of the postoffice inspectors introduced as witnesses by the government yesterday at the trial of the charges growing out of the Cuban postal frauds, was to the effect that C. F. W. Neely came to Havana practically bankrupt in December, 1899, and that between that time and January, 1900, he made deposits in the bank at Muncie, Ind., amounting to $45,700.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Bemedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. —Many of the cities and towns of New Hampshire are experiencing a "dry time," owing to a rigid enforcement of the prohibitory liquor law. The law has long been practically a dead letter, but recent utterances of the courts have compelled the proper officials to enforce the absolute letter of the law. This is as it should be, for if the public sentiment is not strong enough to ensure the enforcement of the law, the sooner it is repealed the better. It is said that many dealers will retain their present locations in the hope that the existing prohibitory law will be replaced by a license law by the Legislature, and efforts looking to that end have already been commenced—Milford Gazette.

CASE 113

By... Emile Gaboriau

CHAPTER III.

At the same hour that Mme. Nina Gipsy went to find refuge at the Archangel, so highly recommended by Fanferlot the Squirrel, Prosper Bertomy was being entered on the jailer's book at the police office. There he had to wait two hours while the commissary went to receive orders from higher authorities. When it was announced to him that a coach was waiting for him at the door, he got up, but before going out requested permission to light a cigar, which was granted. It was magnificent weather, a bright spring morning. As the coach went along Montmartre street Prosper kept his head out of the window, smilingly complaining at being imprisoned on such a lovely day when everything outside was so sunny and pleasant.

"It is singular," he said. "I never felt so great a desire to take a walk."

To the court clerk while he was going through the formalities of the commitment Prosper replied with haughty brevity to the indispensable questions asked him.

But when he was ordered to empty his pockets on the table and they began to search him his eyes flashed with indignation, and a single tear dropped upon his flushed cheek. In an instant he had recovered his calmness and stood up motionless, with his arms raised in the air so that the rough creatures about him could more conveniently search him from head to foot to assure themselves that he had no suspicious object hid under his clothes.

The investigation would have, perhaps, been carried to the most ignominious lengths but for the intervention of a middle aged man of distinguished appearance, who wore a white cravat and gold spectacles and was sitting by the fire. At sight of Prosper he started with surprise and seemed much agitated. He stepped forward and seemed about to speak to him, then suddenly changed his mind and sat down again. In spite of his own troubles, the cashier could not help seeing that this man kept his eyes fastened upon him. Did he know him? Vainly did he try to recollect having met him before. This man, treated with all the deference due to a chief, was no less a personage than a celebrated member of the detective corps, M. Lecoq. When the men who were searching Prosper were about to take off his boots, saying that a knife might be concealed in them, M. Lecoq waved them aside, saying, "That is sufficient."

He was obeyed. All the formalities being ended, the unfortunate cashier was taken to a narrow cell. The heavily barred door was swung to and locked upon him. He breathed freely. At last he was alone. Yes, he believed himself to be alone. He was ignorant that a prison is made of glass; that the accused is like a miserable insect under the microscope of an entomologist. He did not know that the walls have stretched ears and eyes always watchful. He was so sure of being alone that he at once gave vent to his suppressed feeling and, dropping his mask of impassibility, burst into a flood of tears. His wrath, long pent up, now flashed out like a smoldering fire. In a paroxysm of rage he uttered imprecations and curses. He dashed himself against the prison walls like a wild beast in a cage.

In the evening when the jailer brought him his supper he found him lying on his pallet, with his face buried in the pillow, weeping bitter tears. He was not hungry. Now that he was alone, he fed upon his own bitter thoughts. He sank from a state of frenzy into one of stupefying despair. The night was long and terrible, and for the first time he had nothing to count the hours by as they slowly dragged on but the measured tread of the patrol who came to relieve the sentinels. He suffered agony. In the morning he dropped into a sleep, from which he was awakened by the rough voice of the jailer.

"Come, monsieur," he said, "to the judge of instruction."

"Let us go," said Prosper, without stopping to repair his disordered toilet.

During the passage the jailer said, "You are very fortunate in having your case brought before an honest man."

The jailer was right. Endowed with remarkable penetration, firm, unbiased, equally free from false pity and excessive severity, M. Patrigent possessed in an eminent degree all the qualities necessary for the delicate and difficult office of judge of instruction.

Prosper was escorted along a corridor, through a room full of policemen, down a flight of steps, across a kind of cellar and then up a steep staircase which seemed to have no end. Finally he reached a long, narrow gallery, upon which opened many doors bearing different numbers. Summoning all his courage, he placed his hand on the doorknob and was about to enter when the jailer stopped him.

"Don't be in such haste," he said. "Sit down here, and when your turn comes you will be called."

The wretched man obeyed, and his keeper took a seat beside him.

Presently a little old man dressed in black, wearing the insignia of his office, a steel chain, cried out:

"Prosper Bertomy!"

Prosper arose and, without knowing how, found himself in the office of the judge of instruction.

M. Patrigent's homely face, with its irregular outline and short red whiskers, lit up by a pair of bright, intelligent eyes and a kindly expression, was calculated to impress one favorably at first sight.

"Well," he said abruptly, "you are accused of having robbed M. Fauvel of 350,000 francs. What have you to answer?"

"That I am innocent, monsieur; I swear that I am innocent."

"I hope you are," said M. Patrigent, "and you may count upon me to assist you to the extent of my ability in proving your innocence. Have you anything to say in your defense?"

"Ah, monsieur, what can I say when I cannot understand this dreadful business myself? I can only refer you to my past life."

The judge interrupted him with an impatient gesture.

"Let us be specific. The robbery was committed under circumstances that prevent suspicion from falling upon any one but M. Fauvel and yourself. Do you suspect any one else?"

"No, monsieur."

"You declare yourself to be innocent; therefore the guilty party must be M. Fauvel."

Prosper did not answer.

"Have you," persisted the judge, "any cause for believing that M. Fauvel robbed himself? If you have, say so."

The prisoner preserved a rigid silence.

"I see, monsieur," said the judge, "that you need time for reflection. Listen to the reading of your examination, and after signing it you will return to prison."

The unhappy man was overcome. The last ray of hope was gone. He signed the paper without looking at it. He tottered as he left the judge's office so that the keeper was forced to support him.

If Prosper had remained an hour longer in the gallery, he would have seen the same bailiff who had called him come out of the judge's office and cry out:

"Number three!"

Witness No. 3, who was awaiting his turn and answered the call, was M. Fauvel.

ADVOCATES OF PANAMA

Not Alarmed by Hints of Nicaragua's Friends

AS TO LEASE OF TERRITORY

Belief That Proper Assurance Has Been Given by Colombian Minister —No Reason to Expect Postponement of Canal Legislation

Washington, Jan. 23.—The Nicaragua route advocates are hinting that the Colombia government is not willing to make a perpetual lease of the strip of territory through which the isthmian canal must pass. The suggestion does not carry any great alarm with it.

The Walker commission had no authority to conduct diplomatic negotiations with the Colombian government or any other, and hence was very careful in its latest report to hinge everything upon the question of our being able to make with Colombia as advantageous an agreement about the right of way as had been offered us by Nicaragua and Costa Rica. This meant a perpetual lease, at a price or rental not extortionate.

There is no doubt that Dr. Silva I as permitted our administration to know, without putting the matter into formal shape, where his government stands on the leasing question. Another thing which points in the same direction is the fact that he is aware that, unless we can get from Colombia the terms congress considers essential, no legislation will get through and Colombia and the Panama company will have gone through all their recent contortions in vain. This consideration is not likely to be lost upon his home government through any neglect or indifference on Dr. Silva's part.

Why everybody should have jumped to the conclusion that the reversal of the isthmian canal recommendation necessarily meant that there would be no canal legislation at the present session of congress is not easy to see. Of course the first effects of a square recommendation, signed by every member of the commission, in favor of the acceptance of the French offer were somewhat dazzling, after years of agitation in behalf of Nicaragua.

When the preliminary report of the present commission was made, little more than a year ago, it was currently remarked here that political expediency required a recommendation in behalf of Nicaragua; the Pacific coast, it was said, would lose confidence in the commission if it found for any other route. The report submitted to congress on Monday is thus the first recommendation of the Panama route from any official source in many years, and naturally it does not at once overcome the momentum of long agitation in behalf of the other line.

While it will take some time for congress to adjust itself to the new situation, there is little reason to believe that it will not do so. Senator Morgan's continued opposition to Panama will alienate support for his cause rather than win it. The idea that the United States government should not buy the French properties because of the loss that would fall upon the French stockholders in selling out so cheap is a peculiar sort of altruism, in view of the fact that these same Frenchmen would lose about $40,000,000 more in case we decline to do so. His fears concerning legal complications are about as groundless. Who is going to make the United States government pay these claims which he believes will spring into existence from sources now undiscovered in case we complete the trade? The United States will be its own judge of rights and equities then as now. Morgan's interviews thus really help the Panama project.

A Student Uprising

Lemberg, Austria, Jan. 23.—A detachment of hussars had to be called upon here last night to disperse a Polish demonstration before the Russian consulate. The outbreak was started by a number of students. They broke down the police cordon drawn around the Russian consulate and advanced on the building, when they were dispersed by a charge of the cavalry.

Bowlers Disagree

Buffalo, Jan. 23.—The split in the American bowling congress, which had been threatening since the body convened here in annual session, occurred yesterday. The eastern delegates left the hall in a body and declined to participate further in matters before the convention. The western delegates then elected Frank I. Pasdeloup of Chicago as president.

Two Predictions Will Be Wrong

Trenton, Jan. 23.—Each of the three leading candidates for the United States senatorship, Messrs. Dryden, Griggs and Stokes, is claiming success on the first ballot. The chances appear to favor the success of Mr. Dryden eventually. The caucus will be held this afternoon.

The Everett-Moore Failure

Cleveland, Jan. 23.—The entire properties of the Everett-Moore syndicate will doubtless be sold. This is admitted by Chairman Newcomb of the bankers' committee. He says that negotiations are on foot for the disposal of both the telephone and the railway properties.

Schwab Chats With Francis Joseph

Vienna, Jan. 23.—The mayor of Vienna presented Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, to Emperor Francis Joseph at the citizens' ball last night. The emperor and Mr. Schwab conversed at some length upon commercial matters.

EXPERTS AT HIS BOOKS

Treasurer of a Cincinnati Packing Company Is Under a Cloud

Cincinnati, Jan. 23.—Sensational reports were published here yesterday about an alleged shortage in the books of Theodore Braemer, who resigned his position of secretary and treasurer of the J. & F. Schroth Packing company of this city last Sunday. The story, as first published, made the reputed shortage one from $160,000 to $400,000, extending over a period of 20 years, and said that Braemer had turned over all of his property and chattels in trust, pending an examination of the books by experts. Braemer denied that there was any defalcation, but admitted that he had turned over $72,000 in personal property to Harlan Cleveland, his attorney, and Joseph O'Hara, attorney for the Schroth company.

Braemer is 45 years old and has been with the Schroths 27 years. Most of this time he received $25 a week as bookkeeper, but in recent years he has been paid twice that much as secretary and treasurer. The firm did a business of about $1,000,000 a year, which was handled by Braemer.

When John Schroth died, more than a year ago, Carl Nippert became the attorney for his heirs. He investigated the company's affairs, which culminated in a meeting of all the interested parties last Sunday. Braemer resigned at this meeting. Attorneys Cleveland and O'Hara and the trustees also are engaged with experts in examining the books. The accountants insist that they cannot complete their work for two or three weeks and counsel say that no reliable statement can be made until that time.

Convicts In Black Holes

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 23.—Ten of the eleven convicts who escaped from the McNeils penitentiary Sunday, and who were recaptured, are now confined in two small dungeons, 6 by 8 feet, five men in each. One man, Carroll, is too sick to be placed in a dungeon. The convicts who were recaptured Tuesday morning and who were then almost famished were not fed until Wednesday night, when they received one slice of bread and a cup of water. They got nothing to eat again last night and will be kept in the dungeons for at least 15 days. The black holes contain no bedding and are but six feet high.

Cannot Succeed to Throne

Vienna, Jan. 23.—The Archduchess Elizabeth, in view of her marriage to Prince Otho von Windisch-Graetz, who is not of royal blood, yesterday took the oath renouncing all claims for herself and her descendants to the Austrian throne. The emperor's gifts to the Archduchess Elizabeth include securities valued at $1,600,000, a yearly allowance of $250,000, jewelry valued at $1,000,000, a gold dinner service and several residences. The Archduchess Elizabeth is the granddaughter of Emperor Francis Joseph and is 18 years old.

Afghanistan as Fighting Ground

London, Jan. 23.—The Daily Chronicle learns from an influential source that rumors are current in India of coming trouble in Afghanistan. It is alleged that Russia will utilize the winter to mass troops upon the northern frontiers in readiness to invade Afghanistan as soon as the snow melts on the passes. Preparations are being made on the British side. Regiments are being quietly massed to be in readiness for grave complications.

Milner Stands In the Way

London, Jan. 23.—A representative of The Daily News in the lobbies of parliament hears that there have certainly been some sort of peace overtures from the Boers, but that the unyielding attitude of Lord Milner has, as before, proved an insurmountable obstacle in the matter.

Pearson Wants a Hearing

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Professor Pearson is ready to resign from the faculty of Northwestern university if an investigation shall show that he stepped over the limits of propriety in questioning the infallibility of the bible. However, the professor will ask the privilege of defending his action.

Alleged Theft of City Funds

New York, Jan. 23.—Michael Dougherty, a clerk in the bureau for the collection of arrears of personal taxes, was arrested yesterday, the charge against him being embezzlement of city funds. Corporation Counsel Rives said the alleged defalcation was estimated at $1200.

Brothers In Fatal Quarrel

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Robert McFetridge, a wealthy ice dealer, was shot and mortally wounded last night by his brother, William McFetridge. For a long time there has been bad blood between the brothers over business matters.

Tieup by Snow

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Jan. 23.—The snowstorm raging here is one of the worst experienced in years. Everything is tied up. Six trains are stalled between here and Suspension Bridge. Considerable damage has been done.

Long Struggle Ended

Buffalo, Jan. 23.—Adam Boeckel, Republican, was elected city treasurer on the 329th ballot yesterday afternoon.

Another disturbance apparently of a character similar to the one now over New England is central over New Mexico and it will continue its eastward movement. Rain or snow in New England will be followed by fair and colder weather. On the coast shifting winds will become westerly and high. Storm warnings are displayed from Delaware breakwater to Eastport.

Anxious thoughts sometimes perplex the wife who sees maternity before her. If she is treading an untried path, she sometimes frets herself into a nervous condition which is injurious and prostrating. If motherhood has already been a painful experience she is apt to shrink from the coming trial and by her very mental anxiety increase the possibility of her suffering.

There is no cause for anxiety for those prospective mothers who use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite, induces refreshing sleep and produces mental cheerfulness as well as physical vigor. It gives strength and muscular elasticity so that the baby's advent is practically painless. It is the best tonic for nursing mothers.

"I am so thankful for what Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has done for me," writes Mrs. John T. Smith, of Slocan, Brit. Col., Box 59, "It helped me through the long months before baby came and I have a big, strong baby girl, the most healthy of the three, and it cured me of a disease which was taking away all my strength."

The dealer who offers a substitute for "Favorite Prescription" does so to gain the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines. His profit is your loss, therefore accept no substitute.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser—sent free on receipt of stamps to cover expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers; or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

IN THE FORBIDDEN CITY

The Emperor Gives Audience to Foreign Ministers

FIRST TIME IN HISTORY

That Other Sovereigns Have Been Recognized as Equal In Rank to Ruler of China—Appeared Stupid and Did Not Utter a Word

Pekin, Jan. 24.—The ministers of the foreign powers here have attained the goal which has been their aim since intercourse between China and the powers began. They have been received as representatives of sovereigns equal in the rank to the Chinese emperor.

The audiences between the emperor and the ministers were held in the innermost hall of the Forbidden City. The emperor sat upon a dais behind a table. There were four princes at the back of his chair and a dozen officials on each side. The dowager empress was concealed by a screen, according to the stories of the attendants, and remained invisible. The audience chamber was furnished ornamentally, in contrast with the dingy rooms which served for these audiences under the old regime.

The secretaries translated the addresses of the ministers, copies of which were handed to the emperor. The replies to these addresses were delivered by Prince Ching. The emperor was silent throughout the audience and remained stolid and impassive. Formerly the emperor replied to the ministers in Manchu and the prince interpreted what he said. Yesterday the emperor appeared as an automaton, and the secretaries of the foreign ministers who were present report that he looked weaker, less intelligent and more childish than prior to the seige of the legations.

Mr. Satow, the British representative, made the following address: "My august sovereign has charged me to express to your majesty his sincere desire to see the independence and the integrity of the Chinese empire maintained intact, and that the prosperity and happiness of the Chinese people may be hastened by the removal of obstacles to the free exchange of commodities, by the extension of manufactures and by the utilization of the resources of the soil.

"The wonderful improvements in the means of communication between different parts of the world, through the development of steam navigation, railways and telegraphs, has brought all countries into closer relations than was possible in former times. Thus the nations of the world are enabled to profit by the lessons to be learned from each other in the art of government, in methods of education, in the administration of justice and the application of the public wealth to the advantage of the whole people. If, under the enlightened rule of your majesty, the barriers which in the past hindered the free and mutually advantageous intercourse of China with the rest of the world be completely removed, and her domestic institutions wisely regulated, it is certain that China, advancing along the path of progress, will attain to a height of prosperity unknown in the past."

The ministers of the foreign powers entered the Forbidden City at the main gate, leaving their military escorts outside. At the second gate they entered yellow chairs, like those furnished for the princes and secretaries. They walked through the inner courts of the Forbidden City, and their cortege retired from the city by the east gate.

Closed to McKinley Services

Pittsburg, Jan. 24.—Rev. Dr. Thomas Parry, who is sustained by the trustees of the First Presbyterian church of Wilkinsburg, has refused the citizens the use of that edifice for McKinley memorial services on next Wednesday. Mr. Parry says that the church "has been used too frequently for demonstrations of a public rather than a religious nature."

The Case of Judge Noyes

Washington, Jan. 24.—Attorney General Knox announces that whatever the department of justice may decide upon the in the case of Judge Noyes of Alaska, who was convicted of contempt of court in the courts of San Francisco recently, he will not be sent back to the district in Alaska in which he has officiated.

Forbes Is Champion Bantam Weight

St. Louis, Jan. 24.—Danny Dougherty of Philadelphia was knocked out in the fourth round by Harry Forbes of Chicago here last night, in what was scheduled to be a 15-round fight, at 115 pounds, for the bantam weight championship of the country. Both men were in good trim and the fight was fast and clean.

RIGID RESTRICTIONS

Placed Upon Manufactured Products In Imitation of Butter

Washington, Jan. 24.—The friends of the measure for rigid restrictions upon oleomargarine and kindred products carried their point before the house committee on agriculture yesterday. Before the meeting the friends of rigid restriction held a conference and decided upon several amendments. The original bill placed a tax of 10 cents a pound on oleomargarine and butterine colored to imitate yellow butter. The word "yellow" was stricken out, thus making the restriction apply to imitations of white or any other kind of butter.

Another change makes those who take uncolored butter and color it subject to all the taxes and penalties applicable to manufacturers.

When the committee met these amendments were agreed to by a vote of 12 to 5. The opposition to the bill proposed numerous amendments, all of which were rejected. One of these was to permit the use of pure milk, cream or butter as an ingredient of oleomargarine; another was to apply the oleomargarine restrictions to "renovated butter."

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. Non-Union Teamsters Are Doing Business at Boston

MOB MADE MATTERS LIVELY

One Driver Stuck to Team While His Skull Was Fractured, Though He Did Not Know It—Fruitless Conferences With Mayor and Others

Boston, Jan. 24.—The fourth day of the teamsters' strike passed without any serious disturbances, although they were only prevented by the presence at vulnerable points of an overwhelming force of police. The teams of the R. S. Brine Transportation company were kept moving throughout the day only under strong guard, and at times it was very evident that the feelings of the union drivers and the mob toward the company and its non-union drivers were as bitter as ever and that only a slight relaxation of police vigilance was necessary to bring about scenes of violence.

As yet, there is no sign of weakening upon either side, and the conferences that took place during the day, at which, by the way, the R. S. Brine Transportation company was not represented, accomplished little in the direction of a settlement.

A committee of the Teamsters' union and Allied Freight Transportation Trades council waited upon Mayor Collins at city hall and during the conference the mayor was asked if the city should be called upon to pay the expenses of maintaining a police guard for the Brine company's teams, to which the mayor replied that he did not believe the city was liable for such expense, but he should withhold his decision until the bills came before him for his approval. Further complaint was made that the police force was being used to load and unload Brine's teams at the Consolidated railroad freight houses and the mayor promised to give this matter his attention.

The committee then visited the state house, where it met the members of the state board of arbitration and a committee of the Master Teamsters' association, and the situation was discussed in all its details, without any formal action being taken.

The committees then paid Mayor Collins another visit, which lasted nearly two hours, but what transpired at the meeting was not made public. Another conference will be held at the state house today. After the second conference yesterday Mayor Collins said that progress was being made. Said he: "We are in constant communication with the board of arbitration and others, and I am hopeful that the combined efforts of the public spirited citizens will result satisfactorily."

The first indication of possible trouble yesterday was manifested at the corner of State and Congress streets, where one of the Brine company's teams had been pocketed by drivers of other teams. A large crowd gathered and did all they could to prevent the raising of the blockade. Finally one of their number, John F. Mackey, sprang to the head of one of the Brine horses and grabbed it by the bridle. Mackey was immediately seized by two police inspectors and he was hustled off to the station house. The crowd surged around the officers and their prisoner in an effort to release the latter, but a number of other policemen came to their aid and the man was taken away.

During the remainder of the afternoon the Brine teams were kept moving under strong police escort and little violence was attempted toward them. Just before 6 o'clock, preceded by four outriders and a squad of 10 mounted policemen, seven of the Brine company's teams started from the company's office for their South Boston stables. Other officers walked beside and between the teams, the whole forming a formidable body guard. There was no attempt to interrupt the procession as it moved along, although a few missiles were thrown, and the crowd kept up a continual fusillade of yells and epithets. One of the drivers, Fred Caulfield, was struck on the head at this time, but although his skull was fractured, as it proved later, he remained upon his team until it reached the stable. Scores of policemen lined the streets, keeping the crowds upon the sidewalks and preventing other teams from obstructing the progress of the Brine wagons.

At the Summer street bridge an immense crowd had congregated, but a large force of police held them in check and covered the passage of the wagon train. The officers, many of whom have been doing double duty for the past three or four days, were in no mood to be trifled with, and the crowd evidently realized the fact. There were but few exciting incidents along the route, but the drivers drew a long breath of relief when their teams were at last safely housed for the night.

☞ The Emperor of Germany, at an expense of $125,000 which he defrays from his private funds, has presented to Harvard University a magnificent collection of casts and bronzes. They represent every phase of German plastic art, and will form a valuable addition to the treasures of Harvard. Our Ambassador to Germany has written to President Elliot that the collection requires a special building. ☞ A West Virignia judge has ruled that no woman need live with a habitually drunken husband. This is a finding that will tend to give a certain amount of satisfaction to those women who desire to leave matrimonal prisons, but there is a good deal more to it than just this. The average married woman, as nearly as experience may teach, is not always in a position to leave even a drunken husband at a moment's notice. The remedy is there, but to apply it without the subsequent starvation is not such a simple thing. Nobody need live, we suppose, with a dissolute or reckless helpmeet. But to break away is not the easiest thing in the world. To break up an alliance of this kind is not the work of a moment, and it sometimes leads to subsequent troubles with the Police court, if not with the judges of the divorce mill. And if women whose husbands ever got drunk left them, this would be a world of grass widows.—Brockton Enterprise.

The prize for coming the nearest to pining the donkey's tail in the proper place was won by Mrs. Charles Osborne, and the booby prize was won by Master Robert Mitchell. VACCINATION.

Politics in It says Boston Paper.

Use of Force Is Denied.

Children Were Not Chased About School Room.

Now that the smallpox scare in Quincy is over and the feeling of unrest is over because of the general vaccination, a Boston daily has revived the question in a rather sensational way.

According to the Boston Advertiser:

The wheel of discussion revolves around the experience of the children of George Farquhar of Center street, West Quincy. As is claimed by the family, the physicians of the board of health appeared at the Willard school Jan. 7 and proceeded to vaccinate the pupils. From previous experience with vaccination as scrofula has appeared in the family, a former physician, Dr. Donovan, told the father not to have any more of his children vaccinated. This injunction had been obeyed until the vaccination day at school.

It is alleged by Farquhar that his son was chased around the school building told to bare his arm. The boy protested and finally ran home.

Mrs. Farquhar soon after appeared at the school. She inquired for her daughter Flossie, about 15 years, and while she was waiting, the little girl appeared crying. She told her mother she had just been vaccinated. Other women appeared at the schoolhouse the same day to protest against their children being vaccinated.

* * * * *

Dr. Hayford of this town, who has been one of the most enthusiastic supporters of vaccination, says that the Farquhar children should never have been vaccinated, owing to the affection with which the family suffered. The little girl, Flossie, has been sick three weeks from the effects of the vaccination, and is not yet able to attend school. She should never have been vaccinated, says Dr. Hayford, and the family say if they had known vaccination was intended at the school would never have allowed it.

Chairman Gay of Board of Health says by its vote Dr. Dion and Dr. Ash were authorized and empowered to vaccinate the children of the Willard school. Dr. Dion himself is a member of the School board and secretary of the board of health.

As I recall the action of the board we were authorized to vaccinate the children of the Willard school. Dr. Ash and myself simply appeared at each school room, asked the teacher to tell the scholars that those who had not been vaccinated for a certain number of years, were to be vaccinated, those who had been vaccinated to remain in one part of the room, and those who had not, to form in line in another part.

The children formed in line, and the teacher prepared every arm before there was vaccination. Some cried, some told us their fathers did not want them to be vaccinated, and of course these we did not vaccinate. Why of course to have vaccinated them against their will, would render ourselves liable for assault.

Those who refused, we let go. I am very sure no one was forced. I vaccinated some over 100, and Dr. Ash about 300, so you see I did not have a monopoly of it.

When the 8th grade came up, Dr. Ash asked me what should be done with those who did not want to be vaccinated, and I told him then and there "Why let them go, of course."

Dr. Dion gave a history of the small pox outbreak in this city, and said he had been asked by the board of health to take charge of the cases, from the first appearance last June. When Mayor Bryant came in, the smallpox cases were turned over to the city physician, and Dr. Dion said that it was found by examination of the statutes that this could be done and this is how it came to pass.

* * *

"When I became secretary to the board of health it did not mean I was going to give up my private practice." His political opponents declared he charged $15 for a visit for the cases of smallpox of last summer. Dr. Dion admits he did, but says that no settlement of the state with the city has been made as yet.

The Willard school was the last school to be visited by the board of health, and Dr. Dion admits no notification was given the parents that the children were to be vaccinated or that the pupils were told to tell their parents first about it.

The procedure at the other schools were different, and this is what has stirred up matters in the city. At the Wollaston school, the pupils were told to notify their parents that the school children were to be vaccinated, so that if their parents objected the children might be kept at home until the smallpox was over. Citizens say this course should have been followed with the Willard school.

Dr. Dion when shown the report by Ledger representative, said it was true in part, but there should have been no reference to politics. He was sure there was no compulsory vaccination at the Willard school. All children who had been vaccinated within two years were excused, and all others who raised any objections were allowed to go home. In caring for the smallpox cases the board of 1901 had simply followed the precedent of preceding boards. Recently, it was discovered that the City Ordinance relative to the duties of the City Physician provided in Section 2:

"The City Physician shall attend under the direction of the Overseer of the Poor, upon all sick paupers, whether state or city, upon all sick persons under the care of the City authorities aat the Almshouse or elsewhere in the city, and at the request of the Chief of Police upon all prisoners or other persons confined in the city lock-up who require medical or surgical treatment. He shall vaccinate scholars in the public schools sent to him for that purpose by the School Committee, or Superintendent of Schools, and give them a certificate thereof."

When the above section was interpreted to apply to smallpox cases the Board of Health at the request of Mayor Bryant transferred the cases to the City Physician.

Dr. Dion did not understand that this interpretation of the law was any criticism of his board.

The Ledger has also interviewed Supt. Parlin who says he was present during most of the vaccination. He says no compulsion was used either by Dr. Dion or Dr. Ash. Further no guard was placed at the school room doors there was no protest by the principal of the school and no pupils were chased about the school room. Where any objection was raised by the pupils they were not vaccinated but sent home.

William E. Badger of the Board of Health denies that there was any compulsion in the vaccination of pupils at either the Wollaston or the Willard school. The story that the Farquahar boy was chased about the building he says is pure fabrication. The fact of the matter, said Mr. Badger, is that at the Wollaston school from thirty to forty children were sent home to get their parents consent to vaccination, and at the Willard school over fifty.

THE BOY'S STORY.

The Farquhar boy's story of the vaccination affair, as told a representative of the Ledger, is as follows: I go to school in the room in the attic of the Willard school. The day of the vaccination, Dr. Ash came into the room to vaccinate the dhildren. I told him that my father did not want me to be vaccinated. Dr. Ash said all right but you will have to see Dr. Dion. I went down stairs and saw Dr. Dion. I told him my father did not want me vaccinated. He said, "Everybody must be vaccinated today, so take off your coat." I said, "No, I will not be vaccinated," and ran out of the room, and Dr. Dion started after me but did not come far. I ran up stairs and got my hat, and started to go home. When I got down stairs, I found the doors guarded, so I went into one of the rooms and jumped out of the window and ran home.

Mrs. Farquhar added, when my son came home I went to the school after my daughter. I found her coming out of the room crying, having been vaccinated. The little girl says she told Dr. Ash that she did not want to be vacinated, but he did it.

Mr. Farquhar, the father of children, says that he is not opposed to vaccination; but owing to past experience with it among his children he did not consider it safe to have them vaccinated, and then the family physician said they should not be, and he had been given a certificate for them to that effect.

The little girl has had quite a hard time with her arm, and is still confined to her home. She has been under a physician's care, and what Mr. Farquhar would like to know is, who is going to pay the doctor's bills which the vaccination has caused?

The physician who is attending the little girl was present this morning at the above interviews, and said that owing to scrofula which the children had, it would be unwise to vaccinate them.

Stolen Property.

A man who gave his name as Timothy Callahan was arrested in Winchester on Thursday for Fall River officers, by whom he was wanted for breaking and entering. When arrested Callanan confessed to numerous breaks in the vicinity of Fall River, and said that he gained entrance by means of false keys.

In his confession he said thst some of the property stolen he had left with friends in Quincy. Thursday afternoon the Fall River officers came to Quincy, and accompanied by Quincy officers visited the place designated by Callahan. Their visit proved a fruitful one, for they recovered property valued at over $225. This included four gold watches, one silver watch, five gold rings, one diamond ring and seven gold chains.

Cartridge Exploded in Sewer Trench.

Two Employes the Victims.

Now at City Hospital with Numerous Wounds.

There was a frightful accident this morning at sewer trench, Adams street near the residence of Hon. William B. Rice, caused by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge, as a result of which two men are now at the City Hospital and will probably die.

The two injured men are Owen Murphy of Roxbury and James Mooney or Rooney. The latter has been at work on the sewer but a few days, and his residence is unknown.

At the point where the men were at work there is a ledge, and the men were at work with picks on some of the rock that had been loosened by a blast. The pick of one of the men struck an unexploded cartridge and in an instant there was a deafening explosion, and the two men were blown some distance.

They were both badly cut and bruised and were removed to the City Hospital. Here they were attended by the physicians who found the men's injuries to be almost without number, consisting of fractured skulls, broken arms and legs and internal injuries.

But slight hopes were entertained for their recovery, and Rev. John J. Powers of West Quincy was summoned to administer the last rites of the church.

One of the foremen on the sewer, Mr. Ball, was struck by a flying rock a small piece of which was imbeded in his head. He did not go to the hospital but visited Dr. Hayford's office, where the piece of rock was removed, after which he returned to work.

As there were a number of other men working in the immediate vicinity it is a wonder that more were not injured by the shower of rocks that followed the explosion.

It is understood that this section of the sewer is being built by the National Construction Co. of New York.

Children's Carnival.

Hancock hall was crowded Thursday evening at the children's fair and carnival by pupils of Prof. Kaplan. Although raised seats were constructed to accommodate the spectators they were entirely inadequate, but they seriously encroached on the space for the dancers as it was.

The grand march was led by Master Russell Lord and Miss Ruth Dole, and contained many manoeuvers new to Quincy. Two in the march were particularly notable, Joseph and Bessie Badger of Brockton who were appropriately termed "the midget." Joseph was but 22 months old, his mother said. At the close of the march, the professor took him to the centre of the floor and together they executed in good time many steps.

Interspersed among the dances by the class were fancy solo step, and stage dances, many of them by the youngest pupils including: Jump-rope dance Miss Bessie Powers; hoop dance, Miss Marion Mitchell; cake walk, Miss Florence and Master Bert Barker: Miss Mildred Smith and the three Badger tots of Brockton; two-step, Miss Bessie Powers, Miss Mabel McCluskey, Miss Ida Woods, Miss Morrison, Miss Marion Mitchell, Miss Ruth Dole, Miss Josie French, Miss Stasia Harkins, Miss Mary Manning; Irish washerwoman dance, Miss Ida Woods; buck and wing and tambourine dance, Miss Mabel McCluskey; sailors' hornpipe, Misses Ida Woods and Mabel McCluskey, Master Russell Lord, Master D. Harry Glover and others.

At the close of the children's specialties, Miss L. Gertrude Crane gave a skirt and butterfly dance in a most graceful manner and as an encore gave with Prof. Kaplan, an exhibition of the famous flirtation dance.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. E. F. Mitchell Mrs. W. Hart, Mrs. A. Merritt, Mrs. Maurice Powers, Mrs. John McCluskey, Mrs. Charles French, Mrs. George Weston, Mrs. John Laurie and Mrs. F. H. Lord.

On the War Path.

Dola Martell, whose name is a familiar one to the Quincy police, got on the war path again Thursday night and proceeded to smash up the furnishings of the resturant on Temple street according to the most approved plan. His wife objected and it is alleged that Dola then assaulted her. The police were notified and Capt. Hanson responded. Martell put up a stubborn fight, and parties who attempted to assist the officer received some blows. Officer Bradley put in an appearance about this time and Martell was landed at the police station. Here Martell put up another fight, but he was landed behind the bars.

Martell is a little fellow, but when under the influence of liquor he is rather savage, and the police have frequently been called upon to quell family disturbances.

It was early this week that he was in court for disturbing the peace, and was placed on probation until February 6. He was arraigned in court upon two complaints, one for assault on his wife and the other for drunkenness. The first case was placed on probation and he was fined $15 upon the complaint for drunkenness.

Short Talk on Sleep and Rest.

The humblest workman in England owns a better and more comfortable bed than the average well-to-do American. He expects to pay between 10 and 12 pounds sterling for his bed, because he knows he cannot get what he wants at a lesser price.

Over 99 per cent of the American population have never enjoyed the comfort of high grade bedding. We refer to Royal Upholstered Springs and Imperial Mattresses.

These Springs cost from $12.00 to $25.00.
These Mattresses cost from $25.00 to $35.00.

The price seems high, but no money you can invest in all the world will bring you such comfort, rest and sleep, as money spent in this class of bedding.

It will please us to show it to you.

BROCKTON'S HOBBY.

Two Million per Mile for the Ship Canal.

And That the Estimated Cost.

Report of Harbor and Land Commissioners.

Quincy people have not enthused much over a ship canal to Taunton via Brockton, and now that the estimated cost is reported their good judgment is apparent. The Harbor and Land Commissioners reported on Thursday to the Legislature the estimated cost.

The commissioners find that the total length of the proposed canal upon which the estimates were made from end to end of the approaches of the tidal locks is 31.79 miles, of which 7.24 miles are on curves, varying in their radius from 5,000 to 10,000 feet, and 2.22 miles of shorter radii, none, however, of less than 2,000 feet. In fixing the line due regard was paid to economical construction. This length, it must be understood, is simply between the two rivers. The length of the navigable waters of Fore River to Weymouth harbor and Taunton River to Narragansett Bay must be added.

Chapter 104 of the Resolves of 1901 directed the board to make surveys and estimates as to the probable cost of constructing a ship canal from Narragansett Bay through Taunton, Brockton and Weymouth to Boston Harbor, by Weymouth Fore River and to report thereon to the General Court, now sitting.

The depth and width of the proposed canal were apparently left to the judgment of the board. A uniform depth of 25 feet and a width of 130 feet on the bottom, with side slopes of one in two in earth and 180 feet with vertical sides where rock was encountered, have been fixed for the dimensions of the trunk of the canal.

Provision is made for 14 locks, six between Boston harbor and the summit level, and eight between there and the dam in Taunton river, with lifts varying from seven to 25 feet. On the basis of 20 lockages a day, 33,000,000 cubic feet of water will be required for the daily operation of the locks.

A careful examination of the water supply and of the different methods of providing the necessary amount of water led to the adoption of a pumping system as being the most advisable. The water surface of the summit level lies between Brockton and Randolph. The summit level is 16,000 feet long at an elevation of 130 feet.

Two masonry dams are planned at the two ends of the canal across Taunton river and Weymouth Fore river respectively, opposite the tidal locks to maintain the water in the rivers at high tide level.

The proposed line of the canal crosses the railroad at 11 places; it is proposed to avoid five of these by diverting the location of the track, and two of the others are drawbridges at the present time. It also crosses 46 highways, of which a number are avoided by a rearrangement in such a manner that the distance to be traversed will not be materially increased.

Twenty drawbridges will cross the canal in most of which a clear width of 100 feet is provided for the passage of vessels.

Wherever the water level of the canal rises above the adjacent country, the side embankments are planned with puddle walls of clay, but where it runs through earth a protection of broken stone extending from five feet above to five feet below the water level, will be provided. Turning basins are proposed at Taunton, Brockton and Holbrook, approximately 600 feet square.

The engineer's report, which accompanies this report of the commission, contains some 40 pages of purely technical details.

The intersecting point is at Brockton, where the lift by the pneumatic locks is estimated at 100 feet vertically. The 130 feet height is above the datum plane means low water.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

SOME GOOD GOWNS.

Velvet Costumes—Tuxedo Blouses and Homespun Hackabouts.

Much may be done with the velvets, now so reasonable in price and so modish, in the way of remodeling as well as for the trimming of new gowns and the making up of short jackets, as Vogue suggests in smart fashions for those of limited income. Some of these fashions, together with a cut, are here given.

Nothing proves more becoming or better answers all purposes of dress than a black velvet Eton, or coatee, and at the same time it requires less expensive trimming. It would not be an expensive thing at present prices of velvet to buy enough for a skirt at the same time. Nothing looks worse than a cheap velvet of any color, so that this praise given is not for that sort, be it understood. As the combination of black velvet, taffeta and black cloth also is smartly worn, there are many who can further economize either by using what they have of silk or cloth and so lessen the yards of velvet required or purchase one or the other.

A velvet blouse is most convenient to wear and as youthful a suggestion to wear with separate cloth or silk skirts as can be given. But care should be taken to have it well interlined, both sleeves and bodice, and to furnish it with a fur collar of good width and have it long enough to enter the belt, assisting toward the long front line so modish. Its sleeves would be becoming if rather full, then drawn into a fur cuff lined with velvet, as then in cold weather this cuff may turn over the gloved hand, and when desired it turns back a fur cuff matching the collar. To complete this afternoon visiting or walking toilet a muff must be considered also. If you are using one of last season's, untrimmed with tails, by all means smarten it up by adding them and do the same to the collarette in this way: Trim the outside edges of the collar, where the inside seams of the sleeves enter the arm rings, with a pair sewed together so as to hang easily. If there are short fur tabs added below the belt in front, trim them also with tails.

One of the new models of blouses, practical and simple, is dubbed the Tuxedo, and it bears unmistakably a close representation in its front revers to a man's Tuxedo coat. They are to be found in cloth and in heavy silk, with satin revers in all black. They have that severe tailor line, which some women prefer and affect, but are not so well suited to the fragile, more feminine type, who are at their best in soft pannes, cloths or flannels.

Homespuns of the best quality make up exceedingly well for serviceable street wear. In steel grays, warmed up by tints of blue and orange in the underweaving, they are smart, or crimson and black. Among the numerous trimming braids one is sure to find something harmonizing with them, and braids are so very much used that there is the satisfaction, when so trimmed, that one has chosen the correct thing. When these braids are over an inch wide, they have tab effects given to them by pointing the end which does not join another braid. In fact, that old style of joining is the thing to avoid.

These homespuns look best when they have a second piece, so that a suit is formed. A Russian coat is the smartest winter model. No trimming is needed for the bottom of the basque. It gives the figure more height when there is no line of separation from the skirt.

Things That Are Told.

A diet of nothing but celery is said by some physicians to be a cure for both rheumatism and neuralgia. Free use of this vegetable is always recommended to rheumatic patients.

Baked potatoes are digested more easily than boiled potatoes and should therefore be preferred by dyspeptics.

In cases of anæmia cabbages and spinach are distinctly beneficial. Spinach is also almost as valuable as lithia water in its effect on the kidneys.

Beets and turnips keep the blood pure and improve the appetite.

Tomatoes are thought in India to be a preventive of cholera. Like endive and water cresses, they stimulate the healthy action of the liver.

Onions are an admirable cure for sleeplessness and indigestion everywhere.

Too much meat and too few vegetables make up the average diet. Health depends on continuous variety.

THE TWO LOOM SYSTEM

Weavers to Be Instructed as to Textile Union's Plan of Campaign

Providence, Jan. 24.—At a meeting of the executive board of the Textile union at Olneyville last night, committees were appointed to go to Lawrence, Lowell, Fitchburg and Maynard, Mass., and Dover, N. H., to bring about a general understanding among the operatives in the American Woolen company's mills located in those places regarding the strike against the two loom system and the plan of campaign which has been devised. It was further decided that with the beginning of next week the committees will be further increased and representatives will visit mill centres at Clinton, Leominster, Rockville and other places where independent mills not affiliated with the company are located for the purpose of informing operatives there of the necessity of assistance to prevent competition between these independent mills and the American Woolen company forcing upon the former the double loom system, also to arrange for employment of the striking weavers in the other mills.

Weak Case of Defense

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 24.—Strong testimony was introduced yesterday to controvert the alibi set up by the defense in the Goebel murder trial. Howard's story as to his whereabouts on the day of the shooting was contradicted in several particulars. The attempt of the defense to fasten the shooting on Henry Youtsey and Dr. W. R. Johnson was given a severe blow. Several witnesses testified that Dr. Johnson was at his home in Jackson county on the day of the shooting and for some days previous thereto.

And It Hasn't Ended Yet

London, Jan. 24.—It is rumored in the lobbies of the house of commons that last June a Boer delegate from acting President Schalk-Burger saw Lord Rosebery and submitted peace proposals to him. Lord Rosebery acquainted Lord Salisbury with this fact but the cabinet declined to consider the matter, on the ground that the war was coming to an end with the unconditional surrender of the Boers.

A White House Reception

Washington, Jan. 24.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt's reception in honor of congress took place at the White House last night. There was a large attendance. The United States Army Engineer band and the Marine band played a number of popular airs. The floral decorations were on the usual elaborate scale and very attractive.

Railroad Strike Threatened

Chihuahua, Mex., Jan. 24.—A strike of freight conductors and brakemen on the Mexican Central between El Paso and Agus Calientes is imminent. The trouble is over a reduction in wages which became effective the first of the year. The Mexican Central officials have refused to accede to demands for the old rate.

Hohenzollern Heads Eastward

Gibraltar, Jan. 24.—The imperial German yacht Hohenzollern arrived here yesterday. Admiral Count Von Bandizzin, her commander, lauded. He was saluted by a land battery, visited the governor and later re-embarked and the Hohenzollern proceeded on her journey to New York.

Creeks to Hold Powwow

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 24.—Crazy Snake, by his chief lieutenant, Micco, has issued a proclamation to all Creek citizens commanding them to meet at Hickory Grounds Square on Feb. 1, where and when it is proposed to hold council under the articles of the treaty of 1832.

Denial From Widener

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—P. A. B. Widener denies that the Widener-Elkin syndicate intends to purchase the Everett-Moore street railway interests in Cleveland and northern Ohio. Mr. Newcomb of the Cleveland Electric company had said that negotiations with the Widener-Elkins syndicate were pending.

Opposed to Tariff Tinkering

Waterloo, Ia., Jan. 24.—In a letter received here yesterday Speaker Henderson puts himself on record as against any revision of the tariff by the present congress. The letter is a response to a petition signed by Republican business men of Waterloo and Cedar Falls.

MY LADY BOUNTIFUL

WOMEN DONATE MILLIONS TO WORK OF PHILANTHROPY.

First Year of the Century Notable by Reason of Rich Bequests to Education and Charity—Wealth Lavishly Scattered.

The first year of the twentieth century was marked by bountiful giving by America's rich women. Contributions to the cause of education, charity and religion have been so generous that the aggregate sum is astounding.

A woman's sympathies are easily touched by suffering and sorrow, and she is susceptible to religious influence. Consequently these objects are more likely to appeal to her as worthy of aid than educational institutions. Hospitals, missions, etc., have in the past been the recipients of woman's generosity, while men have given more attention to founding schools and libraries. The past few years, however, have witnessed a tendency in women to help educational movements, and this cause has in several notable instances been richly endowed.

Only a few weeks ago the world was amazed to learn that Mrs. Jane L. Stanford, widow of the late Leland Stanford, had transferred $30,000,000 worth of stocks, bonds and real estate to the great university founded as a memorial to her son, Leland Stanford, Jr.

This is the execution of plans made by Mr. and Mrs. Stanford several years ago, before the death of the husband, but even if this gift is excluded from the list the records show that women have given something like $18,000,000 during the year. This of itself is a magnificent figure, and with the Stanford gift added it reaches $48,000,000, a golden legacy well calculated to dazzle the eyes of the world.

Mrs. Stanford's gift is believed to be the largest ever made by man or woman for the benefit of a college, being considerably more than twice as large as the munificent contributions of John D. Rockefeller to the University of Chicago.

Another California woman, Mrs. Phebe A. Hearst, has been a generous giver to the University of California, a state institution. It is said that she is carrying out plans that involve an ultimate expenditure of about $4,000,000 for the benefit of this college, for which she has already done much. One of her first donations was $300,000 for a mining building as a memorial to her husband.

Besides this work Mrs. Hearst bestows her wealth on many other worthy objects. She is supporting eight perpetual scholarships for girls at the State University of California. Kindergarten work also deeply interests her, and at times she supports as many as eighteen such schools, some in Washington and some in San Francisco. The Phebe Hearst School For Girls, an Episcopal institution founded at Washington, was the recipient of bounty in the sum of $200,000.

In connection with the subject of woman's giving the name of Miss Helen Gould stands prominently forth. For many years she has devoted her time and wealth to doing good. Her beneficence is directed more toward the relief of suffering and in religious work than along educational lines. She is supporting several charitable works and is a generous giver to various Young Men's Christian associations.

Among the largest gifts of the year was the donation of $1,000,000 made jointly by Mrs. P. D. Armour and J. Ogden Armour to the Armour institute. Mrs. Emmons Blaine has also won an enviable place as a contributor to charity and the cause of education. Altogether it is estimated that of the $15,000,000 given to schools during the first half of last year $6,000,000 came from women.

Charitable and religious objects have been enriched during the past by gifts from women aggregating about $10,000,000, and about $1,000,000 has been given to libraries. While it is impossible to give in detail the list of minor gifts or even to approximate them, it is evident that woman has played a noble part in the benefactions of the first year of the new century.

The Main Consideration.

"Do you think Bacon wrote Shakespeare's plays?" asked the theorist.

"I don't care who wrote 'em," answered the manager a little shortly, "so long as he isn't putting in any claims for royalties."—Washington Star.

A FUTURE ICE AGE.

Sir Robert Ball Declares There Will Be Another Glacial Period.

Not another person could have been crowded into the large lecture room of Schermerhorn hall at Columbia university the other afternoon, where Sir Robert S. Ball, fellow of the Royal Society of England, the famous Irish astronomer, spoke on "The Cause of the Ice Age."

He vividly portrayed the results, worse than flood or famine, which must inevitably occur when the glacial period sets in, says the New York Journal. Sir Robert began by showing stereopticon views of the present day evidences of the "ice age."

"Once," he said, "the whole northern hemisphere was covered with ice as Greenland is today. This was during the glacial period. When this age sets in again, Greenland will be covered with vegetation, the northern hemisphere with a frozen expanse. The cause of this astronomical phenomenon is not lack of the sun's heat, but by the mutual actions of the planets Jupiter, Venus and the earth during one peculiar configuration.

"When this configuration of the planets occurs, it tends to change the earth's orbit from a circle to an ellipse, and when the earth itself is at a point of the orbit which connotes midwinter you have an ice age, which is worse than famine, flood and pestilence and which lasts for hundreds of thousands of years."

Laughingly the famous astronomer warned his audience that such a state may occur again, as science has shown that it has occurred before, although thousands of years ago. In concluding Sir Robert said that the few days he had spent in America would be the most cherished of his life. The students gave him the college yell, to which he bowed in recognition.

HARVARD'S LATEST MOVE.

Will Establish an Information Bureau For the Benefit of Visitors.

One of the features of the beautiful new fence which a number of the older classes have united to erect around the Harvard yard is a small lodge which is intended to be used as headquarters for a kind of "information bureau," mainly for the benefit of the increasing number of visitors who come to Cambridge every year with the idea, as the college joke has it, of "going through Harvard" in a day's sightseeing. The university has recently established also a system of undergraduate guides, the guides of former years—many of them more or less irresponsible "hangers on"—having disseminated so much misinformation among their victims that for the protection of every one concerned some step of this kind had to be taken.

The new lodge was built by the class of 1877, of which Governor William E. Russell was a member. It is at the nearest entrance to the car line from Boston and is therefore in the best possible location to serve as a center of information. The official in charge will be surrounded with printed matter concerning the various departments of the university and will thus be in a position to answer practically every possible question about the college, from the present residence of a newly arrived freshman to the past history of the oldest and most historic of the Harvard buildings. The lodge will also probably be equipped with a telephone, which will be at the service of the students during any hour of the day or night.

DEFIANT FILIPINOS.

General Funston Says They Won't Be Subdued In This Generation.

In conversation with a friend the other day at San Francisco as to the conditions of the islands Brigadier General Funston, according to the New York Journal, said:

"The situation in the Philippines is a knotty problem. Personally I do not think in the present generation it will be possible to bring the natives under the absolute control of a civil government.

"For the next two or three years I think it will be necessary to maintain a military force of 40,000 men in the Philippines to keep the insurrection down. After that, if there are no signs of trouble, I think that a force of 10,000 men will be enough to maintain order.

"The Filipinos as a rule do not bitterly hate the American people. They are, however, certainly not very fond of us. Nearly all of the educated Filipinos, the professional men and wealthy landowners, are agitators and schemers of the worst sort.

"They would not hesitate to embroil the Philippines with the United States for almost an indefinite period if by so doing they could gain their ends and secure the independence of the islands, thereby getting control of the various departments of the government, especially the finances, in order to give themselves an opportunity to steal."

To Prevent Railway Accidents.

An automatic railway accident preventer, invented by an electrician named Rudolph Bartelmus of Vienna, has been tested by a body of expert railway managers with satisfactory results, says the New York World. The main idea is to put the engineer in direct communication with all the signal boxes by electrical apparatus on the engine, contact being effected by a third rail. The signalman can thus make a red light burn on the locomotive in front of the engineer, while an electrical bell will ring until the engineer switches it off. On the other hand, the contrivance causes a bell to ring in the signal box as soon as the train is within 3,000 yards. Finally, if one train approaches another on the same rail within 3,000 yards, red lights burn automatically on the locomotive.

By... Emile Gaboriau

Although he had very slightly examined Prosper, the judge was now scrupulously attentive and particular in having every question answered.

"Did you ever suspect your cashier of being dishonest?" he asked.

"Certainly not. Yet there were a thousand reasons which should have made me distrustful."

"What reasons?"

"M. Bertomy gambled. I have known of his spending whole nights at the gaming table and losing immense sums of money. He was intimate with a bad set. Once he was mixed up with one of my clients, M. de Clameran, in a scandalous gambling affair."

"You must confess, monsieur," interrupted the judge, "that you were very imprudent, not to say culpable, to have intrusted your safe to such a man."

"Ah, monsieur, Prosper was not always thus. Until the past year he was a model of goodness. He was received into my house as one of my family. He spent all of his evenings with us and was the bosom friend of my eldest son, Lucien. Then suddenly he left us and never came to the house again. Yet I had every reason to believe him attached to my niece Madeleine."

"Then you can see no motive for your cashier's conduct?"

The banker paused to reflect.

"It is impossible for me to account for it. I have, however, always supposed that Prosper was led astray by a young man whom he met at my house about this time, M. Raoul de Lagors."

"Ah! And who is this young man?"

"A relative of my wife, a charming fellow, but somewhat wild, though rich enough to pay his way."

The judge listened attentively to this, then wrote the name Lagors at the bottom of an already long list of his memoranda.

"Now," he said, "we are coming to the point. You are sure that the robbery was not committed by any in your house?"

"Quite sure, monsieur."

"You always kept your key?"

"Usually I carried it about on my person, and whenever I left it at home I put it in the secretary drawer in my bed chamber."

"Where was it the evening of the robbery?"

"In my secretary."

"But then"—

"Pardon me for interrupting you," said M. Fauvel, "and permit me to tell you that to a safe like mine the key is of no importance. In the first place, one must know the word upon which the five movable buttons turn. With the word one can open it without the key, but without the word"—

"And this word you never told to any one?"

"To no one in the world, monsieur, and sometimes I would have been puzzled to know myself with what word the safe had been shut."

"Had you forgotten it on the day of the theft?"

"No; the word had been changed the day before, and its peculiarity struck me."

"What was it?"

"Gipsy—G-i-p-s-y," said the banker, spelling the name.

M. Patrigent wrote down the name.

"One more question, monsieur. Were you at home the evening before the robbery?"

"No; I dined and spent the evening with a friend. When I returned home about 1 o'clock, my wife was in bed, and I went to bed immediately."

"And you were ignorant of what sum there was in the safe?"

"Absolutely. After my positive orders I could only suppose that a small sum had been left there over night. I stated this fact to the commissary in M. Bertomy's presence, and he acknowledged it to be the case."

"That will do, monsieur."

M. Patrigent was well informed of the high standing of the banker and knew almost as much of his affairs as did M. Fauvel himself.

He asked him to sign his testimony and then escorted him to the door of his office, a rare favor on his part.

Five o'clock struck before the list of witnesses summoned for the day was exhausted, but the task of M. Patrigent was not yet finished. He rang for his bailiff, who instantly appeared, and said to him:

"Go at once and bring Fanferlot here."

It was some time before the detective answered the summons. Having met a colleague on the gallery, he thought it his duty to treat him to a drink, and the bailiff had found it necessary to bring him from the little inn at the corner.

"How is it that you keep people waiting?" said the judge.

Fanferlot bowed almost to the floor. Despite his smiling face, he was very uneasy. To follow the Bertomy case alone it required a double play that might be discovered at any moment. To manage at once the cause of justice and his own ambition he took great risks, the least of which was the losing his place.

"I have had a great deal to do," he said to excuse himself, "and have not lost any time."

And he began to give a detailed account of his movements. He was embarrassed, for he spoke with all sorts of restrictions, picking out what was to be said and avoiding what was to be left unsaid. Thus he gave the history of Cavaillon's letter, which he handed to the judge, but he did not breathe a word of Madeleine. On the other hand, he gave biographical details, very minute indeed, of Prosper and Mme. Gipsy, which he had collected from various quarters. As he heard the story M. Patrigent's convictions were strengthened.

"The young man is evidently guilty," he said.

Fanferlot did not reply. His opinion was different, but he was delighted that the judge was on the wrong track, thinking that his own glory would thereby be the greater when he discovered the real culprit. The fact was that this grand discovery was as far off as it had ever been.

After hearing all he had to tell, the judge dismissed Fanferlot, telling him to return in the morning.

"Above all," he said as Fanferlot left the room, "do not lose sight of the girl Gipsy. She must know where the money is and can put us on the track."

Fanferlot smiled knowingly.

"You may rest easy about that, monsieur. The lady is in good hands."

Left to himself, although the evening was far advanced, M. Patrigent continued to busy himself with the case and to arrange that the rest of the depositions should be made. This case had actually taken possession of his mind. It was at the same time puzzling and attractive. It seemed to be surrounded by a cloud of mystery, which he determined to penetrate.

The next morning he was in his office much earlier than usual. On this day he examined Mme. Gipsy, called Cavaillon and sent again for M. Fauvel. For several days he displayed the same activity. Of all the witnesses subpœnaed only two failed to appear. The first was the office boy sent by Prosper to bring the money from the bank. He was ill from a fall. The second was M. Raoul de Lagors. But their absence did not prevent the file of papers relating to Prosper's case from growing, and on the ensuing Monday, five days after the robbery, M. Patrigent thought he held in his hands enough moral proof to crush the accused.

IN BEHALF OF SCHLEY

Mason's Plea to Senate Was Not Successful

HALE AND HANNA CLASH

Agree That They Disagree on the Question of Foreign Commerce—Teller Talks of Scheepers Case and Twists the Lion's Tail

Washington, Jan. 24.—An effort was made in the senate yesterday by Mr. Mason of Illinois to obtain consideration of a joint resolution which he introduced extending the thanks of congress to Rear Admiral Schley "for his brave and able conduct while in command of the American fleet at the victorious battle of Santiago." The effort was not successful.

Mr. Mason's resolution provided that besides the thanks of congress, Admiral Schley should be presented a sword; that bronze medals commemorative of the battle of Santiago should be distributed among the officers and men "under the command of Schley during said battle," and that $10,000 should be appropriated to meet the expenses of the acts stated in the resolution. On motion of Mr. Hale the resolution was referred to the committee on naval affairs.

The resolution which was introduced by Mr. Teller of Colorado providing for intervention by this government in behalf of the Boer commandant, Scheepers, who was sentenced to death by the British South African authorities, was postponed indefinitely because Scheepers has already been executed. Mr. Teller made a brief and caustic speech on the actions of Great Britain in the Boer war and declared that if the facts of this case were as he understood them, "Great Britain, in putting Scheepers to death, is guilty of a vile assassination."

In the discussion of the question whether the department of labor should be included in the proposed department of commerce, Mr. Hanna denied the statement made in several quarters that the labor interests would object to such inclusion. Mr. Hale wanted to know whether, if Mr. Hanna was going to sweep every now independent bureau into the new department, why he would not put the interstate commerce commission into the same place. Mr. Hanna responded that he was willing to vote for that if any senator should move to make the change.

"Very well," said Mr. Hale, "I am preparing a bill to that end."

"Put it into the department of commerce by all means," responded Mr. Hanna, promptly. "But what we are discussing is the question whether the department of labor shall go under commerce. I assert that it would not hurt the labor cause in any way. Change the name of the department to the 'department of labor,' if you choose, and group under it all these bureaus you have proposed putting into the department of commerce, and you will get the approval of every labor organization in the United States. It is a mere question of names and of the sentimental associations with such names. Just give the working people a sufficient assurance that the labor question and labor statistics will be looked after under the new department as they were while under an independent bureau, and there will be no serious objection to it on the part of the labor leaders."

Mr. Hanna then branched out into an argument for an increase in our commercial facilities so as to work up foreign markets for surplus products—a stroke in favor of his ship subsidy bill.

This brought Mr. Hale to his feet again. "Does not the senator know," asked Mr. Hale, "that we have already increased our shipping enormously and captured the markets of Europe, through an agency of the Dingley tariff bill?"

"No, sir, I do not," answered Mr. Hanna.

"Then the senator and I differ greatly," said Mr. Hale.

"We do," snapped Mr. Hanna, emphatically.

Mr. Hale remarked that our chief future commercial activity must be in the Orient, and he gave notice that he should later have some remarks to make on this head. Mr. Hanna said that he should watch with great interest for Mr. Hale's speech.

The consideration of the urgent deficiency bill, which has been under debate in the house since Monday, was completed yesterday, but owing to the lateness of the hour passage of the bill was postponed until today. A successful effort was made to increase the pay of rural free delivery carriers from $500 to $600 per annum, the vote being 109 to 78.

A Settlement With China

Washington, Jan. 24.—Secretary Hay handed Minister Wu a draft on the United States treasury for $376,000 yesterday, this being the value of the silver bullion captured by the American marines at Tien Tsin.

THUNDERER'S COMMENT

On Disavowals of Attempted Pressure on the United States

London, Jan. 24.—The Times says in an editorial that the eagerness of the semi-official press of the continent to discredit Lord Cranborne's statement seems likely to defeat itself.

The Americans, says The Times, with their usual good sense, are not disposed to bear a permanent grudge against the governments and the peoples who misjudged the situation and espoused the losing cause in the Spanish-American war. They are quite ready to be friends, but they know the facts and do not care to be taken for fools.

There is only one way in which the statement of Lord Cranborne can be impugned. That is by the production of the official correspondence. M. Hanotaux, ex-French minister of foreign affairs, is said to be anxious for this course, and Great Britain would be equally ready to publish the correspondence, but cannot do so without the sanction of the other powers concerned. Consequently Lord Cranborne was not able to promise the documents on this subject.

We do not pretend that England was actuated wholly by sentiment, says the editorial. Our interests were on the side of America and we had sagacity enough to understand that this was the case. At the same time, sentiment entered largely into our motives. We were honestly glad to do the United States a service at a critical time. They have already recognized that, and will recognize it still more when the details of the negotiations come to be known.

Big Swindling Scheme Alleged

Chicago, Jan. 24.—A conspiracy by which the steel trust was to have been defrauded out of 200,000 tons of steel is charged against Charles J. Francois, who was arrested here for alleged failure to pay a hotel bill. The steel was to be used, Francios is alleged to have said, by the French government. Francois had what he said were credentials from the French army. The French consul in Chicago has declared that the seals borne by these letters are not genuine.

Would Accept a Pension

Indianapolis, Jan. 24.—Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, when asked at her home here last night whether she had requested that the bill to secure a pension for her should be presented to congress, said: "No, I have made no such request at any time. I have supposed that congress would accord the same recognition of ex-President Harrison's services by granting to his widow a pension as have been granted to those of other presidents.

He Died a Bishop

Sioux City, Ia., Jan. 24.—The late Rt. Rev. Thomas M. Lenihan, bishop of Cheyenne, was the first bishop of the diocese of Sioux City. It is now known that the bulletin announcing his appointment had been sent from Rome and arrived in this country after his death at Marshalltown on Dec. 15. This will necessitate the sending of three new names for the bishopric.

Spanish War Veterans' Request

Washington, Jan. 24.—A delegation of Spanish war veterans called on the president and urged giving Spanish war veterans preference over civilians in appointments to positions in the government civil service. The president said that he recognized that there was merit in the request and he would do what he could to carry their views into practical operation.

Harvard Debaters Won

Providence, Jan. 24.—Brown and Harvard universities met in debate last evening and the judges decided that the Cambridge men had the better of the argument. The question for discussion was: "Resolved, That the war in South Africa should receive the full support of parliament and the people." Brown had the affirmative and Harvard the negative.

Was Once a Millionaire

Douglas, Wyo., Jan. 24.—The body of W. C. Johnson was found in the city waterworks reservoir here yesterday. It is believed that he committed suicide while temporarily insane. Johnson formerly lived in Florida, where he owned immense phosphate mines, and was at one time worth several million dollars.

Death Followed Chill

Ellsworth, Me., Jan. 24.—Thomas Gaddis, a submarine diver, who has been at work for the government at the East Lamoine coaling station, had been ill for several days and went to work too soon. He took a chill after going into the water yesterday and in a few hours was dead. He belonged in Boston.

Against Its Own Abolition

Boston, Jan. 24.—The common council last night voted unanimously that abolition of itself was not a wise move, and appointed a committee to appear before the legislature to oppose the bill which aims to supplant the present two-branch government with one body.

Oklahoma Seeks Statehood

Washington, Jan. 24.—The hearings on admitting Oklahoma to statehood began yesterday before the house committee on territories. A delegation favoring the inclusion of the Indian Territory with Oklahoma in any plan of statehood was also heard.

Short Talk on Sleep and Rest.

The humblest workman in England owns a better and more comfortable bed than the average well-to-do American. He expects to pay between 10 and 12 pounds sterling for his bed, because he knows he cannot get what he wants at a lesser price.

Over 99 per cent of the American population have never enjoyed the comfort of high grade bedding. We refer to Royal Upholstered Springs and Imperial Mattresses.

These Springs cost from $12.00 to $25.00.
These Mattresses cost from $25.00 to $35.00.

The price seems high, but no money you can invest in all the world will bring you such comfort, rest and sleep, as money spent in this class of bedding.

It will please us to show it to you.

The Social Realm.

Life is a tinseled show, this earth the ring,
Our vast uplifted tent the azure sky;
Time, the ringmaster, marks us with his eye,
Unfurls his lash and lets us feel its sting.
Wealth is the carpet the attendants bring
To ease our bones; we leap and hear the cry
Of quick approval; then with courage high
We dance a measure, draw the bow, or sing.
We mount our hobbies, and we have our falls,
We pierce the pappered hoops of pleasure through;
The light and music of the scenes enthralls,
We love our flimsy skirts of pink and blue.
Yet when the monitor insistent calls
We make our exit through the canvas walls.

ROBERT BURNS.

Anniversary of the Poet Observed.

Address by the Rev. Dr. Todd.

An Entertainment and Dance on the Program.

Last night the 143d anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns Scotland's favorite poet, was celebrated by the Scotch people of Quincy in Music Hall. The event was under auspices of Clan McGregor and Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor, and was made the occasion for the singing of some of Burns' best songs by a select choir of choristers, and also Miss Bessie Todd and Master John Findlay who sang several solos from Burns.

There was also as part of the entertainment a short farce entitled "The Pottengerdraucht," which was well received.

The feature of the evening was the Rev. Dr. Todd's oration on the poet.

He shortly and pithily sketched the life and works of the ploughman bard and showed that old Scotland had much to be proud of in her son. He said in part:

Extracts from Rev. Dr. Todd's address on Burns:

One hundred and forty-three years tomorrow, there was a lad born in Kyle. We are not tonight concerned as to whatna day or whatna style, but we are here to show, "We are a' prood o' Robin."

"Lad' in Scotland has always meant an extraordinry youth whether the extra was for good or for evil.

Carlyle says of Burns, "he never was other than a lad." A lad of genius, of exceptional clearness of perception, of an extraordinary gift of seeing things and men, but he never reached the maturity of his gigantic strength nor rounded out his great ladhood into a mountainous manhood.

Our bard possessed the element of genius. Burns cannot be accounted for on natural principles. Born in a mud built cot, as lowly as the Son of God himself, living in abject poverty, without education, training or effort he burst forth like the lightning flash as the poetic luminary of the western world. The divine afflatus ever sparkled in the lustre of his coal black eyes, and enabled him to see clear and far as the sage, and sing sweetly as the warbling bird. The patriotism of the poet fed and fired his genuis. He wore all through his life a certain vague Jacobitism which often reacted upon his interests. His father's family always loved the Stewarts from whence came many of their misfortunes.

This element developed with the lad, and it saddened his life but sweetened his song. As it had led Wallace to give his life for Scotland, so it enabled Burns to give to the world those immortal songs, "Scot's wha hae," "A man's a man for a' that," and "The Cotter's Saturday night."

His love of knowledge, and spirit of appreciation were also strong elements of his character. The books at the lad's disposal were read with avidity, he had a keen ear for Betty Davidson's stories and songs and he walked six miles on a Sunday afternoon to see the cave in the Leglen wood where Wallace slept. Legendary lore stimulated his imagination, and helped produce some of his greatest poems.

His high appreciation of what was pleasing made him generous to a fault, and forgiving to his enemies. This also made him a plaything to the storms of temptation in his life, and the sport of every gust of passion, like an Æolian harp in the breeze.

With these elements he could not help singing as he did. He looked kindly upon nature, and the "Winter's night," is eulogized, the pale moon is a thing of life "setting gently behind the white wave"; the stern hills behind which Lugar flows is the sacred home of his, "Nannie" and Afton water was to him a guardian angel to his Mary.

Because of this element he forgets his own misery, and bethinks himself of the 'Ourie Cattle,' the "troop of gray plover," and the "silly sheep." His appreciative heart felt and thrilled for his neighbors. In this lad there was a tenderness as a woman's tear, a gentleness, as of a baby's touch, and a force of human interest like a consuming fire and these fitted the poet to sing for the enrichment of humanity. He is Scotland's own poet, but he has made the world happier by his song, and thereby his debtor. To-night with assembled hosts we drop our tear, and pay our tribute to his memory. For, "we are a' prood o' Robin."

After the concert the large audience partook of a bountiful supper, at tables ranged along the large hall.

Dancing commenced at eleven o'clock and was continued till 4 o'clock in the morning.

The president of the Loyal Ladies, Mrs. Henrietta Marr, and Chief Francis Morrison of Clan McGregor, were in charge of all arrangements and they deserve credit for the way they handled the whole affair.

The floor director was Mr. Alex. Black, Mrs. Agnes Donald was secretary, and Mrs. Maggie Stronach treasurer.

AT WASHINGTON.

Quincy Delegation Make a Favorable Impression.

A Washington dispatch to the Globe says, The Quincy delegation, consisting of Mayor Bryant, City Solicitor Sears, City Solicitor-elect Blackmur and Postmaster Hammond, appeared before the committee on public buildings Friday and spoke enthusiastically in support of the bill which Congressman Naphen introduced to appropriate $100,000 for the erection of a postoffice building in that city. Congressman Naphen spoke briefly and concisely, urging upon the committee the necessity for a postoffice building there.

Each member of the delegation besides speaking briefly on the necessity for the proposed postoffice building had prepared a short statement, copies of which were given to the members of the committee.

Congressman Naphen stated later that the hearing was very satisfactory, and that a favorable impression had been made on the members of the committee.

The Quincy delegation will probably reach home Sunday.

CASE 113

By... Emile Gaboriau

CHAPTER IV.

DURING these minute investigations of his past life Prosper was in prison in a secret cell. The first two days had not appeared very long. He had requested and been granted some sheets of paper, numbered, which he was obliged to account for, and he wrote with a sort of rage plans of defense and memoranda of justification. The third day he began to be uneasy at not seeing any one except the condemned prisoners who were employed to serve those confined in secret cells and the jailer who brought him his food.

"Am I not to be examined again?" he would ask.

"Your turn is coming," the jailer invariably answered.

Time passed, and the wretched man, tortured by the sufferings of solitary confinement, which quickly break the spirit, sank into despair.

"Am I to stay here forever?" he moaned.

The cell door opened, and the jailer's gruff voice called out, "Come to the court of instruction!"

He instantly obeyed the order. But his step was no longer unsteady, as a few days previous a complete change had taken place within him. He walked with head erect, a firm step and the fire of resolution shining in his eye. He knew the way now, and he walked a little ahead of the guard who escorted him. As he was passing through the room full of officers he met the man with the gold spectacles who had watched him so intently the day he was searched.

"Courage, M. Prosper Bertomy," he said. "If you are innocent, there are those who will help you."

Prosper started with surprise and was about to reply when the man disappeared.

"Who is that gentleman?" he asked of the guard.

"Don't you know him?" replied the policeman, with surprise. "Why, it is M. Lecoq of the secret service."

"You say his name is Lecoq?"

"You might as well say 'monsieur,'" said the offended policeman. "It would not burn your mouth. M. Lecoq is a man who knows everything he wants to know without its ever being told to him. If you had had him instead of that imbecile Fanferlot, your case would have been settled long ago. Nobody is allowed to waste time when he has command. But he seems to be a friend of yours."

"I never saw him until the first day I came here."

"You can't swear to that, because no one is sure of the real face of M. Lecoq. It is one thing today and another tomorrow. Sometimes he is a dark man, sometimes a fair one, sometimes quite young and then a centenarian. Why, often he deceives even me. I begin to talk to a stranger—presto! It is M. Lecoq! Anybody on the face of the earth might be he. If I were told that you were he, I should say, 'It is possible.' He can convert himself into any shape and form he chooses."

The guard would have continued forever his praises of M. Lecoq had not the sight of the judge's door put an end to them. This time Prosper was not kept waiting on the wooden bench. The judge, on the contrary, was waiting for him. His surprise was great to see the cashier's bearing—resolute without obstinacy, firm and assured without defiance.

"Well," he said, "have you reflected?"

"Not being guilty, monsieur, I had nothing to reflect upon."

"Ah, the prison has not been a good counselor. You forget that sincerity and repentance are the first things necessary to obtain the indulgence of a judge. Will you be good enough to tell me," he added, "how much you have spent during the last year?"

Prosper did not find it necessary to stop to reflect and calculate.

"Yes, monsieur," he answered unhesitatingly. "Circumstances made it necessary for me to preserve the greatest order in my extravagance. I spent about 50,000 francs."

"Where did you get it?"

"In the first place, 12,000 francs was left to me by my mother. I received from M. Fauvel 14,000 francs as my salary and share of the profits. At the Stock Exchange I gained 8,000 francs. The rest I borrowed and intend repaying out of the 15,000 francs which I have with M. Fauvel."

"Who lent you the money?"

"M. Raoul de Lagors."

This witness had left Paris the day of the robbery and could not be found. For the time being M. Patrigent was compelled to rely upon Prosper's word.

"Well," he said, "I will not press this point. But tell me why, in spite of the formal order of M. Fauvel, you drew the money from the Bank of France the night before instead of waiting till the morning of the payment."

"Because M. de Clameran had told me that it would be agreeable, even necessary, for him to have his money early in the morning. He will testify to that fact if you ask him. I knew that I would reach my office late."

"This M. de Clameran is a friend of yours?"

"By no means. I have always felt a sort of repulsion for him, but he is the intimate friend of my friend, M. Lagors.'"

"One more thing," said the judge. "How did you spend the evening, the night of the crime?"

"When I left my office, at 5 o'clock, I took the St. Germain train and went to Vesinet, M. de Lagors' country seat. I carried him 1,500 francs, which he had asked for, and, not finding him at home, I left it with his servant."

"Did he tell you that M. de Lagors was going on a journey?"

"No, monsieur. I did not know that he had left Paris."

"Very well. Where did you go when you left Vesinet?"

"I returned to Paris and dined at a restaurant on the boulevard with a friend."

"And then?"

Prosper hesitated.

"You are silent," said M. Patrigent. "Then I will tell you how you employed your time. You returned to your rooms in Chaptal street, dressed yourself and attended a dance."

"You are right, monsieur."

"And did you not play at baccarat and lose 1,800 francs?"

"Pardon me, monsieur; only 1,100."

"Very well. In the morning you paid a note of a thousand francs?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"Moreover, there remained 500 francs in your desk, and you had 400 in your purse when you were arrested. So that altogether in twenty-four hours 4,500 francs"—

Prosper was not discountenanced, but stupefied.

Not being aware of the powerful means of investigation possessed by the law, he wondered how in so short a time the judge could have obtained such accurate information.

"Your statement is correct, monsieur," he said finally.

"Where did all this money come from? The evening before you had so little that you were obliged to defer the payment of a small bill."

"Monsieur, the day of which you speak I sold through an agent some bonds I had, about 3,000 francs. Besides, I took from the safe 2,000 francs in advance on my salary. I have nothing to hide."

The prisoner had given clear answers. M. Patrigent determined to attack him from a new point.

"You say you have no wish to conceal any of your actions. Then why did you write this note to one of your companions?"

This time the blow told. Prosper's eyes dropped before the inquiring look of the judge.

"I thought," he stammered—"I wished"—

"You wished to screen this woman?"

"Yes, monsieur, that is true. I knew that when a man in my condition is accused of robbery he has every fault, every weakness, of his life charged against him."

"I suppose you know who this woman is?"

"Mme. Gipsy was a governess when I first knew her. She was born at Oporto and came to France with a Portuguese family."

"Her name is not Gipsy. She has never been a governess, and she is not a Portuguese."

Prosper was about to protest, but M. Patrigent imposed silence. He shrugged his shoulders and began looking over a large file of papers on his desk.

"Ah, here it is," he said. "Listen! Palmyre Chocareille, born at Paris in 1840, daughter of Chocareille (James), undertaker's assistant, and of Caroline Piedlent, his wife."

The prisoner made a gesture of impatience. He did not know that the judge was reading him this report to convince him that nothing can escape the police.

"Palmyre Chocareille," he continued, "at twelve years of age was apprenticed to a shoemaker and remained with him until she was sixteen. Traces of her are lost for one year. At seventeen she is hired as a servant by a grocer on St. Denis street named Domnas and remains there three months. She passed this same year, 1857, at eight or ten different places. In 1858 she entered as a shopgirl the store of a fan merchant in Choiseul alley."

While he read the judge watched Prosper's face to observe the effect of these revelations.

"Toward the close of 1858," he continued, "the girl Chocareille was employed as a servant by Mme. Munes and accompanied her to Lisbon. How long did she remain in Lisbon? What did she do while she remained there? We have no information as to this. However, it is certain that in 1861 she returned to Paris and was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for an assault. Ah, she returned from Portugal with the name of Nina Gipsy."

"But I assure you, monsieur," Prosper began—"I assure you"—

"Yes, I comprehend. This history is less romantic doubtless than the one you have understood, but, then, it has the merit of being true. We lost sight of Palmyre Chocareille, called Gipsy, upon her release from prison, but we meet her again six months later, having made the acquaintance of a traveling agent who became infatuated with her beauty. She deserted him to devote herself to you."

The judge paused for a moment, as if to give Prosper time for reflection, and then slowly said:

"And this is the woman whom you have made your companion, the woman for whom you have committed robbery."

Once more M. Patrigent was on the wrong track owing to Fanferlot's incomplete information. Prosper remained silent.

"At any rate," insisted M. Patrigent, "you will confess that this girl has caused your ruin."

"I cannot confess that, monsieur, for it is not true."

"You will also say that it was not for this girl's sake you renounced an intimacy of many years and ceased spending your evenings at your employer's."

"I swear that she was not the cause."

"Then why did you cease suddenly your visits to the house of a young lady whom you confidently expected to marry? You had written to your father to demand her hand for you."

"I had reasons which I cannot reveal," answered Prosper in a trembling voice.

The judge breathed freely. At last he had discovered a vulnerable point in the prisoner's armor.

"Did Mlle. Madeleine dismiss you?"

Prosper was silent. He was visibly agitated.

"Speak," said M. Patrigent. "I warn you that this circumstance is one of the most important in your case."

"Whatever be the cost, I am compelled to keep silence."

"Beware of what you do. Justice will not be satisfied with scruples of conscience."

M. Patrigent waited for an answer. No answer came. Prosper was buried in thought.

"Monsieur," he finally said, "there is one detail I have forgotten to mention. It may be of importance in my defense."

"Explain."

"The messenger I sent to the bank was with me when I put the bills in the safe. At any rate, I left the office before he did."

"Very well. He shall be examined. Now you can return to your cell."

M. Patrigent thus abruptly dismissed Prosper because he wished to immediately act upon this last piece of information.

"Sigault," said he to his secretary as soon as Prosper had left the room, "is not this Antonin the man who was excused from testifying because he sent a doctor's certificate declaring him too ill to appear?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"Where does he live?"

"He is not at his home. Fanferlot says he was so ill that he was taken to the hospital—the Dubois hospital."

"Very well. I am going to examine him today—this very hour. Take writing materials and send for a carriage."

Would Antonin be able to answer? It was doubtful. The director of the hospital said that, although the man suffered horribly from a broken knee, his mind was perfectly clear.

"That being the case, monsieur," said the judge, "I wish to examine him and desire that no one be admitted while he makes his deposition."

"Oh, no one will disturb you, monsieur. His room contains four beds, but they are just now unoccupied."

"Very well. Come on."

When Antonin saw the judge enter, followed by a little lean man with the portfolio of an advocate, he at once knew that they had come to take his deposition.

"Ah," he said, "monsieur comes to see me about M. Bertomy's case?"

"Precisely."

In answer to the usual questions the messenger swore that he was named Antonin Poche, was forty years old, born at Cadaujac (Gironde), and was unmarried.

"Now," said the judge, "are you well enough to clearly answer any questions I may put?"

"Certainly, monsieur."

"Did you on the 27th of February go to the Bank of France for the 350,000 francs that were stolen?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"At what hour did you return?"

"Five o'clock."

"Do you remember what M. Bertomy did when you handed him the money? Now, do not be in a hurry; think before you answer."

"Let me see. First he counted the notes and made four packages of them, which he put in the safe. Then, it seems to me, he locked the safe and—yes, I am not mistaken—he went out."

He uttered these last words so quickly that, forgetting his knee, he half started up, but with a cry of pain.

"Are you sure of what you say?" asked the judge.

M. Patrigent's solemn tone seemed to frighten Antonin.

"Sure?" he replied, with marked hesitation. "I would bet my head on it. Still I am not sure!"

It was impossible for him to be more decided in his deposition. He had been frightened. He already imagined himself in difficulty, and for a trifle he would have retracted everything.

But the effect was already produced, and when they retired M. Patrigent said to Sigault:

"This is very important—very important!"

Topic For Week Beginning Jan. 26. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Missions; the missionary awakening—in my heart, in my church; Christ's church everywhere.—ROM. xiii, 10-14.

A little over a hundred years ago there was a missionary awakening. Individual hearts were awakened. Their spirit spread to the church, and the result was a tremendous impulse to the cause of Christ. The church became anxious to send the gospel to every creature, to establish Christ's church everywhere, that it might be a light to the gentiles to show them the way to Christ that they might be saved and in Him be kept saved. The results of that great missionary awakening are still with us. The missionary spirit has a tremendous hold upon Christian people and Christian churches, yet there are many who are skeptical and indifferent. Perennial missionary awakenings are possible. Our own hearts may be awakened to increased prayer and zeal in this important cause. Our churches may be awakened to increased sympathy, interest and liberality for the great cause of sending the gospel to the whole world. If asleep on this great cause, "it is time to awake out of sleep."

What will do it? What will awaken our hearts and our churches to a new sense of the great responsibilities and possibilities that are ours in connection with the salvation of the whole wide world?

1. A study of the commands of Christ. Who can study Christ's attitude toward the heathen and not be moved? He came to save the lost. His mission is our misson and the mission of His church. He commanded His church and His disciples to evangelize the world. Who that loves Christ and seeks to do His will can ignore missions after reading His great command?

2. A study of worldwide conditions. The world is lost in darkness and sin. Only Christ can save it. As our present civilization makes its way into every clime and country and gives us a knowledge of all peoples we see as never before their degraded condition and need of Christ. Think of darkest Africa, of caste cursed India, of decaying China! Can you do so without a new desire to send them the gospel, without having a new interest in missions? Such pictures made Cary the cobbler Cary the consecrated missionary. May they awaken in us a desire to send all men the gospel.

3. The application of the Golden Rule to missions. Exchange places with the godless, Christless, hapless people of heathendom. Put yourself in their place and put them in yours. Now ask the question, What would I have them do for me under these changed conditions? Send me the gospel. Thus would we all answer such a question. Therefore the Golden Rule applied to missions should lead to a missionary awakening, for "whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them."

4. The thought of the future. "The night is far spent; the day is at hand." "It is high time to awake out of sleep." God's day of judgment is coming. This fact should awaken us to the responsibilities of that day and awaken in us an interest in the preparation of all men for that day.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. xxxv, 1-10; Ps. ii; lxxii, 8; Dan. ii, 44, 45; xii, 3; Math. xxviii, 19, 20; Acts i, 1-8; viii, 26-40; xiii, 1-3; Rev. xxii, 12.

Envy.

Among the sins that very frequently allure into perilous paths prominently stands envy. Out of selfish, unholy pride grows resentment, which too often bears this poisonous fruit. Yet it seems to change from fruit into a cruel fiend. How it soured the life and marred the character of Voltaire, who displayed it so offensively in his continued effort to detract from the sublimity of Corneille and the charm of Racine! The strength and ugliness of envy were manifest in severing the beautiful friendship once existing between those two fathers of Anglo-Saxon poetry, Chaucer and Gower. Controlled by this demon, it is said that Dryden could never speak of Otway, his rival, with kindness, and even the giant minded Leibnitz on all occasions would refer slightingly to Locke's "Essay" and fiercely strove to overthrow Newton's system. What wonder, then, that lesser minds should be assailed by it. Even Christians indulge it without realizing what it is and how base it may make them. Let us be large enough and sufficiently Christlike to rejoice with those more highly favored than ourselves. There was not a particle of envy in our Lord. If we would walk with Christ, we must give it no place within.

The One Especially Needed.

He who complains that his church is dead and does nothing to put new life into it only reflects upon himself and evinces a manifest blameworthiness. He may seek to lay the fault for the sad condition of affairs at another's door, but God holds him in a large measure accountable for not doing something toward improving matters. By the way, it is not the complaining but the righting church members who counts in the Lord's estimation. It is far better to say little about declining piety and to make much of reviving grace. Where the situation calls for action it is the leader of hope and cheer who is especially needed and who effects the finest results.—Presbyterian.

Secure.

What of the morrow? Lord, in Thee confiding,
Let me not doubt Thy promise and Thy power.
I shall not fear, within Thy love abiding
In peace this very hour.

I shall not dread the dark of any sorrow
Nor any woe that compasseth my way
Since Thou wilt safely guide me through tomorrow
Who keepest me today.

DANISH TREATY IS MADE

Provides For Cession of the West Indies

CONGRESS MUST NOW ACT

Purchase Will Add Thirty-Four Thousand People and a Little Over a Hundred Square Miles of Territory to the United States

Washington, Jan. 25.—The treaty of cession of the Danish West Indies islands from Denmark to the United States was signed at the state department yesterday by Secretary Hay and Constantine Brun, the Danish minister. The treaty will be submitted to the senate for ratification immediately.

The treaty must first be approved by the senate, and then it will be necessary to secure an appropriation of the purchase price from both the senate and house. A treaty does not become a perfected agreement until the ratifications have been exchanged, and as this does not usually take place until several months after confirmation by the senate, Denmark will have ample opportunity of ascertaining the sentiments of her Antillian subjects before the time arrives for the final act that would sever her relations with her West Indian possessions. If a plebiscite should show that a majority of the islanders were opposed to the transfer, Denmark could end the matter by declining to exchange the ratifications.

The negotiations for the sale by Denmark to the United States of the Danish West Indies have been in progress, intermittently, for more than three years. The islands export trade, normally in large part with the United States, has been greatly depressed, and, though the commerce might yield sufficient taxation under unrestrained intercourse with the United States to make the islands self-sustaining, at present they are a drag on Denmark, and the Danish government is obliged to make good a considerable deficit on their account. The negotiations were practically concluded early this winter, only to be held up by the demand of the Danish people for a plebiscite.

Two earlier attempt to secure these islands had been made. In 1867 Secretary of State Seward made an attempt to buy for $7,500,000. The Danish government agreed to the sale provided the people of the islands desired it. A plebiscite was held to give the people a chance to express their views, and in all three islands but 22 votes were cast against the proposed union with the United States. But the plan met opposition in congress. Meanwhile a congressional committee of inspection had been sent to the islands and happened to be at St. Thomas when the great hurricane and tidal wave of 1867 struck the town. When they got back to Washington again the treaty providing for the purchase of the islands was killed. A good many years later another attempt was made to buy out Denmark's possessions in the Carribean. This time the price was fixed at less than $5,000,000, but it came to nothing.

The Danish West Indies are three small islands lying immediately east of Porto Rico at the gateway of the Carribean sea. St. Croix or Santa Cruz is the largest of the three, and contains 74 square miles of territory, more than five-sixths of which is under cultivation. Its total population is 20,000, most of which is of negro descent. St. Thomas, the second in size, is the first in importance because of its situation and fine harbor. St. Thomas also contains the commercial metropolis of the islands, the town of Charlotte Amelie, which is better known as St. Thomas. Charlotte Amelie is a town of 12,000 inhabitants, and the total population of the island is only a few hundreds larger. St. Thomas contains but 33 square miles of territory, most of it too rocky for cultivation. The third island is St. John, a rocky islet on which less than a thousand people live. Altogether the purchase would add but 34,000 people and less than 110 square miles of territory to the United States.

The industries of the islands are the production of sugar, rum, cotton, coffee, indigo, cattle and bay rum. Prior to 1848 both St. Thomas and St. Croix produced large quantities of sugar. In that year Denmark freed all the slaves, and as a result most of the negroes left the plantations and gathered in the towns. The sugar planters could not get sufficient labor to work their plantations, and the industry almost disappeared. More recently it has been resumed on a considerable scale.

Sugar Conferees May Agree

Brusseis, Jan. 25.—The indications now point to a continuation of the sessions of the international sugar conference for a fortnight. There is a growing belief that the conference is approaching a basis of agreement on the most important points at issue. France and Great Britain are striving to neutralize the effects of the bounty system.

Alexander May Step Down

Berne, Jan. 25.—Prince Peter Karageorgevitch left Geneva yesterday to join his son George at St. Petersburg. It is openly said that Peter's visit is relative to the George's succession to the throne of Servia, in place of King Alexander, who is said to be willing to abdicate.

Assignment of Leather Firm

Boston, Jan. 25.—The Arey, Murdock & Locke company, leather dealers of this city, of which George F. Maddock is president, has made an assignment. In the leather district it is estimated that the liabilities will range from $150,000 to $200,000.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Conditions Generally of a Most Favorable Character

New York, Jan. 25.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Little of a novel nature has developed in the business or financial situation during the past week. Conditions of the preceding week were accentuated as a rule, active manufacturing plants becoming still more busily engaged, while the downward tendency of prices was not checked. Retail trade is of immense volume, and jobbers have immense spring orders to fill. Western cities send the most satisfactory returns, but nearly all sections are enjoying wholesome activity. Wages were voluntarily advanced at a number of manufacturing plants, hours reduced at others, and aside from the teamsters' strike at Boston there were few labor controversies, while skilled workmen are in greater demand than supply.

Conditions in the iron and steel industry are shown by record-breaking production at many plants and rapid increase of facilities at others.

Textile markets are quiet, both buyers and sellers showing a disposition to wait, although reports of the jobbing trade are most favorable, except at some southern points. Cotton mills are busy as a rule. Woolen mills are working overtime and have much business in sight.

Footwear holds firmly to the advance reported last week, with only a moderate volume of business. Jobbers who insist on former quotations secure the goods, but with a corresponding loss in quality. New England shops are well employed on old orders, shipments from Boston continuing to exceed the liberal movement of last year.

Hesitation is general in the markets for staple products. Meats have weakened, especially lard, and dairy products are also less inflated. Eggs declined sharply, but partially recovered.

Navy Yard Thefts Alleged

New York, Jan. 25.—Charles Wilson, quartermaster on the United States cruiser Olympia, William Thompson, a seaman, and I. M. Thrailes, landsman, in the Brooklyn navy yard were arrested last night charged with grand larceny. They will be turned over to government officials. The charge against the men is that they removed and sold a quantity of property from the navy yard. The men declared they were given permission by an officer to remove the property.

Continental Denials Discredited

London, Jan. 25.—The London weeklies, commenting upon the statement of Lord Cranborne with regard to the alleged proposed European intervention in the Spanish-American war, discredit the denials from the continent of attempts at interference. The Spectator thinks the denials of Germany are amusing, and it says that if Germany is so friendly to the United States how account for the action of the German fleet in Manila bay?

Boy Broke Teacher's Nose

Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 25.—The chief of police was asked yesterday to issue a warrant for the arrest of Earnest Hebert, 13 years old, on the charge of breaking the nose of his school teacher, Miss Eva A. Rich, but the request was refused until further investigation has been made. The boy says Miss Rich tried to shake him and in attempting to get away he accidentally hit her on the nose.

For Benefit of Fishermen

Ottawa, Jan. 25.—An order in council has been passed extending the modus vivendi between Canada and the United States in regard to fishing vessels for the year 1902. Licenses will be issued on the usual terms for the purchase of bait, ice, seines, lines and all other supplies and outfits, as well as the transshipment of catch and the shipping of crews. The fee is $1.50 a ton.

For Adoption of Foreign Methods

Pekin, Jan. 25.—The dowager empress and her councillors are seriously discussing the engagement of foreign advisers to reorganize the government. Yuan-Shi-Kai is the inspiration of the movement. He has recommended the employment of eight foreigners of eminence in various branches of government science to be attached to different boards.

Cleaning Out the Bowery

New York, Jan. 25.—A raid of unusual proportions was made by nearly 100 policemen on the lower Bowery last night. A number of notorious resorts were closed and 32 persons were locked up. The raids foreshadow the doom of the old Bowery, for they mark the preliminary step to the wholesale cleaning out of that famous thoroughfare.

Attributed to Politics

Omaha, Jan. 25.—Ex-State Treasurer Meserve voluntarily appeared in the criminal court yesterday and gave bond for his appearance to answer the indictment of the grand jury charging him with embezzlement of money belonging to the state school fund. He says the prosecution is set on foot solely for political purposes.

Bark Bumped Bridge

New York, Jan. 25.—The Danish bark Anna was being towed by a tug through the East river yesterday when she struck a guy to the new Brooklyn bridge. Her fore and maintopmasts and mizzenmast were carried away. This is the first time a vessel has collided with the new bridge.

INTERVENTION OF COURT

Sought by Brine Transportation Company of Boston.

TRADES UNIONS INVOLVED

Prayer Against Sympathetic Strike, For Protection of Plaintiff, Customers and Teams—Many Arrests by Police, but No Serious Disturbances

Boston, Jan. 25.—The overshadowing feature of the teamsters' strike yesterday was the application of the R. S. Brine Transportation company to Judge Braley of the superior court for an injunction restraining the officers and members of the Teamsters' union and the Allied Freight Transportation council from any interference with its business, intimidating or insulting its employes; also enjoining the officials of the Allied Freight Transportation council from ordering a strike of members of that body in order to do injury to plaintiff or its customers.

After a private conference between counsel and Judge Braley, the latter issued a restraining order to be effective until 2 o'clock Monday, at which time the case will be heard upon its merits.

This movement furnishes an explanation for the statement made by President Loring of the Brine company when he said that he proposed to see "whether or not life and property shall continue to be safe in Boston and adjoining cities and whether or not surrender is to be made to mob rule."

The special feature of the injunction has proven to be its possible effect on other master teamsters. One writ has been served and the object is said to be to restrain that master teamster from doing work taken from the Brine company. The deputy sheriff, it is reported, had writs for other master teamsters that have taken work from the Brine company.

This acton involves the question of whether a competitor may accept and perform work which has been taken away from another, and whether this act may be construed to be interference with the business of the firm which originally had the business in dispute. It is the first time that the question was ever raised in this form in court in this state.

The police yesterday also determined upon a most vigorous interpretation of the city ordinances and issued orders to arrest every person crying "scab" or anything else at any of the drivers. Under these orders nearly 20 men and boys were arrested by the police during the day. In addition to this number several others were arrested for wilfully obstructing the Brine teams. An even stronger guard than ever was placed about the company's teams.

While one of the Brine teams was passing under a bridge near a railroad freight house the crowd showered it with stones and pieces of ice. The van being covered, the driver was not hit. Another of the big drays had a rough time at the Philadelphia steamer wharf. A new lumper was working with this team, and the union men pounced upon him as soon as he stepped off the dray. They talked with him for a few minutes, and he left the wagon and went with them to join the union. The teamster made shift to get his load alone and then started to drive out. But the drays were in a snarl which even mounted officers had great difficulty to disentangle.

The progress of the teams from the office of the company across the city through the most congested streets was necessarily slow.

Next to the crowd that gathered along India street the most interesting places were the steamship freight sheds along the docks where the Brine teams went to discharge their goods. Each team left the office of the company with the usual police guard, and the moment the head of the dock was reached the patrolmen formed a line across the street, being assisted in forming the cordon by the extra policemen detailed along the avenue. Just as soon as the team passed the line the policemen closed up and no one could pass save those who could prove that they had real business there. The mounted policemen followed the teams down to their discharging places and another detachment of patrolmen stood guard about the team while the drivers and lumpers unloaded. This was slow work, as the men are tired, apparently, from having to do everything themselves. While the freight handlers on the docks do not refuse to handle the goods delivered by the Brine teams they will not turn a hand to assist the drivers and lumpers.

Chairman Clark of the police commission says regarding the complaint that the police had assisted in loading and unloading Brine's wagons that all the police are supposed to do is to protect property and prevent violence. The police received instructions yesterday under no conditions to assist teamsters in loading their wagons.

There was no disturbance last night as the teams returned to the South Boston stables after completing their day's work.

The committee held conferences during the day with the state board of arbitration, President Lincoln of the Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Collins and also with the Philadelphia Steamship company, the results of which are not made public.

Judge Forsaith of the municipal court had before him yesterday several of the men arrested for obstructing Brine's teams. One was sentenced to the house of correction for three months. He appealed. Another was fined $20, and still another $75, both appealing. Other defendants got continuances.

Some Errors That Have Been Perpetrated by the Types.

Errors of the press often begin with errors of reporters who have misunderstood spoken words. The rule of follow copy compels the compositor to repeat the exact words written by the reporter, and the following blunders are the result of obedience to this rule.

A speaker made this statement:

"In these days clergymen are expected to have the wisdom and learning of Jeremy Taylor." But the reporter wrote and the compositor repeated "the wisdom and learning of a journeyman tailor."

Another speaker quoted these lines:

Oh, come, thou goddess fair and free,
In heaven yclept Euphrosyne.

They were printed as written:

Oh, come, thou goddess fair and free,
In heaven she crept and froze her knee.

Another orator quoted this line from Tennyson's "Locksley Hall:"

Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay.

But the quotation was written and printed:

Better fifty years of Europe than a circus in Bombay.

One of the worst perversions of a hackneyed quotation, incorrectly given by the speaker, is this, which seems to be the joint work of the zealous reporter and the equally reckless printer:

Amicus Plato, amicus Socrates, sed major veritas.
I may cuss Plato, I may cuss Socrates, said Major Veritas.

—"The Practice of Typography," T. L De Vinne.

Meanness Saved Him.

A prominent clergyman used to tell of one of his parishioners who had been very sick. A physician had given him some medicine and told him he could go out, but under no circumstances was he to get wet. The man went out on the farm, and a shower of rain came up suddenly. There was no shelter near, and to save himself he crawled into a hollow log. The action of the rain caused the log to shrink so as to endanger his life.

He could not move, and, being brought face to face with death, the whole of his past life came before him as in a panorama. He remembered the days of his childhood, his entrance upon life, his successes and his sins; then he remembered, last of all, that when he left home that morning he refused his wife, when she asked him, for 50 cents for the church, and the thought made him feel so small that he had no difficulty in getting out of the log.

How Leap Year Started.

Hampson, in his "Medii ŒVI. Kalandarium," quotes the following quaint tradition from an old Saxon treatise: "Some assert that the bissextus or leap day comes through this, that Joshua prayed to God that the sun might stand still for one day's length, that he might sweep the heathen from the land that God had granted him and his followers. It is true that the sun did stand still for one day's length over the city of Gebaon, but the day went forward in the same manner as other days. And the bissextus is not through that, as some do think."

In France and some parts of Spain and Portugal there exists a tradition known as "the ghost of leap year." Believers in this say that a marvelous monster annually appears on leap day and disarranges human affairs for the remainder of the year.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.
A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Bemedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. Good Afternoon

Now that Quincy has made a change in City Clerk it may accept at the next municipal election the three-year term act. There is a movement in the Legislature to submit the act to the voters of the six cities which rejected it.

In the anual report of the State Board of Charity to the Legislature, yesterday, complaints are made because of the condition of 59 almshouses, but of course Quincy is not included. We notice, however, that Quincy is one of the cities where there is "no separation of sexes." In many of the almshouses there is a complete separation of sexes in about as many more, a complete separation of sexes except at meals; at others the sexes are separated at night only.

The list where there is no separation of the sexes is rather a large one, but Quincy and Chicopee are the only cities as will be seen: Acton, Agawam, Arlington, Ashburnham, Ashby, Belchertown, Berkley, Bolton, Boxford, Brewster, Bridgewater, Brimfield, Brookfield, Buckland, Carlisle, Chatham, Chelmsford, Chicopee, Deerfield, Dennis, Dudley, Duxbury, Foxboro, Franklin, Freetown, Greenfield, Groveland, Hanson, Holden, Huntington, Leicester, Mattapoisett, Medfield, Millbury, Montague, North Andover, Northboro, North Brookfield, North Reading, Norwell, Pembroke, Petersham, Quincy, Rehoboth, Rochester, Rockport, Seekonk, Sharon, Shrewsbury, South Hadley, Stow, Sturbridge, Sutton, Walpole, Ware, Webster, West Newbury, Westport, Wilmington.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Oregon has a new industry; the shipment of yellow pine needles for cigar fillers. Consider likewise the cabbage and the onion, and the rope, and the paper, and the making of cigars will presently be a lost art, unless we have reciprocity with Cuba.—Brooklyn Eagle.

☞ Two Philadelphia physicians who have opposed vaccination now have smallpox in their own families, and the advocates of the use of the virus are not laughing at them, but they cannot help exulting. In Boston, the daily list shows only those afflicted who have been vaccinated so many years ago that the effect has worn off, or who have never been vaccinated at all. Whatever other evils may come with the injection of virus into the system, it certainly seems to protect against the small pox; or else there is a wonderful series of coincidences that call together the scourge and the man who hasn't been vaccinated.—Brockton Enterprise.

Heavy Damages.

Judgment for $3,500.00 was entered at the Superior Court at Dedham this week in the case of Delia Robinson vs. Quincy & Boston Street Railway Co. Mrs. Robinson lives at West Quincy, and at the time of the accident was getting off a car on Willard street. J. W. McAnarney, Esq., represented Mrs. Robinson.

JUDGE TIRRELL.

Sudden Death of the Well-Known Quincy Lawyer.

James E. Tirrell, Esq., one of the oldest practicing lawyers of Norfolk County, was found dead at his home on Washington street last evening. Mr. Tirrell who was familiarly known by the title of "Judge," attended court as usual Friday. While he has not been in the best of health for several years, he has continued to practice law, and was a constant attendant at court, and had an office in the Wilson building.

He was enjoying his apparent good health yesterday and was at his office until afternoon going home on the 4.20 car.

He lived with his son and daughter who went out last evening. They returned shortly after 9 o'clock and found him on the floor dead. A physician was summoned but he was beyond human aid.

Judge Tirrell was a son of Eliphiaz and Hannah Tirrell, and was born March 28, 1832. He was educated in the public schools of his native town. He read law in the office of Fisher A. Kingsbury and Elijah F. Hall of Weymouth and was admitted to the Suffolk bar, July 16, 1856. He later came to Quincy and opened a law office and has been in active practice in Quincy ever since. In the early sixties he was appointed a trial justice and served in that position until 1872, when a district court was established in Quincy.

In 1883 he was appointed a master in chancry by Gov. Butler, and has served since.

Judge Tirrell was married in October 1861, to Adeline Adams, a daughter of Deputy Sheriff Adams of Quincy. Mrs. Tirrell died seven years ago today.

He leaves one son Frank A. Tirrell, who was associated in the law business with his father.

Fourth Class Won.

There was an exciting game of basket ball at the Woodward Institute yesterday afternoon between teams from the Third and Fourth classes. The game was closely contested from start to finish, but the Fourth class proved too much for their seniors and won the game by a score of 4 to 3.

Two ten-minute halves were played. At the end of the first half, the score stood 3 to 0 in favor of the Fourth class, and it looked like a whitewash. The Third class braced up in the second half, and succeeded in scoring three goals. The Fourth class however, succeeded in adding one goal, which was enough to give them the game.

The line up:

THIRD CLASS.
Thomson, centre and Capt.
Waldron, guard.
McDonnell, defender.
Jilbert, side.
Barry, side.

FOURTH CLASS.
McGrath, centre.
Larkin, guard.
Harris, defender and Capt.
McCormick, side.
Hatch, side.

Score—Fourth class, 4; Third class, 3. Goals made by McGrath, (2), Larkin, (2), Barry (1). Referees, Ryan and Bates. Timekeeper, Jennie Harris, Waldron, (2).

Administrations.

At the probate court in Dedham this week Daniel L. F. Chase was appointed administrator of the estate of his mother, Mrs. Sarah P. Chase late of Quincy, bond $15,000; Stephen H. Edwards was appointed administrator of estate of Thomas Travers, late of Quincy, bond $5,000; Chrestin Sheldin was appointed administratrix of estate of Claus Gustaf Sheldin, late of Quincy, bond $500; Michael Manning was appointed administrator of estate of Mary J. Manning, bond $200.

City Clerk's Act.

In the Legislature, Thursday, Mr. Dean of Brookline presented the petition of public record commissioner for legislation to enable the cities of Beverly, Lowell, Marlboro, Northampton, Quincy and Waltham to vote at the next municipal election in those cities on the question of extending to three years the term of office of the city clerk. The six cities named are the only cities which at the municipal elections held last month failed to accept the act providing for a three-year term for city clerks.

THE COCHATO BALL.

A Brilliant Party at the Clubhouse at Braintree.

The second annual ball of the Cochato club was held last night at the club house. Fair weather enabled the pretty special dresses to be worn and admired. A conservative estimate of the number present is 250, nearly all of whom stayed to the finish.

Dancing was enjoyed until eleven o'clock when an intermission was announced and about 200 marched to the banquet hall to enjoy the supper served by T. D. Cook & Co.

The hall was beautifully decorated with bunting on the sides and overhead. Palms and ferns decorated the stage and palms were placed about the hall.

In front of the stage Mrs. George O. Wales, Mrs. George E. Williams and Mrs. Aubrey Hilliard received the guests. The ushers were Fred Howe of Wollaston, Moreton Swallow of Quincy, Walter E. Severance, F. Edgar Norris, Harry L. Patten and Edward A. Haskell of Braintree, John Hollis and Frank Cody of Hingham.

Mr. George E. Williams, chairman of the entertainment committee and Mrs. Williams led the grand march followed by Mr. and Mrs. George O. Wales and about seventy couples.

The club members are greatly indebted to Mr. George E. Williams for his generous contributions; dance orders, decorations, etc., and for his untiring efforts to made the occasion a success.

The Packard Lot.

Editors of the Quincy Ledger:

It has been reported that "the city has been spending a large sum draining," and "that it would be expensive to grade" my land, which I have offered to sell the city for a schoo site at Quincy Point.

For the benefit of those who are to vote upon the selection of a school site, I wish to contradict this report, as it is false. My land is practically from two to eight feet above the grade of Washington street.

The city has been spending some money to carry off the street surface water to the low land opposite my place, but not one cent on my land.

As to grading, the gravel and loam from the cellar would be more than enough to properly grade the lot.

The two lots under consideration should be personally examined by the members of the Council, then such statements as above quoted would receive little attention.

Abner B. Packard.

Both Men Dead.

Owen Murphy and Joseph Mooney, the two men who were so severely injured yesterday morning by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge in the sewer trench on Adams street, died in the afternoon at the City Hospital.

Murphy's home was in Newton Centre, and Mooney lived at Roxbury. Relatives have claimed the bodies and they have been removed.

The accident has cast a gloom over the works. Murphy had been employed by the company for five years. He was about 43 years of age and leaves a widow and family. Mooney was about 30 years of age and unmarried.

Hon. Enoch Wood Perry.

The recent notice in the Patriot of the death of this gentleman at home in New Orleans, has produced a sadness among his friends at the North as well as those at the South. His annual visits here in summer were always welcomed, and his friends were delighted with his genial company, his rich conversation, and his words of wisdom.

The New Orleans papers praise him in high terms.

Mr. Perry was born in Boston in Jan. 1807, and educated in its schools, and entered upon business there. In 1830 he married Miss Hannah Dole of Newburyport, a lady of talents, education and accomplishments. In 1839 he became a citizen of New Orleans where he resided till his death He was Commissioner of Louisiana at the Paris Exposition in 1878. He was always, in Boston and New Orleans, a public spirited citizen, a man of great energy; a close student of men and affairs; an independent thinker and a warm friend. He gave much attention to physiology and was always strictly temperate, which may in great part account for his vigorous old age.

Two sons survive him, Enoch W. Perry, the celebrated artist of New York, and Dr. Alfred W. Perry an eminent physician of San Francisco.

He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Sarah B. Rice of East Boston, and Mrs. Catherine Harrington of Washington.

Whenever he visited Quincy he was the guest of Mrs. A. A. Harlow of Quincy Point.

If troubled with a weak digestion, belching, sour stomach, or if you feel dull after eating, try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. All druggists.

ADVICE FROM CARNEGIE

Ironmaster Discusses Home For Indigent Journalists.

RECOMMENDS CREATING A FUND.

In a Letter to Henry Watterson and A. K. McClure He Claims It Would Be Wiser to Relieve Newspaper Men In Their Home Cities—Fine Tribute Paid to the Makers of Papers.

The New York Herald recently published the following letter from Andrew Carnegie to Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and A. K. McClure of Philadelphia, in which he says:

Sirs—I have read in The Herald and been charmed by the poetic appeal made by the master of our tongue who addresses me in behalf of an "indigent journalists' home." I venture to quote a paragraph from my remarks at the luncheon given in honor of one of the noblest of journals. Addressing the staff of The Evening Post, I said:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of The Evening Post—The pen is not only mightier than the sword and destined to supersede it, but the one is modest in the extreme, while the other is ever vainglorious. It is to all of your admirers here, I am sure, an extreme pleasure to have an opportunity face to face to express their grateful thanks to you unheralded and unsung and publicly unknown soldiers of the pen who so completely merge your individuality in the great campaign you courageously lead against all that debases and in support of all that elevates human society. To whom among you and in what measure we who have read The Evening Post from youth to age are indebted for the good fruits of its various fields we can never know, for while you are always willing and even anxious to advertise the works of others the staff never advertises itself—so different this from the military spirit exemplified by Hotspur, who could pluck bright honor from the pale faced moon only "if he might without co-rival wear all its dignities." You care not for these baubles, but find your noble reward in the knowledge of useful work performed.

I know of no calling, not even the highest, more truly sanctified by the supreme virtue of self abnegation or where there is more of the spirit of the devotee—

"Whether I stand or crownless fall,
It matters not, so good work be done"—

I produce this that the veteran journalistic couple may know that I am not behind them in appreciation of the "unheralded soldiers" of the pen. Perhaps I rate them higher than either of my friends, my dislike of the professional "soldier of the sword" being so intense. I rejoice that my friends, who have shown themselves for half a century and more possessed of brilliant literary qualities, have also each more than a modicum of the business sense with which Mr. Watterson credits me. To that business sense, therefore, let me appeal.

In the first place, homes for the indigent in general work well or badly chiefly as they are managed. Sometimes they have done great good; sometimes they have been great failures. It will be remembered that Bulwer founded a home for "decayed authors" (I have been on the spot), and experience proved that decayed authors, attached as they were to each other, evinced no great liking for being herded together; quite the reverse. Able men have strong characteristics. What suits one does not suit another.

I ask my friends whether, instead of trying to establish general homes in various places for the unfortunate journalists in old age, much greater good might not be done and the lives of such rendered much happier were a fund created and administered by a committee of the wisest journalists in active service, each worthy object needing relief receiving such pecuniary assistance in his own domicile as to this committee seemed advisable. If such a fund were created and such an almoner obtained as we have in the St. Andrew's society of New York, my thought is that it might be far better than a general home, which requires the unfortunates to leave their old haunts and homes, to break off their associations and sever connection with the companions of their youth and friends of literary tastes, for my friends will, I am sure, agree with me that no class is more deeply attached to the companions of old, more dependent upon hovering around the scenes of their early triumphs. The literary man in old age is of all men most sensitive to environment.

Just imagine a writer who has graced the columns of the Louisville Courier-Journal or the Philadelphia Times privileged to move about the editorial and reporters' rooms and welcomed as I am sure they would be by the two veteran editors who have addressed me. What kind of life would it be for him in that faraway home for the indigent, among spirits with whom he cannot be in touch as he is with those—the cronies of old—who have shared his labors?

To such a fund as this I think rich men should be glad to contribute, believing that thereby they were doing real good, provided the management was placed in wise hands. Even to the home for indigent journalists they might not turn a deaf ear if upon thorough examination it seemed to be best, but the writer feels that the idea requires very careful consideration before action. In either case the amount of support, financial and other, any plan received from the leading members of the profession would obviously be important, for upon their interest and support everything would hang.

All of which is respectfully submitted, with cordial greetings for the new year to his cherished friends, Messrs. McClure and Watterson, and with blushing thanks for their recognition of the writer as in some degree kin in spirit with the brilliant pair.

NIAGARA IN WINTER

FORMATION OF THE ICE BRIDGE BELOW THE CATARACT.

This Season's Spectacle of Surpassing Grandeur—How the Bridge Is Utilized For Profit—Mighty Ice Columns and Huge Icicles.

Sublime and impressive at all times, the falls of Niagara in winter present an especially splendid spectacle. The mammoth masses of ice are formed and put together in wonderful array, and all surrounding objects are coated with the frozen spray as with crystal. Strange shapes of glistening ice arise, all very beautiful and grandly solemn.

Nearly every year an ice bridge forms in the gorge below the falls, and this winter has proved no exception. It extends from the steel arch bridge to the American falls, and its surface is rough, rugged and much similar in appearance to those that have preceded it.

When the first adventurous spirits had crossed the bridge this year and pronounced it strong and firm, the winter festivals of Niagara began. Shanties were built on the ice for the sale of liquid and solid refreshments, and natives and visitors thronged there to gaze upon the wondrous ice formations above, around and below them and hearken to the roar of the mighty flood that plunges forever on its irresistible way.

It is customary for residents of Niagara to aver each winter that the frost scenery surpasses anything of the kind ever seen before, and this season is no exception to the rule. Never before were there such wonderful ice mounds, according to old timers, never such columnar icicles, such fairy tracery over the trees. And the stranger who has never before beheld the marvelous sight can readily believe that the present show is unsurpassed and unsurpassable.

The bridge over the gorge is not arched or raised, but merely a great floe of impacted ice which has come over the falls and lodged in the smooth water between the foot of the falls and the head of Whirlpool rapids. Sometimes this bridge lasts for weeks, and again it passes out in a night, but the experts say the present formation will probably remain a month or more. Since the bridge is formed by impacted masses and not by surface freezing, it is usually exceedingly rough. The bridge of this winter is said by those familiar with previous ones to be of smoother surface than usual, but of great strength and solidity.

The ice which composes these bridges is frequently more than fifty feet in thickness. Great crevasses opening suddenly or closing under tremendous pressure make huge ridges and upheavals, piling immense blocks one upon the other and in the greatest confusion. When the whole mass takes a notion to start down stream, the crash and roar of rending ice and rushing water is appalling. There is always, however, preliminary indications of this movement, and few if any fatal accidents are recorded as having been due to the breaking up of the bridge.

Huge mounds of ice have formed this winter at the foot of the falls, and the cascade on the American side a few days ago was almost hidden by a great white apron of ice which hung from the brink and fell to the summit of the great icy mountains below.

On the Canadian side a more comprehensive view of the whole picture could be seen and also a view of the icicles at Table Rock. Here was a magnificent colonnade of purest white which studs the pathway under the receding rock. Some of the columns are nine feet in diameter and seventy-five to eighty feet high.

But one description of Niagara falls in winter is very much like another. Its beauties each succeeding year are so nearly similar that it is like the rehearsing of an old story to recount them. The scene must be visited in order to have a true conception of the splendid spectacle afforded by the action of the frost king on the stupendous cataract.

Another interesting feature of Niagara in winter is the beautiful effects produced by the congealing of the mists on trees and shrubs in the neighborhood of the falls. Every trunk and twig is covered with shining crystal, and frequently trees are broken down by weight of the accumulation. Niagara at this season offers every inducement to lovers of winter scenery.

CAMPBELL'S NEW AIRSHIP.

Aged Aeronaut Expects to Win Against Santos-Dumont at St. Louis.

Santos-Dumont and his airship must share attention with Professor Peter Caronant Campbell and his aerial car, says the New York World. Professor Campbell, now white haired and seventy, has for nearly half a century worked to solve the problem of aerial navigation. Meantime fortune has not dealt kindly with him. He is now caretaker of the double apartment at 93 Macon street, Brooklyn, but he says that Santos-Dumont, with his millions for experiment, will not carry off the $200,000 prize offered by the management of the St. Louis exposition in 1903 for the most successful airship. He counts the fortune as good as won for himself, for, he says, he has already made convincing tests of his airship which prove it to be better than that of Santos-Dumont.

He has just received a letter from W. B. Stevens, secretary of the St. Louis exposition, accepting his entry. He has a contract with a company in Toronto, Canada, to back him to the extent of $30,000 in the competition.

Here are some of the features of Professor Campbell's airship: It can be propelled up or down or be made to sail on an even line. The working parts are made entirely of aluminium. It will be operated by a powerful Edison electric motor. It can ascend to a height of two miles. It has propellers in both front and rear, one to drive it forward and the other to send it over a circular course. It has a carrying capacity of 600 pounds.

The airship is now stored in Chicago. It weighs 150 pounds. The balloon attachment is conical shaped, thirty-five feet long and twenty-five feet high and is constructed of silk. There are two wings between the balloon and the aluminium frame, which act on the principle of a parachute. The basket, built of bamboo, will hold two persons, but Professor Campbell, when he sails for the prize of $200,000, says he will travel alone. He proposes to start from the exposition grounds, mount as high as the loftiest steeple in St. Louis, sail around the city and return to the starting point and claim the prize.

KUBELIK'S IDEAL FIANCEE.

"One Who Would Die For Me," Says the Great Violinist.

Violinist Kubelik is pining for a girl to love, says a dispatch from St. Louis to the New York Evening Journal, "one who will die for me," he specifies.

"By her love the tenderest passions of my very soul will be transmitted to the world through my music. It will make no difference to me whether my love is reciprocated or unrequited," declared Kubelik. "Of course when I meet my affinity I hope she will return my intense worship of her. I will be the greater artist for it.

"Oh, yes. Once I was in love for three days," confessed Kubelik. "It was in Nizza, France, on the Riviera. A crowd of beautiful American girls surrounded and congratulated me. Suddenly a perfect vision of loveliness appeared. I fell in love with her at sight. All I saw were her entrancing eyes. They held me in charm for three days. I was afraid to tell her of my secret. At the end of these days she left me, and I made up my mind to forget her.

"You ask me do I want to fall in love. Yes, I crave for love of my ideal. As yet I have not found her, but some day I will, and the day is not very far off."

"What is your ideal?"

"A girl who would die for me," replied Kubelik, with flashing eyes. "She must love me sincerely, devotedly, intensely, above everything else on earth."

"Must she be a blond or brunette?"

"That makes no difference. It is not a question of great beauty with me, but one of character."

INDIANS MAY RESIST ORDER

Scout Says They Will Fight to Retain Their Long Hair and Paint.

If the government insists that the Indians in its charge shall cut off their long hair, abstain from the use of paint and the gaudy habiliments of savagery, the aborigines will dig up the hatchet and shed their blood in resisting so sudden a wiping out of racial characteristics. This is the opinion of J. B. Bottineau, son of Pierre Bottineau, the northwestern pioneer and scout, says a Minneapolis dispatch to the Chicago Inter Ocean. Not only is Bottineau connected with the red race by ties of blood, but for years he has been counselor and attorney for the Turtle Mountain band of Indians.

Bottineau says an attempt at strict enforcement of Commissioner Jones' reported order means a revolution whatever happens. In the Dakotas and Montana the Sioux and Blackfoot Indians generally renew their paint each morning with as much care as a white society belle administers a complexion cream.

New Safeguard For Trains.

The Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad is preparing to install a system of electric signals designed to prevent accidents, says a Rockford (Ill.) dispatch to the New York Times. The new device displays a signal in the cab of the locomotive. The track is wired in blocks, the rail being used as the conductor. When there is but one train in a block, the signal in the cab will burn white. Should another train touch the same block the light is instantly changed to red. The signal will do its work among a maze of switches and crossings as well as on a straight track.

INSIDE THE LIMIT.

Fore River Ship Company Completes Repairs of Isle of Kent.

The Fore River Ship and Engine Co. has made a record of which it can well feel proud, in the repairing of the British tramp steamer Isle of Kent, as it was one of the quickest jobs on record. It was on Dec. 14 last that the Isle of Kent collided with the Spanish steamer Amesti on the high seas about 350 miles east of Boston light. The Amesti was sunk and the Isle of Kent brought her crew to this port with her bow badly stove in.

Bids for repairing the steamship were made by several concerns, and the contract awarded to the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. of Quincy, at an advance in price over the lowest bidder for despatch in completing the work, they having guaranteed to complete the work in twenty-five days. The next lowest time named, forty days.

Work was commenced at noon Dec. 31, and the work was completed at noon Jan. 24, or one day inside of the guaranteed time.

The repairs made included a new stem, a big forging 60 feet in length, six pairs of frames and some 28 plates.

The time in which the work was completed is considered by the owners and underwriters to be very quick work for any of the existing plants. The Fore River Co. was somewhat handicapped by having the ship over ten miles from its plant, but this was to a large extent overcome inasmuch as the company owned and operated a steam lighter which was used in the work, also a floating machine shop that was tiwed from its plant to the scene of the work.

Even the forging for the stem was turned out at the company's own forge. Had it been necessary to obtain this forging from a distance serious delays would have occurred.

ARCHITECTURE.

Instructive Papers at Meeting of the Unity Club.

Unity—1

The Wollaston Unity club held its sixth regular meeting of the season, last evening, with an attendance of ninety-five and membership of one hundred and twenty-six. Owing to Mr. J. Q. Litchfield's recent illness, Mr. Charles F. Harper was in charge. "Architecture," the subject for the evening, was especially interesting as large photographs were exhibited for illustration by the speakers.

The first paper of the evening was read by Miss Madeleine Fish of the High school on Egyptian and Aseyrian art. Miss Fish said religion as well as peculiar manners and customs exercised a great influence on form of architecture. The brilliant period of Egyptian art was in the middle of the twelfth century, B. C., in reign of Ramases at Thebes as to be seen by the monumental representation of this king. Theban ruins represent the golden age of Egyptian architecture.

Grecian and Roman architecture was taken up by Mr. Charles P. Slade of the High school. Besides describing the temples and various other points of Grecian architecture Mr. Slade described the different forms as seen on the acropolis.

The music followed intermission under direction of Mr. H. Y. Follett. Mr. J. Russell Abbott of the First Baptist church of Boston rendered so pleasingly the following songs as to call forth an encore: Selected — "Lange"; Dreams — Rubenstein; Daphen's Song—Renolds.

Miss Edith Randall of Quincy closed the evening with a paper on the Renaissance architecture. Such a broad subject would be very difficult to describe in a few minutes. Renaissance had its birth in Italy in the 15th century in the various well known cities and was not felt in France, Germany, England or Spain for nearly a century after its awakening.

It is based on the study and emulation of outward forms and ornaments of Roman art, though with imperfect understanding of their principles. Its main characteristic is an attempted return to classical forms which had been forerunners of the Byzantim and Mediaeval period.

TODAY'S COUKT.

Peter Connors and Ellen M. Cotter were arraigned for lewd cohabitation at Braintree and were held in $500 each for the grand jury.

Henry A. Haskell of Holbrook was arraigned for neglecting to send his child to the public schools. Case continued until March 22.

James H. Tracy was fined $10 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

Patrick Costello was fined $3 for drunkenness at Milton.

MAN AND HIS LEGS.

The Nether Limbs as an Index to the State of the Mind.

There are many indexes to the mind, but I learned of a new one the other day when I called to see a busy man at his office down on Broad street. When I entered the outer office, it was quite evident that he was in, for I could see him through an open door leaning over his desk quite intent on papers that lay in front of him. I spoke to the clerk in attendance, whom I know real well, and asked that he announce me. He glanced into the other room before speaking.

"Wait a minute or two," he said. "It will be better, for he will have you come in the moment I say you are here."

I didn't quite understand what he meant, but I took a seat to wait a minute or two. I waited five of them and then spoke again.

"Wait until he crosses his legs," answered the clerk.

"What has that to do with it?" I asked.

"Everything," he replied. "He doesn't like to be disturbed when he is busy, and I know he is very busy because he has his legs out straight. A man never thinks hard with his legs crossed. As soon as his mind lets up a little, then he straightens, crosses his legs and is ready for visitors and a chat. When his legs go down again, it is time for the visitor to take his leave. Just bear that in mind and see if I am not right."

As he finished speaking up went the legs, and I was announced and received at once.—New York Herald.

Meals In Russia.

Among the common people there is no fixed time for eating meals. The Russian eats when he is hungry, and this is about six square meals a day. He has at least a dozen lunches, a little bit of salt fish or some caviare or a piece of bread and cheese, washed down with a nip of fiery vodki. He never passes a station without a glass of tea—marvelous tea, with a thin slice of lemon floating in it. You get a fondness for Russian tea and forswear bemilked decoctions forever.

The table manners of the Russian—such as you see in hotels and buffets—are not pleasing. He sprawls with outstretched elbows on the table and gets his mouth down to his food rather than raise the food to his mouth. He makes objectionable noises in his throat. He has a finger bowl and rinses his mouth as the rest of us do when cleaning our teeth in our bathrooms. Then he squirts the water back into the bowl. In time one may get used to this.

The Civil War Mortality.

Commenting on the loss of life in the civil war from various causes, General Francis V. Greene says in Scribner's Magazine:

"How paltry seem the 5,000 killed and wounded in the war of 1812 or the war in Mexico or the war with Spain compared with the 14,000 at Shiloh, 15,000 at the Chickahominy, 13,000 at Antietam, the same at Fredericksburg, 16,000 at Chancellorsville, 23,000 at Gettysburg, 16,000 at Chickamauga, 37,000 in the Wilderness and 26,000 at Spottsylvania! The grand aggregate of destruction fairly staggers the imagination, accustomed as we have been for more than a generation to the figures—93,000 killed by bullets, 186,000 killed by disease, 25,000 dead from other causes, a grand total of 304,000, or about one in nine of every man who wore the uniform."

Betrayed His Ignorance.

"I wish to get a position as brakeman," said the caller respectfully.

The great man sized him up. "Um. Ever have any experience?"

"Sir, I have been a railroad man for eighteen years."

The great man reflected some. "Um," he said. "Er—would you kindly close the door? I seem to feel a draft."

The applicant arose and closed the door gently.

"Huh!" snorted the great man. "Thought you could impose on me, eh? Get right out o' here! A railroad man would have shut that door so hard it would have jarred my false teeth out!"

The great man was right.—San Francisco Builetin.

Strawberries.

Why are they called "straw"-berries? Smart men differ on that. Some say it is on account of their hollow, strawlike stems. Others think it is because they have to be covered with straw or similar protecting material in winter. The most classical explanation is that our Anglo-Saxon forefathers used to raise them and they gave them this name because the berries are generally on the ground—that is, "strewed" or "strawed" around.

Perhaps.

Mr. Clubman—I see by the papers that a poor young man who lost both his legs while saving the life of a beautiful heiress at a railway crossing is to marry the girl. She dismissed all suitors and offered herself to him.

Mrs. C. (meaningly)—Very sensible girl. She'll know where her husband is nights anyway.—New York Weekly.

Making It Easier to Bear.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkin, "do the baby's cries annoy you?"

"Terribly."

"Well, I'll tell you what to do: Make believe baby is at a game of baseball and has just seen a home run."—Exchange.

Absolutely Original.

"Ah," said the great singer, "I have hit on a plan which will indeed bring me distinction."

"What it is?" asked a friend.

"I shall make a farewell tour, and—I shall not go back."—Answers.

THE TUNNEL HORROR

Engineer and Fireman Exonerated by Coroner

RAILROAD OFFICERS BLAMED

Failed to Remedy Dangerous Conditions After Having Been Repeatedly Warned by Employes—Disaster Might Have Been Averted

New York, Jan. 25.—The coroner's investigation as to the causes of the recent disaster in the tunnel of the New York Central railroad in this city was brought to a close last night, when the jury returned with a verdict completely exonerating John M. Wiskar and E. C. Fyler, the crew of the locomotive which crashed into the rear end of the ill-fated train, causing the death of 17 people. The verdict places the blame for the conditions leading up to the accident on the officials of the railroad. Both Wiskar and Fyler were immediately discharged from custody by the coroner.

ENGINEER WISKAR.

After reciting the details of the accident, the verdict continues:

"We find that the engineer, John M. Wiskar, owing to the heavy atmosphere, due to weather conditions, together with the presence of large bodies of steam and smoke escaping from trains passing the various tracks in said tunnel, obscuring said signal, was unable to locate said danger signal.

"We further find faulty management on the part of the officials of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad, and we hold said officials responsible, for the reason that during the past 10 years said officials have been repeatedly warned by their locomotive engineers and other employes of the dangerous conditions existing in said tunnel, imperilling the lives of thousands of passengers, and they have failed to remedy said conditions; and also for the reason that certain improvements in the way of both visible and audible signals could have been installed, and the disaster thereby have been avoided; and for the further reason that no regulation of speed at which trains should run in said tunnel has been enforced, thereby allowing the engineers to exercise their own discretion."

After the verdict was read, the roll of the jury was then called, each juror responding to his name. The coroner then thanked and dismissed them.

Lawyer Sent to Prison

Salem, Mass., Jan. 25.—Horace C. Van Denberg, the Buffalo lawyer, who was convicted here last fall of perjury, and who fled the state, only to be captured in New York a few weeks ago and brought back to Massachusetts, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Bond to not less than five years nor more than 10 years in state prison, three days in solitary. He was taken to Charlestown at once to begin his term. Van Denburg falsely swore in regard to a real estate transaction.

Castro and Herrera Fighting

Panama, Jan. 25.—It is reported that the forces under General Castro fought an engagement with the troops under the revolutionary leader, General Rerrera, in the neighborhood of Agua Dulce, southwest of Panama, in which the revolutionary forces were defeated. If the government troops and the revolutionists have met near Agua Dulce this is taken to explain the delay in the expected revolutionary attack upon Panama.

Stable Boy's Bride Robbed

Wichita, Kas., Jan. 25.—Mrs. Angelina Anderson was bound and gagged here yesterday in broad daylight in her room and robbed of $1100 worth of diamonds and $1500 in money. She came here a few months ago and married an 18-year-old livery stable boy, who was taking care of her horse. She is now sending him to a local college. The woman is said to be from Racine, Wis.

The Shakes Continue

Mexico City, Jan. 25.—A sharp earthquake shock was felt here yesterday. A shock was experienced also at Taxco. English-speaking residents are raising funds for the Chilpancingo sufferers, who are in almost utter destitution. The weather there is hot and the people continue to camp out.

"Kingdom" to Be Abolished

Belfast, Jan. 25.—An effort is to be made to clear Tory island, off the northwest coast of Ireland. Wholesale ejectment papers have been served upon the inhabitants of the island, who number about 300 souls. They elect their own king and have not paid rent or taxes for many years.

TWENTY-ONE KILLED

Dust Explosion In an Iowa Mine Responsible For Disaster

Oskaloosa, Ia., Jan. 25.—As the result of a mine disaster at Lost Creek yesterday afternoon, 21 dead are in an improvised morgue, and eight are in a temporary hospital.

The explosion was what is known as a "dust" explosion. The miners had just fired their usual noon shots, one of which proved to be a fizzle. The burning powder ignited by gas and the explosion followed.

Part of the topworks was torn away and the fans and cages were partially wrecked. This made the work of rescue very slow. Volunteer parties fought their way to where the explosion had occurred and a horrible sight greeted them. The dead and injured were terribly burned and mutilated. Fire had broken out and this added terror to the spectacle. The flames were finally controlled and all the dead were found and carried to the top of the shaft.

The total property damage will be about $10,000.

Nearly all of the men were married and leave families in poor circumstances. The mine is owned by the Lost Creek Fuel company of this city and has been in operation about one year.

Colonists Going Over to Boers

London, Jan. 25.—The Daily News publishes the following dispatch, it being taken from private advices received at The Hague: News from South Africa is to the effect that the rebellion is constantly spreading and the colonists are joining the Boers in steadily increasing numbers. The executions of Commandant Lotter and Commandant Schoepers have had the result of deciding the loyalists to join the Boers, whose position is persistently reported to be more favorable than ever. The same advices assert that the British suffered a dozen defeats from September to November, 1901, of which no mention is made in Lord Kitchener's reports.

In Congress

Washington, Jan. 25.—The house passed the urgent deficiency appropriation bill yesterday and devoted the remainder of the session to private pension legislation. The Republicans forced a record vote on the amendment to the deficiency bill to appropriate $500,000 for the "protection and shelter" of American soldiers in the Philippines, and 16 Democrats voted for it.

Veteran Pugilist Done Up

Baltimore, Jan. 25.—George Dixon, the colored pugilist, went down and out last night under a rain of body blows from Eddie Lenny. In the ninth round the men came to a clinch and wrestled. Dixon fell to the floor. He was advised by his seconds to take the count and the decision was given to Lenny. Dixon was very groggy. The bout was scheduled at 20 rounds.

Up to Navy Department

Washington, Jan. 25.—The president has referred Admiral Schley's appeal to the navy department for "comment." This is the technical term employed in naval law to designate a reply, in the nature of a criticism, to any presentation. It is understood that the preparation of this comment will consume about two weeks' time.

No Attempt at Assassination

Athens, Jan. 25.—Investigation here of the report that an attempt had been made upon the life of King George of Greece in the park at Phaleron proves that the story is without foundation.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S CABINET

Governs the Social Side of Washington Official Life.

For the first time in many years the White House is presided over by a woman who is a real social leader. Mrs. Roosevelt seems to possess some of the strenuous spirit for which her famous husband is noted. On her entry into social life in Washington she speedily saw that the perplexities which constantly confront society at the capital must be met and untangled. She proceeded to do so in a characteristic and novel way.

Her first move was to establish what is now known in Washington as the ladies' cabinet. It is made up of the wives of the members of the president's cabinet, with one exception, it is said. The sessions of this cabinet are held every Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock in the White House. Promptly at that hour the ushers of the executive mansion as confidently expect the arrival of the "petticoat cabinet," as it has been jocularly designated.

The topics to which the ladies devote their attention are the dates of cabinet dinners, receptions, and other official functions that there may be no awkward clash in arrangements. The refreshments to be served also are determined, and various other details of official social life are considered and definitely decided.

In the west end of the upper private corridor, with the famous vase window, the space which Mrs. Cleveland first had furnished as a private drawing room for the mistress of the White House and which is supplied each day with the choicest cut flowers grown in the executive greenhouses, the meetings of the ladies' cabinet take place. Near the southern side, which is cut into by the wide stairway running up at that portion of the corridor, is a large round mosaic table. It is at this table that Mrs. Roosevelt presides over the deliberations of her official family.

PETITIONS THE POPE.

Prince of Monaco Invokes Leo's Aid to Secure Divorce.

A breach past mending is said to have arisen between the Prince of Monaco and his wife, caused by Isador de Lara, the Portuguese composer. The Princess of Monaco was born in America, the daughter of a wealthy Hebrew banker of New Orleans, Michael Heine.

Four years ago, while on a visit to London with the prince, the princess met at an entertainment Isador de Lara, a tenor, who was making his living as a soloist. He was an undiscovered genius. He awakened an interest in the princess which rapidly ripened into love, and European court circles were startled one day to learn that the Princess of Monaco had left her husband and gone into seclusion with the singer at her country seat in the department of Aisne. There she has since remained, announcing that she would never return to her husband.

So it comes about that the Prince of Monaco has sent a messenger to Rome to request a special interview with the pope on the subject of obtaining a divorce from the princess.

RIGHT OF LOCAL OPTION

Proposition to Extend It to the Outlying Districts of the Hub

Boston, Jan. 24.—One of the most important petitions for liquor legislation in Boston appeared in the senate yesterday from the Boston Temperance federation asking for a bill for local option in eight districts in this city.

The bill asks that each of the different districts which are called Boston proper, East Boston, Charlestown, South Boston, Dorchester, Roxbury, West Roxbury and Brighton, be allowed to vote each year on the question of allowing liquor to be sold in the respective districts. Should such a bill be passed it will cut down the number of liquor saloons in this city materially, as it provides for only one license for each 500 of the population in the district of Boston proper and for each 1000 population in the remaining districts. About three-quarters of all the licenses granted now are in Boston city proper.

The supporters of the bill say that it simply asks for each district the right now possessed by other communities of the state to annually vote for its own region exclusively on the question of licenses. They say that the bill asks for the seven residential districts a similar ratio of license to the population to that which now exists everywhere else in the state, save in Boston, viz, but one license for every 1000 population, but leaves for the district comprising the old city the special ratio of one license for each 500 population, and that it proposes relief from the present iniquitous conditions by which the vast proportion of licenses made possible by the outlying districts, but which those districts refuse to tolerate in their own borders, are unloaded upon the congested portions of the old city.

The Olympia Up to Date

Boston, Jan. 25.—The historic flagship of the Manila bay fight, the Olympia, went into commission at the Charlestown navy yard today, Captain Lyon taking command. After participating in the naval reception and escort to Prince Henry of Germany, the Olympia will go south to become the flagship of Rear Admiral Higginson. For two years the work of refitting, overhauling, and modernizing the famous ship has been in progress, and a total of $400,000, about $100,000 less than originally estimated, has been expended in the task.

A Salem Sensation

Salem, Mass., Jan. 25.—The Essex county grand jury yesterday returned a true bill in 10 counts against Robert E. Pollock, president of the Salem license commissioners, charging the attempt to bribe Alderman Hathaway to vote against the confirmation of E. H. Knight, the appointee of the mayor for city marshal. Pollock was placed under arrest. Bail was placed at $2500, which was furnished.

Boston, Jan. 25.—Charles E. Hogan, a clerk in the Lowell postoffice, was arrested yesterday on an alleged charge of the larceny of a letter. Hogan was brought here and held in $1000 for the action of the grand jury. Hogan is 33 years old and has been employed at the Lowell office for 10 years. Numerous complaints of the disappearance of letters started an investigation which led to the arrest.

Man and Woman Asphyxiated

Lewiston, Me., Jan. 24.—A man and woman registered as Joe Buzzell and wife of Rumford Falls were found dead in bed at a hotel here yesterday afternoon from asphyxiation. The bodies were later identified as those of Joseph Lemay, aged 35 and Miss Carena Eardiff, 20 years old. It is the opinion of the authorities that it was a case of "blew out the gas."

Cottagers Won't Mourn

Lenox, Mass., Jan. 25.—Fire did in an hour yesterday what the wealthy cottagers at Lenox tried to accomplish last summer, that is the removal of the existing railroad station here. The fire caught from the furnace, and the building was swept away. The old station the cottagers thought was an eyesore. The railroad's loss is about $3500.

Nonotuck Strike Settled

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 25.—The strike in the spooling department of the Nonotuck silk mill at Florence has been settled and the young women, about 100 in number, returned to work yesterday. The company agrees that there shall be greater speed and better silk, and there is some arrangement about wages which is not given out.

Rogers, president of the Borden's Condensed Milk company, and attorneys for the company have passed papers and taken possession of the various plants of the Vermont Condensed Milk company and the Maine Condensed Milk company. Greenfield, Mass., Jan. 25.—The preliminary hearing in the case of Louis Bitzer, charged with the murder of Miss Ida Colombe, and the defendent's son, Louis Bitzer, at Turners Falls, Dec. 31, was concluded yesterday, Bitzer being held for the grand jury without bail. Nothing was developed.

Took His Own Life

Hudson, Mass., Jan. 24.—After many days of search for Josiah A. Willard, who disappeared from hish home on Jan. 11, the body was found in a lot of undergrowth yesterday. The throat was cut and in one hand a jacknife was held, showing that Willard killed himself.

Shooting Was Accidental

Salem, Mass., Jan. 25.—The grand jury yesterday reported "no bill" against Edward J. Flaherty of Gloucester, who was charged with manslaughter in accidentally shooting Captain Joseph Mellows in Gloucester some weeks ago.

RUN DOWN.

When a phrase is coined out of world wide human experience it is apt to be brief and expressive. We are "run-down" we say in the endeavor to describe a relaxed physical condition, and all the terminology of medicine could not more expressively describe the actual condition than that every day phrase. It suggests the clock, perfect mechanically, but failing to record the passage of time because it is run-down.

People who have that tired out, run-down feeling will find new life in the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This great medicine is far more than a tonic. It cures diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition, and enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food of which alone all physical strength is made.

"The reason I delayed writing was because I wanted to wait one year after I had taken the medicine before giving my statement, and now I can send a good, conscientious testimonial," writes Mr. Chas. H. Sergeant, of Plain City, Madison Co., Ohio. "During the summer and fall of 1896 I became all 'run-down,' nerves were out of order and stomach out of order. I wrote to Dr. Pierce for advice. He said I had general debility, and advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and, thanks to you for your advice, I used six bottles; and since I stopped taking it about one year ago, I have not taken any medicine of any kind, and have been able to work every day. My appetite is good, I can eat three square meals a day, and I do not feel that miserable burning in the stomach after eating. My blood and nerves are in good shape, and well—in fact, I think I am in pretty good running order."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets keep the bowels active and healthy.

TRIBUTE TO M'KINLEY.

Senator Hanna's Reminiscences of the Late President.

FOND OF PLAYS AND ACTORS.

Enjoyed Meeting Prominent Players and Was Catholic In Musical Taste. Thoroughly Appreciated a Joke. Chats During the Wee Sma' Hours Revealed Most Fully His Lovable Character.

The National Magazine for February contains Senator Hanna's second paper on "William McKinley as I Knew Him." This paper describes little characteristics known only to President McKinley's intimate friends and contains many reminiscences connected with his social rather than with his political life. Senator Hanna says:

"When he once had a joke on me, he rung all the changes, and no one enjoyed a joke on himself more thoroughly than he did. In 1897, when I was a tenderfoot, recently arrived in Washington, he asked me to give up a dinner engagement with some gentlemen to fill up the table as an emergency man at a dinner to be given at the White House that night. I declined, saying I had a better thing, not knowing that an invitation to the White House was equivalent to a social command. This joke on me was a delight to him.

"He was never much inclined, I believe, to take an active part in athletics, though his simple, normal habits of life kept him always in excellent condition. It was as late as 1894 that he and I witnessed together our first game of football, a Princeton-Yale game at New York. It was a drizzling, cold day, but he watched every movement of the game from the clubhouse with as keen an interest as he gave to a debate in congress. When some mysterious movement in a 'pile up' was made, he would turn and ask me about it, but I had to shake my head and confess it was my first game and that it was all Greek to me.

"The late president was particularly fond of a good play, and when he would come to stay with me at Cleveland overnight he would always inquire:

"'Is there anything good at your opera house tonight, Mark?'

"We enjoyed many pleasant evenings together. He delighted in meeting the prominent actors and was very fond of Joseph Jefferson. Many an hour have they chatted together, and Jefferson never failed to call and see him when in Washington. Sol Smith Russell was another friend. The drama of high standard was to him a relief from worriments of the day thoroughly enjoyed as a relaxation. He never tired of seeing Jefferson in 'Rip Van Winkle' and 'The Cricket on the Hearth,' which were undoubtedly his favorite plays.

"'Mark, you meet as many distinguished men as owner of an opera house as you do as senator,' he would jokingly remark after a chat with an actor.

"Though he had no especial training in music, no person was more partial to it than William McKinley. And his tastes were as catholic as a child's. Anything from a hurdygurdy to grand opera pleased him. He would keep his hands or feet beating time whenever there was music about him. I recall many Sunday evening home concerts. Every one was singing, and he would call for 'Nearer, My God, to Thee,' and 'Lead, Kindly Light.' The radiance on his face when he sang those old favorite hymns as if his whole soul was in it is to me a sacred memory picture of William McKinley.

"He would urge me to try to sing and insisted that I had a sweet tenor voice, but the pleasant charm of the happy occasions was never marred by my vocal efforts.

"I got the closest revelations of William McKinley's character, I think, in our quiet hours of smoking and chatting when all the rest had retired. Far past midnight we have sat many times talking over those matters which friends always discuss, and the closer I came to the man the more lovable his character appeared. Every time we met there was revealed the gentle, growing greatness of a man who knew men, respected them and loved them. Never was it the personal interests of William McKinley that he discussed, but those of friends or his party and above all of the people."

No Cheek Kissing For the King.

It is understood that there will be no change in the manner of holding drawing rooms, the arrangements at Buckingham palace being precisely similar to those that have obtained for so many years past, the time only being changed from afternoon to evening. The king does not intend to revive the practice of saluting ladies presented at court on the cheek, a practice which still survives in the drawing rooms held by the lord lieutenant of Ireland, says the London World. Trains and court plumes will be worn, but it is expected that elderly ladies and those who are delicate will be given the choice of appearing in high dresses to the throat. This indulgence was granted by the late queen some years ago, as the necessity of appearing decollete often prevented ladies from going to court.

Ermine For the Coronation.

It is calculated that about 108,000 skins of the ermine will be used to make the peers and princesses' robes for the coronation and that as the price of this fur has much increased in view of the demand about $135 worth will be needed for the ceremonial.

HOME HANDICRAFT.

A Suggestion For Making a Novel and Handsome Chair.

A blending of the artistic and the practical usually commends itself to the home furnisher, and consequently a suggestion which may be new to some of us for a useful substitute for upholstery on a chair frame will be welcome. As the sketch below at once reveals, the suggestion in question consists in the covering of the seat and the back of a chair with interlacing thongs instead of the usual upholstery or cane. Chairs like these are made by the Dutch farmers in South Africa, who have both for harness and other purposes a great use for strong leather thongs.

For the frame it seems unnecessary to make any suggestion. There are often in the lumber room old chairs which, because the webbing beneath the seat or the cover of the back has given way, have been relegated to the limbo for things "which may come in." One of these frames must be raked out, dusted and the seat and back destroyed so far as the stuffing or padding is concerned. Old nails or screws will have to be extracted and the woodwork thoroughly cleaned. Then, before the leather straps are thought of, we shall have to stain or paint the wood in some way. The most correct way to treat the wood would be to stain a dark oak color, in which case the leather can be used in its natural buff shade. However, those who prefer more fancy coloring can follow their own inclination.

The frame stained, the thongs of leather will be obtained. They can either be cut, say, from pigskin or might be rough straps. However, the more patent the rough preparation of these thongs the better. They will all be wetted thoroughly to stretch them and brought over the edges of the chair and fastened with bright brass studs in the way shown. Little pompons can be sewed on to the extremities to give a finish. When the leather has become dry, it will contract and so tighten up all over the network. This has the advantage of making the seat comfortable without being given to sagging. When the leather does begin to sag, by the way, the brass studs can be extracted and the leather wetted and restretched.

Chocolate Filling For Cake.

Plain chocolate filling is made as follows: Two and a half squares of chocolate, one cup of powdered sugar, three tablespoonfuls of milk, the yolk of one egg and half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Melt the chocolate in a double boiler, add half of the sugar and milk, stir until it is perfectly smooth, then add the remainder of the sugar and milk with the yolk of the egg. Cook in the double boiler until it thickens, then remove from the fire. When cold, spread between the layers and on top of the cake.

Peppermint Wafers.

Pour half a cupful of cold water over two cupfuls of granulated sugar, stir well together, then place on the fire and melt, stirring until the sugar is dissolved, but no longer. Boil exactly ten minutes. Remove from the fire, add three drops of oil of peppermint and stir until the candy becomes creamy. Drop on oiled paper, and allow the wafers to stand for twenty-four hours. These wafers usually relieve slight flatulence and some other simple stomach disorders, and most people like them.

a jabot and cuffs of lace. The second is a page's costume for a wedding, in white satin, with sleeves slashed with pink, cape lined with pink and having pink bows, while silver tinsel braid edges the collar and cuffs of lace.

CALMING THE ALARMIST

No Danger of War Between Uncle Sam and Germany.

FEARS OF BIGELOW DISPELLED.

Kaiser's Request to the President to Allow Miss Roosevelt to Christen His New Yacht Considered a Most Significant Political Peace Offering, Stamping All Talk of War as Preposterous.

"Within the next six months we may fight Germany just as gayly as we fought Spain," said Poultney Bigelow, the able and well known expert on the German emperor. Now, he, too, seems to have joined the possible war with Germany shouters. Senator Lodge, according to an editorial in the New York World, is the chief exponent of this idea. He has warned the country from his place in the senate, vigorously pounding his desk and melodiously rolling his r's. Wise old men in the senate say Lodge wants another war so that he can write a history about it. Has the alert Bigelow the same ambition?

If this bloody conflict is impending, the public that must furnish the men and money for the enterprise should be told where it will be fought. Will the United States raise a million men and send them to Germany? How will the invaders be transported? Where will they land? How will they be fed, with a base of supplies 3,000 miles away, or is that problem to be solved by the capitulation of Germany's 2,000,000 soldiers as soon as the United States fleet appears in the offing? Perhaps Germany will elect to fight in this country. How will her million men be brought here and where will they land? Would nothing happen to them on the way across, with the American navy to dispute the passage? Is it to be a naval war? Then Germany is in bland ignorance of the relative strength of the navies of the two countries? Or have the Lodges and the Bigelows discovered a vast and misty plain midway between the seas, neutral ground where the armies can clash?

Will the distinguished and prophetic Mr. Bigelow please answer?

One of the peculiar reasons for Poultney Bigelow's forebodings is found in this paragraph of his speech:

"When the German aristocrat realizes that the United States has invaded Europe for the purpose of dominating the market, he is just ignorant and conceited enough to believe he can improve conditions by a fight for commercial supremacy."

If this were true, which is more than doubtful, the German aristocrat would be as ignorant and conceited as many American journalists and some senators. The German emperor and the German statesmen are able men and have full and complete information. They know that geographically Germany is more exposed to danger than any country in Europe. The empire is surrounded by foes, some of them hereditary and most of them malignant. With France on the west sighing for revenge, with Russia on the east waiting for an opportunity, Austria to the south remembering Sadowa and Silesia, Denmark in the north still pining for Sleswick-Holstein and discontented Poles and French within her borders, no country is so completely surrounded by dangerous neighbors. Invasion of the United States would mean an invasion of Germany by some one or all of them as soon as the German transports were hull down on the horizon.

Emperor William has talked foolishly at times, but he has acted foolishly rarely. The impression that he holds war lightly is absolutely untrue. His whole record proves the contrary. He is anxious to preserve peace with France, with Russia, with Austria, with England, with everybody. He maintains a marvelous army, but he has been studiously courteous to the countries with which he might easily be at odds. He may be the war lord for home consumption—comic papers are fond of so dubbing him—but it is preposterous to talk of the kaiser as an autocrat who could declare war, even if he would, by the snap of his fingers or the stamp of his foot. Emperor William can no more declare war of his own volition than can Mr. Poultney Bigelow. His powers are limited by the constitution, by the bundesrath and the representatives of the twenty odd sovereign states of Germany without whose consent no war can be declared, by the German parliament, public opinion—yea, by the press.

Any one familiar with the literature of German politics, and especially the interesting Bismarck literature, cannot fail to be impressed by the extraordinary importance Bismarck himself attached to the power of the press as an indispensable agency in the shaping of public opinion. He may have despised the press as sometimes exceedingly inconvenient and disagreeable to his plans, but all the lives of Bismarck, whether that of Busch or Bucher or Lowe or Poschinger or Kendell or his own memoirs, show an incessant activity on his part to dictate, inspire, prompt and revise political editorials and manipulate the press in all parts of the country. Now, the press of Germany is intelligent, moderate, conservative and careful of its responsibilities. It certainly is more conscientious and far less jingo than some of our own sensational senators and jingo journalists. We venture to assert that if any person, politician or newspaper in Germany were to talk of war with the United States he would be regarded as contemptible, unpatriotic, suspected of unsoundness of mind and accused of being an enemy of his own country.

The emperor himself is a man of ideas. He wants friends, not foes. His request to the president to allow Miss Roosevelt to christen his yacht was more than an ordinary international courtesy. It was a most significant political peace offering. In making that request and in sending his only brother, Prince Henry, to this country the emperor extends the right hand of fellowship to the United States. Twenty-five years ago such an act would have been laughed at in all the courts of Europe. Now there is not a sovereign who is not envious of the kaiser's bold and brilliant thought and jealous of our hearty acceptance. In reality the act is a recognition straight out in the eyes of all the world of the new greatness of the United States, of our new rank, our new power and our new influence. It is a new signpost pointing to our splendid future. And it carries with it the declaration that all talk of war between Germany and the United States is but "the babble of fools or knaves—preposterous or criminal."

"A SAILOR'S FRIENDSHIP."

Prince Henry Thus Refers to His Relations With Rear Admiral Evans.

Reference made by Prince Henry, the kaiser's representative at the launching of his new yacht in this country, to "an old sailor's friendship" between himself and Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans is explained in the following extract from "A Sailor's Log," in which the author devotes a chapter to the Kiel celebration, which he attended in command of the armored cruiser New York:

"At a reception given on board one of the German battleships I had an interesting experience. When I went over the side, I found a large company, most of them dancing. As I was not a dancing man I stood on one side to be out of the way and entered into conversation with a young, clean looking German captain, who spoke English perfectly. It was soon evident to me that he was brilliant in his profession, and we engaged in a rather sharp professional talk. I did not agree with the captain, whose name I had not caught, and I did not hesitate to speak my mind, nor did he. After a time he said he would be glad to present me to his wife, and I found her a very charming and attractive woman. Of course I had not caught her name either, but after talking with her for half an hour I noticed that a good many people seemed to be waiting to speak to her, so I took myself to the smoking compartment to enjoy a cigar. When I entered, Admiral Knorr greeted me and said:

"'Evans, the prince says you are a good fellow, and he wants the emperor to know you.'

"I replied:

"'My dear admiral, I have not seen the prince and don't know him.'

"'Well,' he said, 'you ought to know him. You have been talking shop to him for half an hour, and I don't know what you have been saying to the princess during the conversation with her.'

"I had been talking with two of the most delightful people I ever met, Prince Henry and the Princess Irene, without knowing in the least who they were, and I certainly told them both exactly what I thought about the different things we discussed."

A MOUNTAIN OF GOLD.

Senator Heitfeld Tells of Wonderful Find of Valuable Metal.

Out in Idaho is a newly discovered mountain of gold. Senator Heitfeld, who came to Washington the other day from that state, tells the story, says the Philadelphia Times. He says that the people of Idaho have gone wild over the discovery. In the center of the state is Thunder mountain. It is 150 miles from anywhere. The city of Boise is 200 miles away, and it is a long and arduous trail from the nearest railroad until the foot of the mountain is reached.

Senator Heitfeld says, however, that before next summer 10,000 people will be camped where there are now only about 100. And all because the richest find of gold ever known in Idaho is located in the mountain. For two or three years, according to Mr. Heitfeld, two men have been walking over the mountain because they believed it contained gold. Their patient search was finally rewarded by seeing an outcropping of quartz, and then they began to dig. They ran a rude tunnel into the side of the mountain and brought out gold enough to induce a capitalist to take a small interest in the mine for $100,000. He came east, organized a company with $3,000,000 capital and is now preparing to take out gold on a large scale. Senator Heitfeld says that it is expected that in a short time enough gold will have been taken out to pay the cost of establishing the mine.

The mountain is thirteen miles long and from present indications is full of decomposed quartz which will yield from $15 to $100 in gold per ton.

Graham Plans a Long Swim.

Carlisle D. Graham of Lockport, N. Y., who obtained a reputation as a swimmer by swimming the whirlpool rapids at Niagara falls, now proposes to swim through the whirlpool rapids to Youngstown, thence to Toronto and down Lake Ontario and through the rapids of the St. Lawrence river to Montreal, a distance of about 300 miles, in thirty days, says the New York Times. Graham will depend for assistance in carrying out his purpose upon a suit of cork, which he is now having made in New York. Of course he will not remain in the water thirty days, but will swim only so far each day as he pleases and will leave the water whenever and as frequently as he desires. A small boat will accompany him.

DRUM CORPS' BALL.

A Large and Pretty Party at the Town Hall.

The event of the season for the lovers of dancing took place in the Town hall Braintree last evening, when the Braintree Fife and Drum Corps gave their second annual concert and ball.

While the people were arriving Cuff's orchestra of seven pieces gave a most pleasing concert program.

The hall and stage was handsomely decorated with potted plants, cut flowers, ferns and holly branches.

The committee of arrangements were those just mentioned and credit is due them for the success of the party. Other members of the corps are: Edward P. Cuff, Courtney Atkinson, Walter Robbins, Glennie Woodworth, Louis Howland, G. Gordon Whitcomb, Edward Blake, Alton F. Newcomb, A. Elihu Oliver, Bernie Simonds, Irving Stoddard, Clarence Humphrey, and Joseph T. Shay.

During the concert the matrons, Mrs W. A. Torrey, Mrs. G. Willis Stevens, Mrs. C. B. Cummings, Mrs. N. Gleason Torrey and Mrs. W. H. Cuff gave a reception. The costumes worn by the ladies were beautiful and striking.

At 9.15 the grand march was led by L. Thurlow Torrey of South Braintree and Miss Alice Foley of Holbrook, followed by members of the Corps and seventy-five couple.

Dancing was enjoyed till one o'clock this morning. The floor was in charge of L. Thurlow Torrey assisted by James G. Cuff, A. Elihu Oliver and Alton F. Newcomb.

—Congressman Lovering, of this state, has distinguished himself by introducing a bill providing for ex-presidents of the United States, at the rate of $25,000 annually, from the date of retirement from the presidency. The bill is to apply to any ex-president living at the time the law is enacted. It is very generous in Mr. Lovering to desire to provide so liberally for our ex-presidents. There is but one ex-president living now and the number at any one time is not likely to be large so that the additional burden for their salaries would not be especially felt, but it strikes us that the proposed bill is quite uncalled for at the present time. Before pensioning our ex-presidents it would look better for the government to increase the appropriations for the maintenance of our representatives at foreign courts, who for years past have been treated in a niggardly way. The accredited representatives of our government stationed abroad ought to be provided for in a manner befitting the stations they occupy, and the rank maintained by our government among the nations of the earth, and it is a reproach to the United States that they are not so provided for.—Gardner Journal.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

BRAINTREE.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. John Rogers. It is a boy.

Thursday afternoon, Dr. Clark of Holbrook held a consultation with Dr. Gordon of Quincy, over Mr. Aaron Holbrook, who is very ill with hiccoughs.

The Braintree Club whist players have already won the championship in the Norfolk County League, for with their record of 15 1-2 games won, and 2 1-2 games lost, it is impossible to beat them out.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Baker entertained a few friends Monday evening in honor of their guest Miss Gladys Dodds of North Hero, Vt. Whist and other games made the evening pass pleasantly, after which a dainty lunch was served.

The Rathbone Sisters will install officers at their next regular meeting, Feb. 4th.

The annual parish meeting of All Souls' church will be held next Monday evening at 7.30. At that time several names will be added to the parish list.

Mrs. Clara A. (Higgins) Drake the beloved wife of Mr. Frank E. Drake, died Jan. 17, at the Carney hospital, Boston. She was born in Musquodobist, Halifax county, N. S., May 18, 1867. After her marriage, March 18, 1889, Mr. and Mrs. Drake resided in Boston. To them was born a son, Gordon E.

The Jonas Perkins School Association held a very pleasant and well attended meeting with Mrs. B. J. Loring Tuesday evening. During the meeting Miss Stanwood gave a short talk upon the "Beneficial results of drawing," and Miss Bowles gave a very interesting paper entitled "Cooperation of parents and teachers in school work." At the close of the regular routine, a short program was presented by the hostess, requiring careful observation and thought, yet creating much merriment.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Olive Crocker of Lisle street, Tuesday evening, Feb. 4th.

The regular meeting of Court Autumna L. K. & L. was held Wednesday evening in G. A. R. hall. The meeting was a very enjoyable one. The new officers take up the work in a very creditable manner. Several suggestions were made which if carried into effect will greatly add to the advancement of the order. These suggestions will be acted upon at the next meeting. The outlook for Court Autumna for this year is very encouraging.

Teachers and scholars in Grades I, II, III of Jonas Perkins school are much pleased with a gift of pictures from Mr. J. B. Loring. The titles of the pictures are as follows:

Grade I.—What can it be? Love in a barrow.

Grade II.—Can't you talk. A piper and two nut-crackers.

Grade III—Pharaoh's horses. My dog.

It is also Mr. Loring's intention to give to the kindergarten two pictures of equal merit.

February Lippincott's.

Lippincott's Magazine for February contains a novel fresh from the pen of John Strange Winter (Mrs. Arthur Stannard). This latest tale is called "The Standings" after the interesting family of a poor English artist. A wealthy relative comes to their rescue, and one daughter marries a man who loves the other. There is a sharp contrast between these two girls. The one becomes an actress; the other's life is a noble sacrifice. With such a plot John Strange Winter is in her element, and "The Standings" is one of her best novels. Lippincott's Magazine this month sustains its record for short stories. Captain Leslie J. Perry, late of the War Records Office at Washington, writes about "Lincoln's Official Habit." This embodies some hitherto unpublished letters from President Lincoln to his generals in the field, giving evidence of his punctiliousness, clearness, and conciseness. The "Walnuts and Wine" department bristles with fun, or quivers with anecdotes touching and tender.

HER CAR FARE.

She Had It With Her, and Yet She Could Not Pay It.

She really intended paying her fare when she boarded the street car, for she had 10 cents saved from the bargain day scrimmage, but the conductor happened to be a gentleman and by paying the fare himself saved her a weary walk to the family residence. She had the 10 cents with her when she boarded the car, and she still had the money when the conductor came through on his trip for fares, but she did not pay the conductor. It was all the motorman's fault. With her arms full of bundles, she was compelled to hold the ten cent piece between her teeth. The motorman turned on the current, the car gave a jerk, and she gave a start.

"Fare, please," said the conductor, and she turned pale.

"I can't pay you," she stammered, going from white to red and from red back to white.

"But I can't carry you for nothing," remonstrated the conductor.

"I know it, but I can't help it. I had the money when I got on the car, but—but I swallowed it."

A grouch on the other side of the car snorted a rude laugh, but the conductor was a gentleman, and without another word he pulled the register rope for another fare and passed on.—St. Paul Globe.

An Open Giver.

Harold's father was in the habit of giving a dollar a Sunday to the church. This was put in a numbered envelope in the collection plate and the amount credited to him on the church books. Mr. T. was away for the summer and on his return inclosed his arrears in the envelope and intrusted it to Harold to put on the plate. When the little boy came home from church, he said proudly: "I put an awful lot of money on the plate this morning. More'n anybody else, I guess."

"You got the envelope there all right?" asked his father carelessly, for Harold had been almost afraid to carry so much money.

"Oh, yes," he said; "but I took the envelope off when I got there and just put the money on the plate in my hand. Nobody'd have known how much I gave if I'd left it in the envelope."

An Opal Worth a Million.

The most famous opal in history was that which was worn in a ring by the Roman senator Nonius in the day of the triumvirate. Its size equaled that of a medium sized hazelnut, yet its beauty and brilliancy rendered it a marvel among the dilettanti of Rome, especially when it was known that the goldsmiths and money changers had set its value at $1,000,000.

Mark Antony made overtures to Nonius for its purchase, intending, it is thought, to present it to Cleopatra, but the senator refused to part with it and for fear that it would be taken from him by sheer force sought safety in flight. Here history loses all trace of this famous gem, there being no record of its transference from Nonius to any of his family.

Hawks' Eggs.

A peculiar fact in collecting birds' eggs is the wide difference in values of eggs of the same family of birds. For instance, there is the great family of hawks. Some hawks' eggs are worth only a few cents each, and other hawks' eggs find a ready sale at $3, $5 and $7 each. It makes a hundred dollar bill look dilapidated to buy a complete set of even western hawks' eggs, while a full set of all known hawks' eggs cost upward of $600. The eggs of a marsh hawk, a red back hawk and a copper hawk may be bought for 20 cents each, and the broad winged hawk's eggs will bring $4 each the world over. The eggs of Swainson's hawk and the buff breasted hawk are worth $1.50 each.

The Towers of Silence.

In Persia stand two towers called by the Parsee the Towers of Silence. According to the religion, they never bury their dead, but have the body exposed on the top of one of these towers until the sun and the rain and the fowls of the air have cleaned the bones of all flesh. The bones are then collected and placed in the other tower. These Parsees, who are followers of Zoroaster and very devout, have almost disappeared as a people, there being only about 8,000 of them at the present time.

Results of Catarrh.

Catarrh of the ears and catarrh of the Eustachian tubes often cause deafness. Catarrh of the stomach loads the stomach with tough phlegm and interferes with digestion. Catarrh of the gall bladder obstructs the outflow of the bile, which is absorbed into the circulation and thus gives rise to jaundice. Catarrh of the bladder is a dangerous disease, from the difficulty of getting rid of the mucus.

Time That Wasn't Money.

His Friend—How do you know?

"Well, I asked him if he'd give me a minute of his time and he said he would. I'd figured it out that his income was $40 a minute, but at the end of the minute the old skinflint showed me the door."—New York Times.

Overdoing It.

Borus (who has just submitted manuscript)—You don't like it because it's somewhat facetious. You forget that "a little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men."

Naggus—Yes; but, blame it, Borus, this is all nonsense!—Exchange.

True it is, and always has been, that cheerfulness is riches that cannot be taxed.—Ladies' Home Journal.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

Boston Museum.

There is no engagement at the Boston Museum that can be more interesting than the coming of Stuart Robson there next Monday evening, Jan. 27th with his revival of "The Henrietta." All playgoers of Greater Boston have known of the triumphs of this brilliant comedy of American life by Bronson Howard, and the impersonation of "Bertie the Lamb," which Mr. Robson has made distinctly his own, has taken a place among the noted creations of the modern stage. Mr. Robson's work in this character is positively delightful, and those who have seen him in the part, laugh constantly, and the delicious and refreshing fun that accompanies the adventures of this rich man's son, Bertie, will be recalled with the greatest delight by all who have ever seen the play, and to them it will be a welcome opportunity again to see this play. Mr. Robson has made the revival this season in response to the many demands of the playgoing public for another chance to see this work, but the statement is made positively that this is the final presentation of the play that will be given in Boston, and that Mr. Robson will never be seen as Bertie again after the present year. It should be remembered that the engagement is positively limited to a single week at the Boston Museum and it cannot positively be extended. Mr. Robson presents Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The interesting play, "The Rajah," by William Young, is the attraction at the Castle Square Theatre next week, and it promises to add a delightful success to the record of the present season. Its first production in this country, at the old Madison Square Theatre, in New York, a little less than twenty years ago, resulted in a run of 200 nights there and a subsequent tour throughout the country. The title is that acquired by an English army officer, whose service in India is ended by the death of a relative from whom he inherits landed estates at home and returns to reside upon them. His real nature proves to be radically at variance with that he shows superficially and he is dubbed "The Rajah" by his friends and intimates from the habits and actions which have come to be a second nature during his life in India. A charming love affair, between "The Rajah" and a rebellious ward, makes an amusing element in the development of the plot. The leading characters of the play have been assigned as follows:—Harold Wyncott, John Craig; Joseph Jekyll, Edmund Breese; Mr. Job, Lindsay Morrison; Richard Jocelyn, James A. Keane; Cragin, Edward Wade; Buttons, William J. Hasson; Gladys Wyncott, Marian A. Chapman; Emilia Jekyll, Mary Sanders; Mrs. Pringle, Leonora Bradley.

Following "The Rajah," on Monday, Feb. 3, comes an elaborate production of the powerful drama, "The Power of the Press."

PARK THEATRE.

"Morocco Bound" at the Park theatre, Boston, furnishes a variety of high class entertainment seldom seen in a single production. The plot is novel, and circles around a clever Irish 'con' man who is provided with ample funds by the Sultan of Morocco and sent to England to bring back a company of Music hall artists to furnish entertainment in his Palace. Spoofah Bey, as he is called, looses the money at Monte Carlo, and his perplexity and final success in inducing Squire Higgins, a retired and wealthy coster, to go on a pleasure trip to Morocco from England with a company of his friends leads to a splendid climax to the first act. The next scene is in the Sultan's palace in Morocco where the company arrive. Then the fun begins in earnest. The old Squire is informed quietly that if the whole company don't sing and dance before the Viser, off comes his (the Squire's) head. The ruse is successful, and so well do the company succeed in amusing the Sultan that he joins in the festivities with great enthusiasm. By special request of the other theatrical companies, the matinees at the Park are on on Thursday and Saturday. The Thursday matinee enables those playing in the other theatres to see the performance as guests of the Park management, and affords an opportunity for those not in the theatrical profession to see and mingle with their stage favorites in the audience.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

No single act seen at Keith's for a long time has so interested the average patron of that popular amusement resort as has that in which the world famous athlete, Sandow, is the central figure. His exhibitions of muscular development and spectacular feats of heavy lifting are certainly wonderful, and have never been excelled on the local stage, at least. Next week will be his last appearance in New England, and as he returns to England upon the conclusion of his tour of the Keith circuit, it will probably offer the last opportunities of seeing him for many years. The bill for the week of Jan. 27 is to be an exceedingly strong one, and will enlist the services of such well known entertainers as Duke and Harris, talanted female vocal commediennes! Mudge and Morton, refined musical specialists; and Hill and Sylvianny, two of the greatest bicycle experts in the country. It will be the last week but one of the sensational circle whirl, which has proven one of the best novelties of the season in vaudeville. James J. Corbett is underlined for the week of Feb. 3.

Norfolk County Property.

Thomas Blanchard of Stoughton, James Hewins of Medfield and Marshall P. Wright of Quincy, county commissioners of Norfolk county, have made an appraisal of the assets of the county with the following result: Valuation of court house and fixtures, $377,000 court house lot, $25,000; registry of deeds lot, $17,500; jail and House of Correction, including water works, drainage system and electric light and steam plant, $215,500; jail lot, $18,000; two houses and land, $400; one house lot, $300; furniture in court house, jail, District and Police court rooms and truant school, 59,000; law library, $22,000; truant school buildings, $15,000; truant school land, $35,000; personal property at truant school, $4,000; a total of $760,800.

A MUCH-NEEDED REST

For Those Concerned In Boston Teamsters' Strike

AWAITING COURT'S DECISION

To the Prayer For Injunction Made by the Brine Company—Scenes of Violence May Be Enacted Should Temporary Injunction Be Vacated

Boston, Jan. 27.—To all the participants in the stirring events that have attended the strike of teamsters during last week, Sunday proved a great boon, as it brought that relaxation of which every one was greatly in need and furnished an opportunity of taking a more calm and comprehensive view of the situation.

Not the slightest evidence of weakening is apparent upon either side, and all eyes are looking to Judge Braley of the superior court, before whom the application of the R. S. Brine Transportation company for an injunction to restrain the union officials and members from interfering with its business in any way, or from ordering a sympathetic strike, will be heard upon its merits this afternoon.

The temporary restraining order granted Friday by Judge Braley had the effect of checking in a large degree interference by the crowds with the movements of Brine's teams Saturday, and the union men are under strict orders from their officials to carry out the judge's order to the letter, but should this temporary injunction be vacated there is no telling what scenes of violence may result.

Counsel for Union 25 and the men named in the injunction have filed a reply to the prayer for injunction made to the court by the Brine company. Denial is made to nearly every allegation in the injunction; in short, that the defendants impeded or prevented in any way the plaintiff from employing men, or that they patrolled streets, or that they attempted to boycott the Brine company, or that they entered into a conspiracy to ruin the company's business.

Although the streets presented their usual Sunday appearance the great body of laboring men were by no means idle, and nearly every labor union represented in the Allied Freight Transportation council held meetings in their respective halls, at which the strike in all its bearings was warmly discussed.

The R. S. Brine Transportation company and the police were roundly denounced, while the course of Teamsters' union No. 25 was endorsed, and financial aid for the union and for the purpose of contesting the injunction in court was voted by every union.

The police secured a much needed rest yesterday after their arduous and trying duties of the past six days, but their vigilance will not be relaxed in the slightest today and the same protection will be furnished the Brine teams that has proved so effective thus far during the strike.

Death of General Hobart

Milwaukee, Jan. 27.—General Harrison C. Hobart, the last survivor of the Wisconsin constitutional convention and one of, if not the last, survivor of the original five who planned and made the famous Ross tunnel and by it escaped from Libby prison, died of old age at the soldiers' home yesterday. He was born at Ashburton, Mass., and was graduated from Dartmouth college in 1843. In 1846 he came to Wisconsin and began the practice of law.

Free Thinkers In Politics

Cincinnati, Jan. 27.—The National Liberal party was organized here yesterday by representatives from all parts of the country. The constitution declares for the separation of church and state to the extent of abolishing chaplains in the army and navy, legislative bodies and all public institutions, the taxation of church property and the abandonment of Sabbath observance. The party is the amalgamation for political purposes of free thinkers.

Yale Not on the List

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—A member of the University of Pennsylvania baseball committee is authority for the statement that Pennsylvania's baseball schedule has been completed and that there is no Yale date on it. The schedule has been sent to the faculty committee for approval, and will be taken up and, it is expected, approved at the next meeting of the committee.

Veteran Was Murdered

Millville, N. J., Jan. 27.—The mysterious disappearance of Julias Becking, an aged veteran, who, about a year ago, after receiving his pension, left Milmay to enter the soldiers' home at Vineland, was solved last night when his body was discovered in the woods near his home. There is every indication that the old man was murdered for his pension money.

THIS WEEK IN CONGRESS

Philippine Tariff Measure Likely to Receive the Most Attention

Washington, Jan. 27.—The senate will devote its principal attention this week to the Philippine tariff bill. It is the purpose of Senator Lodge to keep it before the senate persistently until it is disposed of. He does not count on final action for some time. It is not the present purpose of the friends of the bill to debate it, but the attacks which will be made on it and upon the entire administration of Philippine affairs inevitably will bring replies from many of the Republican senators.

It is understood that a majority of the senators on the Democratic side of the chamber will be heard before the bill is passed. Senator Lodge will seek the earliest opportunity to have the amendments recommended by his committee formally adopted, but probably will not press these when senators are prepared to proceed with set speeches.

Snator Nelson will take advantage of every chance to have the bill creating a department of commerce considered, with the hope of securing action upon it during the week if possible.

The house leaders have made no program for the work of the present week, as there are no measures of importance pressing for attention, although the anti-oleomargarine bill and the Hill bill for the exchangeability of gold and silver are both on the calendar, and may be taken up before long. Thus far no exact time has been fixed for either of these measures, and the lesser bills will take their chances as opportunity presents itself.

There promises to be considerable time to spare during the week, as there are no appropriation bills ready to fill the gap when bills of a general nature are lacking.

Death In a Blizzard

Huntington, Ore., Jan. 27.—Grover F. Locke, aged 13, son of a stockman and broker of Huntington, started for his father's ranch, 12 miles distant, last Friday evening. On the journey his horse refused to face the blizzard and young Locke started to travel the remaining distance on foot. He had gone only a short distance when he fell face downward in the snow. His frozen body was found yesterday in this position by a searching party.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Secretary Long was in conference with the president last night, presumably in regard to the appeal of Rear Admiral Schley from the findings of the court of inquiry. Secretary Long declined to say anything for publication regarding the conference.

Almost Continuously In Saddle

New York, Jan. 27.—Harry Cochran, who signed to ride for W. C. Whitney at a salary of $15,000 this year, made a record among jockeys last season that will last for many a day. He rode in 1247 races—nearly 400 more than his nearest rival. Cochran was placed 527 times, a marvellous percentage and another record. In order to achieve this result Cochran had to be almost continuously in the saddle.

A Polish Protest

Philippines Need Chinamen

Manila, Jan. 27.—The American Chamber of Commerce here has formulated an appeal to congress, in which it earnestly prays for the enactment of laws allowing Chinamen to enter the Philippine islands, under such restrictions as the United States Philippine commission may enact.

Waived Short-Hour Question

Kaukauna, Wis., Jan. 21.—Kaukauna paper makers voted yesterday not to strike because they did not get the short hours which they asked for in their petition to the mill owners, but instead voted to accept the 10 percent advance offered them.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

WAS BEATEN TO DEATH

Awful Fate of the Wife of a Drunken Boston Man

FAMILY LIVED IN MISERY

Woman and Five Children Struggled For Existence While Giant In Strength and Demon In Temper Abused Them—Held as a Murderer

Boston, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Bridget Kilroy was beaten to death at her home in East Boston yesterday, the terrible ending of a family quarrel provoked, the police say, by her husband while he was crazed with liquor. The husband is under arrest and after sleeping off the debauch will be charged with murder.

At the home on Marion street five young children mourn the loss of their mother, most of them too young to realize the awful charge against their father. Michael J. Kilroy is a longshoreman, a giant in strength and a demon when in liquor, according to the stories told by neighbors. He has been addicted to hard drinking, the police say, and his temper made life burdensome for his wife.

He came home in an ugly mood late Saturday night, and began to abuse Mrs. Kilroy, his acts arousing the neighborhood. The children cowered in terror in the bedroom which all used in common until the eldest boy, aged 13, attempted to leave to find a policeman. The father, however, stopped him, and the children stayed in a corner of the room until daylight.

The boy says that about 7 o'clock the children heard their mother moaning and that he crept into the kitchen and found her on the floor. His father was asleep on the lounge. The boy says he awoke his father and between them they got Mrs. Kilroy to a lounge, giving her a drink of water. She then appeared to go to sleep, but a little later the children became frightened because she lay so still. They went for the neighbors, and these quickly saw that the woman was dead. When the police came, Kilroy, who was sleeping off the effects of his spree of Saturday, was aroused and taken to a police station.

A surgeon's examination of the body showed that Mrs. Kilroy had been frightfully pounded on the head, in the face, and on the lower part of the body. From an examination it was thought that both fists and feet had been used in inflicting wounds, but in order that an autopsy might be held the body was taken to an undertaker's.

A later examination showed that Mrs. Kilroy must have suffered excruciating pain before death came, for her face was a mass of bruises. There was a deep gash in her forehead, a cut over the right eye, lips badly lacerated and her throat discolored and swollen, giving the impression that the woman had been choked.

Whether the body wounds were intentionally inflicted while the woman was prostrate or whether received during the struggle does not appear, but at least they must have been added to Mrs. Kilroy's sufferings.

The children are: John, aged 13; Mary A., 9; Francis P., 4; Elizabeth, 3; and Joseph, 1 year old. The baby must have been hours without the mother's care. Mrs. Kilroy was a hard working woman and gave to her family all that was possible, which was not much, for her husband was both shiftless and brutal. The family lived in two rooms of a three-flat house.

The most abject squalor and poverty was in evidence. In the kitchen there was an old table, a rusty stove, three broken chairs and an old lounge, upon which the mother lay dead when the police arrived. The bedroom was in a filthy condition, all sorts of clothing having been used as covering, and it was in the single bed apparently that the children slept.

Kilroy will not talk about the assault, and the police have to take the story from the two oldest children. Kilroy has served three months for beating his wife and one month for abusing the oldest boy.

The children have been taken in charge by a society, and until they can be disposed of, will receive the care they so much need.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. Good Afternoon.

It would be a great saving in interest, and a beginning in the reduction of the city debt, if water loans in the future were made for ten years instead of thirty years.

The Boston papers seem to make quite a handle of the fact that liquor has been seized from a tenant of Henry H. Faxon but Mr. Faxon is not at all abashed and hopes the police will get after every one of his tenants who sells liquor or gets drunk. With the liquor out, he says, he stands in better to collect his rent.

It is an open question whether the sewer assessments which have been levied were sufficient in 1901 to meet the terms charged up to them. The City Treasurer reported at the last meeting of the City Council that there was a deficiency of $15,716 22; that is that the receipts from sewer assessments fell that amount short of the $29,065.75 appropriated. It might be noted at the same time that about $400,000.00 was levied in the general taxes of 1901 and that the Dec. 31 report of the City Treasurer for the year showed but $229,015.40 paid. Is there a deficiency there also? The amount of sewer assessments levied and unpaid is an unknown quantity which may have a bearing on the case.

Ohio granite dealers are alarmed because Representative Wayne of Hamilton county has introduced into the Legislature of that State a bill "providing for a standard monument for the residents of the State of Ohio and to regulate their construction and the cost of said monuments to be limited and all memorials to be erected in accordance with this law, and further that all persons shall be forbidden to purchase or cause to be erected any monument or memorial before their death." There should be no anxiety among granite dealers over such a bill. It simply shows that the "Presidential state" produces freaks as well as Presidents. It would be impossible to pass such a law, as it would be unconstitutional if passed. If the Legislature has no more important business it should adjourn.

☞ If it was the settled policy of our government to grant a pension of $5,000 a year to the widows of deceased presidents it might relieve the minds of more then one incumbent of the presidential chair, and would do away with any necessity for special legislation, which always is undesirable and at times humiliating.—Waltham Free Press.

☞ There is one sentence in the recent speech of Lord Rosebery at Chesterfield which deserves special attention, and should, if it were possible, be written in letters of flame, that all may read. It is: "In regard to all these matters you must remember one fact, that war is a horrible thing, however you look at it. In every slight detail of it it is a horrible, unspeakable outrage on humanity—necessary, no doubt but to be curtailed as much as possible." To this indictment of war every right-thinking man will give his assent, and especially will every one do so who has had actual experience of the horrible thing. For he, most of all will know that war can never be other than here described.—Herald of Peace.

SUCCESSFUL RAIDS.

Liquors Seized and Fourteen Men Arrested on Sunday.

Chief of Police Hayden and his blue coats went after illegal venders of intoxicating liquor Sunday afternoon, and when they completed their labors fourteen men were locked up charged with various offences, including drunkenness, interfering with an officer, violation of the liquor law, and gambling. They also had enough lager beer to stock a bar room. In the squad of raiding officers were Chief Hayden, Inspector McKay, Officers Barry, Goodhue and Cahill.

The officers started out about 3 o'clock, and the first place visited was that of Mike Rose, at 13 Granite street. A large gang of men, 26 in number, were present representing several nationalities. Rose was arrested for violation of the liquor law, Daniel Haley for drunkenness and William Haley for interfering with an officer. Here the officers seized 134 full bottles, of beer, 229 empty bottles, six two quart jugs, and one gallon jug. These jugs contained a little whiskey and some wine.

The second place visited was that of Amelio Zichini, at 74 Water street. Here the officers found eleven men playing cards for beer. The crowd was so intent upon their game that they did not hear the officers coming. Attempts were made to get rid of the cards and escape, but it was useless and the whole gang, all Italians, were placed under arrest. Ten beer cases were seized. Of this number about half were full of beer. A team was sent to the police station with the beer and then came back and the men were loaded in and carried to the police station, a gang of half a hundred or more following in the wake.

Henry H. Faxon was onto the raid and although one of the parties raided was a tenant of his, he was as smiling as could be.

Very Rough Passage.

The steamer Arapahoe left New York on Monday, Jan. 20, for Jacksonville, Florida, with every prospect of a splendid trip, smooth seas and a beautiful moonlight night. Among the passengers were Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Burgess of this city. They encountered a terrible gale and it was the roughest and most frightful trip that the steamer ever made. At times the sea would break completely over the ship and waves literally mountain high. All on board suffered from sea sickness. They were 20 hours overdue but reached Jacksonville in safety. Mr. and Mrs. Burgess continued the remaining 360 miles by rail reaching their destination at West Palm Beach Saturday afternoon and glad to be on terra firma once again, as they proved to be poor sailors.

Quincy Bar Take Action.

It was voted that a committee of five be appointed to attend the funeral services and to draft resolutions on the death of their fellow member. The committee appointed were: W. G. A. Pattee, W. W. Jenness, John W. McAnarney, Edward J. Parker and Maurice Spillane. This committee was also instructed to secure a floral offering.

NO TROUBLE HERE.

Brockton Street Railway Strike Will Not Reach Quincy.

The trouble with the men at the power station on the Brockton division of the Old Colony street railway in no way effects the Quincy division, and no trouble of any kind is anticipated.

Supt. Reynolds of the Quincy division informed the Ledger this noon that last week the company voluntarily made the proposition to the men at its power station of a ten hour shift. This was perfectly satisfactory to the men and they readily accepted the proposition.

Supt. Reynolds further said that the trouble at the Brockton end in no way effected the through cars to Quincy and Neponset, and cars on this line were running on schedule time.

Wholesale Vacc'nation.

There has been some adverse criticism in Quincy because the Board of Health entered the schools and vaccinated the pupils In Boston they enter the homes. The Journal says:

Determined to relieve the people of East Boston from their fears of smallpox, and determined, also, to stamp out whatever of the disease might remain in the Island ward, the Board of Health on Sunday made a vigorous onslaught upon the territory. A corps of physicians, 125 strong, went over during the forenoon and spent the day in vaccination. No less than 15,000 arms were scratched, and it was not until 5 o'clock that the work was accomplished. In cases where the persons visited expressed a preference for their own physicians they were told that an inspector of the board would call in a day or two and examine their arms, to see that the vaccine had been administered. Only two cases of smallpox were found on the island, and the patients are in the hospital. The board reiterates its statement to the people of East Boston that they have no reason to be alarmed.

SCHLEY GREETS A GUNNER.

Affecting Meeting of Rear Admiral and One of His Men.

John Christanson, captain of one of the starboard guns on the Brooklyn and now with the crew of a vessel anchored off Port Royal, was on a Schley reception committee all his own the other afternoon when he rang the bell at the Gordon residence in Savannah, Ga., says a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. He remained in the Gordon library all the long afternoon, while the rear admiral and the Gordons were visiting the Derennes at Wormsloe, and Christanson still was on his committee when Rear Admiral Schley and General Gordon returned from the drive at 6:30 o'clock in the evening.

"A gunner from the Brooklyn to see the admiral," said the butler at the door as the driving party returned.

"Well," responded Mrs. Gordon, "any gunner from the Brooklyn may see the admiral, certainly," and in one group the party moved into the library, where the seaman awaited them. Christanson saw no one but the rear admiral. He arose, feeling in front of himself, as if half blind.

"Admiral, admiral," he began, groping as if about to fall. The admiral stepped forward, took his hand, and at the touch Christanson seized it, covering it with kisses, still crying, "Admiral, admiral."

The man was shaking as with ague and clinging blindly to the hand of the rear admiral when General Gordon came to the rescue with a glass of spirits.

"Take this," he said, holding it out to the sailor. The man did not see the glass or hear the words, but Rear Admiral Schley held up a hand to the general over the bowed head. His own voice showed emotion as he said:

"Not for him. He never took a drink in his life."

Drunk with his emotions and with his blind love for his leader was the man who had served one of the guns of the Brooklyn on that great day off Santiago, and it was the rear admiral who recalled in a moment that liquor could not have been responsible for the man's condition.

It was an affecting sight, and when Mrs. Gordon attempted in womanly way to make him at his ease he cried out that he did not know what he was about, that they must overlook it if he was doing anything that he ought not to do. And every one overlooked it when at parting the sturdy seaman, with tears in his eyes, threw both arms around the rear admiral and gave him a hug that a grizzly might have envied.

THE REASONS WHY

Quincy Should Have a Government Building.

Postal Receipts Now $1,000 per Week.

Present Office Inadequate for Volume of Business.

The Quincy delegation to Washington in the interests of a government building have returned Hon. R. A. Sears, Postmaster Charles L. Hammond and Councilman R.R. Freeman on Sunday, and Mayor Bryant and P. R. Blackmur, Esq., today.

The gentlemen are confident that their presentation of situation in Quincy—the large and rapidly increasing postal receipts, the battleships being built here for the government, the importance of our industries, our street railway connection with all the South Shore towns, the desirable lot available and other reasons set forth in their brief submitted—will in the immediate future attain the much desired government building. But a limited time was offered on Friday at Washington in which to present Quincy's cause, but the committee was prepared for this, and had several type-written copies of their brief and other facts to leave with the committee.

Besides the committee there were present Congressman Naphen of this district who is taking great interest in Quincy's petition, and also Congressman Powers of this State and others.

Each of the Quincy committee spoke and also Congressman Naphen. City Solicitor Sears opened, and briefly summarized the brief prepared. Mayor Bryant spoke enthusiastically for Quincy's progress and future as did also Mr. Blackmur. Postmaster Hammond's presentation of the rapid increase in postal receipts was perhaps the most convincing argument but Councilman Freeman who is president of the Ship Owners Association of Massachusetts was able to tell the benefits which a custom house at Quincy would be to the shipping interests of the city and also to Weymouth and the South Shore towns.

THE BRIEF SUBMITTED.

"The City of Quincy, before the Committee immediately preceding this one, had the privilege of submitting its claims for the erection and maintenance of a Government building within the City of Quincy and submitted facts and figures to substantiate its claims. Inasmuch as by reason of the adjournment or of Congress before the matter could be finally acted upon, the facts and figures then presented have become mislaid by the Committee, the representatives of the City desire that in order to refresh the minds of the Committee, the following brief shall be submitted:

"Quincy is a city incorporated by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts by act of its Legislature in 1888. Today its inhabitants number about 30,000.

The city is located on the coast south of Boston and its water front takes in what is known as Weymouth Fore River, Town River, Neponset River and Quincy Bay.

"Within the last few years the increase in population has been far in excess of the average of other cities in the Commonwealth, and within a few years it is anticipated that the population will be from 50,000 to 75,000, say in 1910. This statement is based upon an estimate of the metropolitan Sewerage Commissioners of Massachusetts and this estimate was made before certain enterprises which now exist were located within the City of Quincy.

"The Fore River Ship and Engine Company who now have under construction battleships, cruisers and torpedo boats for the National Government, and also several merchant vessels, one of which is to be the largest schooner ever launched, have acquired within the last year something over one hundred acres of land bordering upon the water front; and it is anticipated that the said company will, in the near future, become one of the best ship building plants in the world. In connection with this fact it may be observed that the probable increase in the city within the next few years will be beyond any accurate calculation.

BUSINESS ENTERPRISES.

"There are in Quincy, two national banks, two savings banks, a public library and thirteen or more large school buildings, not including an academy endowed by President John Adams, as well as an institute for females, founded by one of Quincy's public spirited citizens.

"The principal industries are the quarrying and manufacture of granite and a number of varied maufacturies; among these may be mentioned the U. S. Scale Works, employing a large number of skilled mechanics; the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company, employing over 1,000 hands, and operating day and night; the Translucent Fabric Company that has furnished nearly all the translucent roofing for the buildings of some of the large expositions; several boat building industries other than those before mentioned; a large metal refining industry (E. Packard & Sons) which furnishes type metal for nearly all of the large American dailies, as well as many abroad; two large coal docks several large shoe factories and among the most important is the granite industry for which Quincy is justly famed throughout the United States and Europe. This industry employes a very large number of skilled men, in which industry is invested millions of capital.

"Another large industry is the Hanley Construction Company, which has, within a few years purchased a large tract of water front and has erected costly sea walls and done much dredging in the construction of large basins and marine railways for the hauling out, storage and repair of vessels. This is sufficiently large to take in Government vessels, such as the Lawrence and MacDonough, for repairs. Also large importations of lumber from Nova Scotia into Quincy.

"The amount of shipping in Quincy and the amount of shipping at Weymouth adjacent thereto, for which shippers making entry of vessels and cargoes have to pass from Quincy to the Custom House at Boston, calls for the establishment in the near future of a Custom House at Quincy, making that port a customs district to improve Quincy and Weymouth. The establishment of this district would make it imperative that a Government building be established at Quincy.

RAILROAD FACILITIES.

"In the Center of the city the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway Company, realizing the rapid growth of the city and their inadequate facilities, within the last year have erected a new large passenger station and also greatly increased their freight facilities to take care of the rapid growth of the city. This railroad also owns many acres of land, recently purchased on the shores of Neponset River, in Quincy upon which they propose to construct a system of docks for the handling of such merchandise as may be shipped by water for transportation over their road.

"Quincy has always been a railway center, so far as surrounding points (population 100,000 are concerned. Six street railways originally operated in and through Quincy. They are now all consolidated and operated under one management. As a center for the distribution of mail matter, by electric cars, the facilities at Quincy are extremely adequate. The lines of the electric cars, starting from the center can carry mail through any of the towns between Quincy and Plymouth; Quincy and Brockton; Quincy and Holbrook; and nearly all of the towns in south Norfolk County, there being direct connections with all street railways, with the city of Boston, where the system of distributing mail by electric cars has been inaugurated.

POST OFFICE FACILITIES.

"Quincy today is a postal station of the first class; it has two distributing departments located outside of the central one. The business of the department has greatly increased in recent years. In 1897, it was $23,000; in 1900 it was $40,000, and this year it will be over $50,000. The office is very inadequate, so far as space is concerned, for the amount of business therein transacted, and very shortly we will be obliged to take other quarters. The present rent paid by the department for offices is $1600. $1100 for the Quincy office and $500 for the Wollaston. The amount issued in the Money order Department this year was about $42,415 domestic and $53,731 international; the amount paid was $31,000 domestic and $3,000 international.

"The present lease of the Post Office quarters will expire in about three years and it is etimated by the Postmaster that in all likelihood such quarters as we will require at the end of that period will cost the department upwards of $2,000, and then, in all probability it will exceed that within a few years thereafter.

USES OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

"A building for post office uses is very expedient and as we have called to your attention, the time has now come when Quincy will be a port of entry and will require immediately a building for the puposes of custom officials. There is another very strong reason why the Government should have some place for the headquarters of officers while on duty and stationed at Quincy, and for the proper protection of such data as may be required in the inspection and supervision of the National contracts for the construction of war ships, which are being fulfilled by the Fore River Ship and Engine Company.

PROPOSED LOCATION.

"There are several locations upon which a building of this character might be constructed. In every case sufficient land can be procured at a reasonable cost and of such locality as will enhance the beauty and convenience of such a building. There is one particular lot which, if obtained at the present time (owing to the widening of the street making the property void of any valuable buildings) is so situated that it has peculiar advantages. Located adjoining a magnificent library of National repute which is some 200 feet back from the main street would make if the building was located on this lot, one complete triangle surrounded by and fronting on a boulevard (sixty feet in width upon which the City of Quincy has recently expended some $50,000).

"This land is within one minute's walk of the New York, New Haven and Hartford station and is directly in the line of the electric cars which run in all directions and is also located in a favorable situation as to the two large enterprises previously referred to. This property is now owned by the Quincy City Hospital, a corporation directly controlled and supported by the City of Quincy and its citizens and therefore the excessive price which might be charged by an individual to the Government, if the land were taken, can be avoided, and the Committee can be assured that the City Government of Quincy will do everything that it can to have the said Hospital property transferred to the National Government at a very reasonable figure.

HISTORICAL.

"We beg to call the attention of the Committee to the fact that Quincy is one of the oldest settlements in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. It will be remembered that it is the birthplace of two Presidents of the Republic and of other men who, during the threatening periods in the history of the Nation, rendered great service to their country.

"It will be a fitting tribute to the memory, birthplace and home of John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Charles Francis Adams, John Hancock and other great men, if the Government erect, within the limits of their former home, a building such as will be a slight recognition of their public services."

Basket Ball.

Melrose High basket ball team administered defeat to Thayer Academy Saturday at the gymnasium, North Braintree, by the score of 79—3. The winners are considered one of the best school teams about Boston, and recently defeated Everett High, 102—9.

For Thayer, Kelley did well and Melrose's centre excelled in goal throwing. The latter were much the heavier and possessed the art of team work with strong, offensive playing, both these qualities lacking in Thayer's team. The audience was very small. The manager has arranged games with many strong teams for Saturdays in February and March. As the Senior class play takes place Saturday the team will not play until the following week.

A Mammoth Shed.

Work has been commenced at the plant of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. erecting the iron work of the large shed that is to enclose the two battleships. Some idea of the size of this shed may be had when it is known that the span of the truss is 325 feet, and the distance between the two lines of supporting posts is 185 feet. The total length of the shed is to be 490 feet, to be increased in the near future to 800 feet. At its present length it covers three and two-thirds acres and at its 800 feet length it will cover six acres. The height from the ground to the lower chord of the truss is 100 feet. The shed is to be built entirely of steel.

MONTHLY SOCIAL.

Burns Night with the Edward Hewitson Associates.

The regular monthly social of the Edward Hewitson associates was held Saturday evening at the residence of Mrs. Frank White, Prospect avenue. An exceptionally good entertainment was provided by Miss Tennie, Robert Wright, Hugh Anderson and Ray Brown.

President Barbour called the meeting to order promptly at eight o'clock and a business meeting was held. All members wishing to continue their membership of this organization are taxed with the small sum of twenty-five cents.

Following the business the evening was given in charge of Mr. Robert Wright, chairman of the committee. The evening was devoted to Robert Burns, a very appropriate subject so near his birthday. As Mr. John Anderson is a typical Scotchman, he was asked to speak to the boys, but owing to other arrangements, Mr. Arthur W. Sim, an intimate friend of his and perhaps as thorough a Scotchman, took his place. His home is in Peabody and he is also a prominent Boston lawyer.

He recited the following poems, the latter being original and full of fun, together with some of Burns' most touching passages in the Scotch dialect:—"A man's a man for a' that," Burns, "Ole Bull" and "Coast Survey." His humor and wit seemed inexhaustible and he recited his poems with such feeling and sympathy that the boys' applauses were numerous. He also sketched Burns' life, and his descriptions of his native country were very vivid. Such a gentleman the boys will be sure to call on again.

Mr. Wilde favored the club with two vocal selections. "There was a lad born in Kyle"—Burns and "Life Lesson"—Nevin.

The club members were all pleased to see Fred Mitchell out again. He has been seriously ill. His rendering of Tam o'Shanter"—Warren, on the piano was so well played that he was forced to respond to the encore, with Sorrow" by Smith.

Ray Brown, member of the club read a clipping from a Boston newspaper of the anniversary of Burns held in Boston.

The next social meeting of the club be held February 12, in the Wollaston Unitarian church. It will be considered as "Ladies' Night," every young man being requested to bring a young lady. The entertainment that evening is not to be wholly announced advance. The club adjorned shortly before ten.

PREFERS PEOPLE'S LOVE

For That Reason Schley Will Have Nothing to Do With Politics

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Admiral Schley declared three times Saturday that he had no intention of entering politics. His day was a round of receptions, at each of which he expressed his gratitude for tokens of esteem and approbation.

The admiral was taken to the Hamilton club, where he shook hands with members and guests of that organization, giving a kind word of greeting and a handshake to each one. At the Press club the performance was repeated. A number of men who were correspondents in Cuba, during the fights about Santiago were present and to them the admiral referred in his short speech of thanks as follows: "I want to say that these boys were always to the forefront. But the boys were brave. It is not pleasant to be shot at, but these boys stood up and were not only shot at but could not shoot back."

At the Booster club, of which he is an honorary member, in the course of his speech he said: "I have been deeply touched by the tributes which I have received. They have been tributes of love, and in my future years I shall never accept any office, however high, which might jeopardize that love. It is the dearest thing I have. It is the greatest crown a man can have on this earth, and when I am gone I want it left with my children and their children as their dearest possession."

New York, Jan. 27.—The Herald publishes a two page article written by Stephen Bonsal, who spent three months in studying the situation in the Philippines. The situation he pictures in dark colors indeed. Mr. Bonsal thinks Governor Taft is honestly mistaken in believing that the end of the insurrection is near. He regards the natives as virtually irreconciliable and as well organized than before the capture of Aguinaldo. Civil and military officials have not been in accord, he declares, and cites several instances in illustration. The army is slowly being demoralized, according to his view, at the same time that the insurgents are growing in determination. He throws doubt on the final success of American arms and believes a congressional investigation should be made at once.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. [illegible] iss Lulu Ortman, a stenographer en[illegible]d by a local lumber firm, is held at the police station on account of an attempt to shoot "Chick" Stahl, the Boston American league ball player. Friends of Stahl informed the police that the woman was armed and was looking for Stahl. She was overtaken just as she met Stahl and was drawing her revolver. She says Stahl jilted her for another girl and that she intends to kill him on sight. Stahl refuses to talk further than to say that the girl had no reason to attempt his life.

DOLE MUST STEP OUT

His Resignation Asked For by the President

EXISTING STRIFE IN HAWAII

May Be Smoothed Out by Inauguration of Entire New Regime In the Islands—Sam Parker, a Royalist, Slated For the Governorship

Washington, Jan. 27.—According to the present program, Sanford B. Dole, governor of Hawaii, is to go, and Colonel Sam Parker is to become his successor. Colonel Parker was the last prime minister of Queen Liliuokalani, and is probably the richest man in the islands. Furthermore, he is the father-in-law of Prince David, who under the monarchy was an heir to the throne, and royalty, so far as possible under a republic, thus gets recognition from President Roosevelt.

PRESIDENT DOLE.

This arrangement has been made here and the first formal step toward carrying it out was taken Saturday, when a letter written by Secretary Hitchcock, at the president's suggestion, was started for Honolulu, intimating to Governor Dole that his resignation was desired. It will require a month or more to carry out the proposed change, but a radical digression from the present policy, which has been attended with much factional party strife in the last two or three years, is decided upon.

The present secretary of the territory, Henry E. Cooper, in recent months the acting governor much of the time, because of Governor Dole's illness, is also to be displaced. George R. Carter, a prominent young man of Honolulu, a graduate of Yale college, and son of the former Hawaiian minister in this city, will succeed him.

It is altogether probable that still other changes will be made and an entire new regime inaugurated in the islands. Harold Sewall of Maine, also of Hawaii, where he was stationed as United States minister for several years, national committeeman for the territory until a few weeks ago, when he resigned in favor of Colonel Parker, is understood to have had a hand in the engineering the change. He has been here the past week, and, accompanied by Colonel Parker, has been in consultation with President Roosevelt. Mr. Sewall was himself an aspirant for the governorship at one time, but for some reason retired from the race. He had the earnest support of some eastern senators, but eventually gave way to Colonel Parker.

For some time President Roosevelt has been seeking a better adjustment of affairs in the Hawaiian islands. The vigorous factional strife there was emphasized almost as soon as he had been installed in the White House.

Besides his own large wealth, Colonel Parker has recently brought more riches under his family name by marriage with Mrs. Campbell of Honolulu, one of the wealthiest ladies of the islands. They were married in San Francisco a few weeks ago, and at the same time her daughter, Miss Campbell, was married to Prince David. All four have been in Washington some days on their wedding trip. They were at the second official reception at the White House, where President and Mrs. Roosevelt showed especial attention to Colonel and Mrs. Parker, inviting them behind the line. All are native Hawaiians. Colonel Parker is a most striking figure, tall, powerfully built, and looks every inch a giant.

Governor Dole's term of four years will not expire till May 9, 1904, but his continued poor health has given rise to many rumors that he was about to resign. The office pays a salary of $5000. Colonel Parker and Prince David and their families plan to sail for Honolulu about Feb. 6.

CASE 113

By... Emile Gaboriau

CHAPTER V.

THE Archangel hotel, Mme. Gipsy's asylum, was the most elegant building on the Quai St. Michel. A person who paid her fortnight's board in advance was treated with consideration at this hotel. Mme. Alexandre, who had been a pretty woman, was now stout, tightly laced, always overdressed and fond of wearing a number of flashy gold chains, falling in cascades over her fat bosom. She had bright eyes and white teeth, but, alas, a red nose. Of all her weaknesses—and heaven knows she had indulged in every variety—only one remained; she loved a good dinner, with plenty of wine. She loved her husband, and about the time M. Patrigent was leaving the hospital she began to be worried that her "little man" had not returned to dinner. She was about to sit down without him when the hotel boy cried out:

"Here is monsieur!"

"Why, how late you are, my little man!" she cried as she dropped her knife and fork and rushed forward to embrace him.

But he received her caresses with an air of abstraction.

"I'm tired," he said. "I have been the whole day playing billiards with Evariste, M. Fauvel's valet, and allowed him to win as often as he wished. I became acquainted with him yesterday, and now I am his best friend. If I wish to enter M. Fauvel's service as a messenger, I can rely upon M. Evariste's good word."

"What, you be an office messenger? You?"

"Of course I would. How else am I to get into M. Fauvel's house for the purpose of studying my characters?"

"Then the valet gave you no news?"

"Nothing that I could make use of, and yet I turned him inside out like a glove. This banker is a remarkable man. Evariste says he has not a single vice, not even a little defect by which his valet could gain 10 sous. He neither smokes, drinks nor plays—in fact, he is a saint. He is worth millions and lives as respectably and quietly as a grocer. He is devoted to his wife, adores his children, is very hospitable, but seldom goes into society."

"Then his wife is young?"

"She must be about fifty."

Mme. Alexandre reflected a moment.

"Did you inquire about the other members of the family?"

"Certainly. The younger son is an officer in the army. The elder son, Lucien, lives with his parents and is as proper as a young lady."

"And this niece of whom you have spoken?"

"Evariste could tell me nothing about her."

Mme. Alexandre shrugged her shoulders.

"If you have discovered nothing, it is because there is nothing to be discovered. Still do you know what I would do if I were in your place?"

"What?"

"I would consult M. Lecoq."

At the mention of this name Fanferlot jumped up as if he had been shot.

"That's pretty advice! Do you want me to lose my place? M. Lecoq does not suspect that I have anything to do with the case except to obey his orders."

"Who told you to let him know you were investigating it on your own account? You can consult him with an air of indifference, as if you were not at all interested, and after you have got his opinion you can take advantage of it."

The detective weighed his wife's words.

"Perhaps you are right," he said. "Yet M. Lecoq is so devilishly shrewd that he might see through it all."

"Shrewd!" echoed Mme. Alexandre. "Shrewd! All of you at the police office say that so often that you have made his reputation."

"Well, I will think the matter over. But in the meantime what does the little one say?"

The "little one" was Mme. Nina Gipsy.

In taking up her abode at the Archangel the poor girl thought she was following good advice, and, as Fanferlot had not shown himself, she was still under the impression that she had obeyed a friend of Prosper. When she received her summons from M. Patrigent, she admired the wonderful skill of the police in discovering her hiding place, for she had established herself at the hotel under a false or, rather, her true name, Palmyre Chocareille. Artfully questioned by her inquisitive landlady, she had without any mistrust confided her history to her. Thus Fanferlot was able to pose before the judge as a skillful detective when he pretended to have discovered all this information from a variety of sources.

"The little one is still up stairs," answered Mme. Alexandre. "She suspects nothing. But to keep her in her present ignorance becomes daily more difficult. I don't know what the judge told her, but she came home very angry. She wanted to go and make a fuss at M. Fauvel's. Then she wrote a letter, which she told Jean to post for her. But I kept it to show you."

"What!" interrupted Fanferlot. "You have a letter and did not tell me before? Perhaps it contains the clew to the mystery. Quick! Give it to me!"

Mme. Alexandre opened a little cupboard and took out a letter, which she handed to her husband.

"Here, take it," she said, "and be satisfied."

Considering that she used to be a chambermaid, Palmyre Chocareille, since become Mme. Gipsy, wrote a good letter. It was addressed in a free, flowing hand: "M. M. L. de Clameran, Forge-Master, Hotel du Louvre To be handed to M. Raoul de Lagors. (Very important.)"

"Oh, ho!" said Fanferlot, accompanying his explanation with a little whistle, as was his habit when he thought he had made a grand discovery. "Oh, ho!"

"Do you intend to open it?" questioned Mme. Alexandre.

"Yes," said Fanferlot as he dexterously opened the envelope.

Mme. Alexandre leaned over the shoulder of her "little man," and they both read:

M. Raoul—Prosper is in prison accused of a robbery which I know he never committed. Three days ago I wrote to you on this subject.

"What!" interrupted Fanferlot. "This silly girl wrote and I never saw the letter?"

"But, little man, she must have posted it herself the day she went to the Palais de Justice."

"Very likely," said Fanferlot, satisfied. He continued reading:

I wrote to you three days ago and have no reply. Who will help Prosper if his best friends desert him? If you don't answer this letter, I shall consider myself released from a certain promise and without scruple will tell Prosper of the conversation I overheard between you and M. de Clameran. But I can count on you, can I not? I shall expect you at the Archangel hotel day after tomorrow between 12 and 4.

NINA GIPSY.

The letter read, Fanferlot without a word proceeded to copy it.

"Well," said Mme. Alexandre, "what do you say?"

Fanferlot was delicately resealing the copied letter when the door of the hotel office was suddenly opened, and the boy whispered:

"Hist! Hist!"

Fanferlot disappeared with marvelous celerity into a dark closet. He had barely time to close the door before Mme. Gipsy entered.

Alas, the poor girl was sadly changed. She was pale, her cheeks were hollow and her eyes were red with weeping.

On seeing her Mme. Alexandre could not repress a cry of surprise.

"Why, my child, you are not going out?"

"I am obliged to do so, madame, and I came to ask you to tell any one that may call during my absence to wait until I return."

"But where are you going at this hour, sick as you are?"

Mme. Gipsy hesitated a moment.

"Oh," she said, "you are so good to me that I am tempted to confide in you. Read this note, which a messenger just now brought to me."

"What!" cried Mme. Alexandre, perfectly aghast. "A messenger come here and go up to your room?"

"Is there anything surprising in that?"

"Oh, no."

And in a tone loud enough to be heard in the closet she read the note:

A friend of Prosper, who can neither receive you nor present himself at your house, needs to speak to you. Be in the stage office opposite the St. Jacques tower tonight at 9 precisely, and the writer will approach and tell you what he has to say to you. I have appointed this public place for the rendezvous so as to relieve you of all fear.

"And you are going to this rendezvous?" cried Mme. Alexandre.

"Certainly,"

"But it is imprudent, foolish. It is a snare to trap you."

"It makes no difference," interrupted Gipsy. "I am so unfortunate already that I have nothing more to dread. Any change would be a relief."

And, without waiting to hear any more, she set out. She was not in the street before Fanferlot bounced out of the closet.

"A thousand thunders!" he cried. "Are people to walk over the Archangel as if it were a public street? Was ever such impudence heard of?" he continued. "A messenger comes into my house and goes up stairs without being seen by anybody! And the idea of you, a sensible woman, being idiotic enough to dissuade that little viper from keeping the appointment!"

"But, my dear"—

"Did you not suppose that I would follow her and discover what she is attempting to conceal? Come, make haste and help me, so that she won't recognize me."

FOOD NOT ALL

Food is not all the thin man needs. Maybe he's sick. You can't make him eat by bringing him food. But Scott's Emulsion can make him eat. That Emulsion gives a man appetite and feeds him both. It brings back lost flesh.

No trouble about digestion. The weakest stomach can digest Scott's Emulsion. It tastes good, too. Scott's Emulsion paves the way for other food. When wasted and weakened by long illness it gives strength and appetite that ordinary food cannot give. Not only food—medicine, too—Scott's Emulsion of pure cod-liver oil.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

SISTERS FOUND DEAD

Manner of Their Taking Off Is Not Yet Accounted For

Boston, Jan. 27.—Two sisters, Ann Doherty, 50 years old, and Mary Doherty, 40, were found dead in their tenement, 1180 Tremont street, and the cause of their death is being investigated by the police. A friend of the dead women and agent of the owner of the building called on last Tuesday to collect the rent. Mary told him she had been sick, but expected to return to work during the week. This was the last time either of the women were seen alive.

The agent called again Saturday, but receiving no response to his knocks he notified the police. When they entered the apartments the body of Mary was found lying upon the bed as if she had suddenly awakened from sleep and had fallen back, while lying across the threshold, face downard, with a bad bruise upon her forehead, from which the blood had flowed freely, was the partially clothed body of Ann. Besides this wound there were no marks upon the bodies and there was no evidence of a struggle.

There is nothing to indicate that the women committed suicide and the cause of death is at present a mystery to those who are investigating the case.

Ann Doherty was known to have heart trouble and attacks of pain were frequent. The police have bank books belonging to the sisters, each showing good sized accounts.

Assaulted and Robbed

Thomaston, Conn., Jan. 27.—Edward Miller, aged 50, a Hebrew traveling pedlar, was attacked and robbed by an unknown man while driving on the outskirts of this town yesterday. He received a bullet wound in the head from which he may die. Miller was known to carry a considerable sum of money with him. The robber made his escape with Miller's horse and team. The rig was later found in Bristol, 10 miles away, but no trace of the robber could be found.

Fifteen Thousand Vaccinated

Boston, Jan. 27.—In view of the many rumors of the alarming prevalence of smallpox cases in East Boston and the failure of physicians to properly report them the board of health sent 125 doctors into that district yesterday to make a house to house examination and vaccinate the inmates. As the result of their labors fully 15,000 people were vaccinated during six hours and only two cases of smallpox were discovered.

An Old, Old Game

Boston, Jan. 27.—The police have had reported to them a bunco game at the Charlestown docks Saturday wherein the victim lost $557. The man victimized was approached by a well dressed stranger who wished to cash a check for $750. He was given $557 for it, and the check later proved to be bogus. The police will not give out the name of the man who lost his money so easily.

Stabbed In the Back

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 27.—William Obrey was frightfully cut with a knife while on the street yesterday and Frank A. Burt, a negro, has been arrested as the assailant. No reason for the assault is known. The knife was plunged into Obrey's back until it penetrated the ribs and nearly touched the heart. On Burt was found a sharp pointed knife with an eight-inch blade.

Wiring May Have Been Faulty

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 27.—The board of fire engineers have come to a decision in the matter of the Kennard block fire, and report that while the evidence taken at the recent investigation will not permit of a definite statement of the cause, in the opinion of the board defective electric wiring was the cause of the conflagration.

Cow Kicked Lamp Over

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 27.—A kerosene lamp kicked over by a cow here yesterday started a fire in Woodward Bros.' stables in South Worcester, resulting in the loss of 14 cows and seven horses. The lamp was placed in a bracket in the rear of the animal's stall and the force of the kick sent it into a bundle of hay.

Hundred Men Quit Work

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 27.—An alleged increase in work without a corresponding raise in wages has caused the handle finishers at the Rogers Bay State cutlery to go out on strike, together with sympathizing workmen from other departments of the factory, to the number of about 100.

FOUR JUDICIAL BODIES

Now Interested In the Strike of Hub Teamsters

COURT HEARING CONTINUES

Union Files a Cross Libel In Injunction Proceedings—Board of Arbitration, the Legislature and Governor Crane Are Appealed to by Strikers

Boston, Jan. 28.—No less than four judicial bodies are either acting or stand ready to do so in the teamsters' strike, which last week brought turmoil and almost rioting in the streets of Boston. The court hearing in the injunction petition against the Teamsters' union is still unfinished; the state board of arbitration has been appealed to and asked to give a public hearing on the trouble; an order was introduced in the legislature yesterday for a similar hearing by the committee on labor, and Governor Crane waited in vain yesterday afternoon to hear the union side of the trouble, having promised to listen to a statement. It is likely, however, that the statu quo will be maintained until a decision is rendered in the court hearing.

The jam of people at the court house and the absence of street disturbances indicate that the centre of the storm is now in the equity session of the superior court, Judge Braley presiding. Unless better progress is made than was the case yesterday afternoon it may be three or four days before the judge will be in a position to dismiss the temporary injunction or make it permanent against the members of the Teamsters' union No. 25.

The court was in session about an hour and a half, and four witnesses were heard, all being called by the attorney of the R. S. Brine company, against whom the union seems very bitter. There are half a dozen more still to be heard, and then it is expected that not only will the union counsel call others to contradict the petitioner's evidence, but in support of a cross libel which was filed by the union yesterday, requesting the court to order the Brine company not to pursue its course of the past few days, such as blocking the streets with processions of teams and using cameras.

Last week, after a short hearing, Judge Braley granted a temporary injunction against the Teamsters' union, restraining its members from interfering with the Brine teams, throwing missiles or using threats and intimidating epithets. Yesterday he was asked to make this injunction permanent.

S. L. Whipple appeared for the Brine company, H. J. Jaquith and John W. Sherman for the defendants, while Nathan Matthews was present in the interests of the Freight Handlers' union and Oscar F. Cox, its president.

Mr. Whipple opened for the petitioner and said that the members of the union had interfered with the Brine company in the conduct of its business, had surrounded its wagons, cut harnesses and had used indecent language. The allegation was also made that the acts were done as a scheme and conspiracy. The testimony, however, failed to show that union men had committed overt acts.

It was expected that as soon as the court adjourned, a committee of the teamsters would wait upon the governor for the purpose of laying the strikers' side of the difficulty before him. An appointment had been made in behalf of the union committee by two senators, but no one appeared at the hour named, and after waiting half an hour Governor Crane left the state house, much to the chagrin of the two senators.

The union yesterday requested the state board of arbitration to hold a public hearing and exercise its power to send for persons and papers. The request is being considered.

The order in the legislature was introduced in the house by Representative Donohue of Fall River and is practically the same as the petition of the union to the arbitration board, except that it provides for a hearing by the committee on labor. The order went over until today.

As usual, the Brine teams came and went under a full police escort, but yesterday the parade was augmented by four more teams, so that the procession occupied nearly five minutes in passing a given point. There was no demonstration along the line of march either in the morning or at night. The police, however, are anxiously awaiting the outcome of the proceedings in the court.

Lawrence Sneak Thief Falls Into Clutches of Haverhill Officer

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 28.—While the woman clerk in Snyder's jewelry store on Essex street, Lawrence, was preparing to leave for home at 5:30 o'clock last night, a man rushed in and, smashing the case in the window, grabbed a number of gold watches and a quantity of jewelry. Before the woman could shout for help the man had made his escape.

The Haverhill police were notified shortly after 6 o'clock and an officer immediately was sent out to meet the electric car from Lawrence. He boarded the car about a mile outside the city and from the description of the Lawrence police immediately picked out his man. As he grabbed him another man sitting beside him jumped up and escaped from the car.

Although a scuffle ensued, the thief was secured, and upon being taken to the police station several watches and considerable jewelry were found upon him, which were afterwards identified. The man gave his name as John Rotch. Later in the evening he was taken back to Lawrence.

EXPLOSION IN A SHAFT

Has a Most Disastrous Effect at New York

DYNAMITE IN A SHANTY

Caught Fire From Overturned Candle and Caused the Death of Six Persons, Injuries to a Hundred, and at Least $1,000,000 Damage

New York, Jan. 28.—The reserve supply of high explosives stored at the Park avenue shaft of the rapid transit tunnel blew up shortly after noon yesterday and carried death to six persons, injury to a hundred others, and serious damage to much property, which suffered from a huge volley of debris and the vibration of the detonation.

The irregular square formed by the Murray Hill hotel, on the west, the Manhattan eye and ear hospital and the Grand Union hotel on the east, and the Grand Central station on the north, was the scene of the explosion. The buildings named sustained the greatest damage, but the area affected extended for several blocks in the four directions from the centre.

J. R. Robertson of Nelson, B. C., was killed by debris hurled into the room in the Murray Hill hotel which he occupied. He was the general manager in Canada for the British Columbia Gold Fields company, Limited. He was a Scotchman and left a widow and four children. He is said to have been quite wealthy.

The sunken approach to the street railway tunnel used by the Madison avenue line cuts through Park avenue and the shaft for the rapid transit subway was run down beside it at the intersection of East 41st street. The street railway approach was housed over with a superstructure that was used for the operating plant of the rapid transit contractors. Temporary buildings for storage purposes were thrown up against the superstructure at the mouth of the shaft and there the explosion occurred.

It tore a great gorge in the street, demolishing the temporary buildings and part of the superstructure, and sent a mass of earth, splintered timber and twisted iron high in the air. Much of it went crashing against the front of the Murray Hill hotel, and although the walls and main structure of that building stood the shock, nearly every room in the front of the house was wrecked. The Manhattan eye and ear hospital fared nearly as badly, and had to be abandoned by the management.

The Grand Union hotel lost all of its windows and glass partitions and practically every front window in the Grand Central was shattered. The great clocks on its front towers were blown from their cases. Thousands of windows, some of them seven blocks from the tunnel shaft, fell in fragments. It was the showers of broken glass and falling debris which injured so many persons. General alarms brought firemen, police reserves and ambulances and the injured were speedily cared for.

Torrents of water from broken mains poured into the tunnel shaft while the wreckage was being cleared from the street railway subway and it was feared that the street might cave in.

The cause of the explosion and the quantity of explosives which blew up are not definitely known. Several causes have been advanced, but an official inquiry will probably be required to reveal the reason.

Ira A. Shaler, engineer in charge of the work at Park avenue; John Braken, a foreman, and Martin McGrath, an assistant foreman, were placed under arrest, the charge being homicide.

The damage may exceed $1,000,000. The first estimate on the Murray Hill hotel placed the loss at $100,000, but afterwards the hotel was abandoned as unsafe. If the building is condemned the loss on it alone will approach $1,000,000. The damage to the Grand Union hotel is estimated at $40,000 and that to the Manhattan hospital at $5,000. The loss at the Grand Central is entirely in glass as is that of the 100 or more buildings affected by the explosion. No estimate has been made of the losses sustained by the rapid transit contractors.

Moses Ephs, who was a powder man in charge of the shanty where the explosion occurred, is at a hospital suffering from contusion and shock. On going to the shanty about noon he found a candle which he had left lighted on a shelf, lying on the floor. Some paper about it was on fire and close to this burning paper were 13 boxes of dynamite cartridges, each box containing from 60 to 75 cartridges. Ephs threw a pail of water over the fire and ran to get another one. On coming back with it he saw that the flames were close to the dynamite and dropping his pail he tried to get away. Then came the explosion and the next he knew he was a patient in the hospital. Ephs is practically a prisoner, a policeman having been assigned to guard him.

Double Tragedy In Hotel

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Barry J. Zeigler of Lancaster, Pa., probably fatally wounded his wife, Anna, and then killed himself yesterday at a hotel here. A note left by him declared that he and the woman had decided to die and that, as he lacked the nerve, she had promised to commit the act. The woman declared that the shooting was done by Zeigler.

Held Up by Snow and Cold

St. Paul, Jan. 28.—Nearly every passenger train was from one hour to six hours late yesterday, while coast trains were 12 to 15 hours late. The latter trains met the severest storm in the northwest and were delayed not only by snow but by the exceedingly lower temperature, which made it impossible to keep up a full head of steam.

Eighty-Two Boers Captured

Pretoria, Jan. 28.—By a clever night march General Hamilton surprised a laager between Ermelo and Bethel, in the Transvaal colony, and charged the Boers, who fled and were pursued by the British. As a result of this expedition, 82 Boers and a quantity of stores were captured. The casualties were small.

President Would Preserve Game

He made a brief address, in which he assured the organization of his sympathy with the movement to preserve the game of this country.

Good Afternoon.

There should be no discrimination in serving notices upon landlords where tenants are convicted of selling liquor. Probably Mr. Faxon will not regret in the end that the police are getting after the landlords, as it will help to get the best of those who sell. Perhaps, however, the law refers only to landlords who permit licensed saloons to occupy their buildings.

It is not necessary for Quincy to appeal to Carnegie or other millionaires for a public library building. A Quincy born boy, the late Thomas Crane, was quick to see the needs of the city in that direction, and the library building on Washington and Spear streets erected over twenty years ago is a grand memorial to him and an ornament to the city. At the same time it is as useful as it is ornamental, as is shown by the daily increasing number who avail themselves of the library. Quincy people should show their appreciation of the addition to the library grounds which Albert Crane has just given to the city.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Modern business is done chiefly on credit. As long as there is confidence everthing is serene. But anything which impairs or seriously disturbs confidence might change the situation beyond the possibility of recognition within thirty days. No one can say that this will occur, but when posperity has been running for several years, when the level of prices is high and the return to investors is small, when the investment fund of the country has been well absorbed and whose stocks have been widely distributed, when syndicates and combination and excessive capitalization have gone on apace, it is wise for conservative people to think about the possibility of a change, and to put their financial houses somewhat in order, even if they find their precautions ahead of time. — Wall Street Journal.

☞Men eat too much mince pie, and girls eat too much candy; other men drink whiskey, and other girls go out out in the wet with thin shoes and no rubbers; people abuse their souls and bodies in a thousand and one ways and go to their graves in spite of physician or healer; but we all recognize that the law is a useless resource. More than that, we recognize, even if we do not stop to argue out the question, that law is a dangerous resource on account of the temptation when once the regulation of individual thought and conduct is attempted to carry it too far. As we have repeatedly said before, the whole Christian Science scheme seems to us a farrago of solemn nonsense, but we also believe that society would better not attempt to suppress all solemn nonsense by the process of the law, even if a few lives are sacrificed The undertaking is altogether too vast.—New Bedford Standard.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

Numerous Orders Introduced for Appropriations.

Councilman Fallon Remonstrates.

Defeated Building Ordinance of 1901 Introduced.

Councilman Gassett was the only absent member at Monday night's meeting of the City Council.

NEW REGISTRAR.

A communication was received from the Mayor announcing the resignation of John C. McGowan as Registrar of Voters and appointing Daniel McLennan to fill the vacancy. Appointment confirmed.

ACTION RESCINDED.

Mayor Bryant addressed the Council saying that the acceptance of the report of the special committee on the gas investigation made it mandatory upon the executive to petition the Legislature. He found that there was not sufficient time now to prepare a bill, and he requested that part of the order be rescinded.

Later the matter was taken up and that part of the vote rescinded.

PETITIONS.

The Misses Dolan of Bigelow street petitioned for an apportionment of their sidewalk assessment.

Laid on the table until later when the necessary order was passed.

PAY OF FIREMEN.

The Committee on Finance reported an order appropriating $684 for the pay of men in the Fire Department for 1901 to be charged to the appropriation of 1902. Ordered to a second reading.

POLICE STATION.

The joint Committee on Finance and Fire Department reported a slight amendment to the order for $1,500 for repairing the Hose house for a patrol wagon station, and fitting it up the second floor of the new Police station.

Councilman Fallon understood that $4,500 had been expended upon the police station and this should have complete it. He felt that amount had been expended carelessly.

The order, however, took second reading and was placed in the orders of business for the next meeting.

Later it was taken from the file, and the rules were suspended.

Councilman Freeman explained that the $4,500 had been expended in fitting up the old stone building. It now became necessary for a house for the patrol wagon and batteries, and to fix up rooms for the permanent men; $1,000 of the order was to raise the old hose building and put it in order, and $500 was for fitting up the upper part of the station.

Mayor Bryant said the old hose building had a hall and that it was proposed to use this room for a voting precinct. It now costs $60 a year for rent for a polling place for this district. The building had got to be raised anyway to take care of the patrol wagon, and it was also necessary to have sleeping quarters for the driver of the wagon.

Councilman Fallon found fault with the way the money had been expended without advertising for bids. The idea of giving money to officials to spend as they want to. Let them draw plans and specifications and advertise.

At this point the electric lights went out, but whether it was the eloquence of the Councilman or the burning out of a fuse had not been determined when the Council adjourned.

The order appropriating $1,500 was then passed by the following vote:

Yeas,—Adams, Elcock, Faxon, Freeman, Hadlock, Hughes, Langelier, Meyer, Newcomb, Nichols, Nickerson, Polk, Smith, Stewart, Thompson, Whiton—16.

Nays,—Bass, Craig, Diack, Fallon, Piper—5.

Absent,—Gassett.

Not voting,—President Alden.

TRANSFERS.

The Committee on Finance reported an order authorizing the City Auditor to transfer balances in the Fire department appropriations for 1901. Took second reading.

TEMPORARY LOANS.

The Committee on Finance reported ought to pass on the order authorizing loan to the amount of $300,000 in anticipation of taxes. Order took second reading.

REFERRED TO EXECUTIVE.

The Committee on Streets reported reference to the executive on the petition of the Eagle Polishing Co. to run a compressed air pipe across Intervale street. Adopted.

SEWER BILL.

The Committee on Sewers and Drains reported an order authorizing the Mayor to petition the Legislature for authority to borrow $200,000 to extend the sewer system.

Councilman Fallon claimed that the engineer or Sewer Commission should bring plans showing what they intended to do with the money. If it was necessary to dig a ditch to Quincy Point or West Quincy we should see the plans to give us an idea. We have an eight-inch pipe on Copeland street that will not take the sewage and will have to be torn up at the expense of the city through error of someone. His opinion was that $100,000 would put it through. It is not necessary to build a sewer in West Quincy for three years, until the Metropolitan system is ready to receive us.

The report of the committee was accepted, Councilman Fallon voting no.

WATER EXTENSIONS.

The Committee on Water Supply reported ought to pass, on the order for $30,000 for water extensions. To Committee on Finance.

SNOW ACCOUNT.

The Committee on Finance reported an order authorizing the City Auditor to approve bills for the removal of snow beyond the one-third allowed by law.

TAX REFUND.

The Committee on Finance reported an amendment to the order refunding $400 tax title to Willard Walsh, making the amount $180. Adopted.

STREET RAILWAYS.

At this time President Alden referred the matter of location granted the street railway not built upon, and the matter of through cars to Boston considered in 1901, to a special committee consisting of Councilmen Nichols, Bass, and Adams.

CONCRETE SIDEWALK.

Councilman Nichols offered an order for $2,500 for a concrete sidewalk on the north side of Lincoln avenue from Newport avenue to Highland avenue. To Committee on Streets.

DRAIN.

Councilman Diack offered an order for $600 for a drain pipe on the south side of Indpendence avenue between Goddard and Bennington streets. To Committee on Sewers and Drains.

MORE LIGHT.

Councilman Adams offered an order for one incandescent light at the corner of Washington street and Washington court. To Committee on Streets.

PAVING ORDER.

Councilman Hughes offered an order for $6,500 for paving the west side of Willard street from near Mannex shed to Robertson street, and the east side of Willard street from Hall place to Crescent street. To Committee on Streets.

GRAVEL SIDEWALK

Councilman Adams offered an order for $1,000 for a gravel sidewalk on the south side of Washington street, from Chubbuck street to South street. To Committee on Streets.

BUILDING ORDINANCE.

Councilman Newcomb offered an ordinance establishing the office of inspector of buildings and defining his duties. To Joint Committee on Ordinances and Public Buildings.

STREET RAILWAY STATION.

Councilman Meyer offered an order requesting the street railway to establish a waiting room near City Square where it will best meet the requirements of the public. Adopted.

PLUMBING.

Councilman Smith offered an order for $3,500 for installing a system of water closets at the John Hancock school, and connecting same with the public sewer. To Committee on Public Buildings.

Adjourned at 8.34.

Big Machine Shop.

The 192 feet addition to the machine shop at the Fore River Works has been practically completed, and the installment of new machinery will go on rapidly. One of these machines is a plane thirty feet long, that will plane a piece of steel, a foot square, on the two sides and top at the same time. Two large forging lathes are also being placed in position. This building with its new addition is four hundred feet long and has a floor space of one and three-fourths acres. A travelling crane operated by electricity runs from one end of the building to the other thus enabling the heaviest forgings of pieces of machinery to be easily handled.

NEW PROCEDURE.

Notice Served on Henry H. Faxon

As a Result of the Sunday Raids.

Said to be Liable to Suit and Also for Aiding Liquor Dealer.

No one takes more delight in roasting the police than does Henry H. Faxon, and he has often made them squirm under the sharp cuts given in his open letters. It is not often that they have a chance to get back at him, but they did this morning, and now it is said that it is Faxon who is squirming.

Mike Rose, one of the tenants of Mr. Faxon at 13 Granite street was convicted on Monday of violation of the liquor laws and fined $50.

This morning Mr. Faxon had served upon him by officer McKay, a notice under section 57 of Chapter 100, of the Revised Laws. This notice was that Mike Rose, a tenant of Mr. Faxon, had been convicted of violation of the liquor law.

The serving of this notice, it is said, makes Mr. Faxon civilly liable for all damages that may arise from persons visiting these premises. That is, if a man visited them, got drunk and fell down stairs, the man's wife could sue Mr. Faxon for damages.

It also, it is said, brings Mr. Faxon under the provisions of Section 11 of Chapter 101 of the Revised Laws, which provide that after such notice, if he does not eject the person convicted, he shall be deemed guilty of aiding and maintaining a liquor nuisance, and punished as provided in section seven of the same chapter,—that is, by a fine of not less than $50 or more than $100, or by imprisonment for not less than three months nor more than twelve months.

Mr. Faxon will probably act promptly in evicting his tenant, and possibly others whom he has reason to believe are selling liquor.

The joke (?) of it all is that Mr. Faxon has urged the police by letters to raid his houses where he believed liquor was for sale. When landlords realize that they may be liable as well as their tenants, they will be a little more particular who occupy their houses.

THE FISHERIES.

Interesting Talk on an Old Time Occupation.

Mr. E. L. Robbins of Wollaston, who has written many entertaining guide books of the Old Colony division of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., and otherwise achieved success before the Unity club and elsewhere, gave a very interesting talk before the Brotherhood of Bethany church, Monday evening on the "Fisheries of the Grand Banks."

He spoke from personal experience, as he went on one of those four months' trips years ago before the government discontinued its bounty. He paid a worthy tribute to the fishermen of Cape Cod, which he said should include all those who sailed from the Massachusetts coast. It was the fishermen of Massachusetts who made success possible in the early colonial wars and also in the War of 1812. It was the quick response of a regiment of Marblehead fishermen to Trenton, N. J. that gave victory to Gen. Washington.

In the palmy days of the merchant marine, eight-tenths of the captains were Cape Cod men. They were shrewd Yankee business men, who visited every port of the world, and often returned with $40,000 after an absence of three or four years. They were the nursery of our navy, and many of the officers of today are Cape Cod stock. They were always patriotic and quick to respond to their country's call. They did not know danger, and this was why they won victory after victory. He spoke of the suspense in the fisherman's home, and among the fishermen, particularly when the ship was returning home.

It was the treaty of 1866 that struck a death blow to the fishermen of the Grand Banks, and Plymouth alone which then fitted out over 150 vessels, now fitted out none.

Thanks were voted Mr. Robbins at the close of his talk for his instructive and entertaining address.

Frank Gilbert contributed piano selections, and then the mystery was solved. When the gentlemen adjourned to the adjoining room they found that "life preservers" were doughnuts. These with piping hot coffee made by the "Hayward boys" of Camp Hayward fame, were enjoyed, and after a social hour the meeting dissolved.

CITY BREVITIES.

A big drop in temperature from noon of yesterday to sunrise this morning.

If the cold weather of last night and today continues there will soon be skating again.

Rev. William P. McKenzie will deliver an address on Christian Science at Braintree Town hall tonight.

Johnson Bros. have just completed the enlargement of the storeroom in the rear of their store to nearly double its former size.

Principal Harper of the High school reads a paper this afternoon on "High School Organization" before the pedagogical department at Wellesley college.

Work was commenced this morning repairing the old hose house on School street, so that it can be used for a stable for the patrol wagon. The order for this work was passed at Monday night's Council meeting.

Time was when some kind hearted person used to flood a pond for the young people of Atlantic to skate on near home. It doesn't look as if "time would be again" for here is the freezing weather and where is the pond?

The annual pool tournament of the Quincy Point Cribbage club was brought to a successful finish Monday evening, the winner of the tournament being Mr. Joseph Delory, who has won every game he has played and is now the undisputed champion pool player of the club.

AN IMPROVEMENT.

Crane Family Make Another Gift to Public Library.

The trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library have recently had deeded to them by Albert Crane, for library purposes, the Joseph T. French estate on Washington street adjoining the library property on the northerly side. The lot contains 5000 feet of land and the buildings thereon consisting of a house and stable.

It is the intention of the trustees of the library to dispose of these buildings and then throw the lot into the present library grounds. This will make a marked improvement to the approach to the library from City Square, as the library is now hidden from view until the French house has been passed.

The continued interest of members of the Crane family in the library and the city is pleasing to note. The beautiful library and its spacious and well kept grounds are the pride of Quincy people generally and it is recognized that the addition will make them even more attractive. It is hoped that soon they may be still further improved by the removal of all the buildings to the Coddington street boulevard. If the corner is not taken for a government building a part of it may soon be necessary for an enlargement of the library. There is need now of a much larger reading room, and a children's room.

Held-up in Boston.

The morning Post reports that William Bliss, whose home is alleged to be in Quincy, was held up by thugs, in Post Office square, Boston, Monday night, and knocked unconscious by a slug shot. The opportune arrival of an officer prevented his being robbed The officer chased the three thugs and fired four shots at them, but they got away. Bliss was removed to Station 2 where his wound was dressed.

The Quincy police know no one by the name of William Bliss, neither does his name appear upon the voting lists or in the directory. There are, however, many strangers at the Fore River Works and he possibly may be employed there.

Funeral of Judge Tirrell.

The funeral of James E. Tirrell, who died suddenly Jan. 24, was held Monday afternoon at 2.30 from his late residence on Beacon street. The services were conducted by Rev. Ellery Channing Butler of the First church. There was a large attendance of friends of the deceased, including a delegation from the Quincy Bar Association. There were several floral tributes including a wreath of ivy from the Bar Association. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston.

Dance at Atlantic.

The first social dancing party of the season by the Pilgrim Fathers, was given Monday evening in Music hall, Atlantic. There was a large attendance, including many people from out of town. It was one of the prettiest parties ever given in Atlantic. The results were so satisfactory, that the Pilgrim Fathers will run another dance the last of February.

ACRES OF SAILS.

Will Be Carried by New Seven Master.

Now Building at Quincy Shipyard.

The Weight of Sails About Ten Tons When Dry.

Few people have any conception of the amount of canvas which is required to make a suit of sails for one of the great schooners which are now becoming so popular among shipowners today, says the Boston Journal. The statement that the vessel has three or four or five masts, and that they are so high, means nothing to the person who is not in close touch with such matters, and so at the first thought the statement that a schooner like the Prescott Palmer, which was launched at Bath, Maine, last week for a Boston man, spreads 10,000 yards of canvas, does not seem anything very great.

But it is a great fact, and it includes in the statement the immense windsurface of the sails; the great weight to raise and lower; the added weight when they are wet, and the great strain which must of necessity be brought on the hull of the vessel when the sails are set; and that in turn suggests how strongly built must be a big schooner in order to stand the strains to which it is subjected.

It is interesting, therefore to any one, to consider for a moment the sail area of the wonder of naval architecture—the steel seven-masted schooner now building at the Fore River Ship building yards at Quincy.

This suit of sails is of course, the largest ever made in the world, and is now being made at the sail loft of F. L. Rowe & Son, at Gloucester, and will require the work of their full complement of men four weeks to complete the job.

This means that they will cut and sew into shape 83,000 square feet of duck, which, if laid out all at once, would cover almost two acres of ground.

In connection with the duck, it requires for bolt-ropes and other uses in making the sails 10,000 feet of rope, or over one and three-fourths miles, which will weigh about 3,000 pounds, a good load for a stout pair of horses.

When this vast amount of canvas and rope is put together into the suit of sails, it will weigh about 20,000 pounds, and it is evident at once that the great schooners of today require the services of strong steam engines to handle such great bulks.

The materials required and the labor necessary in making, if used to make smaller suits of sails, such as the largest fishermen require, would supply sail enough for nine vessels, and yet one schooner will wear the whole suit, and be the wonder of the maritime world till some other bright Yankee comes along who dares to go one better, and raise eight masts or find some other way to violate all the orthodox ideas of the profession.

Sacred Tableaux.

It will be worth making a decided effort to see the unique entertainment which is to be given Thursday and Friday evenings of this week in the main body of the Unitarian church, Wollaston.

It is not every day that one has the opportunity of beholding old Father Noah leaning out of the window of his Ark; Sampson losing his vast strength at the hands of the wily Delilah; Lot and his Daughters fleeing from the burning cities while his wife turning back to gaze with regret at the scene of vanished pleasures turns slowly into the pillar of salt; Jacob sleeping at the foot of the ladder while beauteous angels ascend and descend. All these and many more scenes from the Old Testament Scriptures have been prepared with great care for presentation. The accompanying music alone will be a real treat, as Mrs. Smith plays oratoria music upon the organ and such favorites as Mr. and Mrs. Follett, Miss Hastings and Miss Musgrove will give vocal selections. A very important feature of the program is Mrs. Gurney's exposition of each tableau. In a few telling words each story will be brought to mind before the picture strikes the eye.

Laid on Table.

The resignation of Rev. W. W. Dornan of pastor of the United Presbyterian church in this city came before the presbytery at Lowell on Monday. It was voted that the resignation be laid on the table, while a commission was appointed to make an investigation.

ROYALTY GOES TO WAR.

King Edward's Nephew to Face the Boers in South Africa.

Prince Arthur of Connaught, nephew of King Edward, who has gone to South Africa to fight the Boers, is the first actual royal prince to go to the seat of war. The young prince—he is but nineteen—goes not as a staff officer, but merely as a cavalry subaltern, in order to put an end to the popular belief in England that royal princes are barred from sharing the risks of actual warfare.

His father, the Duke of Connaught, who commands the army corps in Ireland, is said to have been at some trouble to get the king's consent to this step. The duke himself took part in the Egyptian war of 1882 and at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir commanded the guards' brigade.

In England it is felt that the Duke of Connaught would not have ordered his son to South Africa unless he had the strongest reasons for doing so. Africa is for some reason particularly fatal to royal persons and their kinfolk. The prince imperial of France was killed in South Africa, and Queen Victoria lost her grandson, Prince Christian Victor of Sleswick-Holstein, in the Transvaal and her son-in-law, Prince Henry of Battenberg, on the west coast of Africa.

The young prince who thus defies tradition and the bullets of the Boers is the second child of the king's brother. His mother is a cousin of the emperor of Germany and is noted for her intellectual power and strength of opinion. It is not doubted that she was largely instrumental in having her son sent to the front, believing that it would aid in bolstering up the waning martial spirit of England.

RENOUNCES RANK FOR LOVE

Francis Joseph's Granddaughter to Wed a Poor Lieutenant.

Romance has played a prominent part in the affairs of the Austrian royal family, the latest being the betrothal of Emperor Francis Joseph's favorite granddaughter to Prince Otho of Windisch-Graetz. Only with the greatest reluctance did the aged emperor give his consent to the betrothal, being unable to deny the wishes of his granddaughter, the Archduchess Elizabeth of Austria, with whom it is a love match pure and simple.

Her fiance, though belonging to a noble Austrian house, is only a younger son of a junior branch. He is a lieutenant in a uhlan regiment. The archduchess has willingly resigned whatever privileges her rank conferred on her. She is the daughter of the ill fated Crown Prince Rudolph, who a few years ago was found dead in his country castle, a suicide, it is now generally believed. At a family dinner recently given at Schonbrunn the date of the wedding was fixed for the 25th of the present month.

THE SPEAKING VOICE.

Its Use For Everyday Purposes and Why It Pleases or Irritates.

The voice reflects the whole nature of a person when uncontrolled. No sick person can talk like one who is well, although an actor who is in perfect health can assume the tones of one who is sick. It is very difficult for a person when angry to speak in pleasant tones, for anger corrugates and hardens the throat, just as pleasure softens and mellows it. The fixed timbre of an habitually cross individual is rough and guttural, and this is called a fixed nature, while the temporary timbre of one who is angry for the moment gives rise to the fugitive nature in the voice.

Herein we find the cause of so many disagreeable voices in the common habits of life. The scold of the household, whether man or woman, son or daughter, develops the scraping, harsh, grating, guttural or metallic sound that takes all the pleasure out of life and makes the beautiful face a sad disappointment when interpreted in speech, and in time the same nervous influences that destroyed the richness of the voice will some day transform the fair lines of the features into sharp angles and sour expression, and the stamp of nature's first intentions will be effaced by the weeds of habit. The voice is trained by its daily use. Habit is its teacher.

Not only does the timbre of every voice reflect character and fugitive moods, but the force used, the part of the scale employed, the speed of utterance and many other details are the result of constant influences. A woman's voice is supposed to range about one octave higher than the average male voice. This means that she produces twice as many sound vibrations per second. Tone is a nervous sensation made upon the brain of the hearer by air vibrations made rapidly enough to give the effect which is called noise or sound. It does not exist in fact. But the vibrations are real, and they pound upon that sensitive organ the ear, and a woman deals twice as many blows per second as a man.

Under excitement, whether of scolding or of rapid conversation or animated address, any person is sure to raise the pitch nearly an octave. This means a doubling of the blows upon the ear nerves leading to the brain. Add to this an increase of force and of nervous energy in the speaker and you have a process of tormenting that has no equal in the burdens of home life. The scolding voice is always a source of irritation. It may drive a person almost to distraction. It pierces the brain like sharp instruments driven with great speed and gives actual pain to that organ. On the same principle the habitual use of a high pitch is most tiresome. Many men love their wives at all other times except when they speak. To love and long for the society of a woman who uses a high pitched voice is contrary to all nature. It is a physical impossibility to cherish that which gives constant pain. Affection speaks always in gentle tones, in tender voice and in a low key. A rising scale is on the way to a scream, and the approach or suggestion of a scream is a mark of distress.

The user of the kind of voice just described is sure to waste an equal amount of life energy. She is compelled to listen to herself and is also subjected to the consequent irritation of brain and nervous force. It requires twice the life energy to produce twice the number of vocal vibrations. As may be easily ascertained, all persons who use high pitched voices are irritable, nervous and weak after such efforts.

While modulation requires the use of all the notes of the voice, there is a general average above and below which the movement of modulation should play, and the lower this average is the more beautiful and pleasing will the voice become.

In everyday life most persons use one note in speaking. It is very irritating, just as annoying as would be the use of one note on a piano. No matter how beautiful the tone, the incessant employment of one note in the scale is unendurable. The brain shrinks from all monotony. If you listen to voices that are otherwise beautiful and catch the one note tone, you will be affected just as you would be by listening to a musical instrument that gives sound only in one note.

Like every product of nature, the voice should not be allowed to run to weeds, but should be kept under cultivation.—Edmund Shaftesbury in Good Housekeeping.

Onions Attractively Prepared.

Any large white onion can be stuffed, but what are known as Spanish onions are usually selected for this purpose. Take those about three inches in diameter, cut off the tops and scoop out the centers; then parboil for five minutes. After draining they are ready to be filled. The stuffing may be of fine breadcrumbs, boiled rice, chopped raw or cooked meat. Whatever the chosen basis, it should be highly seasoned and moistened with a little melted butter. After filling the onions and putting one-half of a teaspoonful of butter on the top of each they are placed in a baking pan, stock poured in until about an inch deep and baked in a moderate oven for an hour or more.—Table Talk.

The Condor Still Missing

San Francisco, Jan. 28.—After ascertaining that neither the steamships China nor Sierra, which arrived here within a few hours of each other from Honolulu yesterday, brought any tidings of the missing warship Condor, Captain Fleet of the British cruiser Phaeton put to sea yesterday afternoon to cruise about between this port and Honolulu in search of the missing vessel.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold oward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

CRITICS OF THE BIBLE

Dr. King Thinks Their Place Is Outside the Methodist Fold

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.—At the weekly meeting of the Methodist ministers of this city yesterday, Rev. George B. Bickley read a paper referring to the published opinions of Professor Charles W. Pearson of the Northwestern university, who recently questioned the truth of miracles mentioned in the bible.

A general discussion followed the reading of the paper, resulting in the denunciation of several text books now in use in the Methodist theological seminaries. D. J. M. King of New York, one of the secretaries of the board of church extension, was present and expressed his opinion in an emphatic manner. "I respect the board of bishops," he said, "but that respect does not lead me to favor their action when by a majority of one they seated Professor Mitchell in the Boston Theological seminary and by that vote of one struck at the divinity of Jesus Christ.

"Dr. Mitchell is a more dangerous man than is Professor Pearson, because he is the more learned. Professor Pearson can easily be answered, but Dr. Mitchell is not to be disposed of so readily. The place for an honest man who does not believe in the fundamental teachings he promised to uphold is out of the fold. He may then criticise the bible if he has a mind to."

It was decided to bring Dr. Mitchell's "Foundation of Christian Faith" and other text books to the notice of the board of bishops.

Indian Tortured by Indians

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 28.—Fred Tiner, a fullblood Shawnee Indian, who was alleged to have outraged three Shawnee squaws, was tied to a stake to be burned to death by members of his tribe. He was first cruelly tortured. His face was beaten out of shape, his ears were nearly torn off by squaws, and other horrible torments were being applied when Deputy United States Marshal Davis arrived from Arbeka, I. T. He held the mob back with a gun, cut the thongs, backed away from the crowd with his prisoner and safely escaped to Weweeka, where Tiner was placed in jail.

Kern In New York

New York, Jan. 28.—Edward Kern, the valet of Paul G. Thebaud, who is accused of having robbed his employer of $50,000 worth of jewelry, reached this city yesterday in custody of Detective Kelly. Kern told of places in this city where he pawned small pieces of jewelry. When asked if he would disclose where a $15,000 pearl was hidden, he said that whether he would or not depended upon the advice of his lawyer.

A Grand Hand-Shaking

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Admiral and Mrs. Schley were tendered a public reception at the Auditorium hotel yesterday afternoon. As they ascended the stairway a chorus of 50 young women, attired in sailor suits, sang "See, the Conquering Hero Comes." The people shook the hands of both the admiral and his wife. Chairman Hungert estimated that the admiral shook hands with 3500 people during the reception.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. CASE =113= By... Emile Gaboriau

In a few minutes Fanferlot was completely disguised by a thick beard, a wig and one of those long linen blouses worn by men who go about seeking work and at the same time hoping they may not find it.

"Have you your handcuffs?" asked the solicitous Mme. Alexandre when he was ready.

"Yes, yes. Make haste and post that letter to M. de Clameran and keep good watch."

And without listening to his wife, who cried out, "Good luck!" Fanferlot darted away.

Mme. Gipsy had ten minutes' start of him, but he ran up the street he knew she must have taken and overtook her near the Change bridge. On Chatelet place she strolled up and down several times, read the theater bills and finally took a seat on a bench and at a quarter of 9 entered an omnibus office and sat down. A moment after Fanferlot entered; but, as he feared that Mme. Gipsy might recognize him in spite of his heavy beard, he took a seat at the opposite end of the room, where it was dark.

As the Hotel de Ville clock struck 9 a man entered, walked directly up to Gipsy, bowed and took a seat beside her. He was a medium sized man, rather stout, with a crimson face and fiery red whiskers. His dress was that of a well to do merchant. There was nothing in his appearance to excite attention. Fanferlot watched him eagerly.

"My friend," he said to himself, "in future I shall recognize you no matter where we meet, and this very evening I will follow you and find out who you are."

Despite his intent listening he could not hear a word spoken by the stranger or Gipsy. All he could do was to judge by their actions and countenances what was the subject of their conversation. When the stout man bowed and spoke to her, the girl looked so surprised that it was evident she had never seen him before. When he sat down by her and spoke to her, she jumped up with a frightened look, as if seeking to escape. A single look caused her to resume her seat. Then as the stout man went on talking Gipsy displayed great apprehension. She positively refused to do something; then suddenly she seemed to consent. At one moment she appeared ready to weep and the next her pretty face was illumined by a bright smile. Finally she shook hands with him, as if she was confirming a promise.

"What can all that mean?" said Fanferlot to himself as he sat in his dark corner, biting his nails. "What an idiot I am to have placed myself so far off!"

He was thinking how he could manage to approach nearer without arousing their suspicions when the fat man got up, offered his arm to Mme. Gipsy, who accepted it without hesitation, and together they walked toward the door. They were so preoccupied with one another that Fanferlot thought he could follow them without risk. Reaching the door, he saw the stout man and Gipsy cross the pavement, approach a hackney coach, sent for from the omnibus office, and enter it.

"Very good," muttered Fanferlot. "I've got them now. There is no use of hurrying any more."

When the coach started, he followed at a brisk trot. The cab went up the Boulevard Sebastopol. It went pretty fast. But it was not for nothing that Fanferlot had won the name of Squirrel. With his elbows glued to his sides, he ran on. By the time he had reached the Boulevard St. Denis he began to get breathless and stiff from a pain in his side, then the cab abruptly turned into the Faubourg St. Martin. But Fanferlot, who at eight years of age had been familiar with every street in Paris, was not to be baffled. He was a man of resources. He seized the springs of the coach, raised himself up by the strength of his wrists and hung on behind, with his legs resting on the axletree of the rear wheels. He was certainly not comfortable, but, then, he no longer ran the risk of being distanced.

"Now," he said behind his false beard, "drive on."

The man whipped up his horses and drove rapidly along the hilly street of the Faubourg St. Martin. Finally at the old "barrier" the cab stopped in front of a wineshop, and the driver jumped down from his seat and went in. The detective also left his uncomfortable post and, crouching in a doorway, waited for Gipsy and the stout man to get out, ready to follow them. Five minutes passed and they had not alighted.

"What can they be doing all this time?" grumbled the detective.

Stealthily approaching the cab, he peeped in.

Oh, cruel deception—it was empty!

"Tricked!" he said. "Fooled! Ah, but I'll make them pay for this!"

In a moment his quick mind had run over the gamut of possibilities, probable and improbable.

"Evidently," he muttered, "this man and Gipsy entered one door and got out of the other. If so, it was because they feared being followed. If they feared being followed, they have uneasy consciences; therefore"—

He suddenly interrupted his soliloquy as the idea struck him that he had better attempt to find out something from the driver. Unfortunately the driver was in a very surly mood and not only refused to answer, but shook his whip in so threatening a manner that Fanferlot deemed it prudent to beat a retreat.

"Perhaps," he muttered, "he and the driver are one and the same!"

But what could he do now at this late hour? He could not imagine. He walked dejectedly back to the Quai St. Michel, and it was half past 11 when he reached his own door.

"Has the little one returned?" he inquired of Mme. Alexandre the instant she opened the door for him.

"No, but here are two large bundles which have come for her."

Fanferlot hastily opened the bundles. They contained three calico dresses, some coarse shoes and some linen caps.

The detective could not repress a cry. "Well," said he, "now she is going to disguise herself. Upon my word, I am getting puzzled!"

When Fanferlot was sulkily walking down the Faubourg St. Martin, he had fully made up his mind that he would not tell his wife of his discomfiture, but once at home, confronted with a new fact of a nature to negative all his conjectures, his vanity disappeared. He confessed everything—his hopes so nearly realized, his strange mischance and his suspicions. They talked the matter over and finally decided that they would not go to bed before the return of Mme. Gipsy, from whom Mme. Alexandre was determined to obtain an explanation of what had happened. But would she return? At 1 o'clock the worthy couple were about giving up all hope of her reappearance when they heard the bell ring. At the sound of the bell Fanferlot slipped into the closet, and Mme. Alexandre remained in the office to receive Gipsy.

"Here you are, my dear child!" she cried. "Ah, I have been so uneasy about you!"

"Thanks for your kind interest, madame. Has anything come for me?"

Poor Gipsy's appearance had strikingly changed. She was very sad, but not, as before, dejected. To her melancholy of the last few days had succeeded a firm and generous resolution, which was betrayed in her sparkling eyes.

"Yes, two bundles came for you. Here they are. I suppose you saw M. Bertomy's friend?"

"Yes, madame, and his advice has so changed my plans that, I regret to say, I must leave you tomorrow."

"Tomorrow! Then something must have happened."

"Oh, nothing that would interest you, madame."

After lighting her candle at the gas burner Mme. Gipsy said "Good night" in a very knowing way.

"What do you think of that, Mme. Alexandre?" asked Fanferlot, emerging from his closet.

"It is incredible! This girl writes to M. de Clameran to met her here and then does not wait for him."

"Evidently she mistrusts us. She knows who I am."

"This friend of the cashier must have told her."

"Who knows? I shall end by believing that I am among a gang of thieves. They think I am on their track and are trying to escape me. I should not be at all surprised if this girl has the money herself and intends to run off with it tomorrow."

"That is not my opinion. But listen to me. You had better take my advice and consult M. Lecoq."

Fanferlot paused to think.

"Very well, I will see him, just for your satisfaction; because I know that if I have discovered nothing neither has he. But if he undertakes to be domineering I will make him know his place."

Nevertheless the detective passed an uneasy night, and at 6 o'clock the next morning he was up—it was necessary to rise very early if he wished to catch M. Lecoq at home—and, having refreshed himself by a cup of coffee, he directed his steps toward the dwelling of the celebrated detective.

REMARKS OF WHEATON

Should Be Censured, In the Opinion of Dubois

CALLS FOR A REPRIMAND

By the President, Which He Thinks Would Be Warranted Under the Circumstances—An Acrimonious Debate In Senate on the Philippines

Washington, Jan. 28.—An animated and prolonged discussion was precipitated in the senate yesterday over the right of army officers to criticise utterances made in the senate or elsewhere on the conduct of affairs in the Philippines. At times it became somewhat acrimonious, officers in the Philippines being taken sharply to task for statements attributed to them in dispatches from Manila.

Rising to a question of privilege, early in the session, Mr. Dubois read an Associated Press dispatch from Manila in which General Wheaton was quoted as having criticised some utterances of Professor Schurman in a speech delivered in Boston. Mr. Dubois thought that the president, under the circumstances, would be warranted in reprimanding General Wheaton for his criticisms. He declared that such comment upon the action of the senate was "outrageous and indecent," and theminority had had quite enough of threats and blackmail.

The debate thus began took a wide range, Mr. Lodge, Mr. Spooner and others maintained that no newspaper utterances ought to be accepted as the basis for a reprimand of any officer, unless it was supported by an investigation indicating the accuracy of the report.

Mr. Lodge pointed out that the statement of General Wheaton did not criticise the minority of the senate, but simply President Schurman. He insisted that there was no disposition on the part of anybody to suppress news or views. He instanced the circulation of a letter urging the soldiers in the army of the Philippines not to continue to serve.

"Who sent out that circular?" inquired Mr. Jones (Ark).

"It was sent out, I think," replied Mr. Lodge, "by Edward Atkinson. It urged soldiers not to serve in the Philippine war. The letter was widely circulated and attracted attention."

Mr. Rawlins insisted that the suppression of opinions and information in the Philippines was so notorious that one could not depend on the statements coming to the United States from the islands. The Philippine commission, he asserted, had arrogated to itself the functions of congress; indeed, the commission had done many things which congress never would have done. The dispatch under consideration, he said, indicated that the authorities in the Philippines were prepared even to define and punish what they considered treasonable acts and utterances.

Mr. Spooner deemed it the part of wisdom to ascertain first whether General Wheaton had made the statements attributed to him before any attempt was made to secure his censure.

Mr. Dubois insisted that the dispatch he had presented bore evidence of accuracy on its face. "We have been threatened and blackmailed," he said, "as long as we ought to endure it. Such utterances as have been instanced are offensive to us and they ought not to be permitted to pass without a reprimand by the President of the United States. They are coming from officers of the army, in exceedingly bad taste."

Mr. Money made an extended speech in criticism of the government's policy in the Philippines, declaring: "We are committed to it, I suppose, until we have a lucid interval and we are not likely soon to have that." He maintained that in acquiring the Islands and holding them the United States had done one of the most foolish things ever done by a nation, and he was afraid we should "not have sense enough to retrace our steps."

Mr. Hale intrrupted him to say that the situation in the Philippines will grow worse instead of better and that it is anomalous to mix the military and civil government.

In replying to a question of Mr. Hale as to what he would do with the islands, Mr. Money said: "Let them go to the devil and take care of themselves as far as the American people are concerned."

In answering Mr. Hoar, Mr. Money said that before the United States declared war there were village governments—peaceful and successful ones—in the Philippines. Mr. Hoar replied that Washington had declared that that was the test of capacity for self government.

Mr. Platt (Conn.) differed sharply with the Mississippi senator on some of his conclusions of constitutional law, contending that the United States could not be expected to grant independence to the Filipinos and to relinquish all rights in the islands merely because of the natives' desire for liberty.

Mr. Foraker concurred with Mr. Platt and quoted from authorities in sustaining the position.

In concluding the debate and in referring to Mr Spooner's remarks Mr. Dubois said he was entirely satisfied that The Associated Press dispatch was correct.

The house adopted a resolution calling for documents relating to the old training ship Vermont, which was placed out of commission last summer. It also passed a bill providing for the compulsory attendance of witnesses before registers and receivers of the general land office. The house adjourned until next Wednesday.

FOREIGN-BORN VOTERS

Curtis Guild Says Democratic Appeal Is Unworthy and Untrue

Boston, Jan. 28.—The Republican club of Massachusetts met in annual session yesterday, transacting its general run of business and receiving reports from several of its officers. The annual address was by President Curtis Guild. A strong feature of his remarks was contained in the following lines:

"The Republican party is the party of liberality and tolerance. The recent invitation of one of the country's greatest educators to the table of the president occasioned only favorable comment among Republicans. No Democratic president could have held his influence an hour after sitting at table with a man whose blood, was derived from Africa. The main strength of the Democratic party is in the section of the country least favored by immigrants and most hopelessly bound by the traditions of the past. Abraham Lincoln was upheld and sent to the White House largely by the vote of the foreign born, and in the desperate battle against the discount dollar the north, with thousands of foreign born voters, stood by gold and Republicanism, and the native American solid south for the baser metal and Democracy.

"Yet it is the constant theme of our antagonists that the Republican party is no place for the foreign born citizen, though within the last decade the Republican party made a foreign born citizen of English blood governor of Massachusetts, and another of French Canadian blood lieutenant governor of Rhode Island, another of Norwegian blood United States senator from Minnesota and another of Irish blood governor of Nebraska.

"This constant appeal even by the most highly educated of our antagonists to class and race prejudice is common enough, but the mere fact that it is both unworthy and untrue does not absolutey deprive it of effect."

Seeking Cause of Death

New York, Jan. 28.—The second day of the taking of testimony in the trial of Albert T. Patrick, accused of the murder of William M. Rice, brought the trial up to the point where the determination of the cause of the death of the millionaire is sought. Dr. Williams, who attended the autopsy, testified that the lungs were congested and that this was due to the inhalation of some gaseous irritant and that chloroform would have produced such a condition of the lungs. He said afterward that pneumonia could produce the same condition.

New Industry For Illinois

Carbondale, Ills., Jan. 28.—A deal has been under consideration for several weeks for the sale of 10,000 acres of coal lands lying in Franklin and Williamson counties to Joseph Leiter of Chicago is now being consummated. Leiter will open a large coking plant. In the past the coal product of Illinois has not been coked profitably and the venture, if successful, will open up an entirely new business.

Norweigian Steamer Ashore

Cape Henry, Va., Jan. 28.—The Norwegian steamship Daggery, Captain Simonson, and a crew of 17 men, bound from New York to Mexico with a cargo of coal and railroad iron, stranded 2½ miles south of Gull Shoal Life Saving station, N. C., yesterday. The captain and crew were safely landed last night and are being cared for at the station. The ship is now lying easy.

Cool Work of Train Robbers

Charleston, Jan. 28.—As an express slowed up two miles from Branchville last evening the train hands were ordered to stop the train The robbers overawed the passengers, uncoupled the engine and express and baggage cars and went two miles up the road, unloaded the two iron express safes, put them on a wagon and drove away.

Assault, Arson and Suicide

New York, Jan. 28.—William Scholl made a murderous assault on his employer, Gustave Wall, at Toms River, N. J., yesterday. Leaving Wall unconscious, Scholl went to the German Presbyterian church, of which he was sexton, saturated a pile of new cushions with kerosene oil and set it on fire. Then he shot himself.

Aged Couple Drowned

Halifax, Jan. 28.—John Croft and his wife, each aged 65, were on their way home after visiting some friends, and while crossing Minacke lake on the ice they fell into an open space of water and went down together. When the bodies were recovered they were found locked in each other's arms.

Why Engagement Was Broken

Paris, Jan. 28.—Sybil Sanderson consented yesterday to give the reason for her breaking off her engagement to marry Count Henri de Fitz-James, which she says is due to religious obstacles, as Count de Fitz-James is a Roman Catholic and was divorced a couple of years ago.

Indication of a Wreck

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 28.—Steamer Queen City, at Alberni, reports that Indians at Athousett have found a small boat which it is believed belongs to the missing sloop of war Condor. It is a clinker built and painted white.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Wednesday, Jan. 29.
Sun rises—7:02; sets—4:54.
Moon rises—11:19 p. m.
High water—3 a. m.; 3:30 p. m.

Rains have continued generally in the Atlantic states, followed by clearing weather in New England. A great wave of high pressure overlies the interior of the country. This high area will dominate weather and temperature conditions, and much lower temperatures and generally fair weather may therefore be expected in New England. On the coast winds will be fresh to brisk westerly to northwesterly.

There often comes a time in the struggle with pulmonary disease when the victim loses heart and gives up hope. The ambition to be up and around gives way before growing weakness, and the sufferer keeps to the bed.

No one who suffers from lung disease should lose heart or give up hope while there is a possibility of cure. In many cases Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured lung "trouble" when the cough was obstinate and deep seated, with hemorrhage, emaciation, night-sweats and general weakness. A great many men and women are living to-day in the full enjoyment of health and happiness who had been "given up" by doctors, but found a perfect and permanent cure in the use of "Golden Medical Discovery."

"My wife had hemorrhage of the lungs," writes W. A. Sanders, of Heru, Mason Co., W. Va. "She had ten hemorrhages, and the people all around here said she would never be well again. But she began to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and she soon began to gain strength and flesh. After taking ten bottles she was entirely well. Should you think this would do you any good to publish, just use it, and if any one disputes the merits of this almost omnipotent medicine they may enclose self-addressed envelope with stamp, and I will answer, the same as written in this letter."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

SENATE AT WHITE HEAT

Philippine Matters Stir Up a Hornet's Nest

TELLER IS CHALLENGED

Subsequently Modifies Taunt Aimed at Lodge—Spooner and Tillman Have a Tilt on Lynchings—Remarks Result In a "Call Down"

Washington, Jan. 29.—A Philippine storm was central in the senate chamber yesterday for nearly three hours, but it was void of definite results. At times it looked very serious, and the spectators who thronged the galleries watched it with breathless interest.

Acrimony in senate debates is not infrequent, but old senators say that it has been years since there has been such a hurricane of bitter vituperation, of personal taunt, of ugly charges and of unmodified criticism as was witnessed yesterday. Not since the discussion of the resolutions leading up to the Hispano-American war have any scenes occurred in the senate comparable with those of yesterday. Even that debate lacked the personal bitterness manifested at times yesterday.

Irritation was aroused on both sides of the chamber and once or twice personal encounters between senators seemed imminent.

Once, when Senator Teller taunted the Republican senators by declaring that they knew that the statements made in a recent dispatch rom Manila, in which General Wheaton was represented as having criticised the opponents of the government's policy in the Philippines, were true, a half dozen Republicans were on their feet in an instant.

Senator Lodge, at whom the taunt seemed to aimed particularly, hurriedly crossed from his seat in the center of the Republican side to the main aisle of the senate, and, white to the lips, passionately challenged the statement of the Colorado senator and demanded that he withdraw it. Senator Teller so modified his statement that further hostilities were averted.

One of the sharpest colloquies of the session was between Senators Spooner and Tillman. The race problem, involving the lynching of negroes, was interjected into the controversy, and much feeling was manifested by both senators. In the course of the colloquy Mr. Spooner declared that if the same rules were to be applied to the colored people in the Philippines as Mr. Tillman referred to in the south then "God help the colored man in the Philippines." "God help him in the Philippines now," shouted the South Carolina senator passionately. "You have already butchered in three years three times as many as the Spaniards did in three centuries."

"It is one thing," retorted Mr. Spooner, "to kill men with arms in their hands against the government and against the flag. It is another thing to burn them."

In their excitement senators seemed for the moment to have forgotten the subject of debate. The chair (Mr. Frye) was able to maintain order only with difficulty. When the discussion was ended for the day the chair felt called upon seriously to admonish senators that the rules of the body had not been observed. After reading the rule which had been violated he expressed the hope that in the future senators would have a care to observe it. Such an admonition has not been made by the presiding officer of the senate in many years.

A resolution introduced by Mr. Lodge authorizing the committee on Philippines to make an investigation of the Philippine question and for that purpose to sit during the sessions, was reported favorably and adopted by the senate soon after it convened.

The summary dismissal of the question of disciplining General Wheaton is undoubtedly due to the disposition on both sides of the chamber to ignore many things said and done by officers operating in the field which will not be tolerated in officers at home and amid peaceful surroundings.

Prior to the outbreak on the Philippine question, the senate concluded the consideration of the bill establishig a department of commerce and passed it. The name of the proposed new department was changed in the bill to that of the department of commerce and labor.

Tariff Concessions Necessary

Washington, Jan. 29.—The secretary of war continues to receive cable messages from native officials, planters and merchants of Cuba appealing to him to use his best endeavors to secure tariff concessions on Cuban sugar and tobacco. The general tenor of all the appeals was that tariff concessions were a question of life or death to Cuba.

EIGHT ITALIANS KILLED

Three Others May Die From Injuries Received In a Boston Fire

Boston, Jan. 29.—Eight persons dead, three others so badly injured by jumping from windows that they may die, and still others more or less burned, is the terrible result of a fire that occurred shortly before 2 o'clock this morning in a four-story building on Fleet street, occupied on the three upper floors by Italian families. Seven of the dead people are adults, including three women, and one is a child.

When the fire was first discovered the whole upper part of the building was in flames, and the escape of the inmates was almost entirely cut off. Three women and one man rushed to the windows and leaped for their lives, receiving injuries which, in three instances, it is said, will prove fatal.

After the firemen had succeded in subduing the flames, which was in less than 10 minutes, they began a search of the various rooms and found the eight bodies, which were brought downstairs to a neighboring store, where medical aid was quickly summoned. Although the firemen and members of the police force labored hard in giving the unfortunates emergency treatment, their efforts were in vain, as the victims had all inhaled flame and smoke, and their bodies, in most cases, were blistered by the fierce heat which they had encountered.

All of the victims had evidently been asleep when they were aroused by the flames, and what little clothing they originally had on had been burned from their bodies.

In response to an emergency call ambulances were sent to the scene from the various police stations, and those who were still alive were taken to the hospitals for treatment. The family of Luigi Pilata was one of those occupying the building and three members of his family were among those whose lives were sacrificed. The Italian residents of the locality were greatly excited.

BATTERED TEAMSTERS

Testify Against Strikers In Injunction Proceedings at Boston

Boston, Jan. 29.—Everybody connected in any way with the teamsters' strike is anxiously awaiting the outcome of the injunction proceedings instituted against the union men by the R. S. Brine Transportation company, which were begun before Judge Braley in the superior court Monday and continued yesterday, but which are not yet concluded. Meantime the Brine company's teams are working, under police guard, without molestation, 11 having been sent out yesterday, an increase of three over Monday.

At the hearing yesterday before Judge Braley, Attorney Whipple, for the Brine company, put upon the stand several of the company's employes, who showed by their battered and bruised appearance the effects of the rough treatment they had received at the hands of the crowds during the earlier days of the strike. Thus far, however, none of the defendants specifically named in the injunction petition has been actually connected with acts of violence or intimidation. The evidence has shown that such acts were committed by men "wearing the union button," but the defense claims that there are 10,000 men wearing such buttons and that Teamsters' union 25 has no special button.

Thinks Czolgosz Was Insane

Boston, Jan. 29.—"Was Czolgosz Insane?" was the title of a paper read by Dr. Walter Channing, head of a sanitarium here, last night, before a medical society. The answer he gave, deducted from a scientific investigation, was in these words: "After weighing all the evidence from all sources that has come to my attention, I am inclined to the conclusion that it furnishes more grounds for the diagnosis of insanity than for the diagnosis of sanity."

Will Plead Later

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 29.—Leon M. Hapgood, indicted on the charge of murder of Samson Seaverns at Rutland, was brought into court yesterday for arraignment. Hapgood said he had no counsel, but that he wanted counsel. Judge Pierce said counsel would be assigned him and that he need not plead until that had been done. Hapgood was then taken back to jail.

Incendiarism Suspected

Portland, Me., Jan. 29.—It begins to look as though a firebug is operating in Portland, the water front being the location specially selected for incendiary work. A blaze discovered on Sturtevant's wharf last night is the most recent suspicious event of the sort. A strict inquiry will be made into fires that have happened within a short time.

Jennings Held In $4000

Boston, Jan. 29.—Albert Jennings, formerly town treasurer of Wellesley, was arraigned in the municipal court yesterday on the charge of uttering a forged promissory note of the town of Wellesley of the amount of $5000. Jennings waived examination and was held in the sum of $4000 for the superior court.

Big Claim Against Venezuela

New York, Jan. 29.—Hippolyte Lambert has entered a claim against the government of Venezuela for $150,000 damages, for alleged false imprisonment, torture while imprisoned and the loss of certain papers. He was arrested in Caracas in July last. In his claim, which has been filed with Secretary of State Hay, he says that he is an American by naturalization.

TAMPERED WITH LIQUOR

Juror Came to Court In Intoxicated Condition

ARRESTED FOR CONTEMPT

Michael Driscoll Causes a Sudden and Sensational Termination of South Danvers Bank Case, Which Had Already Consumed Three Weeks

Boston, Jan. 29.—The trial of George M. Foster and John W. Dickinson, charged with the misapplication of funds of the South Danvers National bank of Peabody, came to a sudden and sensational termination at 12:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

At that time the jury which has been listening to the evidence for more than three weeks was told by Judge Lowell of the United States district court that the case was to be taken away from it and that its attendance would not be needed after 4 o'cock.

Just prior to that declaration one of the jurymen, Michael J. Driscoll, was placed under arrest by a deputy marshal and led away from the courtroom a prisoner, charged by Judge Lowell with contempt of court. Driscoll was arrested after the court had told him that on two occasions he had been unable to perform his duties as a juror because of intoxication, and had therefore shown contempt of court. He was told at the same time that he also must appear in court at 4 o'clock and show cause why he should not be committed to jail for such contempt.

Every eye in the court room was centered on the short, black haired juror in the back row of the panel of 12 "good men and true," who has been especially prominent in the case since his inability to reach the Federal building a week ago last Monday.

Judge Lowell arose and facing the jury said:

"The court has been informed that Mr. Driscoll came to the building this morning intoxicated and unfit to discharge the duties of a juror."

Just at this point the accused juror broke in and addressed the court, saying: "May it please your honor, I wish I could be discharged from this case."

Judge Lowell then finished his remarks by saying: "Mr. Driscoll has been guilty of contempt and is committed to the charge of the marshal and will appear at 4 o'clock this afternoon to show cause why he should not be committed to jail for contempt."

Deputy Marshal Pickering and Bailiff Ruhl then stepped forward and placed Driscoll under arrest. He was led away from the court room and placed in the big cage in the marshal's outer office, along with a lot of Chinamen and other prisoners.

"Gentlemen of the jury: In consequence of this most unfortunate happening, for which none excepting Driscoll is responsible, we will not be able to proceed. At the same time I shall have to ask you to attend at 4 o'clock this afternoon. But that will be your last attendance in connection with this case. You will then be discharged."

After that the judge retired to the lobby, the lawyers packed their grips with the voluminous documents that have appeared in the case, the bailiffs took away the ledgers and other books of the defunct institution that have been used in evidence, and the clerk of the court carefully took care of the 130 odd exhibits, consisting of notes, checks, etc., that had been offered in evidence.

The case has been expensive to the government and also to the defendants. Assistant District Attorney Casey said that it is likely to be quite a long period before the case can be tried again, as there are so many other cases which must be brought to trial at once.

Judge Lowell sentenced Driscoll to serve two months' imprisonment in the Cambridge house of correction, after the hearing.

The next step will be to recover Chanler's New York property.

Bremen, Jan. 29.—An article in the Weser Zeitung sniffs at the so-called "limitless capital" behind the projected amalgamation of trans-Atlantic steamship lines and says that the United States Steel corporation could not have been floated without European capital and that American enterprises are still large debtors to Europe.

Good Afternoon

Ex-Councilman Jameson, the president of the Republican City Committee of 1901, is entitled to great credit from the fact that all bills contracted by the committee have been paid. The expenses of the campaign were heavy, and the split in the party together with defeat made it very difficult to raise funds, but President Jameson gave it his personal attention, and was determined the money should be collected, and success crowned his efforts. In many campaigns, bills have often hung on for months and sometimes a year or more, but Mr. Jameson made a good business president, and has established a good precedent.

The election of an entirely new board of officers by the Republican City Committee of 1902, who are at the same time in sympathy with Mayor Bryant, will probably unite the Republican party again. Thomas F. Burke of West Quincy, the new president, has long been prominent in the Republican party, and has served as chairman of the Ward Four committee and on the executive committee, as well as district committees. Secretary Langelier has been elected to the City Council several years, and promises to take a prominent part this year as chairman of an important committee. Treasurer Barker is another prominent and popular Republican from Ward Six.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The harbor and land commissioners have submitted their report on survey and estimate for the Brockton the canal but it is doubtful if the Brocktonians really think that they are any nearer the accomplishment of the project than they were previously. That 37 millions is a big obstacle.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ The Erie canal as a frog pond is said to be a considerable source of revenue to small boys along its course, one boy having profited to the extent of $150 gathering frogs last week, shipping the hind legs of the animals to the Boston and New York market. The fact is noted, as it may suggest to the Brockton Times a source of income from its own canal and alleviate some of the despair caused by the estimate of expense presented to the legislature the other day.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ One of the signs of the times is in the Washington Post's advice to Admiral Schley to let the Santiago contention drop. That newspaper has been one of Schley's most active and persistent champions, and its symptoms of weariness indicate how distasteful the whole business has become to persons who have given the subject thought. No good has come out of the quarrel for anybody, and though the rear admiral is having an opportunity to see what the effervescent American public can do in one of its moments of emotional hysteria, all of us who view the proceeding cooly know that in a little while more he will be regarded as a man who has fallen short of attaining the statute of the ideal hero. The Washington Post truly says that after the Dewey court's report he was in a better position than he will ever be again.—New Bedford Standard

I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. McKINLEY'S ANNIVERSARY.

The Martyred President Would Have Been 59 Years Old If Living Today.

In some states today has been set apart in memoriam of William McKinley the martyred President who was assassinated last September. He was born in Ohio, Jan. 29, 1843, and today is the 59th anniversary of that event.

In most of the schools of Quincy the pupils told of his life and career. He was essentially a man of the people; the people learned to love him, and he loved the people. His rise from a lad to the foremost statesman of his time, is familiar to the American public and may well be held up as an example for men and boys. His patriotism, his integrity, his courage, his perserverance, his unbounded faith, his love of home and family, and his devotion to God were all conspicuous, and contributed to his success.

Democrats Organize.

The Democratic City Committee organized Tuesday evening with these officers:

President, Timothy J. Carey.
Vice president, Joseph G. Kennedy.
Secretary George D. Cahill.
Treasurer, Martin H. King.

After the business meeting, there was an informal talk upon what line of action the committee should follow during the coming year. The general sentiment seemed to be to make the committee a kind of Democratic club, and that their candidate for mayor should be selected early in the year that he and his friends might get to work and not wait until a few weeks before election. No definite action, however, was taken at this meeting, but the matter will be brought up again at a meeting to be held next month.

AN ITEM IN COOKERY.

Sauces That Give Piquancy to Some Overfamiliar Dishes.

A knowledge of sauces and how to make them enables the housekeeper to serve many dishes more appetizingly, to use cheaper cuts of meat, to utilize cold remnants and ring in various acceptable changes on the customary menus. Following are just a few useful hints on their preparation:

Drawn butter sauce is the foundation of hollandaise, caper and piquante sauces. For drawn butter sauce the proportions are three tablespoonfuls of butter, two of flour and one cupful of water, with pepper and salt to season.

For hollandaise sauce add the mashed yolk of one egg, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley and one-half teaspoonful of grated onion. This is used for fish or meat.

Caper sauce for boiled mutton is drawn butter sauce, with two teaspoonfuls of capers and one tablespoonful of lemon juice stirred in after the sauce is cooked.

For sauce piquante add to the drawn butter sauce one-half tablespoonful of vinegar, one-half tablespoonful of onion juice, one tablespoonful of chopped pickles, one tablespoonful of chopped capers, one-half tablespoonful of chopped olives, one-quarter teaspoonful of grated onion and a dash of paprika.

Mint sauce is the orthodox accompaniment for roast lamb, and for it fresh young mint leaves should be used. Pick the best leaves from the stems until there are two tablespoonfuls and chop them very fine. Mix these with two and a half tablespoonfuls of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of vinegar and a half saltspoonful of salt and let them stand several hours before serving.

Horseradish sauce can be made and kept indefinitely in tight jars. To a cupful of the grated root add six tablespoonfuls of vinegar and a scant teaspoonful of salt. This is liked with hot or cold roast meats and with beefsteak.

Sauce tartare for fried or broiled meats and fish, particularly the latter, is mayonnaise dressing seasoned with relishes. To a cupful of dressing add a tablespoonful of chopped pickles or olives, a tablespoonful of capers and a teaspoonful of onion juice.

IRON AND IRONWORKERS.

Charles Schwab's English Interview on English and American Affairs.

Mr. Charles Schwab, president of the steel trust, who is now in Europe, reiterates his opinion that the English steel trade has declined because of trades unionism.

"The attitude of your labor in England," he said to a reporter of the London Mail, "will never permit you to run your mills and factories as we do in America. You will be surprised when I tell you that a careful survey of the whole field would seem to show these facts: That the English laborer receives on an average less than one-half of what the American receives, year in and year out; that, notwithstanding that fact, the costs have been nearly double, solely by reason of the attitude of the combination—the trust of labor—that predominates in England."

The steel trust is, Mr. Schwab says, going to adopt a new departure in its attitude toward labor.

"It is the intention of the United States steel organization," he says, "to put every man in charge of a little branch of business, even a department of business, not on a salary, but on a percentage of the profits, which will be paid to him in cash and which he can invest in the securities if he wishes, and in that way get his individual effort upon his individual work. We don't believe that we get that from salaries, but we do believe that we can come as near making a man a partner in that direction as in any other way that has yet been devised, and, commencing with the first of the year, it is our intention to operate every one of our great departments on that basis."

MANUAL TRAINING.

The Subject of Debate by School Committee.

Sub-Committees for the Year Appointed.

Resignation and Election of Teachers and Other Business.

The regular meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening. Members present: Messrs. Porter, Hallowell, Pierce, Churchill, Record, Hunting and Miss Adams.

The resignation of Miss Harriet E. Benson of the grade VI of the Lincoln school was accepted, take effect Jan. 31.

Miss Mary A. Days was elected a teacher at the Lincoln school and Miss Alicia B. Elcock a teacher at the Willard school.

Miss Janie C. Michaels of the High school was granted a leave of absence on account of ill health, until the beginning of the spring term.

MANUAL TRAINING.

The communication from the Home Science Association relative to the use of the Sloyd tools and benches was taken up.

Dr. Hallowell said that the Finance Committee had given the matter of manual training considerable attention in other years but the cost had deterred them from establishing it. He thought it a good thing and was beneficial to the boys.

Mr. Churchill while not opposed to manual training, thought the money could be expended more judiciously. For instance in increasing the salaries of teachers and not making Quincy a kindergarten for other towns. Then he thought children were too young to grasp the full benefit.

Supt. Parlin said acknowledged educators were of the opinion that manual training did not begin early enough. The boys thought they should have something as the girls were given lessons in sewing. He estimated that the cost of establishing three manual training schools with teacher would be about $1,500 each.

Dr. Hallowell said that the Superintendent had gone into the matter of manual training in his annual report, and upon his motion so much of the report as referred to this subject was referred to the committee on special subjects.

The superintendent was granted a leave of absence to attend the National convention of superintendents at Chicago the latter part of February.

GOSPEL OF LOVE.

Lecture on Christian Science by Rev. W. R. McKenzie.

Nearly 500 people gathered in the Braintree Town hall Tuesday evening, to listen to the eloquent Rev. William R. McKenzie, C. S. B., of Cambridge. They came from the surrounding towns and cities.

Mrs. William G. Nixon of Braintree called the meeting to order and explained the cause of a free lecture. She stated that the mother church in Boston had established a board of lectureship, and one of its members was called to Braintree to lecture. Rev. William R. McKenzie was then introduced.

He took for his subject Christian Science, the gospel of love," and his address was an hour and a half in length. He said in part:

At the turning point of the centuries there comes usually a questioning of heart a deep dissatisfaction with traditional beliefs and a thirsty hoping for satisfying truth, so that men cry out after God. There comes an answer to the prayer of man at such times, and the initiation of the century is usually accompanied by a revival of interest in religion. Since the world is progressive, we may expect the revival which will mark the opening years of the twentieth century to excel in librative force any revival of past times. This we may expect on general principles; but there is also special and exact ground for this high expectation namely, this—that for thirty preparatory years, during the life of one generation of mankind, there has been a thought-movement operative, the laborers in which are re-establishing primitive Christianity, "God also bearing witness with them both by signs and wonders, and by manifold powers, and by gifts of the Holy Spirit according to his will."

It requires the long patience of years to overcome human prejudice, that peculiar faculty for making wrong or inadequate decisions, which has proved itself hostile to every good gift God sends to the race. Prejudice, by arousing fear through misrepresentation, and by persecuting earth's benefactors, has endeavored to deprive man of the unfolding good he was becoming ready to receive. But an end approaches for this period of active hostility to Christian Science, which comes to man offering the only satisfactory solution for the problem of life, the solution whereby evil is eliminated, and the eternal Goodness is found to be all in all.

The centuries past have proved the vanity of opinions set forth as truth. Men have gone to death rather than affirm the dogmas of those who had power to kill the body. Such power of sword or torturing fire, of rack or guillotine, has been impotent before one human being who refused to say that darkness was light, or evil, good. But whenever the true light has appeared with healing and saving power, then no compulsion has been needed, for men with joyful hearts have accepted the truth and gorified God. Today with power irresistable as the light has for seeing eyes, the truth that both heals sickness and cures sin has come to human consciousness in Christian Science. If you want proof of this, look at the many churches in the land formed of those who have been healed.

The characteristic of Jesus' teaching was that he avoided mere argument, but dealt in proof and elucidation of truth. First came his works of healing the proof of great love to mankind and then his statement that they revealed the true character of God—"the Father which is in me, he doeth the works." Of all men who have been known on earth, Christ Jesus was the kindest, and when he said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father," he recalled men to a purer conception of God than the teachers of his day knew. The God then believed in could hate, could originate disease and disaster, and maintain sin and suffering. Forgotten then was that vision of the Psalmist, who saw the true God, and to his own self said, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases." By his whole life's work Jesus proved how God heals and not hates men. Let healing be lost by Christians and the old crude views regarding God will reappear in their theologies. The sick will turn to false gods for relief and men will dwell on earth in hopelessness and fear. But whenever truth is demonstrated as was done by Jesus and his immediate follower, that proof brings to the recipent of the blessing absolute assurance that God is Love and reverses his former misconceptions.

Let us analyze the meaning of love as spoken about by Jesus. John is his best interpreter and he speaks of love being the opposite of fear. We all know that it is the opposite of hate, as well. Fear may have a variety of results. It sometimes leads people to sacrifice to various false gods in the endeavor to placate them. The first command of the decalogue forbade this because it means lack of trust in and love for the one true God. In the early writings it is plainly brought out that departure from God would bring diseases upon the people and while that seemed arbitrary, we now know that fear is the prolific cause of disease. The second part of the decalogue, dealing with the duty of man to man, is infringed by any form of hatred, shown by envy, false witness, theft, impurity or murder; but love fulfils this law as well as the other.

In order that men everywhere may learn of God and other privileges as the children of Love there is a text-book for the study of Christian Science.

From the very first those who have studied "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," along with the Bible, have found themselves able to heal the sick, and to cast evils out of themselves and others. Any reasonable mind will see that if by study of a text-book they become able to heal the sick as the early disciples and followers of Jesus did, it is an understood Principle that is being proved; and that Christian Scientists are not merely following a person. This, however, but emphasizes their recognition of the self-sacrifice and wonderful love of humanity shown by Mary Baker Eddy in bearing all manner of persecution and misrepresentation in order to give to the world the revelation.

Henry H. Faxon Hopes Police Will Continue Liquor Raids

To the Editor of the Ledger:

It affords me great pleasure to see our police displaying some signs of life. I had their obituaries partly written, and was ready to apply the crape, but, from the present outlook I trust that it will not be needed.

I sincerely hope that the good work will go on and that every illegal place will be raided, regardless of who the landlord may be. Any assistance which I can render the police in ridding the city of rumsellers will cheerfully be given. Henry H. Faxon.

ADMIRAL KIMBERLY DEAD

Had Long and Honorable Record In Service of His Country

Newton, Mass., Jan. 29.—Rear Admiral Lewis Ashfield Kimberly, U. S. N., retired, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home here yesterday. Admiral Kimberly has not been in good health for some time and his physicians had warned him of his danger.

Admiral Kimberly had one of the best service records in the navy. He is best remembered as commander of the flagship Hartford, under Farragut, at the battle of Mobile bay, and as the flag officer in command of the Pacific squadron at the time of the memorable storm in the harbor of Apia, Samoa, when the Vandalia was lost and other ships were wrecked. He was born in Troy, N. Y., April 2, 1829.

Having evidenced a seafaring tendency, he entered the merchant service. He later received an appointment at Annapolis, where he remained for a year, when he was placed on board the sloop of war Jamestown as cadet. He was given a commission as master in 1855, and in a few months was promoted to lieutenant.

He had seen 32 years' continuous sea service in 1878, when he was attached to the navy yard in New York, where he remained six years. He was made a commander Nov. 27, 1884, and was in command of the Boston navy yard until 1886. He was appointed rear admiral July 26, 1887.

Admiral Kimberly was married in 1872, at Frankfurt, Germany, to the daughter of Commander E. H. Cushman, U. S. N. He leaves a daughter, Elsie S. and a son, Victor A., ensign in the United States navy, and at present attached to the U. S. S. Alliance. Admiral Kimberly has been a constant attendant at the First Unitarian church of West Newton.

Chamberlain Changes His Mind

London, Jan. 29.—The question of languages in the island of Malta was raised in the house of commons yesterday. Mr. Chamberlain made an unexpectedly long speech on the subject in which he announced his willingness, in deference to the feelings of the Italian people, to withdraw the proclamation that English should become the official language in Malta. The Daily News says that perhaps Mr. Chamberlain is now going to cultivate an Italian alliance. It adds that this is not the first proclamaion he has had to withdraw, and that it may not be the last.

Killilea Owns Boston Club

Milwaukee, Jan. 29.—Henry J. Killilea of Milwaukee announces that he is the sole owner of the Boston American league club. The terms of the deal whereby he secured a majority of the stock of the Boston club were the payment last August of $45,000 in cash for five-ninths of the stock. President Somers, who sold the stock, was given an opportunity to redeem it the first of the year if he was able financially and was so inclined. Instead of the stock being repurchased, Mr. Killilea secured the other four-ninths.

Good Feeling Toward America

Berlin, Jan. 29.—The Frankfurter Zeitung, in discussing the attitude of Germany toward the United States during the Spanish-American war, argues that whatever Germany's policy had been at the beginning of this war it was now one of the good will. The paper says that the visit of Prince Henry will give the Americans an opportunity to show that the wish of Germany for friendship between the two nations finds a pleasant response in the great republic.

League Will Dissolve

New York, Jan. 29.—The Cuban American league has issued a statement saying that with the inauguration of President-elect Palma and the organization of the legislative and judicial departments of Cuban government it will cease to exist.

Boston Man a Quitter

Portland Me., Jan. 29.—Some 600 persons interested in boxing were very much disappointed by the bout last night between Kid Rogers of Boston and George Phelan of Portland. Rogers quit in the second round, permitting himself to be counted out before receiving any punishment.

Fatal Fall Down Stairs

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 29.—Lying at the foot of a flight of stairs leading to the rooms of the Ward 3 Young Men's Republican club Joseph A. Ingalls, 30 years old, was found dead with his neck broken. Ingalls weighed over 200 pounds and is supposed to have missed his footing and fallen down the stairs.

A MOVE TOWARD PEACE

England Gets Proposal From Dutch Government

DOES NOT MENTIOM TERMS

Boer Delegates' Insistence Upon Independence Likely to Prevent Successful Termination of Overtures, Which May Have Been Rejected

London, Jan. 29.—The government leader, A. J. Balfour, anounced in the house of commons yesterday that no overtures for peace had been received from anyone authorized to speak in behalf of the Boers. A communication was, however, received late on Saturday last from the Dutch government which was now under consideration. Mr. Balfour hoped, shortly, to lay the communication and the reply to it before the house.

The government of Holland has offered in the most friendly terms to help in bringing about peace in South Africa. It suggests that it might be permitted to act as a sort of diplomatic agent for the Boer delegates. But the government expressly disavows any attempt at intervention, and does not mention any terms.

The announcement of Mr. Balfour caused a sensation in the lobbies of parliament. Lord Rosebery is generally credited with having brought about this movement on the part of the Dutch government.

It is recalled that in an interview published about Christmas time, Dr. Kuyper, the Dutch premier, was represented to have urged the impossibility of Holland's intervening in South Africa unless she had reason to think that both parties wished it. Consequently, it is regarded as certain that the present move was inspired by the Boer delegates.

The Petit Bleu of Brussels, the organ of the Krugerites, flatly denied last night that the Boer delegates had charged any one to make peace proposals, and professed to be in entire ignorance of the Dutch communication.

The Daily News this morning claims credit for the initiation of the peace movement. This paper says that after Lord Rosebery's speech at Chesterfield, it sent Dr. Bisschop, who was recently counsel for the Dutch government before the compensation commission, and is neither Briton nor Boer, on a mission to the continent to invite the Boer delegates to a consideration of the basis of negotiations which Lord Rosebery suggested, namely, to grant the Boers self-government on the Canadian model; no unnecessary prolongation of the military occupation; complete amnesty to Boers and colonial rebels; and grants of money to enable the Boers to restart their farms.

Dr. Bisschop had long conferences with the Boer delegates on the continent, and he persuaded them to hold a conference and discuss his proposals. Then followed the visit of Dr. Kuyper to London.

The Daily News declines to reveal the outcome of these conferences, but practically avows that the Boer delegates still insist upon independence and considers that the government ought to reply, setting forth Great Britain's terms and leaving the responsibility of a refusal to the Boers.

In referring to this matter, editorially, The Daily News draws the inference that the government has already replied, and has rejected the Dutch overtures as unauthorized, as otherwise Mr. Balfour would not have been in a position to promote the papers on the subject, this pormise showing that no further negotiations were afoot.

This was the impression in the lobbies as a result of the announcement of the government leader, and semi-official statements in government journals this morning declare that the outlook for peace is not hopeful.

Those acquainted with Boer sentiments assert that Messrs. Fischer and Wolmarans, and Generals Schalk-Burger and Botha are willing to recognize British annexation, while Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds, General DeWet and President Steyn still insist upon independence. Therefore, at present, it is considered hopeless to arrive at any agreed basis of negotiations.

The Standard this morning declares that the government will have nothing to do with any overtures from Mr. Kruger or his entourage.

The Berlin correspondent of The Daily News says that he understands that Holland consulted and secured the approval the European powers before approaching Great Britain.

TERRIBLE HARDSHIPS

Suffered by Marines Who Participated In the Samar Expedition

Manila, Jan. 29.—The condition of Captain David D. Porter's marines, who took part in the expedition into the interior of Samar, is much worse than previously described. They suffered fearful hardships and were without food for several days. The marines suffered so acutely from starvation that they ate the flesh of two dogs raw.

When Captain Porter and the first three of his men staggered into camp they were delirious, and difficulty was experienced in ascertaining the whereabouts of their companions.

Williams, of the First infantry, headed the relief expedition, in the face of a torrential rain storm, which flooded the rivers. He succeeded in reaching the remaining 10 men, who would otherwise have certainly perished. He found them all delirious. Two of the men were discovered in the branches of trees, barking like dogs. Some of the marines are so ill that they are not likely to recover.

General Chaffee has endeavored to obtain full details of the trip of the marines, but Captain Porter is not yet able to lucidly explain matters.

The expedition into the interior of Samar, led by Captain David C. Porter of the marine corps, numbered 36 men. It had been absent two weeks. The marines had been provided with rations for only five days. On Jan. 21 Captain Porter and 26 members of his party reached the coast of the island of Samar. The other 10 men were missing, and little hope of their safety was entertained.

Guests Fled From Fire

St. Louis, Jan. 29.—Over 200 guests of the Lindell hotel were driven from their apartments into the sleety streets last night by raging flames which wrecked the adjoining building and threatened to sweep away the hostelry. The fire originated in a seven-story brick structure known as the O'Neill building. There were a dozen or more firms occupying it. The losses suffered by the concerns will approximate $300,000. The Lindell hotel was damaged by smoke and water to the extent of $25,000.

Alleged Trade In Patronage

Albany, Jan. 29.—Sheriff Charles Guden of Kings county has been summoned by Governor Odell to appear before him on Feb. 4, to answer the charges preferred against him to the effect that he entered into an agreement with Michael J. Dady, whereby, if elected, Dady was to name the subordinates in the office and Guden was to pay over to Dady all salary, fees and emoluments of his office in excess of $12,000 a year.

Schley's Hand Kept Busy

Louisville, Jan. 29.—Admiral Schley, who will be Louisville's guest until Friday next, arrived here last evening. He was greeted by an admiral's salute and a shouting crowd at the depot. The trip from Chicago was one long ovation and so vigorous were some of the handclasps which the admiral received en route that his right hand was nearly "out of business," as he explained.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. CASE —113— By... Emile Gaboriau

CHAPTER VI.

BUT by the time Fanferlot reached Montmartre street, where M. Lecoq lived, his courage had vanished. He pulled his hat over his eyes and hung his head, as if looking for relief among the paving stones. He slowly ascended the steps, pausing several times, at last reaching the third floor, and stood before a door decorated with the arms of the famous detective—a cock, the symbol of vigilance—and his heart failed him so that he had scarcely the courage to ring the bell. Janouille, M. Lecoq's old servant, opened the door.

"Ah," she said, "you come in time for once in your life. Your patron awaits you."

Upon this announcement Fanferlot was seized with a violent desire to beat a retreat. By what chance could Lecoq want anything of him? While he thus hesitated Janouille seized him by the arm and pulled him in, saying:

"Do you want to take root there? Come along. Your patron is waiting for you."

In the middle of a large room curiously furnished, half library and half greenroom, was seated at a desk the same person with gold spectacles who had said to Prosper at the police office, "Courage." This was M. Lecoq in his official character.

Upon Fanferlot's entrance as he advanced respectfully, bowing, M. Lecoq laid down his pen and said, looking sharply at him:

"Ah, here you are, my man. Well, it seems you haven't made much progress in the Bertomy case."

"Why," murmured Fanferlot, "you know"—

"I know that you have mixed everything until you can't see your way out, so that you are ready to give up."

"But it was not I"—

M. Lecoq arose and walked up and down the room. Suddenly he confronted Fanferlot.

"What would you think, Master Squirrel," he said ironically, "of a man who abuses the confidence of those who employ him, who reveals just enough to lead the prosecution on the wrong scent, who sacrifices to his own foolish vanity the cause of justice and the liberty of an unfortunate man?"

Fanferlot recoiled a step.

"I should say," he stammered—"I should say"—

"You think, Mr. Squirrel, that this man ought to be punished and dismissed from his employment, and you are right. The less a profession is honored, the more honorable should those be who belong to it. Nevertheless you have been false to yours. Ah, Mr. Squirrel, we are ambitious, and we try to make the police force serve us. We let justice go her way and we go ours."

"But I swear"—

"Silence! Do you pretend to say that you did your duty in what you told the judge of instruction? While others were informing against the cashier you undertook to inform against the banker. You spied upon him. You became intimate with his valet."

Was M. Lecoq really angry? Fanferlot, who knew him well, was in doubt. He did not know what to think of this devil of a man.

"If you were only skillful," he continued. "But, no; you wish to be a master, and you are not fit to be a journeyman."

"You are right," said Fanferlot piteously, seeing that it was useless to deny anything. "But how get on with an affair like this, where there was not even a trace or sign to start from?"

M. Lecoq shrugged his shoulders.

"Poor fellow! Why, don't you know that on the very day you were sent for with the commissary to verify the robbery you held—I do not say certainly, but very probably held—in your great stupid hands the means of knowing whether the key of the cashier or the banker had been used when the robbery was committed?"

"What do you mean?"

"You want to know? I will tell you. Do you remember the scratch you discovered on the safe door? You were so struck by it that you exclaimed at seeing it. You carefully examined it and were convinced that it was a fresh scratch. You thought, and rightly, too, that this scratch was made at the time of the robbery. Now, with what was it made? Evidently with a key. That being the case, you should have demanded the keys both of the banker and the cashier. One of them would have had some particles of the hard green paint sticking to it."

Fanferlot listened with open mouth to this explanation. At the last words he violently slapped his forehead with his hand and cried out:

"Imbecile!"

"You have spoken correctly," said M. Lecoq. "Imbecile! This proof is before your eyes, and you do not see it! This scratch is the only clew. If I find the guilty party, it will be by means of this scratch, and I am determined that I will find him."

At a distance Fanferlot was very brave, but in M. Lecoq's presence he yielded to the influence which this extraordinary man exercised upon all who approached him. This exact information, these minute details of all his secret movements and even thoughts, upset him. How had M. Lecoq obtained them?

"Have you been long looking up this case?" he asked.

"Probably. But I am not infallible and may have overlooked some important evidence. Take a seat and tell me all you know."

One could not deceive M. Lecoq, so Fanferlot told the exact truth, a rare thing for him to do. However, as he reached the end of his statement a feeling of mortified vanity prevented his telling how he had been fooled by Gipsy and the stout man.

"It seems to me, Master Squirrel, that you have forgotten something. How far did you follow the empty coach?"

Fanferlot despite his assurance blushed and hung his head.

"Oh," he stammered, "you know about that? How did you"—

But a sudden idea entered his brain. He stopped short, bounded off his chair and cried:

"Oh, I know! You were the large man with red whiskers."

Fanferlot's surprise gave so singular an expression to his face that M. Lecoq could not restrain a smile.

"Then it was you," continued the bewildered detective. "You are the large gentleman at whom I stared so as to impress his appearance upon my mind, and I never recognized you! What an actor you would make if you would go on the stage! But I was disguised, too—very well disguised."

"Very poorly disguised. It is only just to you that I should tell you so. Do you think that a heavy beard and a blouse are unrecognizable? The eye, the eye! The art lies in being able to change the eye. That is the secret."

This explained why the lynx eyed Lecoq never appeared at the police office without his gold spectacles.

"But," said Fanferlot, following up his idea, "you have made the little girl confess, which Mme. Alexandre could not do? You know why she leaves the Archangel, why she does not wait for M. de Clameran and why she bought calico dresses?"

"She is following my advice."

"In that case," said the detective dejectedly, "there is nothing left for me to do but to acknowledge myself an ass."

"No, Squirrel," said M. Lecoq kindly, "you are not an ass. You merely did wrong in undertaking a task beyond your capacity. Have you progressed one step since you started in this affair? No. That shows that, although you are incomparable as a lieutenant, you do not possess the qualities of a general. I am going to present you with an aphorism. Remember it and let it be your guide in the future—'One may shine in the second rank who would be totally eclipsed in the first.'"

Never had Fanferlot seen his patron so talkative and good natured. Finding his deceit discovered, he had expected to be overwhelmed with a storm, whereas he had escaped with a little shower that had cooled his brain. Lecoq's anger disappeared like one of those heavy clouds which threaten in the horizon for a moment and then are suddenly swept away by a gust of wind.

But the husband of Mme. Alexandre felt uneasy. He was afraid that something might be concealed beneath this affability.

"Do you know who the thief is?" he asked.

"I know no more than you do, and you seem to have made up your mind, whereas I am still undecided. You declare that the cashier is innocent and the banker guilty. I don't know whether you are right or wrong. I started after you and have only reached my preliminaries. I am certain of but one thing, and that is that a scratch was on the safe door. That scratch is my starting point."

As he spoke M. Lecoq took from his desk and unrolled an immense sheet of drawing paper. On this paper was photographed the door of M. Fauvel's safe. Every detail was given minutely. One could see the five movable buttons with the engraved letters and the narrow, projecting brass lock. The scratch was indicated with admirable exactness.

"Now," said M. Lecoq, "here is our scratch. It runs from top to bottom, starting from the hole in the lock, diagonally and, you see, from left to right—that is to say, it terminates on the side next to the private staircase leading to the banker's apartments. Very deep at the lock, it ends off in a scarcely perceptible mark."

"I see."

"Naturally you thought that this scratch was made by the person who took the money. Let us see if you were right. I have here a little iron box, painted green like M. Fauvel's safe. Take a key and try to scratch it."

Without seeing through his chief's motive, the detective did as he was bid, scratching vigorously with the key.

"The deuce!" he said after several attempts. "This paint is awfully hard to move."

"Very hard, my friend, and yet that on the safe is still harder. So, you see, the scratch you discovered could not have been made by the trembling hand of a thief letting the key slip."

"I never should have thought of that. It certainly required great force to make so deep a scratch."

"Yes, but how was it done? I have been racking my brain for three days, and only yesterday I came to a conclusion. Let us examine together and see if our conjectures present enough chances of probability to establish a starting point."

M. Lecoq abandoned the photograph and, walking to the door communicating with his bedroom, took the key from the lock.

"Come here, Fanferlot, and stand by my side. There, very well. Suppose that I want to open this door and you don't want me to open it. When you see me about to put the key in the lock, what would be your first impulse?"

"To put my hands on your arm and draw it toward me quickly, so as to prevent your introducing the key."

"Precisely so. Now let us try it. Proceed."

THE SIGNS CHANGE

Pale face, disordered digestion, these are the signs of thin blood. School girls are the most frequent sufferers from thin blood.

Scott's Emulsion is just what they need. It is blood food.

You can easily tell whether Scott's Emulsion is doing the girl good. The signs begin to change. Pale face gets some good color; appetite improves; mind brightens; temper becomes happy; digestion strong; habits regular.

Scott's Emulsion can do all these things for your pale-faced girl if you will give it a fair chance. The disease sometimes takes weeks to cure. But regular doses of Scott's Emulsion give steady improvement.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

Philadelphia, Jan. 29.—Archie McEachern added another victory to his string in this city by defeating Bennie Monroe and Otto Maya in a 15-mile motor-paced bicycle race here last night. His competitors, however, met accidents which compelled them to leave the track. McEachern's time was 24:41 4-5, which is one minute and 35 seconds better than the world's record on an indoor track.

Fire May Have Caused Explosion

New York, Jan. 29.—The authorities are energetically trying to learn why the terrific explosion of dynamite occurred which killed six people and did so much damage in the vicinity of the Grand Union station. This is with a view of fixing the responsibility. District Attorney Jerome says that he has come to the conclusion that fire caused the explosion.

Jailbirds' Wings Clipped

South McAlester, I. T., Jan. 29.—One hundred and forty-two prisoners in the United States jail here made an unsuccessful break for liberty last night. The prisoners destroyed the lights and attacked the guards, and were about to escape when the jailor and his assistants fired, frightening the mob into submission.

Sanitary Projects Approved

Mexico City, Jan. 29.—The Pan-American conference yesterday approved the international sanitary measures. The Argentine delegates refused to favor the projects, owing to their objections to sanction the creation of an international sanitary bureau with headquarters at Washington.

Bagged Many Ducks

Georgetown, S. C., Jan. 29.—Ex-President Cleveland and party came up from the shooting preserves at Ford Point yesterday. They left in their private car attached to a north-bound train at 4:30 o'clock. The party carried a large bag of ducks along and seemed in good spirits.

A QUESTION OF HISTORY

Hoar Did Not Intend to Impugn Valor of the South

"PRESS IS ENTIRELY FREE"

Official Statement That Censorship Does Not Exist at Manila—Practical Repeal of All War Taxes to Be Considered at Once

Washington, Jan. 30.—Senator Money took Senator Hoar to task yesterday for a recent reference, in debate over the value of an improvised fighting force, to the fact that Massachusetts furnished a larger contingent of soldiers to the revolution than all the other states, and read long historical extracts designed to show that Mr. Hoar had done injustice to the south.

Senator Hoar responded that he had no desire to delay the work of the senate by delving into ancient history, especially to the disparagement of one section of the country by contrast with another. He quoted John C. Calhoun as having paid the highest possible tribute to his (Mr. Hoar's) grandfather, showing that one of the greatest of southerners was generous enough to recognize the position of Massachusetts in the revolutionary struggle. The Virginians and South Carolinians, in the war for independence, had forgoten all sectional lines and came to the assistance of the Bay State with money and food and other supplies, though having no interest in Massachusetts than a common love of liberty. The descendants of those noble southerners had scorned, perhaps, to remember the magnificent generosity of their ancestors, but Massachusetts never could forget to be grateful; and he would be the last man to say a word which would impugn the valor or hurt the feelings of the southern people.

Mr. Money assured Mr. Hoar that the Democratic side had no suspicion of Mr. Hoar's desire to make a misstatement or to wound their feelings; but, as his statement had astonished them, they had taken pains to look up the authorities. Mr. Hoar produced in evidence a public document printed by congress from figures prepared by General Knox, and which had passed muster with both houses of congress without question when they first appeared.

Mr. Hoar explained that in whatever he might have said upon the subject referred to by Mr. Money, he had not meant to institute a comparison between any section of the country. He had stated in passing what he wished he had not said—that besides the force of sailors furnished by Massachusetts the state supplied a greater number of land troops than all of the states south of the Potomac. He said that he would be the last person in the world to disparage the efforts of the southern states in the war for independence.

For an hour the senate discussed the question whether a censorship of press dispatches exists at Manila. While no such turbulent scenes as Tuesday's were enacted, the debate was very spirited for a time. The secretary of war was quoted as having said that no press censorship is maintained in the Philippines now, in a letter from General Greeley, chief signal officer of the army, was presented by Mr. Beveridge, making the statement officially that there is no censorship of press dispatches, and "the press is entirely free." It was contended by the opposition that a press censorship did exist in the Philippines and that copies of every news dispatch filed with the cable company was filed with the military authorities. This, it was contended, constituted a virtual censorship.

Mr. Cullom, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, delivered an extended and carefully prepared speech on the history of the reciprocity negotiations.

The Republican members of the ways and means committee held a private conference last night and decided to frame a bill for the reduction of war revenue taxes before proceeding further with the subject of Cuban reciprocity. Chairman Payne at once called a meeting of the full committee for today, when work on the war revenue reduction bill will be begun.

No draft of a bill has been prepared by the Republican members, but it is pretty fully understood that the majority is prepared to favor a measure effecting very large reductions, amounting practically to a repeal of all the war taxes, and aggregating about $68,000,000. The restriction of recent hearings to beer and tea led to the belief that reductions might be confined to these two articles, but the sentiment of the majority now appears to favor a much larger reduction.

At the conference it was the prevailing view that, since Cuba had been the cause for the incurring of the war revenue taxes, the burden should be removed from this country before there is consideration of the extent of relief to be granted to Cuba. The question of what percentage of reduction in tariff rates could be made for Cuba was not considered at the meeting last night, owing to the determination to leave it is until after the war revenue reductions have been accomplished.

The house adjourned yesterday, after having been in session 25 minutes. The permanent census bill was reported. A request that the oleomargarine bill might be made special order for next Monday was objected to on the Democratic side.

LIBERATED AT LAST

Unconfirmed Report Concerning the Two Captive Missionaries

London, Jan. 30.—The Sofia correspondent of The Times, wiring under date of Jan. 29, says: "It is reported that Miss Stone and Madame Tsilka were liberated this morning on Turkish territory."

Press Acted Unwisely

Washington, Jan. 30.—The state department is disposed to attribute the failure of the negotiations looking to the release of Miss Stone to the newspapers. The recent arrangements for her release have completely miscarried, because a body of Turkish troops, guided, it is stated, by the finger of the press, appeared near the scene of the arranged for surrender and caused the captors to seek cover.

Trolley Cars Ran Away

Pittsburg, Jan. 30.—Three people killed, two fatally hurt and a score of others more or less injured is the result of two runaway trolley cars on the Monongahela branch of the Pittsburg Railway company last night. The accident happened at the foot of a long hill. A car without passengers got beyond control of the motorman and dashed down the hill at a terrific speed. At the bottom it jumped into the Pennsylvania railroad station. A large crowd gathered about the wreck and 12 minutes later a second runaway car came tearing down the hill and ploughed into the crowd. A blinding sleet storm prevailed and it is said the two cars "skated" down the hill with brakes tightly set.

A "Naval Engagement"

Panama, Jan. 30.—The Colombian government fleet, consisting of the steamers Boyaca and Chucuito, and the armed launch General Campo, which left here to make an attempt to break the blockade of Agua Dulce, met the insurgent steamer Padilla at Yegnala, 30 miles from Panama, and opened fire on her. The revolutionary steamers Darien and Gaitan appeared on the scene soon after the engagement began. The revolutionary fleet drew in towards the shore, where the enemy's ships were protected by land batteries. The Chucuito and Boyaca then retired, unmolested, and arrived here at 5 p. m. The General Campo was not engaged.

President Still Deliberating

Washington, Jan. 30.—Secretary Cortelyou has made the following announcement: "The statement that any man has been offered the governorship of Hawaii is without any foundation whatever. The president has long been considering the Hawaiian situation and is still considering it, but he has reached no conclusion as to whether he will retain the present officials or as to whom he will appoint if any change is made."

The Daggry In Great Peril

Norfolk, Jan. 30.—Fifteen hundred cases, or 75,000 pounds, of dynamite forms a part of the cargo in the hold of the Norwegian steamship Daggry, that is ashore near Gull Shoals Life Saving station. Railroad iron composes the balance of the cargo. The ship is listing heavily and is being beaten unmercifully by the waves. If the railroad iron and dynamite get together an explosion of terrible force is looked for.

Was In Financial Difficulty

Boston, Jan. 30.—Financial circles were somewhat startled yesterday to learn that Lane B. Schofield of the brokerage firm of Schofield, Whicher & Co., had committed suicide at his residence at West Newton. Mr. Schofield arose at his usual hour yesterday and went into the bathroom. The next minute the members of the family were startled at the sound of a pistol shot. Mr. Schofield was found lying on the floor, dead, with a bullet wound in his heart. Financial difficulties of a private nature are given as the cause of the suicide. Joseph A. Schofield is quoted as authority for the statement that the dead man had lost nearly $200,000 during the last two years.

AN EYE TO BUSINESS

Germany Would Profit by Ending of Boer War

THE MEDIATION OF HOLLAND

Was Not Authorized, According to Statement of Dr Leyds—Germany Declares Herself as Absolutely Neutral—Basis of Peace Proposition

London, Jan. 30.—Mr. Hales, the correspondent of The Daily Express in Berlin, predicts that should peace eventuate in South Africa, commecial Germany will sweep down upon South Africa and endeavor to divert its trade to Germany. There is no doubt, Mr. Hales says, that the Germans will leave no stone unturned to take the fruits of the war from Great Britain.

Mr. Hales prophesies that the German invasion of South Africa will eclipse the rush of Germans to America 50 years ago, and he says that the openness of the tariff in South Africa is expected to bring German merchants a substantial advantage, and that the latter believe that Boer influence will continue so great that it will assure preferential treatment to the Germans.

Acted Without Authority

Paris, Jan. 30.—The Patrie this morning publishes an interview with Dr. Leyds, who denies that the representatives of the South African republics in Europe asked for the mediation of Holland in South African affairs, or authorized Dr. Kuyper, the Dutch premier, to make propositions for peace. "There can be no conditions for the British government to examine," says Dr. Leyds. There is only one condition. The British government knows it sufficiently well and need not examine it further. From the intentional ambiguity of Mr. Balfour's statement in the house of commons, it is evident that this is mere maneuver."

Germany Had No Hand In It

Berlin, Jan. 30.—The statement emanating from Paris that the powers were privy to the proposals of Dr. Kuyper to Great Britain on the subject of peace in South Africa, and approved this step beforehand, is denied without reservation here, insofar as the German government is concerned. The German cabinet is maintaining an absolute neutral attitude, and will not concern itself with anything that has the appearance of meddling in this matter.

Proposed a Dutch Commission

London, Jan. 30.—The Hague correspondent of The Daily Mail says that he is able to announce on authority that the Dutch note to Great Britain, after rehearsing the earnest concern of that government over the prolongation of hostilities in South Africa, offered its good offices in bringing them to a close. To this end Holland asked whether Great Britain would be willing to permit a Dutch commission to proceed to South Africa to enlighten the Boer leaders in the field as to the real position of affairs, and more especially, since it is understood that there is not the slightest chance of intervention on the part of any European power.

Confirmed by Kuyper

The Hague, Jan. 30.—In the first chamber of the states general yesterday Premier Kuyper confirmed the accuracy of A. J. Balfour's statement in the British house of commons regarding the Dutch government's offer to help in bringing about peace in South Africa; but, the premier added, that he was prevented by courtesy from disclosing any details concerning the note so long as the British government had not published its contents, or until a reply to it was received.

Bryan Wants Kruger to Come

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 30.—A pro-Boer meeting here last night was addressed by Jan Krize, formerly a Transvaal officer, who escaped while a prisoner of the British. Resolutions were adopted calling on Governor Savage to issue a proclamation requesting contributions for destitute Boer women. William J. Bryan made an extended address, urging that efforts be made to bring Mr. Kruger to the United States where, he said, the true sentiment of the people in his cause could be manifested.

Louisville Entertains Schley

Louisville, Jan. 30.—Admiral Schley moved through the heaviest sleet storm yesterday that Louisville has seen in many years, while following the program of entertainment prepared for him. In spite of the bad weather more than 2000 persons shook the admiral's hand. The admiral was the guest of honor at the annual banquet of the board of trade last night.

Charges Not Supported

Washington, Jan. 30.—The senate committee on pensions agreed unanimously yesterday to favorably report the nomination of General Wilder S. Metcalf as pension agent at Topeka, Kas. This decision was based on the finding of the sub-committee that he was not guilty of the charges against him.

Cleveland In Good Health

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 30.—Ex-President Cleveland returned here yesterday from his seven days' hunting trip to Georgetown, S. C. He was apparently in good health and seemed considerably benefited by the outing.

South Americans Buying Arms

Berlin, Jan. 30.—The Chilian government has ordered 15,000 sword bayonets from Solingen, and six weeks ago the agent of Argentina in Germany also placed some orders for arms with German makers.

Warrant Out In Bribery Case

St. Louis, Jan. 30.—Judge Wood yesterday issued a bench warrant for the arrest of Ellis Wainwright, president of the St. Louis Brewing company and director of the St. Louis Suburban company. Wainwright is now in New York, where he makes his home. Investigation of the Central traction railway bribe scandal was commenced by the grand jury yesterday.

Where Press Is Muzzled

St. Petersburg, Jan. 30.—The Rossiva (Liberal) has been suppressed as a result of its publication of a violent philippic against Alexander III, Nicholas II and the dowager empress on Jan. 26. The editor of the paper has been deported to Pskoff and the author of the article, heretofore chief editorial writer, has been exiled to Eastern Siberia.

Princes Fought a Duel

Vienna, Jan. 30.—In a duel fought at Cattaro, Austria-Hungary, between the hereditary Prince of Montenegro, Danilo-Alexander, and his brother, Prince Mirko, because Prince Mirko ridiculed the wife of his brother, Princess Jutta, the Duchess of Mecklenbourg, Prince Danilo-Alexander was slightly wounded.

Aimed at Bad Actors

Albany, Jan. 30.—The assembly general laws committee granted a hearing yesterday on the bill to license actors and censor the drama. The theatrical profession was not represented at the hearing. The purpose of the bill is to suppress indecent shows and bad actors.

Pension For Veteran of 1812

Washington, Jan. 30.—The house committee on pensions favorably reported a bill yesterday, granting a pension of $25 a month to the last surviving soldier of the war of 1812, Hiram Crok, of Oneida county, New York, aged, 102.

Smallpox Takes Fresh Start

Good Afternoon.

Many who believe in vaccination are opposed to a law which gives a Board of Health authority to go into a school and vaccinate young pupils, or as is being done in Boston, today, going from house to house. It is not surprising therefore that there were many remonstrants at the State House on Wednesday against compulsory vaccination. One doctor testified that the practice was undermining public health. Another claimed smallpox had increased in the same proportion that vaccination was practiced. Dr. Charles E. Page read a letter from Dr. Frederick Martin chairman of the Cleveland board of health, telling why compulsory vaccination was abolished in that city. He stopped vaccinating, and instead used disinfectants, sending 40 agents throughout the city to disinfect and cleanse every nook and corner in the city. Since Aug. 17 there had only seven cases developed in the city, of which three were known to have been contracted outside the city.

Not Wanted at Washington.

Should Postmaster Hammond again visit Washington in the interests of a new government building or other legislation, he would be liable to removal. A very stringent order has just been issued by the postmaster general at Washington to all postal departments regarding visits of any of the employes in the service to Washington for the purpose of influencing legislation before congress. The order is as follows:

No postmaster, postoffice clerk, letter carrier, railway postal clerk, or other postal employe shall visit Washington, whether on leave with or without pay for the purpose of influencing legislation before congress. Any such employe of the postal service who violates this order shall be liable to removal.

"Postmasters and other employes of the posal service are paid by the government for attending to the respective duties assigned to them, which do not include efforts to secure legislation. That duty is assigned to the representatives of the people elected for that purpose.

If bills are introduced in either branch of congress affecting the postal service, upon which any information or recommendation is desired, the postmaster general is ready at all times to submit such as lies in his power and province."

NAVAL MAGAZINE.

One May Be Located at Squantum.

Calls for a $500,000 Appropriation.

Present One at Chelsea Is Entirely Inadequate.

While battleships and cruisers are building at one end of our city and a government building is asked for the business centre, there is a likelihood that the government may take Squantum head at the northerly end for a naval magazine, where will be stored ammunition for the protection of the entire New England coast.

Low, the Washington correspondent of the Globe, says: Congressman Roberts intends making a determined fight to secure an appropriation of $500,000 to be carried in the naval appropriation bill for the establishment of a naval magazine at Boston. The committee on naval affairs is working slowly in preparing its bill. The estimates submitted by the secretary of the navy call for an expenditure of considerably over $100,000,000.

A great deal of pruning will be necessary to bring the bill within reasonable limits. Mr. Roberts will have great difficulty in protecting New England items, but he intends doing everything within his power to save them. It is believed the bill when it passes will carry between $70,000,000 and $80,000,000.

"I shall use every effort," Mr. Roberts said Wednesday, "to secure an appropriation of $500,000 for the erection of a naval magazine at Boston. The present one at Chelsea is entirely inadequate for the growing needs of our navy. We should have a magazine that would hold ammunition enough to supply a dozen battleships. The present one is barely large enough to supply a single ship.

"There is not a suitable magazine along the entire New England coast. It is useless for us to have a large navy if we have no place to store our supplies. Boston harbor is an ideal spot for a modern magazine."

Christian Endeavor Anniversary.

Sunday, Feb. 2, is a day of unusual interest to Christian Endeavorers all over the world, as it is the twenty-first anniversary of the formation of the first Y. P. S. C. E.

The Endeavor societies of this locality will celebrate the anniversary with appropriate exercises at their meeting on Sunday evening and by a grand union rally on Tuesday, evening Feb. 4.

This rally is to be held under the auspices of the East Norfolk and Bridgewater C. E. Unions at the First Baptist church, Randolph. The speakers are to be Rev. M. A. Levy of Medford, and Rev. T. B. Johnson of Lynn, both very interesting and inspiring speakers.

The singing is to be led by a large chorus and it is expected that this feature of the service will prove especially interesting.

A cordial invitation is extended by the Endeavorers to the general public to join them in this rally.

Old Colony Association.

The Old Colony Association of Universalists met last Wednesday afternoon and evening at South Weymouth. The church was filled at the afternoon as well as at the evening service. The relative position of the Sunday school to the church was admirably presented by Rev. Mr. Massick of North Attleboro.

Rev. Mr. Moore of the Virginia St. church, Boston, spoke eloquently of the responsibility of the Sunday school teachers after having invited parents to send their children to their Sunday school for religious instruction. A bounteous supper was served free by the women of the home parish. An anthem by the choir and a scholarly address by Pres. E. H. Capen brought the meeting to a close.

—Boston was one of the first places in Revolutionary times to protest against taxation without representation and now there are 18,500 women in that city who pay taxes and have no voice in the expenditure of the money.—Old Colony Memorial.

TO CONSOLIDATE.

Quincy Man Liable to Lose Job As Inspector.

The Massachusetts fire marshal's department will be abolished, and a saving of $10,000 is contemplated in salaries alone. The joint committees on Public Service and Insurance, of which Representative McKnight is clerk, decided Wednesday to report a consolidation bill as recommended by Gov. Crane. The salary list of the present department foots up about $22,000. The bill to be reported for the consolidation provides salaries aggregating $12,000.

The chief of the district police will, under the bill to be reported, take on the duties of the fire marshal and be granted the assistance of a deputy chief with a salary of $2,400; a chief aid with a salary of $1,500; six deputies with salaries of $1,000 each; a clerk with a salary of $1,200, and a stenographer with a salary of $1,200.

The salary of the deputy chief is fixed at $100 less than that of the chief, and is also a reduction of $100 in the salary now paid the fire marshal's chief deputy.

There are now two chief aids and nine deputies under the state fire marshal so that by the consolidation four salaries will be saved the state. The consolidation is to take effect May 1.

Warren W. Adams, of this city, one of the inspectors is liable to lose his position.

Ingleside Home.

Rev. Rufus B. Tobey of Wollaston, the president of the Ingleside corporation, presided at the annual meeting on Wednesday. The treasurer reported receipts of $2,173.52 and expenses of $2,168.09, leaving a balance of $5.43. President Tobey, Mr. John R. Anderson and Rev. William A. Knight made appeals for funds.

Miss Gulia Graves, the secretary, in her report said that Inglesides, a home for girls, is the only one of the kind in New England. It was opened in 1895 as a rescue home, but those interested found there were girls in degraded environments, or who had lost their parents, who were too old for orphan asylums, yet not subjects for a reformatory, who needed guidance, care and training. Ingleside now takes these girls, and they are brought under religious influences, and given domestic and other training. Last year about 20 girls were cared for, and all were taught in the schoolroom as well as along domestic lines.

Mrs. Alice Prescott Saxe and Miss Sadie J. Wing contributed vocal selections, and tea was served.

FINANCIAL LOSS.

Lead to Suicide of Partner of Louis E. Whicher.

Lane B. Schofield, who shot and killed himself at his residence at Newton on Wednesday was in partnership with Louis E. Whicher formerly of Quincy under the style of Schofield, Whicher & Co.

An intimate friend is quoted as ascribing the cause of Mr. Schofield's suicide to the failure of the Globe national bank three years ago, and other financial losses, which are said to have amounted to $150,000 or more in the past two years.

Within the past year Mr. Schofield and his family, a wife and five children, moved into their beautiful home in ward 3. The house is on an elevation set above the course of the Albemarle golf club. Through Mr. Schofield's kindness the club members had used a portion of his grounds. He, himself, was an active member of the organization and greatly enjoyed the game. He also belonged to the Newton club.

The Globe says Mr. Whicher was astounded at the news of the suicide yesterday, and at once telephoned to the banks where the firm kept an account to inquire about the balances. He was informed that the amount to the firm's credit was a fairly substantial one.

After learning this he started an investigation into the affairs of the firm, to learn what part the business of the brokerage house had in the motive for the suicide of the senior partner.

Mr. Whicher was excited, and said he was much concerned about his own affairs.

"I can tell you very little about the suicide of Mr. Schofield," said Mr. Whicher, "as I am trying to find out just how far the firm is inovived in the difficulty that led to Mr. Schofield's suicide."

"Do you think that financial difficulties drove Mr. Schofield to suicide?"

"I cannot answer that question more than to say that he had reason to do it, and I am trying to find out how much I and the firm's business may be connected with those reasons. My position is a very peculiar one this morning, and in justice to the firm's affairs I cannot discuss what reasons Mr. Schofield may have had.

"I am hustling to find out just what the situation is, and until I am fully informed I cannot say anything."

Lane B. Schofield was a member of the stock exchange, having been admitted Jan. 5, 1899.

MILLINERY MODES.

White Lace or Tulle the Fashion of the Moment For Evening Wear.

So attractive are the models, so becoming the different shapes of hats, says the New York Herald in illustrating a number of them, that women think money is well invested in headgear. There are flat hats to be worn forward over the face, picture hats with the brim turned up at the side, hats covered with feathers and hats made of feathers.

For evening wear the fashion of the moment is the white lace hat or the white tulle, with a decided preference in favor of the lace as being the most expensive. Irish point, old English point and brussels point laces are all used, but the Irish point lace hats are rather the smartest.

In the white tulle the fad is to have plaitings of tulle sewed round and round upon a flat frame, the brim turned up all around, faced with a rough fuzzy material that looks like wool, and this embroidered with pearls or gold beads or with silver. It is very effective, and the hat is almost always becoming.

Cream For the Face.

When the wind is cold, the following cream lightly rubbed on the face before going out acts as a protection: Cocoa butter, two ounces; lanoline, two ounces; rosewater, two and a half ounces; elder flower water, one and a half ounces. This cream should be washed off upon coming in.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold oward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

REV. P. A. ENGLUND

Former Swedish Baptist Pastor Is Dead.

Resigned His Pastorate Last July.

Was Popular Among Swedes of All Denominations.

Rev. Peter A. Englund, pastor of the Swedish Baptist church until July last, passed away at his home on Morton street on Wednesday, after an illness of some months' duration. While his death was not unexpected it came as a severe shock to the Swedish people, among whom he has labored so long.

During his twelve years' service in Quincy he has made many friends not only among is own denomination but among other clergymen of the city. He has been a hard worker for his people and has seen the society grow until today it is one of the most prosperous Swedish churches in the city.

The church people held a meeting at the church Wednesday evening to arrange for the funeral services. It was decided that they should be held from the church on Granite street, Sunday, at 2 o'clock, and several of the clergymen of the city will take part in the services.

Rev. Mr. Englund was born in Norrbotten, Sweden, in 1854. He removed with his parents to Lulea when a child and was brought up in that town, receiving his education in the grammar and high schools of that place. He was graduated from the high school at the age of 15 and then learned the carpenter's trade. Having learned the trade he set out on a journey through Sweden Norway, Denmark and England for the purpose of studying architecture.

On his return from England, Rev. Mr. Englund settled in the town of Askers Sockan Nerike. In that place he joined the Baptist church in 1877 and immediately began a course of studies with the idea of becoming a clergyman of that faith. He studied under Rev. C. F. Pirra, the presiding elder of the district where he lived and he was commissioned as a local preacher and later, was ordained minister.

Rev. Mr. Englund was for three years pastor of the churches in the towns of Nerike, Scollersta and Ekeby, and in 1881 received a call from the Swedish Baptist church of New Sweden, Me.

After serving as pastor in New Sweden for eight years Rev. Mr. Englund received and accepted a call to become pastor of the Swedish Baptist church in this city.

When he first took charge of the society in Quincy, the members worshipped in a small church on Station street which was heavily mortgaged. The society was composed of thirty members. During Rev. Mr. Englund's pastorate almost all the mortgage on the old church was paid off, the membership of the society was increased to 300, and a church was erected on Granite street at a cost of $7000, and is nearly paid for.

During his twelve years' service here, 108 children were baptized, and 219 members were taken into the church.

Rev. Mr. Englund was an ardent Republican and was instrumental in organizing the first Republican Scandinavian club established in this city. He was very active in temperance work, and was a great favorite socially with all the Swedish residents outside of his own faith.

He was obliged to resign his pastorate in July, owing to sickness. At that time he went to Ellsworth, Me., for a rest, but came back in September showing no improvement.

Mr. Englund was married in Sweden. A widow and one daughter survive him.

LONG FELT WANT FILLED.

Dinkelspiel Gets Pointers For His Conduct at the Coronation.

D. Dinkelspiel, per George V. Hobart, has written for the New York Journal the following burlesque book review on a timely topic:

"How Americans Should Appear ad der Coronation," py Villum Valldoff Astor, authorshipper uf "Kings I Haf Med Up Mit und Vot Id Cost Me" und udder vorks.

Dis is a book vich has hunted ub a long felt vant und filled id. So many uf us vas sidding ofer here, vondering mit bowed heads how vould ve conduction ourselfs ad der coronation, und yust ven der skies seemed darkest Villum Valldoff chumps to der rescoo, und all vas choy vunce more. Led us qvote from der book der instructions vich vill pud us on der right road und keeb us dare till der parade comes along.

"DOAN'D RUSH OUID UND VISH TO SHOOK HANDS MIT HIM."

CHABTER VUN.

Royalty is vun uf der mosd subtle ackvaintances vich a man could haf. Today royalty may smile ubon you und open der door vich leads to der dining room, bud tomorrow dey may send der butler to show you to der icehouse.

Royalty is divided into two classes—dem dot inwite you to deir houses und dem dot cut you ouid. Der fairst is der mosd popular und lovable. Der latter is only a reflected light, vich in America ve vould call a shine. Dis, naturally, brings us to der coronation.

CHABTER TVICE.

I vich to ask as a personal favor dot none uf my former countrymen come ofer here from America to der coronation in der steerage. Of course dis is a loud vay to travel, bud ve should remember dot, mit der eggsception uf der vireless telegraph, loudness is nod eferyding in dis vorld.

In America efery vun is free—der street car conductor is free to steb on der feets uf der passengers, der brakeman is free to inwent new stations on der elevated road, der grocer is free to pud sand in der sugar, der gas company is free to have a meter mitouid a conscience, und dare vas many udder freedoms.

Bud in England dare is a vast difference. In America efery man is any udder man's equal—unless he owes him a cubble uf dollars. In England dis could nod be because our system of money is so different dot ve find id impossible to lend ad mitouid security. Again ve approach der coronation.

CHABTER TREE.

Dare is no doubt dot many Americans vill come to London during der coronation vich haf never been here during any previousness. To dem dese vords is addressed.

Doan'd eggspect to see der king valting for you down on der dock ven der steamboat arrivals. I eggspected dis to habben ven I fairst came ofer here, bud he vas nod dare, und I vill bed $4 I haf more money den you.

Ven you see der king coming down Pickledilly, doan'd rush ouid und vish to shook hands mit him, und doan'd invitation him to steb in der nearest cafe und bite der coldness avay from a high ball. Dis vould be in bad taste. Der liquor in der cafe is liable to be in bad taste also. Dis is a English choke I haf yust made, varranted new und unlaughable.

Dare remains much to be said abould der coronation vich I vill safe for annuder chabter.

CHABTER FOUR.

Der idea uf der vord coronation is taken from der Latin vords "coro," vich is fancy for "Carrie," und "Nation," vich is her husband's name. I admission dis mit much reluctance, because I hate to see anyding American mixed ub mit such an occasion vich means so much to me und der rest uf der nobility.

Darefore I vould say to all Americans to opserf dese rules ven you reach dese shores, bud doan'd sbeak to me any oftener den id is necessary. I vish to preserf my English admosphere. Der coronation musd be a grand success. I vill make id so.

DER END.

Dis is a book vich der young can study mit much encouragement to der future. Id shows der lesson how a man can ged his feed tangled ub in der fringe uf society mitouid ripping der fringe. Id shows also how a man can ask for a title und vunder vill dey call him earl or call him down.

Novelty In Animals.

A new animal reported from Patagonia is the hymchy. It is supposed to be a living example of the supposedly extinct neomylodon, whose remains found recently in Patagonian caves have caused much scientific interest, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. The animal is supposed to be amphibious and has been seen swimming in rivers.

India Child Widows May Marry.

That one of the native states of India belonging to the enlightened gaikwar of Baroda has made legal the remarriage of child widows is regarded by missionary workers as indicating the gradual emancipation from oriental caste distinctions. This new law will do away with enforced widowhood in that state.

Winter Dreams.

Deep lies the snow on wood and fields;
Gray stretches overhead the sky;
The streams, their lips of laughter sealed,
In silence wander slowly by.

Earth slumbers, and her dreams—who knows
But they may sometimes be like ours,
Lyrics of spring in winter's prose
That sing of buds and leaves and flowers?—

Dreams of that day when from the south
Comes April, as at first she came,
To hold the bare twig to her mouth
And blow it into fragrant flame.

REAPPOINTED POSTMASTER.

Charles L. Hammond Will Continue to Handle the Mail at Quincy.

A dispatch from Washington, dated Jan. 29, states that the President has sent to the Senate the name of Charles L. Hammond, to be postmaster at Quincy.

Postmaster Hammond was first appointed four years ago by President McKinley and succeeded James F. Burke. Since he has held the office as Postmaster the office has grown rapidly. Atlantic, Wollaston and Houghs Neck have been included in the free delivery district and the offices at Atlantic and Wollaston have been merged into the Quincy office.

Several new carriers have been addpa and it was but a short time ago that the office became first class.

Postmaster Hammond has proved a popular official and by his courteous manner and constant attendance to business, and of leaving nothing undone that would improve the service, he has won many friends who unite in congratulating him upon his reappointment.

TODAY'S COURT.

Thomas Hunt was arraigned for assault at Randolph and was fined $10.

Daniel Deaers was arraigned in the juvenile session for larceny from Charles M. Jenness. Case continued until March 7.

WOMEN IN PHILIPPINES

Can Accomplish Much Toward Bringing About Desired Results

Washington, Jan. 30.—One American woman can contribute more to the reformation of the Filipinos than any company of American men, soldier or civilian, according to a personal letter Major General Corbin has received from Brigadier General Bell, commanding the department of northern Luzon. General Bell says that he is a strong believer in permitting the wives of American officers on duty in the Philippines to join their husbands, declaring that the women exert a most potent influence in our political purposes with regard to the islands.

General Bell says that in his old volunteer regiment, the Thirty-Sixth infantry, there were 12 young wives of officers. He encouraged them to go with their husbands to the towns the latter were commanding, and the people soon became so devoted to them that when the time came to depart for the United States the natives, irrespective of age or sex, wept like children.

General Bell says that the American women exert their influence through the Filipino women, the latter having more influence on public opinion than the men of the islands.

A $100,000 Church Fire

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—The People's church, an independent church with Congregationalist affiliations, of which Rev. Dr. S. G. Smith is pastor, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The building contained a large auditorium, kindergarten, industrial school and other branches, besides smaller meeting rooms. The building represented an outlay of $105,000, and had no church debt. The insurance was only $50,000.

Three Killed In Explosion

Halifax, Jan. 30.—An explosion of dynamite occurred yesterday at the Marsh colliery at Thorburn, killing three men and demolishing the building in which they were into kindling wood. The cause of the explosion will never be known, as the men who were killed were the only occupants of the building at the time. The force of the explosion was felt half a mile away.

Downfall of Village Boss

Savannah, Ga., Jan. 30.—J. C. Legree, colored, mayor and assistant postmaster of Burroughs, a colored settlement, was arrested yesterday on the charge of having robbed the mails. A decoy letter was sent through the office containing money. The letter and marked money were found on Legree's person. Legree held almost every office in the village.

Storm Did $400,000 Damage

Little Rock, Jan. 30.—The heaviest losses ever sustained in Little Rock from a like cause is the result of the terrible storm of sleet and cold rain which prevailed here for three days. The business section of the city is a scene of desolation. The estimated damage will exceed $400,000, including loss to business.

Plantations Heavily Incumbered

New Orleans, Jan. 30.—Following a suit filed recently by John B. Lyons of Chicago, three plantations of George G. Senor, at St. Mary, were seized yesterday to satisfy a mortgage of over $150,000. This is one of the finest sugar estates in the state and the total incumbrances on it foot up to $250,000.

ENTITLED TO SUPPORT

Cotton Manufacturers Will Aid Sagamore Mills

THE STRIKE OF WEAVERS

Was Brought on by Close Adherence to the Wage Scale Adopted by the Association—Action Not to Be Binding In All Future Cases

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 30.—A meeting of the signers of the present wage agreement in force in the mills in this city was held yesterday afternoon to listen to the grounds upon which the Sagamore mills claim reimbursement by the Cotton Manufacturers' association for losses sustained by the strike at their mills. Some 300 weavers have been out on strike for over two weeks, and the matter is now as far from settlement as when it commenced.

Treasurer Brayton of the Sagamore mills made a statement of his side of the situation, and told what had been done in the way of concessions and what he would do if the operatives returned to work. After listening to him and following a long discussion as to what bearing such a move might have on the future actions of the signers of the agreement, it was voted to support the management of the Sagamore mills while the present attitude of the parties is maintained.

Although those present at the meeting would give out but little information, it is understood that this vote to support the Sagamore mills is not to be followed in other cases unless the signers are permitted to investigate the troubles as represented by the treasurer. Any action, therefore, in the Sagamore matter, is not expected to be binding in all future cases.

The management of the Sagamore mills claim the strike was brought on by their close adherence to the wage scale adopted by the association, which was the one adopted following the raise in wages by M. C. D. Borden last fall, and which is said to include several mills which are not members of the association.

There has always been a dispute as to whether the signing of the wage agreement bound the manufacturers to help each other in event of a strike, and it is said that yesterday's meeting was the direct result of the refusal of several manufacturers to sign a paper asking for the appointment of an arbitration committee. The management of the Sagamore mills feel it is entitled to support from the Manufacturers' association if they lose money through the weavers because the mill refuses to concede demands which it would be contended would be followed by a violation of the wage agreement.

It is said that only those who signed the last agreement were invited to attend yesterday's meeting, and, while it is includes a majority of the association, the meeting was not one of the association itself.

Of Interest to Dairymen

Washington, Jan. 30.—The majority and minority reports on the anti-oleomargarine bill were filed in the house yesterday. The majority report summarizes the extent of the injury, it is declared, is done to the butter and dairy interests by the sale of manufactured products colored to imitate the genuine article. The minority urge a substitute which, they say, is designed not to prevent the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine, but to prevent it from being fraudulently sold as butter.

Dark Stories About Cashier

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 30.—The condition of the Platte Valley bank at Bellwood is much worse shape than first disclosed. At least $45,000, possibly more, of the rediscounted notes disposed of by the bank, proves to be forged paper. A. H. Gould, the cashier and manager, is in jail. Two months ago the Bellwood bank was robbed. It is now charged that the robbery was a fake and that Cashier Gould was instrumental in wrecking the vault.

Prisoners Well Treated

Boston, Jan. 30.—A letter has been received by former Congressman Fitzgerald from S. S. Toddings of Hamilton, Bermuda, replying to inquiries made relative to the reports of ill treatment of Boer prisoners there. The letter says the prisoners have far better treatment than is usually accorded to prisoners of war, and that in rations they are better served than are the soldiers who guard them.

Nine Persons Perished

Boston, Jan. 30.—The latest revision of the list of casualties by yesterday morning's fire in the Italian tenement house on Fleet street gives the number of dead as nine and the injured three. Of the latter two had sufficiently recovered to allow them to leave the hospital yesterday afternoon. The other is still in a precarious condition.

Firemen Sent to Hospital

New York, Jan. 30.—Fire Captains Clark and Autenreith and four of their men were blown down a stairway on Cortlandt street last night, where they were fighting a fire. The firemen were caught in a back draught of flame. All were burned and bruised and were sent to a hospital. The monetary loss is placed at $10,000.

NO DISORDER

Police Find Little to Do In Connection With Strike of Teamsters

Boston, Jan. 30.—Public interest in the teamsters' strike, so far as can be judged by the crowds on the streets, has almost entirely subsided, and although the R. S. Brine Transportation company had 16 teams in service yesterday, among them several six-horse hitches, they provoked scarcely more than ordinary attention. The force of police on escort duty was greatly reduced, and in fact one team was sent through the streets with no blue coats near it, although Superintendent Pierce and two inspectors in citizens' clothes were passengers, while two other inspectors followed upon the sidewalk. There was not the least semblance of disorder anywhere, the contest having for the time been transferred to the court room.

During the continued hearing of the petition of the Brine company for an injunction against the labor unions before Judge Braley in the superior court, Lawyer Whipple, for petitioner, scored one point when he singled out J. J. Miller, one of the strikers, in the court room, and compelled him to take the witness stand to explain alleged acts of intimidation as testified to by some of Brine's teamsters. Witness, however, declared that the intimidation was all done by hoodlums, yet these hoodlums obeyed his orders when he asked them not to interfere with a driver.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. CASE =113= By... Emile Gaboriau

Fanferlot obeyed, and the key held by M. Lecoq, pulled aside from the lock, slipped along the door, making an exact reproduction of the scratch in the photograph.

"Oh, oh, oh!" exclaimed Fanferlot in three different tones as he stood staring at the door.

"Do you begin to understand now?" asked M. Lecoq.

"Understand! Why, a child could understand it now. Ah, what a man you are! I see the scene as if I had been present. Two persons were at the safe. One wished to take the money; the other wished to prevent its being taken. That is certain."

Accustomed to triumphs of this sort, M. Lecoq was much amused at Fanferlot's enthusiasm.

"There you go off half cocked again," he said good humoredly. "You regard as sure proof a circumstance which may be accidental and at the most only probable."

"No, a man like you could not be mistaken. There is no doubt about it."

"That being the case, what deductions would you draw from our discovery?"

"In the first place, it proves the cashier innocent."

"How so?"

"Because, at perfect liberty to open the safe whenever he wished to do so, he would not have brought a witness when he intended to commit the theft."

"Well reasoned. But on this supposition the banker would also be innocent. Think."

Fanferlot reflected, and all of his animation vanished.

"It is so," he said in a despairing tone. "What can be done now?"

"Find the third rogue, or, rather, the real rogue—the one who opened the safe and stole the notes and who is still at large, while others are suspected."

"Impossible! M. Fauvel and his cashier only had keys, and they always kept them on their persons."

"Pardon me. On the evening of the robbery the banker left his key in the secretary."

"Yes, but the key alone was not sufficient to open the safe. The word also was necessary."

M. Lecoq shrugged his shoulders impatiently.

"What was the word?" he asked.

"Gipsy."

"Which is the name of the cashier's grisette. The day you find a man sufficiently intimate with Prosper to be aware of all the circumstances connected with this name, and at the same time on a footing with the Fauvel family which would give him the privilege of entering M. Fauvel's chamber, then you will discover the real thief; then the problem will be solved."

Egotistical, like all great artists, M. Lecoq had never had a pupil and never wished to have one. He hated assistants, wishing to share neither the pleasure of success nor the pain of defeat. Thus Fanferlot, who knew his patron's character, was surprised to hear him giving advice who heretofore had only given orders.

"Chief," he ventured to say, "you seem to take a great personal interest in this affair—you have so deeply studied it."

M. Lecoq started nervously and replied, frowning:

"Don't be too curious, Master Squirrel. Be careful that you do not go too far. Do you understand?"

Fanferlot began to apologize.

"That will do," interrupted M. Lecoq. "If I choose to lend you a helping hand, it is because it suits me to do so. It pleases me to be the head while you are the limbs. Unassisted, with your preconceived ideas, you would never have found the culprit. If we two don't find him, my name is not Lecoq."

"We shall certainly succeed since you are interested in the case."

"Yes, I am interested in it, and during the last four days I have discovered many important facts. But I have reasons for not appearing in this affair. No matter what happens, I forbid your mentioning my name. If we succeed, all the success must be attributed to you. And, above all, don't try to find out too much. Be satisfied with what explanations I give you."

These conditions seemed quite to suit Fanferlot.

"I will be discreet," he said.

"I shall rely upon you. Now, to begin, you must carry this photograph to the judge of instruction. I know M. Patrigent is much perplexed about this case. Explain to him as if it came from you alone what I have just shown you. Repeat what I have demonstrated, and I am convinced that this evidence will determine him to release the cashier. Prosper must be at liberty before I can commence my operations."

"Of course, chief. But must I let him know that I suspect any one besides the banker or cashier?"

"Certainly. Justice must not be kept in ignorance of your intention of following up this affair. M. Patrigent will tell you to watch Prosper. You will reply that you will not lose sight of him. I myself will answer for his being in good hands."

"And if he asks me about Gipsy?"

M. Lecoq hesitated a moment.

"Tell him," he said, "that you persuaded her, in the interest of Prosper, to live in a house where she can watch some one whom you suspect."

Fanferlot rolled up the photograph and was joyously picking up his hat to go when M. Lecoq checked him with a gesture.

"I have not finished. Do you know how to drive a carriage and manage horses?"

"Why can you ask this of a man who used to be a rider in the Bouthor circus?"

"Very well. As soon as the judge dismisses you return home immediately, make yourself a wig and the complete dress of a valet, and, having dressed yourself, take this letter to the agent on Delorme street."

"But"—

"There must be no but, sir. The agent will send you to M. de Clameran, who is looking for a valet, his man having left him yesterday."

"Excuse me if I venture to suggest that you are making a mistake. This Clameran does not come into the matter. He is not the cashier's friend."

"Do what I tell you and don't disturb your mind about the rest. Clameran is not a friend of Prosper, I know, but he is the friend and protector of Raoul de Lagors. Why so? Whence the intimacy of these two men of such different ages? I must find out. I must also find out who this forge master is who lives in Paris and never goes to attend to his furnaces; a high liver, who takes it into his head to live at the Hotel du Louvre in the midst of a tumultuous, ever changing crowd, where it is hard to watch him. Through you I will have an eye upon him. He has a carriage. You are to drive it, and you will soon be able to give me an account of his manner of life and of the sort of people with whom he associates."

"You shall be obeyed."

"One word more. M. de Clameran is irritable and, still more, suspicious. You will be presented to him under the name of Joseph Dubois. He will demand your certificate of good character. Here are three which state that you have lived with the Marquis de Stairmeuse and the Count de Commarin and that you have just left the Baron de Wortschen, who has gone to Germany. Be careful of your dress and manners. Watch the marquis' movements. Above all, don't overdo your part. It might arouse suspicion."

"Don't worry as to that. Where shall I report to you?"

"I will call on you every day. Until I change your orders don't step foot in this house. You might be followed. If anything important should happen, send a note to your wife, and she will inform me. Go and be prudent."

The door closed on Fanferlot as M. Lecoq passed into his bedroom.

In the twinkling of an eye he had divested himself of chief of the secret service. He took off his stiff cravat and gold spectacles and removed the close wig from his thick black hair. The official Lecoq had disappeared, leaving in his place the Lecoq whom nobody knew—a handsome man with a clear eye and resolute bearing. But he remained only for an instant. Seated before a dressing table, covered with more cosmetics, paints, perfumes, false hair and other unmentionable shams than the toilet tables of a modern belle, he began to undo the work of nature and make himself a new face. He worked slowly, handling his brushes with great care. But in an hour he had accomplished one of his daily masterpieces. When he had finished, he was no longer Lecoq. He was the large man with red whiskers whom Fanferlot failed to recognize.

"Well," he said, casting a last look in the mirror, "I have forgotten nothing. I have left nothing to chance. All my plans are fixed, and I shall make progress, provided the Squirrel does not waste time."

But Fanferlot was too happy to waste a minute. He did not run, he flew, toward the Palais de Justice. At last he was able to convince some one of his wonderful shrewdness. As to acknowledging that he was about to obtain a triumph with the ideas of another man, he never thought of it. It is generally in perfect good faith that the jackdaw struts in the peacock's feathers. His hopes were realized. If the judge was not absolutely convinced, he admired the ingenuity of the whole proceeding.

"This decides me," he said, dismissing Fanferlot. "I will file a favorable report today, and it is highly probable that the accused will be released tomorrow."

He began at once to write out one of those terrible decisions of "Not proved" which restores liberty, but not honor, to the accused man; which says that he is not guilty, but does not say he is innocent:

Whereas there do not exist sufficient charges against the accused, Prosper Bertomy, in pursuance of article 128 of the Criminal Code we hereby declare that we find no grounds for prosecution against the aforesaid prisoner at this present time, and we order that he shall be released from the prison where he is confined and set at liberty by the jailer, etc.

When it was finished, "Well," he said to the clerk, "here is another of those crimes which justice cannot clear up—another file to be stowed away among the archives of the record office."

And his own hand wrote on the cover of the bundle of papers relating to Prosper's case the number of the package, "Case 113."

There often comes a time in the struggle with pulmonary disease when the victim loses heart and gives up hope. The ambition to be up and around gives way before growing weakness, and the sufferer keeps to the bed.

No one who suffers from lung disease should lose heart or give up hope while there is a possibility of cure. In many cases Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured lung "trouble" when the cough was obstinate and deep seated, with hemorrhage, emaciation, night-sweats and general weakness. A great many men and women are living to-day in the full enjoyment of health and happiness who had been "given up" by doctors, but found a perfect and permanent cure in the use of "Golden Medical Discovery."

"My wife had hemorrhage of the lungs," writes W. A. Sanders, of Hern, Mason Co., W. Va. "She had ten hemorrhages, and the people all around here said she would never be well again. But she began to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and she soon began to gain strength and flesh. After taking ten bottles she was entirely well. Should you think this would do you any good to publish, just use it, and if any one disputes the merits of this almost omnipotent medicine they may enclose self-addressed envelope with stamp, and I will answer, the same as written in this letter."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mayor at Head of Police

Salem, Mass., Jan. 30.—The nomination by Mayor Hurley of Edward H. Knight for city marshal was laid over by the board of aldermen at last night's meeting. A few minutes later the mayor announced that he had removed City Marshal Hart, "for the good of the service." By a vote of four to three, the removal was sustained. The mayor then said he would at once himself assume command of the police department, would go to the station every morning and look after affairs. Hart was appointed city marshal in February, 1877, and had served continuously since then.

Power House Crippled

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 30.—The crippled condition of the power house of the Old Colony Street Railway company at Montello makes it impossible for the company to run more than 26 cars, where 85 is the usual number. Only one engine is in condition to run, the other five being disabled one way or another. Although the Central Labor union has not officially declared the company's cars unfair, the strike of the power house employes has been endorsed by five individual unions, the members of which will not patronize the cars until the strike is settled.

From Boston to Puget Sound

Boston, Jan. 30.—In compliance with a request from the navy department at Washington, the Fortune will be ready to go into commission on Feb. 15. The Fortune is a naval tug of 450 tons, and came to the local yard last summer to be thoroughly repaired. Some special work has been done on her in order to fit her for a long, rough trip around Cape Horn to Puget sound, Wash. She is the smallest ship belonging to a navy that ever made a similar trip. The course which the Fortune will follow is about 19,000 miles in length.

Suicide by Asphyxiation

Boston, Jan. 30.—With the windows and doors tightly closed and the gas flowing from an open burner, Mrs. Bertha Silber, 27, was found dead upon the floor of her lodging room last evening. A note which she left for her husband asked him to be a true father to her two children and "make them genuine Hebrews." Death, she said was better than her life.

No Verdict In Moore Case

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 30.—After a session of 24 hours, the jury in the case of ex-City clerk William H. Moore of Portsmouth, who has been on trial here on the charge of embezzlement, announced inability to reach a verdict. Judge Peaslee dismissed the jury and held Moore under his old bail, sureties to the amount of $2000 being furnished.

Violated Insurance Law

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 30.—In the superior court here yesterday, Preston M. Goodrich of Derry pleaded nolo in a complaint filed against him for receiving and collecting for a foreign life and accident insurance company not authorized to do business in this state. He paid a fine of $50 and costs and agreed to quit the business.

Didn't Know It Was Loaded

Boston, Jan. 30.—Joseph H. Mossman was instantly killed by a bullet from a revolver which he was cleaning yesterday, having carelessly handled the weapon in the belief that it was not loaded. For 20 years Mossman had been a manager for a prominent tourist agency.

Brakeman Instantly Killed

Meriden, Conn., Jan. 30.—Michael Farrell, a brakeman on a train, fell off the top of a car last night in the local freight yard and was instantly killed. His head was badly crushed. Farrell is married and has several children.

A SYMPATHETIC STRIKE

May Come Unless Teamsters' Grievances Are Settled

A TELEGRAM TO HANNA

Asking That the National Civic Federation Investigate the Trouble, to the End That a National Calamity May Be Averted

Boston, Jan. 31.—But 90 policemen went on special duty in the strike district yesterday, as compared with nearly 300 during the period within which the most turbulent scenes were enacted, and these officers were so widely scattered that a casual observer would scarcely have noticed their presence. The R. S. Brine Transportation company had 20 teams at work and experienced no difficulty in moving goods wherever its teams were sent.

The executive committee of the Teamsters' union and representatives of the Allied Freight Transportation council and Longshoremen's union held a long conference yesterday, at which the matter of sympathetic strike was discussed. While the members of the strike committee were not in favor of such a move until all possible efforts had failed to settle the teamsters' strike, it was realized that the freight handlers and other allied bodies are very restless on account of being obliged to handle freight delivered by the Brine teams and that a strong hand will be required to keep them in check.

The outcome of the conference was a decision to lay the facts in the case before the state board of arbitration and request that a public hearing upon the teamsters' strike be held at once. Should no reply be received from the board within 24 hours it is proposed to ask the arbitration committee of the National Civic federation to meet in Boston for the purpose of investigating and adjusting the present difficulty.

The hearing of the Brine company's injunction petition in the superior court is unfinished.

Late last night the following telegram was sent to Senator Hanna, chairman of the industrial commission, Civil Federation, carrying out the idea favored at yesterday's conference:

"A strike having international effect is threatened in Boston because of the refusal of one concern to grant conditions conceded to by its competitors. Freight handlers, clerks, longshoremen and others to the number of 50,000 may be involved—interruption of industry in every direction. A strike will be a national calamity. Confident that importance of expected trouble is sufficient to demand action by your commission, we respectfully invite you to have your commission meet in Boston, investigate, adjust and publicly declare its opinion. Conditions if not adjusted will result in public disaster. We deplore a repetition of the San Francisco strike. This strike, if occurring, will, in our opinion, be the more disastrous. Prompt action necessary.

Tax on Mixed Flour Only

Washington, Jan. 31.—The ways and means committee, by unanimous vote yesterday, instructed Chairman Payne to prepare a bill repealing all the war revenue taxes except the tax on mixed flour. The action taken was in the form of a resolution to the effect that the bill should provide for the repeal of the remaining war taxes, to take effect on July 1, 1902, except that the repeal of duty on tea should go into effect Jan. 1, 1903.

Goff Won't Admit Will

New York, Jan. 31.—When Recorder Goff closed court for the day in the trial of Albert T. Patrick for the murder of William M. Rice, he had, for the tenth time during the progress of the hearing so far, ruled out the admission of the Rice will of 1896, which the prosecution has been trying to get into the record.

Ready to Assume Office

Washington, Jan. 31.—Ex-Governor Shaw of Iowa, the next secretary of the treasury, arrived here last night with Mrs. Shaw, and went at once to the Arlington hotel. Mr. Shaw expects to be sworn in as secretary of the treasury next Saturday, in accordance with the understanding reached with Secretary Gage.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Saturday, Feb. 1.
Sun rises—6:59; sets—4:58.
Moon rises—1:14 a. m.
High water—5:30 a. m.; 6 p. m.

Snow and rain have been general from the Mississippi valley eastward, followed by clearing weather. Temperatures have risen decidedly in the south Atlantic states, but continue riseasonably low elsewhere. The northeastward movement of a disturbance over the middle gulf states will probably cause snow in New England. On the coast the winds will be fresh north to northeast.

MURDERERS FREE

Warden's Wife Furnished Weapons and Aided Them to Escape

Pittsburg, Jan. 31.—Edward and John Biddle, awaiting execution in the county jail for the murder of Thomas O. Kahney of Mount Washington, overpowered the guards yesterday morning, and escaped. Both prisoners, who occupied adjoining cells on the second range, had been provided with saws with which they cut the bars of their cells, and both were armed with revolvers.

In her infatuation for the handsome desperado, Edward Biddle, the wife of Warden Soffel has left her husband and her four children to fly with the escaped convicts.

Shortly before 4 o'clock one of the Biddles called to James McGeary, who had charge of the outside gates, and asked for some medicine, saying his brother was sick. McGeary hastened to the cell with the medicine, when John sprang through the opening that had been made, and, seizing the guard, hurled him over the railing to the stone floor 16 feet beneath. Edward joined his brother immediately, and both hurried to the first floor, where they met Guard Reynolds and shot him. The third man on duty was on one of the upper ranges. He was ordered down at the point of the revolvers, and the three guards were put in the dungeon. The keys were taken, and the prisoners went to the wardrobe and each put on a new suit. They then unlocked the outside gates and passed out into the street.

Warden Peter H. Soffel, in discussing the escape of the Biddles, said: "I believe my wife furnished the weapons to the Biddles and assisted them to escape. This is an awful thing, but I am only telling the whole truth. My wife was not in bed when I was awakened this morning and I have not seen her since. She is gone—God only knows where. I did not suspect her and hence was off my guard. But she is gone and the suspicion of assisting in the delivery by furnishing weapons rests upon her." He broke down and wept when speaking of his wife's actions.

Many Buildings In Flames

Norfolk, Jan. 31.—At 2:10 o'clock this morning fire was discovered in the first floor of the Columbia building, occupied by a restaurant and saloon and on the upper floors by about 150 offices. Explosions of whisky barrels in Brown's saloon blew out the front of the first and second floors and scattered the flames across the street. In less than half an hour the Atlantic hotel and Virginia club were in flames. A four-story building occupied by the Johnston China company and apartments, together with four three-story brick buildings adjoining it, are burning, and it looks as though the entire eastern downtown section of the city is threatened. A half million dollars may not cover the loss.

A Disgraceful Scene

Brussels, Jan. 31.—The chamber of deputies here was the scene of a free fight yesterday between the Socialist and the Catholic factions. The trouble grew out of a proposal to prosecute M. Smeets, a Socialist, for a recent revolutionary speech. The Socialists advanced in a body against the benches of the Catholics, shouting taunts and epithets. The deputies finally engaged in fisticuffs and the sitting was suspended.

Still More Hand-Shaking

Louisville, Jan. 31.—Admiral Schley, as the guest of the Louisville Knight Templars, had little opportunity to rest yesterday. From 10 o'clock in the morning, when he visited the girls' high school, until he left the Knights Templar ball at midnight, every moment of his time was occupied. The greater portion of the day was spent among children and the admiral shook hands with about 1000 boys and girls.

The Offer Unserviceable

London, Jan. 31.—The Daily Telegraph understands that the government's reply to the offer of the Dutch government will take the form of a courteous assertion that the absence of any authority for Holland to speak in the name of either the Boers in the field or the Boer delegates in Europe, and the lack of any tangible proposals, render the offer unserviceable even as a basis of negotiation.

Cabin Rates Raised

London, Jan. 31.—The morning papers announce from Liverpool that an arrangement has been arrived at between the leading British, American and continental steamship lines, concerning both passenger and freight rates. Steerage rates are to remain unchanged, but the saloon and second cabin rates will be raised, a minimum rate having been agreed upon.

Newfoundland Stormbound

St. Johns, Jan. 31.—Furious midwinter gales have been raging here for the past three days. The storms have levelled the telegraph lines and blocked the roads in certain portions of the colony, and have delayed steamers and generally interfered with traffic.

Slaughter Goes on

London, Jan. 31.—The war office casualty list shows that in a hitherto unreported engagement at Abraham's Kraal, Orange River colony, Jan. 28, Colonel Du Moulin and eight men were killed and seven men were wounded.

REVOLUTIONARY THEME

Discussed by Senator From South Carolina

HIS STATE IN FIRST PLACE

In Throwing Off England's Yoke—Speaks of "Poverty Stricken" Soil of Massachusetts and Rejoices In Old Ideas of One of Her Senators

Washington, Jan. 31.—Senator Tillman opened the debate on the Philippine bill yesterday afternoon with a speech in renewal of the controversy over the relative shares taken by Massachusetts and other states in furnishing troops for the Revolutionary war.

South Carolina, he said, has taken a larger part in making the history of this country than any other commonwealth, and has written less about it. It is only within the last few years that General Macready has undertaken to write a history of the state, but has thus far got it down only to the year 1780, when the theatre of active warfare was transferred to the Carolinas.

Everyone must admire the state of Massachusetts and her unique civilization, as manifested by her predominance as a factor in the affairs of this nation, in spite of the poverty-stricken soil, the trying climate and limited area amid which her sons have grown up. He thanked God that Massachusetts is represented in this chamber by one senator, as South Carolina is by only one, who holds to the sturdy old ideas of human liberty which made the fathers of this country great. He may be in the minority now, but history will vindicate the righteousness of his position.

General Moultrie, famed in history for his defiance and defeat of a British fleet with the men he commanded in an improvised fort made of Carolina logs, chinked with mud, resisted the urgent advice of General Lee that he should retreat and save himself. It was Sergeant Jasper who rescued the flag shot from the fort, and raised it again on a cannon swab.

Moultrie was not only brave but generous, for he paid in his memoirs the highest tribute to Massachusetts for leading in the revolution. He described the meeting held in Charleston to respond to the appeal of Massachusetts for co-operation. South Carolina then and there issued what was practically a declaration of war against Great Britain in support of the position taken by Massachusetts, although not actually subject to the grievances which impelled Massachusetts to go to war. South Carolina believed that the colonies should all stand together when the rights of man seemed to be threatened in one by the British king.

While Mr. Tillman was speaking several senators engaged in a conversation among themselves. To this Mr. Tillman objected because of the interruption and he requested that those so engaged retire to the cloak rooms. For once he was, he said, making a speech for home consumption. "Of course," he said, "the senators on the Republican side are not interested. I could hardly hope to reach on such a subject the minds and hearts of the calloused majority—the commercialized, moneygrabbing, money-loving majority—as such a subject is not in consonance with the miserable, canting, damnable attitude which that party is now assuming."

By the time he had concluded this linguistic diversion, Mr. Tillman had the attention of all the senators present and went on with his argument.

The effort to treat the Filipinos "as chattels, as cattle," he declared, was "damnable" and he charged the majority side with being the "real murderers of our troops in the Philippines."

"But," he asserted, shaking his finger at the Republican side, "if we can gag you and force down your throats a scintilla or small dose of the principles which actuated the men of Massachusetts in 1776 we will have done our duty to the country and to humanity."

Commenting upon the sedition laws promulgated by the Philippine commission, Mr. Tillman inquired of Mr. Hoar whether The Springfield Republican, which, he said, was opposed to the Republican "imperialistic policy," under these laws, would be permitted to be circulated in the Philippines.

"While I decline to enter upon any discussion of Massachusetts newspapers," said Mr. Hoar, "I will say to the senator if he wants to know my opinion of the commission's order that I think it is an abominable order."

In conclusion Mr. Tillman said the pending Philippine tariff bill as a proposition to erect a tariff wall between the United States and another part of the domestic territory was a departure from every principle that has brought this country to the pinnacle of greatness and made it the cynosure of the eyes of the world as the land of the free and the home of the brave.

A Permanent Census Bureau

Washington, Jan. 31.—The house yesterday passed the bill for the creation of a permanent census bureau. The friends of the civil service law, who were opposed to making the employes of the bureau eligible for transfer or retention, were overwhelmingly defeated. By the terms of the bill, the permanent organization will succeed the present temporary organization July 1, 1902, and all employes on the rolls upon the date of the passage of the act will become eligible for transfer to other departments or retention in the permanent organization.

Army and Navy Reception

Washington, Jan. 31.—The last of the state levees, the reception in honor of the army and navy, was given at the White House last night by President and Mrs. Roosevelt. It was one of the most largely attended of the season. Throughout the evening the Marine band played patriotic airs.

Story Pronounced Absurd

Berlin, Jan. 31.—The story originating in Vienna that Germany would buy the Philippine islands from the United States and that the visit of Prince Henry preceded the announcement of the sale is pronounced by German officials to be absurd.

Ryan Whips Green

Kansas City, Jan. 31.—Tommy Ryan, who claims the middleweight championship of the world, last night knocked out George Green in the seventh round of what was scheduled as a 10-round contest. From the first round the result was never in doubt.

Proposed Oil Trust In Europe

London, Jan. 31.—A dispatch to The Central News from Amsterdam says that negotiations are proceeding for a general European oil combination. A London banking syndicate is financing the combination.

Miss C. S. Hubbard—4-4 Unbleached Cotton.

Good Afternoon.

From the amount of new business introduced at the meeting of the City Council this week, one would not imagine that the schoolhouse for Ward Two had been held up in December because the city was too near the debt limit to permit of the necessary appropriation. The following sums are involved in the business before the meeting this week.

$200,000 additional for sewers.
$1,500 for house for patrol wagon.
$30,000 for water extension.
$2,500 for concrete sidewalk at Wollaston.
$1,000 for gravel sidewalks at Quincy Point.
$600 for drain on Independence avenue.
$6,500 for paving Willard street.
$3,500 for sanitary at John Hancock school.

Of course, the loans for water and sewers will be outside the limit, but all the other items must be included. In addition to these there is the remodelling of City Hall the Quincy Point schoolhouse, enlargement of the High schoolhouse, etc.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Whether the fact that President Roosevelt has recently taken the Masonic degrees had anything to do with it, we cannot say, but William Jennings Bryan has followed the example, and taken the first degree. He is preparing a speech in reply to a toast that will be given him at a banquet that will celebrate his elevation as a master Mason. The Globe wants to know why he didn't ride the goat before he undertook to run for President.—Lynn Item.

☞ The Massachusetts man who has applied for the position of governor-general of the Danish West Indies and who agrees to treat the inhabitants of the island "with due consideration, tempered with discipline which would make them docile," ought not to be without a job long. There are plenty of tasks awaiting such a master hand in our own colonies, and if not, almost any colony-holding court could make use of him.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ What is there about public employ that prescribes that a man should be kept in office long after he has outlived his usefulness? Now, after all this time, having enjoyed this income for so long, there is no reason or sense in asking or expecting a pension and if they have outlived their usefulness in their places and are not contributing to the state a sufficient amount of labor to repay for the salary which they receive they should be relieved of their duties and an opportunity be given some other person. And they should be relieved without any further grants from the state in the way of pensions. If they have not seen fit to care for their present by reasons of their long and regular receipts of a salary that is their fault and one for which the state should not be held responsible.—Newburyport News.

☞ The Lawrence Telegram makes a complaint because there is so much drunkenness among minors in that city. Lawrence has license and it is ever held up as an argument by license advocates that holders of such rights fear to imperil them by breaking the condition of their licenses. Yet here we have the same old conditions prevailing as we find in towns where the "speak-easy" and the side door are the regular features connected with the sale of wet goods, and where prohibition, according to the tradition of the license advocates, rears its "foul and hypocritical head." The whole story of the liquor business is much like the story of any other business—people want to sell all the goods they can and, human nature is too fond of the dollar to bother much about nice distinctions in some lines at least of business. So we see that whether liquor is sold over bars under license, or out of pockets or in dark corners under no-license, some results are the same; and the boy or man or woman who wants drink and who has the money to pay for it is likely to get it. Only, there is this great difference—is the one case practically anybody can get it anywhere at any time; in the case of no-license, it is not so easy and the temptation is less.—Brockton Enterprise.

Whist Party.

The Smart Set whist club met Thursday evening with Miss Maud Gray of Botolph street. A basket of assorted fruit was passed around and partners were chosen by similarity of kinds. One young woman, a dite more prodigal than the others started to "make way" with her rosy-cheeked pear, but she found that art could resemble nature quite closely. Whist continued until 10, when Miss May Melzard was awarded first prize, and Miss Emma Curtin second. A very inviting and original repast was served including tiny French cream-cakes which met with nary a "no, thank you" in their pilgrimage from table to table. At the close of the evening, Miss Gray exhibited many interesting specimens of art which Mr. Gray has collected during his travels abroad.

—Statistics show that South Carolina made a net profit of $500,000 last year by selling liquor to her citizens.—Rockland Free Press.

—There is the sum of $560,000,000 deposited in the Savings Bank of Massachusetts. Quite a back log and weapon against a rainy day.—Stoughton Sentinel.

—A clothing merchant has a new advertising scheme. Every Saturday he turns a greased pig loose from his store and the man who catches the porker gets it as a prize along with $5 worth of goods. By that means he has not only worked up a good deal of excitement, but he has already sold $1,000 worth of new clothes.—Warren Herald.

A GENERAL ALARM.

The Pinel Block Has a Close Call.

Well Handled and a Good Stop.

Damage About $3,000—Sensational Escape from Second Floor.

The alarm from Box 37 at a few minutes before midnight last night, followed fifteen minutes later by a general alarm from the same box, not only served to send the fire apparatus from all parts of the city flying toward South Quincy but to inform the citizens that a serious fire was in progress.

No reflection of the fire however was to be seen in the sky, and many who usually respond to all fires did not turn out.

The fire was in the Pinel block at the corner of Franklin and Water streets, but fortunately did not prove as disastrious as it was at first feared.

The fire started in the cellar near the heater and directly beneath the store occupied by Peter Litchfield. It made a dense smoke which penetrated every part of the building and when the department arrived it appeared to Chief Williams, who knew the character of the building, to be spreading. Desiring to be on the safe side he ordered the general alarm.

A squad of police were on hand and roped off the streets so that the firemen worked unhampered by the large crowd that had gathered.

In order to reach the scene of the fire lines of hose were taken through Litchfield's store to the alleyway from which stairs lead to the basement. Water was also poured into the basement through the bulkheads and through the several cellar windows. The badly burned timbers show that the fire had a good start.

The fire did not get above the street floor, although it required some time, to put it out, as it was fought under difficulty.

The flames however came up the alleyway mentioned and entered Litchfield store, and while the fire loss in this store was small, smoke and water completely ruined his stock of goods.

The building is occupied on the street floor by Mr. Pinel, who keeps a furniture and general store; Peter Litchfield, dealer in tobacco, cigars and gentlemen's furnishings; Mr. Restelli, who has a pool room, and Joseph M. Burns, who has a boot and shoe store. On the second floor is Dr. F. S. Andrews, dentist, and Mr. Restelli has living rooms, while Mr. Pinel, also uses part of the floor as a store room.

Aside from Litchfield's loss, the only loss to the other tenants was by smoke which penetrated every part of the building.

Mr. Restelli was aroused and thinking that escape by the stairway had been cut off, he made a sensational escape by the window in his night clothes using a sheet to let himself down part of the way, then dropping to the ground.

At one time it looked as though the building was doomed, and Mr. Pinel gave up hopes that it would be saved. Mr. Pinel lives in the house adjoining the building and thinking that building would also go he moved his family out.

Chief Williams although suffering from a severe cold remained on duty and directed his men. Today he is confined to his home suffering from his cold and from having inhaled so much smoke.

All of the apparatus made good time in responding, especially those in the out districts that responded on the general alarm.

It was nearly 2 o'clock before the recall sounded.

The loss was about $3,000.

At the Shipyard.

The foundation has been completed at the Fore River Works for the addition to the power house. The addition will consist of three additional boilers, making six in all, and a direct connecting generator and a 5,000 foot compresser.

Several new machines are already in operation in the addition to the ship tool shop and three new double ended punchers and shears are being placed on their foundation.

A railway running from this shop to the water front enables plates and other material used in the construction of vessels to be readily handled.

MIDWINTER PICNIC.

Potato Race and Other Sports at Washington Street Church.

There was a very enjoyable time in the vestry of the Washington Street church Thursday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society. It was called a "mid-winter picnic" but it was really a summer picnic held at midwinter, for the vestry had been transformed into a grove or summer garden. At one turn one was greeted by the sign, "Keep off the grass," and at another, "Don't pick the flowers," or "Look out for snakes." In one corner was an "Old Maids retreat—Room for no more," and in another corner a cage labelled "Don't feed the monkeys. A very clever dummy was an old peanut woman. Perhaps the best joke was on the pastor, for upon the door to his room was a sign "Knots tied here — Vegetables taken — Boat ready for Germantown." But the great attraction was the picnic lunch. Every lady was invited to bring lunch for two, and they did it so bountifully that there was an over supply of very tempting dishes.

Miss Freeman and Miss Thomas were in charge of the longest table and entertained many prominent guests, including former pastors and others, notably Rev. L. H. Austin, Rev. Edward Norton, Rev. George Benedict, Rev. A. A. Ellsworth, Rev. Mr. Bushnell and others. When the invited guests arrived a favor was pinned to their lapels and these were matched at their place at the table. At the plate also was a daffodil.

After "the lunch" came the picnic games which were called "supper settlers," which were entered into by young and old, and afforded fun for all. The potato race was in three relays won respectively by Miss Duffield, Rollo H. Newcomb and Dr. Bushnell, but the latter made the best time and was awarded a cocoanut.

"Bang the bag" was another contest the candidates being blindfolded; the prize a bag of candy went to Miss Isabella Gray of Hingham. Four men tried to bite doughnuts hung nearly a foot above their heads, and C.W. Newcomb captured a huge doughnut as a prize.

The games were interspersed with charades which were not easily solved. The first was "Rummage sale"; the second, "Vestry" and the third "Galveston."

Ice cream was on sale during the evening.

The committee for the picnic were Mrs. C. Webster Newcomb, Mrs. R. H. Newcomb, Mrs. H. D. Adams, Miss Margaret Thomas, Miss Ella M. Freeman, who were assisted by Frank Melville, Arthur Foster, George Higgins and others.

Rodman Street.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Would you knidly allow me through your valuable paper to call the attentions of His Honor the Mayor and the City Council, to the deplorable condition of Rodman street in Ward Three. I cannot see why this street has been so long neglected. I think the city gets as much in taxation, if not more than any other street on the plains, except Liberty street. I should like to see the City Council required to march from one end of the street to the other. I am positive before they got to the end of it there would be a few of them with sprained ankles.

True, the Council some time ago appropriated one thousand dollars to fix this street but ex-Mayor Hall had to investigated. He drove though the street one day after we had been having long spell of dry weather, and the sun was most breaking the shingles on the house tops, and he came to the conclusion that the street was in excellent condition and vetoed the appropriation. The Council humbly submitted.

Now is the time to come and have a look at this street. There is a councilman from this ward who lived on this street a few years. He will be able to give the City Council a good idea of the condition this street is in. I refer to Councilman Alfred O. Diack.

There are two lots of land between Trafford street and Rodman street that are used as a public street. The owners of said lots ought to fence one end to prevent teams from going through, or the city ought to take them and fix them up as a street for it causes a mud puddle on Rodman about eight inches deep. I am safe in saying there isn't a family on this end of the street. but what some member of it has lost rubbers in the mud.

Now to have a street in such a condition is an insult on the taxpayers, and I hope they will awake and demand what they have so long been denied.

Hart Still In Office

Salem, Mass., Jan. 31.—City Marshal John W. Hart continues at the head of the Salem police force because the city solicitor has ruled that he was not removed "for good of the service" by vote of the aldermen. He says Mayor Hurley was in the wrong in not entertaining Alderman Doyle's notice that he would move a reconsideration of the vote by which Hart was removed. Nobody expects that the vote on reconsideration, which will be made later, will be at all different from the original vote to depose Marshal Hart.

Evidence of Arson

Boston, Jan. 31.—The fire marshal's office yesterday found positive evidence in the ruins of the Fleet street fire, wherein a number of lives were lost, that the blaze was of incendiary origin, and last night it was stated that an arrest might be made at any time. Up to a late hour this morning, however, the suspected man was still at large, with Marshal Whitcomb's deputies working up the case against him.

Young Arato was painfully, but not seriously burned.

Cruisers Searching For Condor

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 31.—Esquimault is divided with hopes and fears for the safety of the sloop of war Condor and her crew of 140 officers and men, who were last seen on Dec. 2. Four cruisers are searching for her. The finding of what undoubtedly is one of the Condor's boats had caused the gravest apprehension.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Pendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

AFRICAN GOLD MINING.

Problems Confronting the Transvaal's Great Industry.

EXPERT'S PRACTICAL REMARKS.

John Hays Hammond Places the Probable Life of the Rand Reef at Thirty Years—Curious Facts Regarding the Diamond Mines—The Question of Labor.

The following remarks on the resources and outlook of the Transvaal are extracted from an address delivered by Mr. John Hays Hammond at Harvard and Yale. The facts set forth have an interesting bearing on the current finance, commerce and history, says the New York Post. Aside from the broad questions of the money market involved in the problems touched upon, the matters of American supplies for the Transvaal and of the country's own industrial and political future depend very largely on the developments now about to be witnessed on the Witwatersrand.

Mr. Hammond spoke as follows:

"The Witwatersrand goldfield in the Transvaal is by far the most important gold mining district in the world. The Witwatersrand district is in its physical aspect radically different from the usual conception of a mining country. It rather resembles a grazing country, where mining prospectors would pass by contemptuously as 'uncongenial to ore,' and in that respect the occurrence of gold in the Witwatersrand district illustrates the truth of the adage that 'gold is where you find it.' Gold was first discovered in this district in the year 1885. It occurred in what is called the banket, which is a coarse conglomerate deriving its name from its resemblance to an almond rock candy called 'banket' by the Dutch. This nomenclature is about the sole contribution of the Dutch to the mining industry.

"These auriferous deposits are unique in the history of gold mining and are unparalleled in respect to their remarkable consistency and consequently commercial reliability. The gold bearing conglomerate beds are interstratified with beds of quartzite and sandstone. The ore carries about $10 in gold per ton and is mined and treated metallurgically by the usual methods of gold mining and milling.

"The principal mines extend east and west from the town of Johannesburg twenty-five miles in either direction. To give some idea of the magnitude of operations, I may state that about 100,000 Kaffirs and over 10,000 white men are engaged directly in mining and that nearly 6,000 stamps are working night and day, crushing over 7,000,000 tons of ore annually. In order to obtain the supply of ore for one year's output it is necessary to excavate eight miles of solid rock five feet in width and 460 feet in depth, besides the many thousands of feet of additional shaft sinking, etc. The gold won as the result of this stupendous work is valued at about $75,000,000. Since 1886 these mines have yielded nearly $400,000,000 worth of gold.

"Just previous to the beginning of the war the Witwatersrand mines were producing gold with a value of $100,000,000 per annum, more than one-third of the world's output. The gold mines support a district of 100,000 white population besides contributing to the support of thousands of laborers in other countries engaged in the manufacture of supplies for this industry.

"How long will these mines last?"

"It is customary to speak of such extensive deposits as illimitable, but as an engineer I am denied the use of such convenient hyperbole and must endeavor to satisfy the curious by some reply more definite. But it is indeed a difficult question to answer, depending as it does upon the depth to which mining can be profitably carried on and upon the rapidity of exploitation as well. As to ultimate depths, the geological and mining conditions in the Witwatersrand district are exceptionally favorable and admit of maximum depths. There is but little water to interfere with deep mining, it being for the most part seepage and is taken up from the upper horizons. Also the increment of temperature with the depth is very low, there being only one degree of increment in temperature for 200 feet of depth. I have on other occasions expressed the opinion that mining will be found feasible to a depth of about 10,000 feet. As to rapidity of exploitation we mining engineers of South Africa, chiefly American engineers, pride ourselves in holding the world's record in respect of speed in mining, and work that has taken centuries in the history of European mining will be done in a decade under the conditions that obtain with us. Therefore when I speak of mining out an area in the aggregate some thirty miles long to a vertical depth of two miles I must prepare you by these statements I have just made as to our capability to undertake rapid exploitation. If I must hazard an expression of opinion, from which the element of guess, though unscientific, cannot be altogether dissociated, I would place the life of the Witwatersrand at thirty years. It may be a short life, but it will be a golden one, for within that period more than $3,000,000,000 of gold will have been extracted from the mines of that district, a sum more than double that of the entire production of California since its discovery."

Regarding the diamond mines of South Africa, represented chiefly in the great De Beers consolidation with its $20,000,000 capital, Mr. Hammond went on to say:

"In the Orange Free State, in the Transvaal and in Cape Colony diamonds have already been found in payable quantities. By far the most important diamond mines for South Africa, and indeed of the world, are those at Kimberley, about 650 miles north of Cape Town. Diamonds were discovered there in 1869. They occur in the indurated mud of the craters of extinct volcanoes and vary in size from that of a pinhead to the great Jaggersfontein diamond, of which I shall presently tell you. The present workings are from 1,200 to 1,600 feet in depth, located in what is called the neck of these volcanoes. The diamonds are mined very much as coal is mined, after which the diamondiferous rock is exposed to atmospheric agencies to insure its disintegration, thereby facilitating the separation of the earthy material from the diamonds in the subsequent process of washing.

"All the mines of Kimberley are now under the ownership of the De Beers Consolidated company. This company employs about 2,000 white men and about 12,000 Kaffirs at the mines and indirectly supports a population of 50,000 at the town of Kimberley. The annual production of the mines is from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 carats, having a value of about $20,000,000. This output could be greatly increased, but is restricted so as to admit of the market absorbing the product without entailing any reduction in the price of the diamond. The entire product of the diamond fields of South Africa to date—that is, for a period of about thirty years—is somewhat over fifteen tons in weight, having a value in excess of $500,000,000. A box about eight feet square would contain all these diamonds, the net result of mining over 100,000,000 tons of rock, besides the millions of tons of earth moved in exploratory and dead work. The life of the mines is as yet indeterminable, but diamond mining in Kimberley undoubtedly will continue for many years to come.

"The diamonds are sold to syndicates of diamond buyers at from $5 to $8 per carat. The syndicates agree to take the entire output of diamonds, regardless of size, at that price. In this connection, if you will excuse the digression, I might mention the history of the celebrated Jaggersfontein diamond. This is the largest stone ever discovered, weighing very nearly 1,000 carat. in the rough (about half a pound avoirdupois), and is three and a half inches long, about as large as an average goose egg. It is impossible to determine the value of a diamond of this size. It is of good color, but would not cut well. Diamonds lose from 40 to 60 per cent of their size in cutting. Some idea of its value, however, might be suggested by the fact that a diamond of only 180 carats was sold a few years ago by the De Beers company for $750,000, and diamonds, as you know, increase greatly in value with increase of size. As yet there are no bidders for this 'white elephant.' The Jaggerfontein diamond which I have just described was found July 2, 1893, at 3 o'clock, after firing one blast."

Commenting recently on the facts set forth in his address, Mr. Hammond made this additional remark:

"It will be several months, however, before there is an adequate supply of labor for the mines. The number of workmen needed is 12,000 whites and 100,000 Kaffirs. The pay of the Kaffir is 50 cents a day and his board. White labor cannot possibly compete with black labor in the mines. Owing to the low grade of the ore the mines could not be worked at a profit were white labor employed. But there is any amount of opportunity in the mining district for skilled white labor. Mining firemen, machinists, drill men and carpenters are greatly needed.

"A considerable quantity of machinery will be required in the future. Most of the machinery will undoubtedly come from this country, but the market will be greater and more profitable when transportation facilities are increased."

RUSSIA'S FINANCIAL CRISIS.

Ruin Caused by Depreciation of Share Values of Foreign Firms.

The disastrous effects upon Russian industries of the existing financial and commercial crisis in that country are shown in the depreciation of the share values of the French and Belgian companies, concerning which some official data have been published, says the New York Post. On Oct. 15, 1899, the Stock Exchange value of the shares of ninety-eight Franco-Belgian companies in Russia was 1,316,332,000 francs. On Oct. 15, 1901, it had fallen to 536,292,000 francs, a depreciation of 59 per cent. The glass manufactures suffered very heavily, the value of the total foundation capital of six such concerns falling from 17,987,000 to 3,632,000 francs. Immense losses were also suffered by the metallurgical enterprises, the bourse value of whose aggregate ground capital decreased from 862,043,000 to 298,069,000 francs, a depreciation of 65 per cent. Some few concerns lost as much as 90 per cent and more.

For example, the shares of the Franco-Russian works fell from 55 francs to 2 francs 50 centimes, the value of their foundation capital being reduced from 11,925,000 to 87,000 francs. The bourse value of the shares of the Franco-Belgian concerns in the government of Ekaterinoslaf was two years ago 10,875,000 francs; today they are worth only 675,000 francs. The Yermak company's shares have fallen from 600 to 6 francs. In the various building and constructive branches the loss is 65 per cent. The gas and electrical companies' shares have fallen in value from 36,820,000 to 13,140,000 francs, a depreciation of 61 per cent. The coal companies appear to have come out of the ordeal somewhat better, the value of their foundation capital being reduced from 347,148,000 to 185,957,000 francs, or a loss of 46 per cent.

THE PARKWAY.

Again Brought to the Attention of Legislature.

Among the petitions taken from the files by the Legislature on Thursday was that of John O. Hall, Mayor of Quincy in 1901, that the Metropolitan Park Commission improve the shores of Quincy bay. This petition is for the construction of a parkway from Squantum to the Blue Hills Reservation. The land for this parkway has already been taken by the State and it is hoped that the Legislature will see its way clear to make the necessary appropriation to complete the whole or at least a part of it.

Fashion's Echoes.

For girls' school dresses suitable materials are serges, friezes, cheviots and velveteens. Stitched bands are the best sort of trimming, but the less the better.

Crepe de chines and mousselines de soles, plain and patterned, flowered and striped, spotted net and fringed net, are being employed for a long range of fascinating frocks.

One of the sleeves for day wear is closely stitched above and below the elbow, where the material is allowed to come loose and form a puff.

Strips of velvet placed horizontally side by side cover many of the low esprit bodices, sometimes with soft ping folds introduced between.

Some of the bodices have three straps stitched perpendicularly down the center of the back, the ends allowed to fall on to the skirt in lieu of a basque.

Nightgowns are made of the very finest batiste in the empire shape, the yoke being made of valenciennes, the thinner and more cobweblike the better.

GOES TO ELECTRIC CHAIR

Cassels Killed Mrs Lane Because She Refused to Elope With Him

Springfield, Mass. Jan. 31.—John D. Cassels, who was convicted Jan. 2, of the murder of Mary J. Lane in Longmeadow, was yesterday sentenced to death by electrocution during the week of May 4, by Judge Hopkins of the superior court. A sensation was caused, when, immediately after adjournment, Cassels leaped to his feet and cried: "May God curse every man that sent me to the chair." He was seized by the deputy sheriffs and hurried from the room. Judge Hopkins had left the bench and did not witness the outburst.

After District Attorney Noxon had moved for sentence Cassels spoke for over half an hour, protesting that he was innocent of murder in the first degree, and attacking former District Attorney Gardner, who conducted the case against him, whom he accused of unfairness, until ordered to desist by the court.

Cassels is married and has a wife in the west. He was a sewing machine agent, and on his travels about the country became infatuated with Mrs. Lane, who lived with her husband and several children at Longmeadow. During the trial of Cassels letters were introduced purporting to have been written by Mrs. Lane, showing that Cassels' attentions were reciprocated by the woman. Finally, after his persistent entreaties to her to leave her husband and her refusal, he went there at night on Feb. 26 and shot at her several times.

Ex-Congressman Sprague Dead

Boston, Jan. 31.—Hon. Charles F. Sprague died yesterday in the Butler hospital in Providence, where he had been for some months undergoing treatment for the nervous and mental troubles from which he had been suffering for more than four years. He was born in Boston, June 10, 1857. In 1896 he was elected to congress from the Eleventh district of Massachusetts. He was then rated as the richest man in the national house of representatives, his fortune being estimated at $7,000,000. In 1891 Mr. Sprague was married to Miss Mary B. Pratt. His wife is traveling abroad at the present time.

A LITTLE BOY'S LIFE SAVED.

I have a few words to say regarding Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It saved my little boy's life and I feel that I cannot praise it enough. I bought a bottle of it from A. E. Steere of Goodwin, S. D., and when I got home with it poor baby could hardly breathe. I gave the medicine as directed every ten minutes until he "threw up" and then I thought sure he was going to choke to death. We had to pull the phlegm out of his mouth in great long strings. I am positive that if I had not got that bottle of cough medicine, my boy would not be on earth today.—JOEL DEMONT, Inwood, Iowa. QUESTION OF COMMAND

Claimed to Be Main Point In Schley's Appeal

VIEWS OF COMMENTATORS

Say That Schley's Own Opinion In His Early Dispatches Gave the Credit to Sampson-Latter Controlled Movements of the Fleet

Washington, Jan. 31.—The "comment" of Judge Advocate Lemly and Solicitor Hanna upon the appeal of Admiral Schley, as submitted to the president by Secretary Long, is less than a third as long as the appeal itself, a fact accounted for by the comparatively few quotations from the court's testimony in the case of the "comment."

The commentators begin with the statement that Admiral Schley and his counsel have shifted their ground. They say the chief features of the case were "the retrograde movement," "disobedience of orders;" "inaccurate and misleading official reports;" "failure to destroy vessels of the enemy, lying within sight;" and "injustice to a brother officer."

The commentators say: "Upon all the above named features, believed by us to be the most important, if not the only really important matters, into which the court made inquiry, the conduct of Admiral Schley was condemned by the most distinguished tribunal. Admiral Dewey and Rear Admirals Benham and Ramsay united in their findings and opinion upon all of these several points, and they united also in the significant recommendation that no further proceedings be had 'in view of the length of time which has elapsed since the occurrence of the events of the Santiago campaign.'"

The commentators charge that Admiral Schley now ignores all these grave matters and bases his appeal upon unimportant features of the case, as compared with the grave matters above referred to, "upon which there was not, and in the face of the testimony could not have been, any difference of opinion in the court."

The commentators say they recognize the fact that Admiral Schley devoted by far the larger part of his appeal to the question of command, and consequently give that question a proportionate space in their comment. They declare that the question is between Sampson and Schley, both alike interested, and to investigate it fairly both should be heard. Such incidental testimony on this point as came before the court was on Schley's side only, and the doors were entirely closed to Sampson.

It is admitted that the precept was broad enough to have permitted the court to go into this question.

As showing Schley's own opinion of who was in command, they quote this passage from his dispatch of July 10, 1898, to the secretary of the navy: "Feel some mortification that the newspaper accounts of July 6 have attributed victory of July 4 almost entirely to me. Victory was secured by the force under the command commander-inchief North Atlantic station, and to him the honor is due."

Further, they quote Schley's letter of Dec. 18, 1901, to Secretary Long, justifying the "loop" on the expressed ground that it was made "in the execution of the standing order to close in." It is asked: "But if he was then himself in command, how happens it that he was executing the orders of somebody else in command? * * * Before the court of inquiry, every prop raised to support the contention that Commodore Schley did anything to achieve the victory by issuing orders as commanding officer of the American fleet was removed.

"The plain truth was for the first time revealed that Commodore Schley did not exercise command on that day over any ship, except, to some extent, his own flagship, the Brooklyn." The comment at this point contains a number of extracts from the testimony to sustain this contention.

The comment closes in the following words:

"The contention that the magnificent work of the Oregon, or any part of it, was done under orders from the Brooklyn, or that the Oregon received and obeyed even a single order from Commodore Schley from the time the Spanish ships were sighted to the time of the surrender of the Colon, which surrender may fairly be taken as the close of the battle, must be abandoned; and with it goes the last peg upon which to hang the pretense of a claim that during the battle of Santiago Commodore Schley effectively exercised any of the functions of a commander-in-chief.

"The weight of the testimony is to the effect that the commodore controlled the movements of his flagship, the Brooklyn, well, with the exception of the loop. But it also shows, not negatively, but affirmatively and beyond question, that he did not control the operations of the fleet in general on that day.

"All this is established not by theoretical deduction or expert or inexpert opinion, but by direct, positive, unimpeached, and unimpeachable testimony, given under oath by the admiral's brothers in arms.

"The plain truth of the matter, therefore, developed for the first time under the searchlight of this inquiry, although quite incidentally, is that so far as the Gloucester, the Iowa, the Indiana, the Texas, and the Oregon are concerned, not the stroke of a propeller's blade, not the touch of a helm, not the firing of a shot, was done under the direction or by the orders of Admiral Schley during this memorable battle."

ARE STILL CAPTIVES

Missionaries' Release Delayed by the Tactics of Turkish Officials

London, Jan. 31.—The Constantinople correspondent of The Daily News asserts the reason of the failure to accomplish the release of Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka to be as follows: The Turks promised to place soldiers at the disposal of M. Gargiulo, dragoman of the American legation at Constantinople, and one of the delegates who is attempting to effect the captives' release, but insisted, against his wish, upon sending 50 soldiers as far as Raslog. The governor of Raslog said he had orders not to let the messengers out of his sight, adding that he would not allow the money to be paid on Turkish soil. M. Gargiulo thereupon telegraphed to Constantinople and was ordered to remain where he was, the negotiations meanwhile proceeding with the porte.

Cuban Sugar at Low Ebb

Havana, Jan. 31.—General Wood has written to certain senators at Washington with regard to the present situation of the sugar industry in Cuba, showing that it is impossible at the present prices and with the present duties to land sugar in the United States at a profit. With a 33 percent reduction of the existing duties, General Wood writes, Cuban planters will only net 48 cents a bag of 300 pounds.

Organization of Shipmasters

Newport News, Va., Jan. 31.—The American Shipmasters' Protective Association of Sail Vessels completed its organization here with Captain Haines of Taunton, Mass., president. The headquarters of the organization will be in Boston. The object is to secure the repeal of laws adverse to the interest of masters and owners of sail vessels and to obtain the enactment of other laws in their interests.

Kaiser as an Artist

Berlin, Jan. 31.—Three diagrams, mounted on cardboard, drawn by Emperor William and showing the naval strength of the United States, Russia and Japan, were hung in a lobby of the reichstag yesterday. The fact that the diagrams were drawn by the emperor's own hand attracted attention to them and served, as the emperor intended, to stir up interest in foreign naval development.

From Lake Ports to Europe

Chicago, Jan. 31.—A steamship line from the great lakes to Quebec to connect with ocean steamers there from Europe, is assured for the coming season. Negotiations have just been closed for the construction of a sufficient fleet to carry the traffic. Pending the building of its own fleet, a sufficient number of steamers has been chartered and will be placed in service.

To Check Illegal Immigration

Washington, Jan. 31.—Senator Lodge yesterday introduced a bill authorizing the inspection of trains coming into the United States from Canada and Mexico, with a view of determining whether there are on board aliens who are not residents of those countries. The object of the measure is to prevent illegal immigration.

Heavy Damage by Storm

Little Rock, Jan. 31.—Telegraph and telephone lines are prostrated, railway traffic interrupted and business is practically at a standstill as the result of the unprecedented sleet storm in many portions of Arkansas. When belated reports are in the damage may foot up in the millions.

Picking Up Pointers

Berlin, Jan. 31.—Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia is maintaining unusual privacy and spending much of his time reading about the United States. He is using every opportunity to meet well-informed Americans to talk with them concerning the United States.

Milner's Civilization Plan

London, Jan. 31.—A blue book issued last night gives details of an extensive plan proposed by Lord Milner for handling the question of native labor in the African mining region. Lord Milner proposes to abolish flogging, and rigidly to control the liquor traffic among the blacks.

AFTER EQUINOX

The season has changed. Cold winds, damp air, coughs, colds, grippe, pneumonia—that's the order of events.

This is the time of year for those with weak lungs or a tendency to heavy colds to fortify themselves against exposure by taking Scott's Emulsion

Regular doses give great protection to the throat and lungs. What's the use of staying near the edge when such easy treatment will keep you out of danger.

For obstinate colds, for old coughs, for catarrh and bronchitis Scott's Emulsion is a standard remedy. You can feel the effects of even a small bottle.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

CASE 113 By... Emile Gaboriau

CHAPTER VII.

PROSPER BERTOMY had been languishing in his private cell for nine days when one Thursday morning the jailer came to inform him that his case had not been proved. He was conducted before the officer who had searched him when he arrived, and the contents of his pocket—his watch, penknife and several little pieces of jewelry—were restored to him. Then he was told to sign a large sheet of paper, which he did. He was then led across a dark passage and a door opened and shut behind him with a bang. He found himself on the qual. He was alone. He was free.

Free! Justice had confessed her inability to convict him of the crime of which he was accused. Free! He could walk about, he could breathe the pure air, but every door would be closed against him. A decision of "Not proved" had left him covered with suspicion. At the moment of his restoration to liberty Prosper so cruelly suffered from the horror of his situation that he could not repress a cry of rage and despair.

"I am innocent!" he cried out. "I am innocent!"

Two strangers who were passing stopped to look at him. They took him for a lunatic.

The Seine was at his feet. A thought of suicide crossed his mind.

"No," he said, "no! I have not even the right to kill myself. No, I will not die until I have vindicated my innocence!"

On entering Chaptal street he stood before his own door, but hesitated to enter it. He suffered from the timidity which an honest man always feels when he knows he is viewed with suspicion. He dreaded to remain in the street. He entered. At seeing him the porter uttered an exclamation of glad surprise.

"Ah, you here, monsieur? I told every one you would come out as white as snow, and when I read in the papers that you were arrested for robbery, I said: 'My third floor lodger a thief? Never!'"

The congratulations of this man, maladroit but sincere, impressed Prosper painfully, and he cut them short by abruptly asking:

"And where are my servants?"

"Gone, monsieur. Your father paid and discharged them."

"I suppose you have my keys?"

"No, monsieur. When your father left this morning at 8 o'clock, he told me that a friend of his would take charge of your rooms until you should return. Of course you know who he is—a stout gentleman with red whiskers."

Prosper was astonished. What could be the meaning of one of his father's friends being in his rooms? He did not, however, betray his surprise.

"Yes, I know who he is," he said.

He ran up the stairs and knocked at his door. It was opened by his father's friend. He had been accurately described by the porter. A fat man with a red face, sensual lips, brilliant eyes and of rather coarse manners stood bowing. Prosper had never seen him before.

"Delighted to make your acquaintance, monsieur," he said.

He seemed to be perfectly at home. On the table lay a book which he had taken from the bookcase, and he appeared ready to do the honors of the house.

"I must confess, monsieur"— began Prosper.

"That you are surprised to find me here? So I suppose. Your father intended introducing me to you, but he was compelled to return this morning to Beaucaire, and I must add that he departed thoroughly convinced, as I myself am, that you never took a cent from M. Fauvel."

At this unexpected good news Prosper could not restrain an exclamation of joy.

"Here is a letter from your father which I was charged to give you. I hope it will serve as an introduction between us."

Prosper took the letter, opened it, and as he read his eyes grew brighter and the color returned to his pale cheeks. When he had finished, he held out his hand to the large man and said:

"My father, monsieur, tells me you are his best friend. He advises me to have absolute confidence in you and follow your counsel."

"Exactly. This morning your father said to me: 'Verduret'—that is my name—'Verduret, my son is in great trouble. He must be helped out.' I replied, 'I am ready,' and here I am. Now the ice is broken, is it not? Then let us go to work. What do you intend to do?"

This question revived Prosper's slumbering rage. His eyes flashed.

"What do I intend to do?" he said angrily. "I wish to seek the villain who has ruined me!"

"Naturally. But have you any means of attaining that end?"

"None. Yet I shall succeed, because when a man devotes his whole life to an object he is certain to achieve it."

"Well said! M. Prosper, and, to be frank, I fully expected that this would be your purpose. I have therefore already begun to think and act for you. I have a plan. In the first place, you will sell this furniture, quit this house and disappear."

"Disappear!" cried Prosper indignantly. "Disappear! Why, monsieur? Do you not see that such a step would be a confession of guilt—would authorize the world to say that I am hiding so as to enjoy undisturbed the stolen fortune?"

"Well, what then?" said the man with the red whiskers coldly. "Did you not say just now that the sacrifice of your life is made? The skillful swimmer thrown into the river by malefactors is careful not to rise to the surface immediately. On the contrary, he dives and remains below as long as his breath holds out. He comes up again at a great distance and lands out of sight. Then, when he is supposed to be dead, lost forever to the sight of man, he rises up and has his vengeance. You have an enemy? Some petty imprudence will betray him. But while he sees you on the watch he will be on his guard."

It was with a sort of amazed submission that Prosper listened to this man who, though a friend of his father, was an utter stranger to himself.

He submitted to the ascendency of a nature more energetic than his own. In his helpless condition he was grateful to find a friend.

"I will follow your advice, monsieur," he said.

"I was sure you would. Let us decide upon the course you shall pursue. And remember that the proceeds of the sale will be needed. Have you any ready money? No, but you must have some. Knowing that you would need it at once, I brought here a furniture dealer, and he will give 12,000 francs for everything except the pictures."

The cashier could not refrain from shrugging his shoulders, which M. Verduret observed.

"Yes," said he, "it is hard, I will admit, but it is necessary. Listen. You are the invalid, and I am the doctor charged to cure you. If I cut to the quick, you will have to endure it. It is the only way to save you."

"Cut away, then, monsieur," answered Prosper, submitting.

"Well, we will hurry, for time passes. You have a friend, M. de Lagors?"

"Raoul? Yes, monsieur, an intimate friend."

"Now tell me, who is this fellow?"

The term "fellow" seemed to wound Prosper.

"M. de Lagors, monsieur," he said, piqued, "is M. Fauvel's nephew. He is a rich young man, handsome, intelligent, cultured and the best friend I have."

"Hum!" said M. Verduret. "I shall be delighted to make the acquaintance of one adorned by so many good qualities. I must let you know that I wrote him a note in your name asking him to come here, and he sent word that he would be here directly."

"What!" cried the astonished Prosper. "Do you suppose"—

"Oh, I suppose nothing. Only I must see this young man. Also I have arranged and will submit to you a little plan of conversation"—

A ring at the bell interrupted M. Verduret.

"The dickens! Adieu to my plan! Here he is! Where can I hide so as to hear and see?"

"There in my bedroom. Leave the door open and the curtain down."

A second ring was heard.

"I must go," said Prosper.

"Now, remember, Prosper," said M. Verduret in a warning tone, "not one word to this man about your plans or about me. Pretend to be discouraged, helpless, hesitating."

And he disappeared behind the curtain as Prosper ran to open the door.

Prosper's portrait of M. de Lagors had not been exaggerated. So handsome a face and manly a figure could belong only to a noble character. Although Raoul said that he was twenty-four he appeared to be not more than twenty. He had a superb figure, well knit and supple; a beautiful white brow, shaded by soft chestnut curly hair, and soft blue eyes which beamed with frankness.

His first impulse was to throw himself into Prosper's arms. "My poor, dear friend!" he said, taking Prosper's hands. "My poor Prosper!"

But beneath these affectionate demonstrations there was a certain constraint, which, if it escaped the cashier, was noticed by M. Verduret.

"Your letter, my dear Prosper," said Raoul after being seated, "made me ill, I was so frightened by it. I asked myself if you could have lost your mind. Then I left everything to come to you."

Prosper did not seem to hear him. He was preoccupied about the letter he had not written. What were its contents? Who was this man whose assistance he had accepted?

"You must not feel discouraged," continued M. de Lagors. "At your age you may commence life anew. Your friends are still left to you. Rely upon me. I am rich. Half of my fortune is at your disposal."
